The first pages of this "Dictionary of Hymnology, Setting forth the Origin and History of Christian Hymns of all Ages and Nations, with special reference to those contained in the Hymn Books of English-speaking Countries," were completed more than ten years ago. Since that time, there has been a constant and rapid production of official and quasi-official hymn books of great importance in all English-speaking countries. To meet this emergency, and to make this work both trustworthy and exhaustive, constant revisions and additions were imperatively called for, which have considerably enlarged the work and delayed its publication.

2. Hymnological works, both historical and critical, and in several languages, have also been published during the same period. A careful study of these works—many of which are by distinguished scholars and experts in the various languages and departments—and a laborious and critical testing of their contents, have consumed a vast amount of time, with the result of great practical advantage to the Dictionary as a whole.

3. The Appendix (Parts I. and II.) also became a necessity; and, together with the "Cross Reference Index to First Lines" (pp. 1307-1504), the "Index of Authors, &c." (pp. 1505-1521), and the "Supplemental Index" to each (pp. 1598-1616), must be carefully consulted by the hymnological student.

4. Where it could possibly be avoided, nothing has been taken at second-hand. Minute technical accuracy has been aimed at, and, after great labour and inevitable delay, has, it is hoped, in most instances, been attained. The pursuit of this aim has very frequently demanded, for the production of one page only, as much time and attention as is usually expended on one hundred pages of ordinary history or criticism.

5. The MSS. used in this work number nearly ten thousand, and include (1) those in the great public libraries of Europe and America; (2) those in private hands; (3) those in the possession of the Assistant Editor; and (4) those of the Editor.

6. The Books, Magazines, Newspapers, Broadsheets, &c., collated and examined, have been too numerous to count. The Editor's collection of MSS., Books, Pamphlets, &c., will, on the publication of this work, become the property of the Church House, where they will be available for consultation.

7. The total number of Christian hymns in the 200 or more languages and dialects in which they have been written or translated is not less than 400,000. When classified into languages the greatest number are found to be in German, English, Latin, and Greek, in the order named. Other languages are also strongly represented, but fall far short of these in extent and importance. The leading articles on National and Denominational hymnody given in this work furnish a clear outline of the rise and development of this mass of hymn writing. Arranged chronologically they set forth the periods when hymn-writing began in various languages, and the subjects which engaged the attention of the writers. It will be found that whilst the earliest hymns, as the Magnificat, the quotations in the Pastoral Epistles, &c., are in Greek, it required less than 170 years for the addition of Syriac to be made to the roll of languages. Latin followed in another 200 years. In another 50 years, the first notes in Early English were heard. German was added in the 9th cent.; Italian in the 13th cent.; Bohemian in the 15th cent., and others later, until the roll numbers over 200 languages and dialects. Careful attention to the chronology of the subject will also bring out the facts, that whilst Clement of Alexandria (p. 238) was singing in Greek, Bardesanes (p. 1109) was inspiring his followers in Syriac. Later on we find that the finest of the early poets were writing contemporaneously—Gregory of Nazianzus (p. 468) and Synesius (p. 1108) in Greek; St. Ambrose (p. 56), Prudentius (p. 914), and St. Hilary (p. 522) in Latin; and Ephraem the Syrian (p. 1109) in Syriac. Still later, as the roll of languages is increased, the grouping of names, countries and languages within given periods, will yield rich materials for the use of the historian and the divine.

8. In the following pages are set forth the countries whose, the periods when, the languages in which, and in many instances, the men by whom the doctrines and ritual teachings and practices of Christianity were first enshrined in song; and by whom and in what languages and countries the greatest developments have taken place.

9. English readers especially will find that one of the leading features of this Dictionary is the effort made to bring this mass of historical, biographical, doctrinal, devotional, and ritual matter as fully as possible within the grasp of those who are acquainted with no other language but their own. Linguistically the English language is the key-note of this work, and the hymns contained in the hymn-books of English-speaking countries, and now in Common Use, are its basis.

10. Personal acknowledgment has been made with deep gratitude to more than one thousand correspondents for valuable assistance rendered by them in the production of this work. In addition to the Contributors whose signatures are appended to their respective articles, special reference has to be made to the assistance of Miss Stevenson in compiling the "Indices of Authors, Translators, &c.;" to the invaluable services of Mr. W. T. Brooke, whose acquaintance with early English hymnody is unrivalled; to Major G. A. Crawford, the compiler of the elaborate and complete "Indices of Cross Reference to First Lines, &c.," whose aid in revision from the first, and whose technical acquaintance with and accuracy in correcting the Press have been of eminent value; and to the Rev. James Mearns, whose assistance has been so extensive, varied, and prolonged, as to earn the unsolicited and unexpected, but well-deserved and cheerfully accorded position of Assistant Editor of this work.

The MSS. in the above list include only the Latin MSS. found in British Libraries, and cited at pp. 1–1306 of this Dictionary. Many other MSS.
have been examined at the British Museum, the Bodleian, Cambridge, Durham, Lambeth, Lincoln, York, &c., which are not included in this list because they are mostly later than 1200, and did not give results of sufficient importance to be referred to in the notes on the individual hymns. The references to H. pt. ii, mean that the MSS. so marked are only mentioned in Pt. ii of the article Hymnarium, and in these cases the approximate dates of the MSS. are also given. In other cases the references in this work indicate the pages where concise descriptions of the various MSS. will be found.

In regard to the Latin MSS. it must be noted that the earliest and best only are cited in the body of the Dictionary, so that if e.g. a hymn is found in a MS. of the 11th cent., later MSS., unless of special importance, are not mentioned. References to a large number of MSS. in Continental Libraries will also be found in the notes on the individual Latin hymns, and at p. 813. These MSS. are mostly in the Bibliothèque Nationale and the Arsenal at Paris, the Stiftsbibliothek at St. Gall, the Vatican Library at Rome, the Ambrosian at Milan, the Royal Libraries at Berlin and Munich, and the Libraries at Wolfenbüttel, Darmstadt, Einsiedeln, Zürich, &c. Besides these, various MSS. found in other libraries are cited through the works of Daniel, Mone and Dreves.

II. English MSS.

The English MSS. which have been largely used in this work, and especially by the Editor in the unsigned articles and those with his signature appended thereto, include the following groups:—

1. C. MSS. R. Campbell's MSS. Property of Mrs. E. Campbell.
3. E. MSS. The Editor's MSS. Property of the Church House.
5. H. MSS. W. J. Hall's MSS. Property of the Hall family.
7. Mid. MSS. A. Midlane's MSS. Property of the Church House.
10. S. MSS. D. Sedgewick's MSS. Property of the Church House.
11. Sc. MSS. Elizabeth Scott's MSS. Property of Yale University, U.S.A.
ABBREVIATIONS.

In this Dictionary nearly eight hundred abbreviations have been used. Of these a large proportion are self-evident, and others, being in common use, are not repeated here. In this Table, therefore, those only are given which are for the most part peculiar to this work.

In several instances pages are given instead of explanations. This has been done because the details given on the pages indicated are not only too full for repetition, but are also of great value to the Reader. See also Supplemental List on p. xii.

A. R. T. in the American German Reformed Hymn of the Church, 1869; i.e. the Rev. Alexander Ramsay Thompson, D.D.

A. T., i.e. Adelaide Thripp, in Thripp's Ps. & Hymns, 1853.

A. T. R. in Ps. & Hymns, by the Rev. A. T. Russell, 1851, are the initials of the Editor.

A—y, in the Gospel Magazine, is the nom de plume of Job Hupton. It stands for Ashby, the parish in which he lived.

A beautiful land by faith I see. [Heaven.] Given Anon. in the Amer. Shining Star, N. Y. 1862, No. 74 in 4 st. of 4 l. and chorus, and entitled, "The beautiful land." It is in extensive use in America, and is found also in a few English S. S. collections. In S. Booth's S. S. H. Bk., Brooklyn, U.S., 1863, it is credited to "J. Hall."

A debt to mercy alone. A. M. Top-lady. [Assurance of Faith.] Contributed to the Gospel Magazine, May, 1771, in 3 st. of 8 l., and included in Toplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1776, No. 313, with the alteration, st. i. 1. 4. of "offering" to "offering." In 1809 the 1771 text was included in Sedgwick's reprint of 1778.

A charge to keep I have. C. Wesley. [Personal Responsibility.] 1st pub. in his Short Hymns on Select Passages of Holy Scripture, 1762, vol. i. No. 188, in 2 st. of 8 l. and based on Lev. viii. 35. It was omitted from the 2nd ed. of the Short Hymns, &c., 1794, but included in the Wes. H. Bk. 1780, and in the P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-72, vol. ix., pp. 60, 61. Its use has been most extensive both in G. Brit. and America, and usually it is given in an unaltered form, as in the Wes. H. Bk. No. 318; and the Evangelical, N. York, No. 320. The line, "From youth to heavy age," in the Amer. Prot. Episcopal Hymn., No. 474, is from the Amer. P. Bk. Coll., 1826.

A children's temple here we build. J. Montgomery. [The Erection of a Sunday School.] This hymn was written for the opening of the first Sunday School building in Wincebaun, Sheffield. The ms.—which is in the Wincebaun Hall Collection of ms.—is dated "December 18, 1840," and signed "J. M." The building was opened on the 13th of April, 1841, the hymn being printed on a fly-leaf for the occasion. In 1853, Montgomery included it in his Original Hymns, No. 313, in 6 st. of 4 l. and entitled it "The erection of a Sunday School." In the Meth. S. S. H. Bk. 1879, No. 512, st. iv. is omitted, and slight changes are also introduced. Orig. text in Orig. Hymns, 1853, p. 333. The hymn by Mrs. Gilbert, née Ann Taylor, "We thank the Lord of heaven and earth," was also written for, and sung on, the same occasion. This hymn has not come into C. U.

A day, a day of glory. J. M. Neal. [Christmas.] A carol written expressly for E. Sedding's Antient Christmas Carols, 1860. It is No. 6 of the "Christmas Carols," in 4 st. of 8 l. In 1867 it was reprinted in the People's H., No. 29.

A debt of mercy in the air. W. W. Hall. [Death and Burial.] Contributed to his Coll. of Hymns for Gen. Use, commonly known as A Churchman's Hymns, 1833. No. 2, in 3 st. of 6 l. In 1863 it was reprinted without alteration, in Kennedy, No. 1176. of Toplady's Hymns, &c., p. 140. In the older collections it was in most extensive use, both in the Ch. of England and with many of the Nonconformist bodies, but it is now very generally omitted from modern collections in G. Brit., although in America it still holds a prominent position.

A few more years shall roll. H. Bonar.

[O. and N. Year.] Written about the year 1842, and first printed on a fly-leaf for use by the members of his congregation on a New Year's Day. In 1841 it was pub. in No. 2 of his Songs for the Wilderness, again in the 1st series of Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1857, p. 101; and later eds. It is in 6 st. of 8 l., s.m., and entitled, "A Pilgrim's Song." Its use in all English-speaking countries, either in its full, or in an abbreviated form, is very extensive. In some cases its exquisite refrain, with its delicate changes:

"Then, 0 my Lord, prepare My soul for that great day; O wash me in Thy precious blood, And take my sins away," is omitted, and it is thereby robbed of one of its most beautiful and striking features.

A form of words though e'er so sound. J. Hart. [Kingdom of God in Power.] 1st pub. in his Hymns composed on Various Subjects, 1759, No. 90, in 6 st. of 4 l., and based on i. Cor. iv. 20. "For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power." In 1780, with slight alterations and the omission of st. vi. and vii. and the transposition of iv. and v. it was given in the Lady H. Coll. No. 95, and from thence has passed into a limited number of ultra-Calvinistic hymnals.

A fountain of Life and of Grace. C. Wesley. [Living Water.] 1st pub. in his Short Hymns, 1762, vol. ii., No. 866, in 2 st. of 8 l., and based on Rev. xxii. 17. In 1780 it was included in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 77, and has been repeated in later eds. P. Works, 1868-72, vol. xliii. p. 240. It has also passed into most of the collections of the Methodist bodies, and is also found in other hymnals in G. Brit. and America.

A Friend there is; your voices join. J. Stow. [Jesus the Friend.] Appeared as one of two hymns in his Experimental Essays on Divine Subjects, Lond. 1791, pp. 85-87, with the note "The two following pieces were occasioned by the death of an only son." The second piece is: "When Jesus, both of God and Man."

In 1792 he included the former in his Walchow Hys., in 10 st. of 4 l., and from thence it has passed into several collections, mainly those of the Baptists, but including also other Non-conforming bodies and a limited number in the Ch. of England. In America it is almost unknown. Orig. text, Lyra Brit., 1867, pp. 537-8.

A fulness resides in Jesus our Head. J. Fawcett [Fulness of Christ], 1st pub. in his Hymns adapted to the Circumstances of Pub. Worship and Priv. Devotion, 1782, No. 96, in 5 st. of 8 l. This was reprinted in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 150, and from thence passed into various collections in G. Brit. and America. Orig. text in Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858-80.

A glance from heaven, with sweet effect. J. Newton. [Lightning.] This hymn, dealing with the moral and spiritual thoughts suggested by "Lightning in the night," appeared in the Gospel Magazine, April, 1775, in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 84, in 7 st. of 4 l., and later eds. It is No. 301 of Martineau's Hys., &c., 1840-1851, and 429 in J. H. Thom's Hymns, 1858.

A glory in the word we find. [Holy Scriptures.] A cento given in J. Campbell's Comprehensive H. Bk., Lond., 1837, No. 837, in 4 st. of 4 l., from whence it has passed, muddierly, into a few American hymnals. A part of this cento is from W. Hurn's Coll., 3rd ed., 1833, No. 455. It is not in C. U. in G. Brit.

[W. T. B.]

A good High Priest is come. J. Cennick. [Priesthood of Christ.] 1st pub. in Pt. iii. of his Sacred Hymns for the Use of Religious Societies, Lond., 1774, No. cxxi. in 9 st. of 6 l., pp. 190-198. In 1753 G. Whitefield included st. i. iv. v. vi. and ix. in his Coll of Hys., No. xiii., and it was retained in subsequent eds. This arrangement, with slight alterations, was repub. in Rippon's Sel. 1787, No. 190, and later eds., and from thence has passed into other collections in G. Brit. and America. In some works it is still further abbreviated. Orig. text in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 134.

A little child the Saviour came. W. Robertson. [Holy Baptism.] Contributed to the Scot. Estab. Ch. Hymns for Pub. Worship, 1861, and repub. in their Scottish Hymnal, 1863, No. 181, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the American collections it has attained to a more extensive use than in these in G. Brit., but in every case, as in Hatfield's Ch. H. Bk., 1879, the Hys. & Songs of Praise, 1874, the Pres. Hymnal, Phil., 1874, and others, it is attributed to error to the elder W. Robertson, who was associated with the Scottish Trs. and Par. of 1745.

A little flock! So calls He thee. H. Bonar. [Church of Christ.] A poem, in 13 st. of 4 l. on the Church as "The Little Flock." It appeared in the 1st series of his Hymns of Faith and Hope, 1857; and later eds. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1104, it is re-arranged in three parts: (1) "Church of the everlasting God"; (2) "A little flock! So calls He thee"; (3) "A little flock! Tis well, 'tis well." In the American Manual of Praise, 1889, there is a cento beginning with the 1st stanza, and in the College and other hymnal-books a second, as "Church of the Everliving God."

A little lamb went straying. A. Middle. [Children's Hymn.] Written in Jan, A LITTLE SHIP

1859, and first printed in the March No. of the Good News Magazine, 1860, 5 st. of 8 l. In 1861 it passed into the H. Bk. for Youth, No. 13, and subsequently into other collections, but mainly those for children.

A little ship was on the sea. Dorothy A. Thrupp. [Peace.] Contributed to Mrs. H. Mayo’s Sel. of Hymns, &c., 2nd ed., 1810, in 9 st. of 4 l., entitled “The Little Ship on the Waves,” and signed “D. A. T.” As a hymn for children it is most popular, and is found in numerous collections both in G. Brit. and America.

A little while and every fear. R. K. Greiville. [Private Use.] 1st printed in The Amethyst, Edin. Oliphant, 1834, and again in The Church of Eng. H. Bk., &c., 1838, No. 592, in 3 st. of 8 1., and entitled “The Believer waiting for the Lord.” In 1863 it was included with alterations in Kennedy, No. 783; but its use is not extensive, outside the collections of the Plymouth Brethren.

A little while—our Lord shall come. J. G. Deck. [Advent.] Appeared in the Appendix to Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, 1841, in 4 st. of 6 l., and later collections of the Plymouth Brethren. It passed into Dr. Walker’s Cheltenham Coll., 1855; Supp.’s Songs of G. & G., 1872, and others. Orig. text in Supp., with st. i. l. 4, “hath gone” for “has gone.”

A look to Jesus saves the soul. A. Midlane. [Jesus only.] Written in March, 1862, and 1st pub. in his Gospel Echoes, 1865, No. 101, in 5 st. of 4 l., from whence it passed into Lord A. Cecil’s Canadian Hymn Book for Gospel Meetings, Ottawa, 1871, No. 17, Broom’s Good News H. Bk., 1883, and others of a similar kind.

A mighty mystery we set forth. G. Rowson. [Holy Baptism.] Written in 1837, and 1st pub. in the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1838–40, No. 635, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is based on Rom. vi. 3, “Baptized into His death,” &c. Its use is limited.

A mourning class, a vacant seat. [Death of a Scholar.] Appeared anonymously in the Amer. Union Hymns, Phil. S. S. U., 1835, No. 285, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed “Death of a Scholar.” It has been repeated in later editions of the Union Hymn., and is in extensive use in America. In G. Brit. it has been adopted by a few S. S. hymn-books only. Orig. text, Meth. F. C. S. S. H. Bk., 1869, No. 358, with the for his in st. ii. l. 2.

[W. T. B.]

A Patre Unigenitus. Anon. [Epiphany.] Daniel, in vol. i., 1841, and later ed. No. 210, gives only the first four lines of this hymn as belonging to a hymn for the Feast of the Epiphany, of uncertain authorship, date between the 10th and 13th centuries. In the ancient ms. in the British Museum, however, this hymn is found in three of the 11th cent. (Harl. 2961, f. 290); Jul. A. vi. f. 366; Vesp. D. xii. f. 43b. In the Latin Hymn. of the Anglo-Saxon Church (Surtees Soc.-iety). 1851, p. 53, it is re-printed in full from a Durham ms. of the 11th cent.

In 1853, Monu gave the full text in vol. i., No. 59, in 6 st. of 4 l., heading it, “In Epiphania ad nocturnum,” and added an extended note on the text, with references to a 15th cent. ms. at Stuttgart; and to Thomasius, &c. This text, with the notes and an addition or two including a reference to a ms. of the monastery of Rheinan, of the 11th cent. was repeated by Daniel, vol. iv. (1855), p. 151. It is also in the Hymn. Sarisb. Lond., 1851, p. 26, as a hymn at Lands in the Epiphany, and through the octave; where are also given the variations of York (used at Matins during the same period); of Hereford, &c., which is also in Wackernagel, i., No. 173; in Carl. Newman’s Hymni Eccles., 1838–65, and others. It may be noticed that the original is an acrostic from A to T inclusively. The Gloria, of course, does not follow this arrangement.

Translations in C. U.:

1. From God to visit Earth solars. By J. D. Chambers in his Leviad, Pt. 1, 1857, p. 109, in 6 st. of 4 l. This is given in an altered form as: “From God the Father comes to earth,” in the Appendix to the Hymnal N., No. 131.

2. God’s sole-Begotten came. By R. P. Littledale, made for, and 1st pub. in the People’s H., 1867, No. 44, and signed “A. L. P.”

3. Sent down by God to this world’s frame. By J. M. Neale: probably originally made for the Hymnal N., 1852, as the first line in Latin appears in the original prospectus. Another Epiphany hymn was, however, given, and this tr. seems not to have been printed till the St. Margaret’s Hymnal, 1875, whence it passed through the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, into the Hymner, 1882, No. 20.

[J. J.]

A pilgrim through this lonely world. Sir E. Denny. [Passion tide.] 1st pub. in his Sel. of Hymns, &c., 1839, No. 11, in 8 st. of 4 l., and in his Hymns and Poems, 1848. It was also repub. in various collections of the Plymouth Brethren—including Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, 1841, and Ps. and Hys., Lond. Walther, 1842, Pt. ii., No. 92. It is adopted also by Dr. Walker, in his Cheltenham Coll., 1855; the Hym. Comp., No. 162, and Supp.’s S. of G. & G., No. 220, and a few others amongst the Cn. of England hymnals. Its principal use, however, is in America, where it is found in numerous collections, mostly in an abbreviated form, and in many instances attributed in error to Dr. Denny. Orig. text in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 183. It is well adapted for Holy Week, and for special services dwelling on the Sacrifice of Christ.
A SINFUL MAN

A sinful man am I. B. Horner. [Invocation.] With the title, "Come unto Me," this hymn appeared in his HYMNALS. Faith and Hope, 3rd ser., 1807, in 7 st. of 4 l., s.m. In Kemble's New Church H. Bk., 1873, it is given without alteration, but its use, both in G. Brit. and America, is very limited.

A solis ortus cardine. Ad usque. Coelius Sedulius. [Christian.] This hymn, which opens with the same first stanza as the next (which see), is, nevertheless, with the exception of Et for "Ad" in line 2, may be distinguished therefrom by the second stanza, which reads:

"Beatus auctor saecul
Servile corpus induit,
Ut carne carmem liberans
Ne perferat quos condidit."

It is a poem, dating from the first half of the 5th cent., in 28 st. of 4 l., entitled Paean Alphabetice de Christo ("A triumphal song concerning Christ, arranged according to the letters of the alphabet."). The subject is a devout description of the Life of Christ in verse. The full text is found in an 8th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Ms. Reg. 2 A. xx. f. 50), and is also given in the numerous editions of Sedulius's Works (that of Faustus Arelavus, Rome, 1794, especially): in the works of Thomasius from Vatican ms. of the 8th and 9th cents.; in Wackenroder, i. No. 48, and others. For ecclesiastical purposes it has been broken up into two hymns, the first known as A solis ortus cardine, and the second, Hostis Heredes Impie, with the Rom. Brev. form of the same, Crudeles Heredes Deum. Following the order of this arrangement, the details are:

i. A solis ortus cardine. The text of this portion of the poem comprises 29 lines of the original (arranged to 22, inclusive) and may be found in Daniel, i. No. 119, the old text and revised Rom. Brev. version being given in parallel columns, followed by various readings, &c. It is given in the Rom. Brev. (text in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiast., 1838) as the hymn at Lauds on Christmas Day; on the 30th of December, the only day in the Octave not occupied by a Festival; on the Octave itself; the Feast of the Circumcision; and on the Vigil of the Epiphany. The duxologies in the Roman and Sarum Uses are no part of the original hymn.

This hymn is met with in most old Breviaries. Also in two ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961, f. 226; and Jul. A. vi. f. 390), &c. In the Latin Hya. of the Anglo-Saxon church, 1651, p. 50, it is printed from a Durham ms. of the 11th cent. In the Hymn. Saristh., Lond., 1581, pp. 15, 16, it is given for Lauds on Christmas Day, with variations from the use of York, St. Albans, Ely, Norwich, Oxford, Cambridge, etc., and these have been carried over to the Sarum Use. The variations in the Sarum Use are those in Daniel, i. No. 119, 120, together with references to various Breviaries, &c.

A SOLIS ORTUS

Of this part of the poem (omitting the Mozarabic form) the following trs. have been made:

Translations in C. U.:

1. From the far-blasting gate of morn. By E. Caswall from the Rom. Brev., 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholic, 1849, in 8 st. of 4 l., 49,51, and again in his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 27. This was given in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 126, as:

"From lands that see the sun arise," the first line being borrowed from Dr. Neale's L.M. version as under.

2. From lands that see the sun arise. To earth's. &c. By J. M. Neale, from the old text, 1st pub. in the Hymnal N., 1832, in 8 st. of 4 l., and again in later editions of the same, and in other hymnals.

3. From where the sunshine hath its birth. By R. F. Littledale, made from the old text for, and 1st pub. in the People's H., 1867, No. 29, in 8 st. of 4 l., and signed "A. L. P."

4. From east to west, from shore to shore. By J. Ellerton. This is a cento of 5 st., four of which are from this hymn (st. i., ii., vi., vii.), and the last is original, written in 1870, and 1st pub. in Church H., 1871, No. 78. It is the most acceptable form of the hymn for congregational use.

Translations not in C. U.:

1. From every part o'er which the sun. Primer, 1706.
2. From the faint daybreak's, &c. Mant, 1837.
3. From far sunrise at early morn. Cogicland, 1848.
4. From the first daybreak's, &c. Brev., 1852.
5. From climaxes which see, &c. Chambers, 1857.
7. From where the rising sun, &c. P. Trappes, 1846.

Other trs. of this hymn have been made into English through the German, thus noted by Mr. Mearns:

Christum wir sollen leben schon. A full and faithful tr. by Martin Luther, 1st pub. in Eyn Evangelische Ehrenfest, Erftst, 1545. Included in Wackernagel's D. Kirchenlied, i. p. 13, in 8 st. of 4 l. Included in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 7, and as No. 25 in the Ue. L. S., 1851.

Of this the trs. in C. U. are:

(1) Christ, whom the Virgin Mary bore, omitting sts. iii.—v. by C. Kirchen (J. Swertner?), as No. 42 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, and continued, altered, in later eds. Included as No. 83 in Pratt's Coll., 1829. (2) (Now praise we Christ, the Holy One, from R. Massie's M. Luther's Spirit. Songs, 1854, p. 9, as No. 30 in the Ohio Luth. Hym. 1880. Other trs. are:

(1) "To Christ be now our homage paid," as No. 154 in pt. iii. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1874, No. 212 in pt. i., 1754. (2) "Soon shall our voices praise," by Miss Fry, 1843. (3) "Let now all honour due be done," by Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, No. 34. (4) "There should to Christ be praises sung," by Miss Manlington, 1864, p. 23. (5) "Jesus we now must laud and sing," by Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Magazine, 1847, p. 151; and thence, altered, in his Erotics, 1876, p. 42. [J. J.]

ii. The second portion of this poem is the Epiphany hymn Hostis Heredes Impe, found in many Breviaries, and consisting of lines 23-36, 41-44, and 49-52, or in other words, the strophes commencing with h, i, l, n, s. The text is given in Daniel, i. No. 120, together with references to various Breviaries, &c.
In the Hymn. Sarisb., Lond., 1851, it is given as the Hymn at first and second vespers on the Feast of the Epiphany, and also through the Octave at Matins and Vespers; with various readings from the uses of York, which assigns it to first and second vespers and Lauds on the Epiphany, and daily through the octave, of Breocham and Worcester (through the Epiphany at Vespers), St. Albans's (Vespers and Lauds), St. Andrew de Brockholme, Norfolk (Lauds). Daniel, iv, 148, 370, cites it as in a Bishop's use of the 15th c., and in the 16th c. it is found in the Book of Common Prayer, 1549, p. 51. It was printed from a Durham ms. of the 11th c. The strophe Katerea matrum (the troop of mothers) occurs in The Harleian Libray, of the 11th c. (2961, f. 2260), as a hymn for the Holy Innocents. In Monomaric Bren *Hositis herb/> is the Hymn at Lauds for the Epiphany, the strophes a, b, c, d, q, r, s, t, is, j, l, m, & of the original being used, with doxology. Strophes s, a, d, q, r, with two additional, and a doxology, are used in this rite on the Feast of the Holy Innocents at Lauds; or in All Soumms Infantiv, sive Salmorun Innocentium, "On the dashing to pieces of the Infant, or Holy Innocents." (See Psalm cxxviii., v. 9, English version; Ps. cxxxvii., v. 9, in the Latin; for the idea.) Migne’s Patrois the hymn will be found in col. 184, 185, and 135, 136 of tom. 86 respectively.

1. Why, Herod, why the Godhead fear? By Bp. R. Maut, in his Ancient Hymns, 1827, p. 47; and in Chope’s Hymnal, 1864, and others as:—

"In vain doth Herod rage and fear."

2. Why, ruthless king, this frantic fear? By W. J. Copeland, in his Hymns for the Week, 1848, p. 70. In 1868 it was given as, "Why doth the wicked Herod fear?" in Salus II, No. 66.

3. O cruel Herod! why thus fear? By E. Caswall. 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 53, and his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 30. This is the tr. in C. U. in Roman Catholic collections for Schools and Missions.

4. Why, cruel Herod, why in fear? By J. A. Johnston, in the English H., 1852, and later editions. This is based upon older trs.

5. Why, cruel Herod, cast thou fear? By R. C. Singleton, made for and 1st pub. in his * Anglican II. Bk., 1868*, No. 58. In the 2nd ed., 1871, No. 73, it was altered to, "Why should the cruel Herod fear?"

6. Why doth that cruel Herod fear? This, which is No. 120 in the St. John’s Hymnal, 1845, is a cento from Copeland (st. ii.) and Neale, with alterations in the text of each.

2. Cruel Herod, wherefore fearest thou? Hope, 1844.

A solis ortus cardine Et usque terrae limitem. [Christmas.] This hymn, which is of very complex authorship, departs from the foregoing in the second stanza, which begins—

"Gaudete quiecid gentium, Judaeae, Roma et Graecia, &c."

The opening lines of the hymn, 1—4, we shall hardly be wrong in ascribing to Sedulius. The succeeding lines, 5—12, form the conclusion of the hymn for the Epiphany, "Qui cusque Christum queritis," by Prudentius (Cathec. Hymn. xii.). The lines 13—24, commencing with "Fit porta Christi pervia," are received by the Benedictine editors of St. Ambrose as a genuine work of that Father (No. 13 among his hymns) on the authority of a treatise ascribed to St. Hidphonus, "De perpetua Virginitate Beatae Mariæ, et ejus Parturitione;" certainly old, and most probably the work of Paschasius Radbertus (died A.D. 851). See the Spielegium of Da cherius. The note in the Benedictine edition runs thus:—

"The knowledge of the twelfth hymn we owe to St. Hidphonus, who more than once quotes the first strophe in his treatise De Parturitione et Purificatione N. Mariae Virginis, as having been written by St. Ambrose, whence it has been transferred to the later

iii. The Rom. Breve form of Hostis Herodis is Cruedulis Herodes Deum. The alterations in the text are st. i. 1—2, and the doxology only. In the Rom. Breve it is appointed for the 1st & 2nd Vespers of the Feast of the Epiphany. The text is in Daniel, i. No. 120; Carle Newman’s Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838-65, and other collections.

editions of the works of that holy Doctor. But the second and third spolopes (i.e. verses 17-24) we have copied from the book of George Cassander, the hymns Ecclesiastica, where this hymn is given without the author’s name. And although there occasionally occurs in it a fault against the rules of prosody, yet we do not on that account judge it unworthy of St. Ambrose, since errors of this kind occur in the hymns not doubted to be his, though not frequently.

We may mention, however, that this portion ascribed to St. Ambrose, mainly coincides with a hymn found in the works of St. Rabanus Maurus. (See the edition of his writings by Geo. Colovenerus, Col. Agrip. 1627.) or in Migne’s Patrol. tom. 112, the 6th vol. of the works of that writer; hymn No. 13, headed “In solemnitate Sanctae Mariae.” The authorship of the remaining lines is uncertain. Daniel, i. (No. 15), gives the text from the collection of Thomas, remarking the partial coincidence with Sedulius; but in iv. pp. 58, &c., he decides that this hymn is made up from different compositions; giving as his opinion that the groundwork was a poem in which the first letters of every four lines taken together make up the alphabet. The portion ascribed to St. Ambrose, “Fit portas,” is found in an 11th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Harl. 2301, f. 223b). In the latter part, of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 112, it is printed from a Durham ms. of the 11th cent.

As to the ritual use—it is the hymn at Lauds on the Feast of the Annunciation in the Mozarabic Brer. (T.ledo, 1502, f. 361), while in Ximeno’s ed., 1517, “A solis ortu cardine ad usque” is said at Vespers to line 21, when the Ambrosian strophes come in, with a Doxology, and with the same portion, “Fit portas Christi pervia,” &c., is the hymn in the Constantin Brer. (A.D. 1516) and some others. at Matins, on the Feast of the Annunciation of the B. V. M., and on the Festivals in her honour. It has been tr. as “From where the rising sun goes forth,” by W. J. Copeland, in his Hymns for the Week, &c., 1848. and again in Schaff’s Christ in Song, 1869. [W. A. S.]

A sure and tried foundation stone.
J. Montgomery. [Laying Foundation Stone.] Written Sept. 4, 1822, for the laying of the Foundation Stone of St. Philip’s Church, Sheffi-Id, and printed for use at that ceremony. [3 ms.] It was given in Montgomery’s Original Hymns, 1853, No. 296, in 5 st. of 4 lin., entitled “On Laying the Foundation Stone of a Place of Worship.” Its use has been very limited, mainly owing to the superior excellence of his hymn, “This stone to Thee in faith we lay,” which was written during the following month, and was included in his Christian Psalms, 1823, whilst this hymn was omitted from all his earlier works.

A thousand oracles divine.
C. Wesley. [Holy Trinity.] In his Hymns on the Trinity, 1767, this hymn is given as No. xvii. in the division of “Hymns and Prayers to the Trinity,” in 4 st. of 8 lin., p. 100. It was repeated in the Wes. H. Br. 1780, and later eds. with the simple alteration of “His hosts” to “the hosts” in st. 1. 6. From that collection it has passed into all the principal hymnals of the Methodist bodies in most English-speaking countries, but is seldom found elsewhere. Few hymns are more dogmatic on the doctrine of the Trinity. The lines, “The Friend of earth-born man,” and “The God of heaven’s superior praise,” are borrowed from Young’s Night Thoughts. Night iv. II. 603. 440. Orig. text as above, and P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-1872, vol. vii. pp. 312-13.

A time to watch, a time to pray.
J. M. Neale. [Good Friday.] Appeared in his Hymns for Children, 1842, in 6 st. of 4 lin., the last st. being by Ken’s doxology. It is given in Mrs. Brock’s Children’s H. Bk. with the omission of the doxology, and st. iii. 1. “this day,” for “to-day,” otherwise unaltered.

A voice from Ramah. W. Knox. [Bereavment.] Pub. in his Songs of Israel, 1824, in 3 st. of 8 lin. and again in his Poems, 1847, pp. 117-9. It is based on Jer. xxxi., 15, 16, and entitled “Rachel Weeping.” In Kennedy, 1863, No. 197, it is slightly altered.

A voice upon the midnight air.
[Passiontide.] Dr. Martineau informs us that this hymn was contributed by his Hymn for the Christian Church & Home, 1840. It is No. 218, in the Hymn Book 1840, and again with alteration, in the Wes. H. Bk. 1875, No. 827.

Awidow poor, forlorn, oppressed.
C. Wesley. [Prayer.] From the ms. of his Hymns on the Four Gospels, dated 1765, first pub. in the P. Works of J. and C. Wesley, 1868-72, in 4 st. of 4 lin. and again with alteration, in the Wes. H. Bk. 1875, No. 827.

A widowed mother lost her son.
Dorothy A. Thrupp. [Compassion.] Contributed to the 2nd ed. of Mrs. H. Mayo’s Sel. of Hymns, &c., 1840, in 4 st. of 4 lin. entitled “The Widow and her Son,” and signed “D. A.” It is found in a few collections, including the Ch. S. S. H. Bk. 1879, No. 45.

Abash’d be all the boast of Age.
Bp. R. Heber. [Epiphany.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, pp. 27-8, in 5 st. of 4 lin. as the first of two hymns for the First Sunday after Epiphany. In its original form it is not in common use, but st. ii.-v. as—“O Wisdom, whose unyielding power”—is given in Kennedy, 1863, No. 229 (with alterations), and the Meth. S. S. H. Bk. 1879, No. 77, also slightly altered.

Abba Father! we approach Thee.
J. G. Deek. [Sons of God.] 1st pub. in the Appendix to the Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, 1841, No. 27, in 4 st. of 8 lin. again with the omission of st. iii. in Ps. & Hys. Loud., Walther, 1812; Walcker’s Chelesham Coll. 1855; Spoon’s G. & G. 1872, No. 21. and other collections. It is a plain evangelical hymn of no special merit. In America it is found in the Bapt. Hym. & Tune Bk. Phil. 1871, No. 792.

Abba Father, while we sing.
E. Osler [Providence], written for and first pub. in Hall’s Mitre Hymn Book, 1836, No. 187, in 3 st. of 6 lin., and entitled “The Blessedness of God's Children"; and again in Ossian's Church & King, June, 1837, where it is appended to an article on the Tenth Sunday after Trinity. It is found in several hymnals, including P. Maurice's Choral Hym. Bk., 1861, No. 403. Kennedy, 1863, No. 1452, but usually with slight alterations.

Abelard, Peter, b. at P rails, in Brittany, 1079. Designed for the military profession, he followed those of philosophy and theology. His life was one of strange chances and changes, brought about mainly through his love for Heloise, the niece of one Fulbert, a Canon of the Cathedral of Paris, and by his rationalistic views. Although a priest, he married Heloise privately. He was condemned for heresy by the Council of Soissons, 1121, and again by that of Sens, 1140; d. at St. Marcel, near Cluâs sur Saône, April 21, 1142. For a long time, although he had been referred to both by himself and by Heloise, little of any moment was known except the Advent hymn, Mittit ad Virginem (q.v.). In 1838 Greeth pub. in his Spicilegium Vaticanum, pp. 123-131, six poems which had been discovered in the Vatican. Later on, ninety-seven hymns were found in the Royal Library at Brussels, and pub. in the complete ed. of Abelard's works, by Cousin, Petri Abelardi Opp., Paris, 1849. In that work is one of his best-known hymns, Tuba Domini, Paule, maximina (q.v.). Trench in his Sac. Lat. Poetry, 1861, gives his Ornament terram germina (one of a series of poems on the successive days' work of the Creation), from Du Méril's Poésies Popul. Lat. du Moyen Age, 1847, p. 444.

Abide in me, and I in you. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Abide in Christ.] Written in 1819, and first pub. in Water from the Well Spring, 1852. It was subsequently repub. in his Ps. and Hymns, 1858, No. 79, and again in The Two Brothers, 1871, p. 290.

Abide with me, fast falls the eventide. H. F. Lyte. [Evening.] The history of this hymn to the date of its first publication, is given in the prefatory Memoir to his Remains by his daughter, Anna Maria Maxwell Hogg, Lond., Rivington, 1850, pp. ii., iii., as follows:—

"The summer was passing away, and the month of September (that month in which he was once more to quit his native land) arrived, and each day seemed to have a special value as being one day nearer his departure. His family were surprised and almost alarmed at his announcing his intention of preaching once more to his people. His weakness, and the possible danger attending the effort, were urged to prevent it, but in vain. 'It was better,' as he used often playfully to say, 'when in comparative health, to 'bear out than to rush out.' He felt that he should be enabled to fulfill his wish, and that his number was not for the reason that his expectation was well founded. He did preach, and amid the breathless attention of his hearers gave them the sermon on the night before his last illness, 'The Christmas sermon,' which is in itself a most valuable document (i.e. the Remains). He afterwards assisted at the administration of the Holy Eucharist, and though necessarily much exhausted by the exertion and excitement of this effort, yet his friends had no reason to believe it had done him any harm. In the evening of the same day he placed in the hands of a near and dear relative the little hymn, 'Abide with me,' with an air of his own composing, adapted to the words."

A note to the sermon referred to in this extract says, "Preached at Lower Brixham, Sept. 4, 1847. He died at Nottage on the 20th of the November following. [Layst. R. F.]

The text of this hymn, which is usually regarded as the original, is that contained in his Remains, pub. in 1850. There are, however, several readings of the text. These readings are given in:—

1. A fac-simile of the original ms. in the autograph of the author, published by the Vicar of Lower Brixham, on behalf of the restoration of the church.
2. A leaflet on which it was first printed at Berryhead in September, 1847.
3. Remains, &c., 1850.

The variations of text are:—

st. l. 1. 2. No. 1. The darkness thickens, Lord, &c. Nos. 2 and 3. The darkness deepens, Lord, &c.
st. lv. 1. 4. No. 1. Come, friend of sinners, and then abide, &c. No. 2. Come, Friend of sinners, and thus abide.
1. No. 3. Come, Friend of Sinners, and thus abide.
2. No. 1. Hold then thy cross, &c. No. 2. Hold then thy cross, &c.
3. No. 1. Hold there thy cross, &c. No. 4. Hold Thou there thy cross, &c.
4. In addition to these the hymn has also been pub. by J. Wright and Co., Thomas Street, Bristol, 1863, with Lyte's original music; and it has been translated into many languages, including Latin renderings in the Guardian (Nov. 1879 and Dec. 1881), Church Times, Memorials of T. G. Godfrey-Faussett (1878), Hymno. Christ. Latina (1871), &c.

The important position which this hymn has attained in many lands and tongues will justify an extract from Mr. Ellerton's note to the same in Church Hymns (folio ed. 1881). In that collection it is given with the "General Hymns." Mr. Ellerton says:—

"It is sometimes (nearly always) classed among evening hymns, apparently on the ground of the first two lines, and their similarity in sound to two lines in Keble's 'Sun of my soul.' This is a curious instance of the misapprehension of the true meaning of a hymn by those among whom it is popular; for a very little consideration will suffice to show that there is not throughout the whole hymn the slightest allusion to the close of the natural day; the words of St. Luke xxiv. 29 are obviously used in a sense wholly metaphorical. It is far better adapted to be sung at funerals, as it was beside the grave of Professor Maurice, but it is almost too intense and personal for ordinary congregational use."

The use of this hymn is very extensive in all English-speaking countries. It is found in almost every collection published in G. Brit. during the past thirty years. [J. J.]

Above, below, where'er I gaze. [Creation.] Contributed to Christian Poetry, Edinb., 1827, in 5 st. of 6 l., entitled, "Omnipresence of God," and signed f. [J. G.] Its authorship has not been determined. It came into C. U., in a few Unitarian collections at an early date, and is at present in use in a limited extant in G. Brit. and America, e.g.: Amer. Plymouth Coll., No. 86; and Kennedy, No. 1275.

Under date of Patney, March 20, 1875, the author wrote, “With the exception of ‘Above the clear blue sky’ I have composed no hymns since that time published in 1837, which are translations [Hymns of the Primitive Church]. I believe 1841 may have been the date of the publication of my smaller book [Hymns of the Church, mostly Primitive], but I have been an invalid for the last four years, away from my home, and have nothing to refer to here. ‘Above the clear blue sky’ appeared first in some Irish Collection of hymns some years ago; but that is all I can remember about it” (4, MMS).

The Irish Collection referred to is probably Hymns for Pub. Worship, Dublin, 1856, in which it is found. It had appeared however in the author’s Hymns of the Church, mostly Primitive, in 1841, in 4. st. of 41, No. 83. Its use is somewhat extensive.

Abraham, when severely tried. C. Wesley. [Faithth.] From Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1710, p. 12, and entitled “The Life of Faith Examplified,” being a paraphrase of Heb. xi. in 80 st. In 1780, st. were included in the Wes. II. Bk., No. 277, from whence it has passed into most of the collections of the Methodist bodies. Orig. text in P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 214.

Absent from flesh, O blissful thought. I. Watts. [Deathth.] This hymn is part of a poem on “Death and Heaven,” in five Lyric Odes, of which it is No. 2:—“The Departing Moment; or Absent from the Body,” and is in 4 st. of 41. These Odes appeared in Dr. Watts’s Reliquiae Selectae, 1734. This ode is not in extensive use, although found in a few collections in G. Brit. and America. It is given, in a slightly altered form, in the New Cong., No. 723. The orig. text is not found in modern collections. [W. T. B.]

Abyssinian Hymnody. Till about the year 1804, when the Rev. J. M. Rodwell published several articles in the Journal of Sacred Literature, whatever nothing was known in England of Abyssinian Hymnody, and it is only to these articles that reference can even now be made.

The selections from the Degua, or Hymnal of Jared, an Abyssinian saint who is believed to have lived in the 5th cent., and is traditionally said to have been caught up into heaven, (see Dillman’s Cat. ms. 26th Brit. Mus., p. 52, n.), are of striking originality and are translated by Mr. Rodwell into a kind of metrical prose. From them we give as a specimen the “Hymn of the Light.”

Praise to the Saviour, the glory of the saints, the light which hath come into the world; His clothing was as light upon the mount, but He is the true light in Himself.

He came from a world of light, and that light hath come to us; He will lead us back into that light; From whence He descended in love and pity.

He has come whom Moses announced— The Crown of martyrs, the Founder of the Church; The Light of light, who giveth light to the just. Oh send out Thy light and truth, That they may bring me to Thy holy hill; Send forth Thy hand from on high to save.

ACCEPT, O LORD

God is a God who knoweth all things, Glad in righteousness, robed in light; A light announced Him, shining in the heavens. And He is come, the Pilot of the souls of the just.

The Church’s Bridal room is the light of the world. Let us therefore be clad in light, And put away the works of darkness, And walk as the children of the day.

He reigns over the treasures of light, Wherever exist the worlds were made. He will manifest that light; He will give comfort in our sorrows; He will dispel the clouds and thick darkness. And lead us to our rest above.

Hallelujah, O Thou firstborn of Zion: O Adonai, Thou art the bearer of glad tidings: Marvelous is the brightness of Thy beauty. Be exalted To Thee be glory. Amen.

The ms. from which these hymns were translated is in the library of the B. & F. Bible Society, and is probably of the 17th century. Only two other copies appear to have found their way to Europe. From the invocation of saints, in the hymns for their festivals, one can hardly doubt that the hymns are of the 5th or 6th cent. In this they present an exceedingly strong family likeness to the hymns of St. Ephrem Syrus.

The first published metrical translation was a version of The Vigil of the Four Beasts, by Mr. W. C. Dix, and appeared in the Churchman’s Shilling Magazine for May, 1867. In October of the same year an article on “Abyssinian Hymns,” containing three metrical versions by Mr. Dix, was issued in the same magazine. Another article headed Devotion of the Abyssinian Church appeared in the Monthly Packet for July, 1868, and two hymns were added. None of these are in C. U., but one is given in Jellinek’s Songs of the Church. 1867. The Song of the Saints, the only other version of an Abyssinian hymn, originally published in Rev. L. C. Biggs’s Songs of Other Churches in the Monthly Packet for Nov. 1871, and reprinted in the Churchman’s Manual of Public and Private Devotion, 1882, completed the use of the translations of Mr. Rodwell by English hymn-writers, except, that in the column of the Churchman, an additional translation for two, by Mr. Dix, may be found.

It is earnestly to be wished that attention may be seriously drawn to the hymns of the whole Eastern Church. The profound ignorance of our leading hymnological scholars on subjects of this class is lamentable. The field Dr. Neale worked so well has lain comparatively fallow since his early death. The position which some of his Hymns of the Eastern Church have taken in our hymnals excites the wish that Abyssinian and Ethiopic may render us some service. These unwrought fields, though not equal to the rich treasury of Greek and Latin hymnody, are still worthy of the attention of English compilers. [W. T. B.]

Accept, O Lord, thy servant’s thanks. Bp. R. Mant. [Holy Scripture.] This is one of the Original Hymns added by Bp. Mant to his Ancient Hymns from the Roman Breviary, 1837-71, in 4 st. of 8 l., and entitled “Hymn of Thanksgiving for Holy Scripture.” Dr. Kennedy, in adopting it in his Hymno. Christ., 1863, No. 1195, has given the original text, with the change of st. iii. I. 7, from “And He, Who gave the word, may Accept our thanks, O Lord, we pray. W. C. Dix. [St. Bede.] Contributed to the People's H. 1867, No. 252.

Accepted, Perfect, and Complete. Frances R. Havergal. [Complete in Choral.] Written at Hastings, Sept. 3, 1870, in 5 st. of 3 l., and based upon the three passages of Holy Scripture: Eph. i. 6, "Accepted in the beloved"; Col. i. 28, "Perfect in Christ Jesus"; and Col. ii. 10, "Complete in Him." It was first pub. as a leaflet by J. and R. Parlane, Paisley, 1871; then, with the title "Tryphena" (also by Miss Havergal), in Stepp's's S. of G. & G., 1872, mus. ed. 1875; again in her work Under the Surface, 1874; and her Life Mosaic, 1879. [Ch. Hav. Ms.]

Accepting, Lord, Thy gracious call. C. N. Hall. [Following Jesus.] This hymn was printed in the author's tract, Follow Jesus, and, again, from thence in his Hymns, composed at Bolton Abbey, and Other Hymnes, 1858, pp. 45-47, in 11 st. of 4 l. In Major's Bk. of Praise and the Meth. S. S. H. Bk. it is given in an abbreviated form. In the author's Ch. Ch. Hymnal, 1876, No. 237, it is included as "Lord! we obey Thy kind command," in 8 st. of 4 l. various stanzas of the original being rewritten to attain this end.

According to Thy gracious word. J. Montgomery. [Holy Communion.] No copy of this hymn is preserved in the "Montgomery Ms." Its first publication was in the author's Christian Psalmist, 1825, p. 403, in 6 st. of 4 l. with the motto "This do in remembrance of Me." From its first appearance it has been one of the most popular of hymns for Holy Communion, and is found in most modern collections of a moderate type. Usually, however, st. ii. 1, 2, which reads: "Thy testimonial cup I take," is altered to: "The cup, Thy precious Blood, I take," as in Thring's Coll., No. 524, or, "I'll take," as in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and Kennedy, 1863, No. 650.

In 1853 it was republished by Montgomery in his Original Hymns, No. 129. In common with Montgomery's hymns it has no doxology. That usually found with it, is from the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857. In Hodge & Huntington's Unitarian Hymn of the Church, Boston, U. S. A., 1853, No. 388, "Gethsemane, can I forget?" is composed of st. iii., iv., v. of this hymn.

"To thee, O Jesus, Light of Light, All praise and glory be," &c.

According to Thy mercy, Lord. [Supplication.] This cento appeared in 3 st. of 4 l. as No. 720 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1879, and was repeated in later eds. (1849, No. 723.) In Mr. Eberle's notes in the Moravian Messenger, March, 1870, it is marked as: i. Schneeschin, tr. J. Swarttzen, ii. N. L. von Zinzendorf, tr. F. W. F. Foster, iii. N. L. von Zinzendorf, tr. J. Swartzen. St. i. seems to be from st. iii. of Schneeschin's hymn, "Allien zu dir, Herr Jesus Christ," while st. ii., iii. seem based on Zinzendorf's "Ach mein verwundert Fürste." The cento is included as No. 192 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1861. [J. M.]

Ach Gott vom Himmel, sieh darein. Martin Luther [Ps. xii.]. This free rendering of Ps. xii., adapted to the times, which Bunsen (Vereine, 1853, p. 854) calls "a cry for help from the Church founded on the Word of God for protection against its contemners and corrupters," was probably written in 1523 and 1st pub. in the Ellisch christlich leser, Wittenberg, 1524, in 6 st. of 7 l. The seventh st., a dox., was added in Eyn Enchiridion, Erfurt, 1524, but has not been tr. into English. Included in Wackernagel, iii. p. 6, in Schlicke's's ed. of Luther's Gesichtliche Lieler, 1854, p. 76, and as No. 299 in the U. C. L. S. 1851. It is a companion to Luther's "Sinn freut euch lieben Christenmein," and like it greatly furthered the cause of the Reformation.

Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 521-526, relates that Dr. Sprütz, or Sprangel, of Magdeburg Cathedral, had gone by request of the Romish authorities to preach at Brunswick three sermons which were to uproot the Lutheran heresies. On the 22nd Sun. after Trinity, 1527, he preached on the parable of the Unmerciful Servant (St. Matt. xviii. 23-35) and declared salvation by good works. At the end of his sermon, a citizen began to sing this hymn, and as the whole congregation joined in, the discontented priest once left the pulpit, but never again preached in Brunswick. Again, on the 2nd Sun. in Advent, 1529, a preacher in St. Jacob's, Liibeck, exhorted to prayers for the dead, when two boys began this hymn, and the congregation following, sang the whole. Lauxmann adds that st. iv. comforted P. J. Spener when he heard it rung on his entering the church at Frankfort-am-Main, at a time when days looked dark for the Church of Christ; that, when summoned to Dresden to occupy a non-clerical post of Court preacher, he was cheered by being saluted with it in the first Saxon village he entered; and that in Dresden it was often, at his request, sung by the scholars before his door.

Included, slightly altered, and omitting st. ii., as No. 455, in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868. In W. B. Bradbury's Golden Shower, N. Y. 1860 (ed. 1870, p. 138) the trs. of st. ii., vi. are rewritten, and a chorus added. St. i., ii., iv. in this form, with a chorus, were included as No. 1279, in Robinson's S. for the Sanctuary, 1865, and, as No. 1048, in the Baptist Praise Bk., 1871.

Other trs. are:

(1) "Hungering, thirsting as we go," by Miss Fry, 1859, p. 17. (2) "Ah! bow empty is the heart," by H. Mazzini, 1860, p. 132.

Acquaint thee, O mortal. W. Knox. [Invitation.] The opening lines of this hymn are:

"Acquaint thee, O mortal! Acquaint thee with God, And joy, like the sunshine, Shall beam on thy road. And peace, like the dew-drops, Shall fall on thy head; And visions, like angels, Shall visit thy bed."

As a hymn on "Heavenly Wisdom," and based on Job xxii. 21, 27-28, it appeared in his Harp of Zion, 1825, in 3 st. of 8 l. It was also repeated in his Poems, 1847, p. 162, where it is said in a footnote to have been "written for Mr. Pettet." The use of this hymn in G. Britain is very limited. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1140, it is given as, "Acquaint thee, my child, acquaint thee," &c. In America, as in Robinson's S. for the Sanctuary, 1865, 2nd ed., 1872, No. 504, and others, it is:

"Acquaint thyself quickly, O Sinner," &c., and, in common with nearly every collection, the second stanza of the original is omitted. This stanza reads:

"Acquaint thee, O mortal! Acquaint thee with God, And the praver of thy spirit Shall reach His abode; And with the arts of thy bosom Shall rise not in vain; And His favour shall flourish Thy heart like the rain."

This hymn is also sometimes in C. U. as:

"Acquaint thee, O Spirit, acquaint thee with God," as in Longfellow and Johnson's Bk. of Hymns, Boston, 1846, and later eds. [J. J.]

AD COENAM

Ad celebres, Rex coelestis, laudes cuncta. [St. Michael and All Angels.] A Noticerian Sequence for the Feast of St. Michael. Daniel, ii. 24, gives only the first five words, referring to ms. formerly belonging to the monastery of St. Ennerman at Ratisbon. These ms., which are now at Munich, belong to the 11th and 12th centuries. The full text is in a 12th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Add. 11669, f 54); in Daniel, v, pp. 93, 94, in Kehren, p. 135, and in Memoirs of the Society of Antiquaries, 1851, p. 454. Also in the Missals of Sarum, York and Hereford as a seq. on that festival. In vol. ii. of the reprint of the York Missal, pub. by the Surtees Society, 1872, will be found p. 316, the variations of a ms. of Proses and Sequences in the Bodleian Library, No. 775, written in the reign of Ethelred, sometime between the years A.D. 994 and 1017. This last is the oldest form in which it is found. Mone, i. p. 455, gives the full text and a great variety of readings from ms. at Munich and Stuttgalt, of the 11th cent., together with short notes on portions of the text. Daniel, v. p. 93, repeats Mone's references. They are also repeated with additions in Kehrain, No. 168.

Translations in C. U.:

1. To celebrate Thy praise, O King of heaven, by C. B. Pearson, in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868, p. 118. After revision it was reprinted in his Sarum Sequences, 1871, p. 119, as "To give Thee glory, Heavenly King."

2. To give Thee glory, Heavenly King.—No. 374, in the Hymnary, is a cento from Mr. Pearson's tr., with alterations made by the editors with the translator's permission.

Ad coenam Agni providi. [Easter.] This hymn is sometimes ascribed to St. Ambrose, but is not inserted among his undoubted compositions, by the Benedidtine editors, tom. 1 (see Mone, p. 14, in the fourth of the works of St. Ambrose). The original text, with that revised for use in the Rom. Brev., "Ad regias agni dapes," is given in Daniel, i, No. 81; with various readings from the Collections of Cassander, and other authorities. It is headed "Hymnus Paschalis" ("A hymn for Easter-tide"). In Mone, it is No. 161 from ms. at Liechtenthal of the 13th and 14th centuries, and from others of later date. He gives a long note embracing various readings, references, and criticism. Much of this is repeated in Daniel, iv. 73, who also gives readings from Rheinau miss. of the 10th and 11th cent., and at iv. p. 335, readings from a ms. of the 9th cent., at Bern. It is also found in a 11th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Add. vi. f. 48), and is printed from a Durham ms. of the 11th cent., in the Latin Hymn. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 29, and is in the Sarum Brev., of the 8th and 9th cents., it is No. xxii. The Sarum Brev. text is in the Hymn. Sarisc. Lond., 1851, p. 99, and various readings are added from English Monastic Uses, including those of Worcester, St. Albans, Canterbury, &c., and in Biggs' Annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867.

Concerning its use we would add that from Low Sunday [1st after Easter] till the Vigil of the Ascension it was the proper vespers hymn in the Sarum and York uses, and is also so found in other English breviaries, Saturdays excepted (when "Chorus nova Hierusalem" was sung) whenever no feast of Apostles or patron Saint interrupted the ordinary course of the Easter season. There is no doxology, for according to Sarum and York the last 2 verses of "Jesu Salvator Sacellum" were directed to be sung at the end of all hymns of that metre [saturdays excepted].

Passing from its history, text, and use, to the hymn itself, its design, and teaching are well brought out by the following writers:

In a curious work which gives interpretations of hymns, mystical and otherwise, entitled "Expositio Hymnorvm cum notabilis
In the short commentary on the Hymnal N. 1853, part i., pp. 26-27, where he says:-

"In order to understand this hymn, we must know for whom it was written. It was the custom of the early Church that Baptism should be solemnly administered in the presence of all, that the child might be led and guided to his Lord, Whom it is written that he receives the Body of Christ unworthily eateth and drinketh damnation to himself; but who doth so worthily baptize with the baptism of God, and once was by the Apostles appointed?" (at the banquet of the Lamb as those who are prepared.)

The Allusion is to those who were solemnly baptized and clothed in white garments on Easter Eve, and admitted to Holy Communion on the following day.

Dr. Neale works out this allusion to the newly baptized and their white garments in his Short Commentary on the Hymnal N., 1853, part i., pp. 26-27, where he says:-

AD PERENNIS

AD REGIAS

1. On the feast of life eternal.—By E. Caswall, 1st pub. in his Masque of Mary, 1856, and again in his Hymns & Poems, 1873, pp. 214–218, in 20 st. of 8 l. In the original form it is not in C. U.; except in Hymns and Introits, 1852, No. 70, but as "Now at the Lamb’s high royal feast," it was given in Murray’s Hymnal, 1852, No. 57, and later collections. The opening line was borrowed from E. Caswall’s tr. as under.

2. Now at the Lamb’s high royal feast. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 94, and again in his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 53 in 7 st. of 4 l. This is the tr. usually found in Roman Catholic hymn-books. An altered form of this in 4 st. is No. 52 in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864, beginning "Guests at the banquet of the Lamb."

3. Ad regias Agni dapés. The Roman Breviary version of the Ambrosian Ad coenam Agni prvidit, above. It is the hymn at Vespers, "Sabbato in Albis," i.e. on Saturday in Easter-week, and afterwards on Sundays and week-days, when no Festival occurs and the Ferial Office is said, till the first Vespers of the Ascension. In addition to the ordinary editions of the Rom. Breve, the text is given in several modern Roman Catholic hymnals. Card. Newman’s Hymni Eccles., 1838–65; Biggs’s Annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867; Daniel, i. No 81, &c.

3. At the Lamb’s High Feast we sing. By R. Campbell, written in 1849 [C. MSS.], and 1st printed in his collection commonly known as the St. Albans Hymnal, 1850, in 4 st. of 8 l. In the original MSS. the first two lines are added as a refrain to each verse, but are omitted in the printed text. Cooke and Denton’s Hymnal was the first to bring it into prominent notice, although in an altered form which has been copied by many compilers. Its use exceeds that.
of all other trs. of the "Ad Regias Agni" put together; being found in a more or less correct form, in the most important collections of the Ch. of England. Many of the alterations in H. A. M., Church Hyg., Thring, and others date from Cooke and Denton's Hymnal, 1853, the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and others. Another arrangement of Campbell's tr is, "To the Lamb's High Feast we press," given in Archdeacon Pott's Coll., 1834, No. 90.

5. The Banquet of the Lamb is laid. By R. C. Singleton, made for and first pub. in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868, No. 119.

6. We keep the Festival. By A. R. Thompson, contributed to Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

7. Come, join the Kingly Banquet free. By F. Trench, in his Liturgical H. Ps., n. d. (1865), in 8 st. of 4 l. In 1871 st. i.-v. and vii. were given as a hymn in 3 st. of 8 l. in Hys. and Carols, Church Sisters' Home, St. John's Wood, 1871.

Ad templo nos rursus vocat. Charles Coffin. [Sunday Morning.] In his Hymni Sacri, p. 8, ed. Paris, 1736, under the heading Die Dominica ad Laudes Matutinas. In the revised Paris Brev. of the Abp. Charles de Vintimille, 1736, it is the hymn for Sunday at Lauds; as also in the Lyons and other modern French Brevs. Text as above, and in Card. Newman's Hymnss Ecc. 1838, p. 2. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:
1. Morning lifts her dewy veil, by I. Williams, 1st pub. in the British Mag. 1834, vol. v. p. 28, in 9 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hymns tr. from the Paris Brev., 1839, p. 3, and later editions. The following:

2. Now morning lifts her dewy veil, is by J. Chandler, who, in his Preface to his Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837, in which it appeared, thus alludes thereto:

"I have ventured to take the greatest part of the 2nd hymn from the translation in the British Magazine; which, notwithstanding the alterations I have made in it, still shines forth as the work of an evidently superior hand." p. ix.

This tr. has attained to a more extensive use than any other. It is given in Mercer, ed. 1864, No. 136, and Sarum, 1868, No. 293, in its full form. The most popular arrangement is that of Chope, 1864, No. 111, Thring's Coll., 1882, No. 9, and others, with omission of st. vii., viii., and some alterations.

3. Again the Sunday morn, by E. Caswall, appeared in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 293, and again in his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 223. In its original form its use is very limited, but as:

4. Again the holy morn, it is given in several collections, including the Hymnary, 1875, No. 7, Hgs. & Carols, n. d., No. 15, the Roman Catholic Hym. for the Year, n. d., No. 83, and many others. Another form based upon Caswall's v. is:

5. When first the world sprang forth, in Kennedy, 1865, No. 701. It is probably by the editor, and is not found elsewhere.

6. Again the dawn gives warning meet. By Dr. Ronridge, 1st pub. in his Hys. and Anthems, 1851, p. 10, in 4 st. of 8 l. and 1 st. of 4 l. It is repeated in later editions.

Once more the beams of orient light. Chambers, 1857. [J. J.]

Adam descended from above. C. Wesley. [Lent.] 1st pub. in his Short Hymns, &c., 1762, vol. i. No. 1044, but omitted from the 2nd ed., 1794. It was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, and is retained in the revised ed. of 1875, No. 129 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ix. p. 415). Another hymn by C. Wesley, beginning:—"Adam descended from above, Thou only canst," &c., was pub. from his own Hymns on the Four Gospels, in P. Works of J. and C. Wesley, 1868-72, vol. xi. p. 341, but it is not in common use.

Adam, our father and our head. J. Watts. [The Full.] Appeared in his Horae Lyricae, 1705, in 13 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Jesus the only Saviour." Its use as a complete hymn is unknown. A cento therefrom of 5 st. was given in Rippon's Bapt. Sel., 1787, No. 38, composed of st. i., ii., iv., v., and vii. This has passed into common use to a very limited extent.

Adam of St. Victor. Of the life of this, the most prominent and prolific of the Latin hymnists of the Middle Ages, very little is known. It is even uncertain whether he was an Englishman or a Frenchman by birth. He is described by the writers nearest to his own epoch, as Brito, which may indicate a native of either Britain, or Brittany. All that is certainly known concerning him is, that about A.D. 1130, after having been educated at Paris, he became, as quite a young man, a monk in the Abbey of St. Victor, then in the suburbs, but afterwards through the growth of that city, included within the walls of Paris itself. In this abbey, which, especially at that period, was celebrated as a school of theology, he passed the whole of the rest of his life, and in it he died, somewhere between the years 1172 and 1192 A.D. Possessed of "the pen of a ready writer," he seems to have occupied his life in study and authorship. Numerous are the hymns and sequences satisfactorily proved to have been written by him, which have come down to us, there would seem to be little doubt that many more may have perished altogether, or are extant without his name attaching to them; while he was probably the author of several prose works as well. His Sequences remained in Ms. in the care and custody of the monks of their author's Abbey, until the dissolution of that religious foundation at the Revolution; but some 37 of them, having found their way by degrees into manuscript circulation, were pub. by Clich- toceus, a Roman Catholic theologian of the first half of the 16th. cent. in his Elucidatorium Ecclesiasticum, which passed through several editions from 1515 to 1556, at Paris, Basel and Geneva. Of the rest of the 106 Hymns and Sequences that we possess of Adam's, the largest part—some 47 remaining unpublished—were removed to the National Library in the Louvre at Paris, on the destruction of the Abbey. They were discovered by M. Leon Gautier, the editor of the first complete edition of them, Paris, 1858.

The subjects treated of in Adam's Hymns and Sequences may be divided thus:—

Christmas, 7; Circumcision, 1, Easter, 6, Ascension, 1; Pentecost, 5; Trinity, 2; the Dedication of a Church, 4; B. V. M., 17; Festivals of Saints, 53; The Invention of the Cross, 1; The Exaltation of the Cross, 1; On the Apostles, 3; Evangelists, 2; Transfiguration, 2.

Although all Adam of St. Victor's Sequences were evidently written for use in the services of his church, and were, doubtless, so used in his own Abbey, it is quite uncertain how many, if any, of them were used generally in the Latin Church. To the lover of Latin hymns the works of this author should not be unknown, and probably are not; but they are far less generally known than the writings should be of one whom such an authority as Archbishop Trench describes as "the foremost among the sacred Latin poets of the Middle Ages." His principal merits may be described as comprising terseness and felicity of expression; deep and accurate knowledge of Scripture, especially its typology; smoothness of versification; richness of rhyme and rhythm, accumulated gradually as he neared the conclusion of a Sequence; and a spirit of devotion breathing throughout his work, that assures the reader that his work is "a labour of love." An occasional excess of alliteration, which however at other times he uses with great effect, and a disposition to overmuch "playing upon words," amounting sometimes to "punning," together with a delight in heaping up types one upon another, till, at times, he succeeds in obscuring his meaning, are the chief defects to be set against the many merits of his style. Amongst the most beautiful of his productions may be mentioned, perhaps, his Jucundare plebs fidelis; Verbi cere substantiæ; Potestate non natura; Stola regni laurentius: Heri mundus ezulcavit; Laudae crucis attollamus (Neale considers this "perhaps, his masterpiece"); Are, Virgo singularis; Salve, Mater Salvatoris; Annemar et age virginalis: Dominum cum mysterio praebent. Where all are beautiful, it is difficult, and almost invidious, to make a selection.

Of his Hymns and Sequences the following editions, extracts, and translations have been published:

i. Original with Translations:

(1) Œuvres Poétiques d'Adam de St.-Victor. Par L. Gautier, Paris, 1858. It is in two vols. duodecimo, and contains, besides a memoir of Adam of St. Victor, and an exhaustive bibliography of his writings, a Latin text of the HYMNS INTO FRENCH OF SOME 46 OF THE SEQUES, AND FULL NOTICES UPON THE WHOLE SERIES OF THEM. (2) The Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor, from the text of Gautier, with this Into English in the original metres, and short explanatory by Bigby S. Wrangham, M. A., St. John's Coll., Oxford, Vicar of Darrington, Yorkshire, 3 vols. Lond., Kegan Paul, 1881. (3) In addition to these complete eds., numerous specimens from the originals are found in Daniel, Mone, Königsfeld, French, Latife's Latin Poems, and Guéranger's Annales Liturgique, &c.

ii. Translations:

(1) As stated before, 46 of the Sequences are given by Gautier in a French tr. of the 15th. cent. (2) In English we have trs. of the whole series by Bigby S. Wrangham in his work as above; (11) by Dr. Neale in Med. Hymns: 12, more freely, by D. T. Morgan in his Hymns and other Poetry of the Latin Church; and one or more by Mrs. Charles, Mrs. Chester, C. S. Calverley, and the Revs. C. R. Pearson, E. A. Dayman, E. Caswall, R. F. Littledale, and Dean Plumptre. Prose trs. are also given in the Rev. Dom Laurence Shepherd's tr. Into English of Dom Guéranger's works.

iii. English Use:

From the general character of their metrical construction, it is probable that, as far as possible to any 16th. cent. utilising these very beautiful compositions in the services of the Anglican Church. The following, however, are from Adam of St. Victor, and are fully annotated in this work:—(1) In H. A. & M., Nos. 64 and 434 (partly); (2) in the Hymnary, Nos. 270, 273, 324, 396, 392, 403, 414; (3) in the People's H., 215, 271, 304; and (4) in Schützer's Daily Service H., 236.

Adami, Johann Christian, b. Jan. 13, 1662, at Luckau, Brandenburg, graduated M.A., at the University of Wittenberg, 1681, became diaconus, 1684, and pastor, 1691, at Luckau; from 1711 pastor primarius at Lübben, where he d. May 12, 1713.

His 23 hymns appeared in the Evangelisches Zôn, oder vollständiges G. B., Leipzig and Lübben, 1720, ed. by his son, for use in the Niederlausitz (Bode, p. 33; Wetzel's A. H., vol. i., pt. 1, p. 44; Jäcker's Geburthex Lexicon, 1756, vol. i., col. 86). One has been tr., viz.:

WAS KLAGET DEIN GEMÜTHE. [Cross and Consolation.] First pub. as No. 111 in the Berlin G. L., 1832, and as No. 2386 in Knapp's Ev. L.·, 1857 (1865, No. 2125). Dr. Jacobs, of Wernigerode, informs me that it appeared 1729 as above, p. 698, in 7 st. of 8. This is true:

"My soul, why this complaining," by Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, 1866, p. 260, repeated as No. 337 in Bøde's Praise Bk., 1872.

Adams, John, b. at Northampton, 1751; d. there, May 15, 1833. He was for several years a member of the Baptist denomination, but being expelled, on the ground of doctrine, from the chapel which he attended, he opened a place of worship on his own account and constituted himself the minister. On retiring from business in 1811, he removed to London, then to Olney, and finally returned to Northampton. Several of his hymns were printed in the Gospel Magazine in 1776. Very few, however, have come into general use.

Adams, John Greenleaf. Co-editor with Dr. E. H. Chapin of the Universalist Hymn for Christians, 1856; and, also, The Gospel Psalmist, 1861. He was b. in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, 1810. The collections named contain in each case 16 hymns
ADAMS, John Quincy. b. at Braintree (afterwards called "Quincy".), Mass., 1767, was a son of President Adams. After graduating at Harvard College he was, from 1794 to 1801, minister to the Netherlands, to England, and to Prussia. In 1806 he was appointed Professor of Rhetoric in Harvard College; in 1809 minister to Russia; 1817 Secretary of State; and, from 1824 to 1829, President of the United States. In 1831 he was elected a Member of the House of Representatives. Died suddenly, Feb. 21, 1848. His high position and principles are well known, as also the incidents of his political life. He was a member of the Unitarian body. His Memoir, by the Hon. Josiah Quincy, was published soon after his death, and also his Poems of Religion and Society, N. Y., 1848 (4th ed., 1854). He wrote, but never printed, an entire Version of the Psalms, seventeen of which, with five hymns, were inserted by his pastor, Dr. Lunt, in the Christian Psalmist, 1841. Of these the following are still in use:

1. Sure to the mansions of the blest. [Burial.] This is part of a piece of 20 stanzas, which appeared in the Monthly Anthology and Boston Revier, Jan., 1807. It is entitled "Lines addressed to a mother on the death of two infants, 19th Sept. 1803, and 19th Decr., 1806."

2. Alas! how swift the moments fly. [Time.] Sometimes given as "How swift, alas, the moments fly;" was written for the 200th anniversary of the First Congregational Church, Quincy, Sept. 29, 1839.

3. Hark! 'tis the holy temple bell. [Sunday.] Of these Nos. 2 and 3 are found in Lyra Sac. Amer. and 2 in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, 1875. [F. M. B.]

Adams, Nehemiah. b. at Salem, Mass., Feb. 19, 1806, and graduated at Harvard, 1826, and Andover, 1829. He was Congregational pastor at Cambridge, 1829-1834, and of Essex St. Church, Boston, 1834-1870. He d. 1878. In 1854 he published South-side View of Slavery, and in 1861 he edited Church Pastorals. His hymns are:

1. Come, take His offer now. [Invitation.] An adaptation from C. Wesley, given in his Church Pastorals, 1864, and repeated in the Hymns and S. of Praise, N. Y., 1874.

2. Saints in glory, we together. [Praise.] This is also in Ch. Pastorals 1864, and the Hys. & S. of Praise, 1874, where it is said to be by "S. E. Mahmied." This name, which has led compilers astray for some time, is purely fictitious. [F. M. B.]

Adams, Sarah, née Flower. b. at Harlow, Essex, Feb. 22nd, 1805; d. in London, Aug. 14, 1848, and was buried at Harlow, Aug. 21, 1848. She was the younger daughter of Mr. Benjamin Flower, editor and proprietor of The Cambridge Intelligencer; and was married, in 1834, to William B. Adams, a civil engineer. In 1841 she pub. Viaea Perpetua, a dramatic poem dealing with the conflict of heathenism and Christianity, in which Viaea Perpetua suffered martyrdom. And in 1845, The Flock at the Fountain; a catechism and hymns for children. As a member of the congregation of the Rev. W. J. Fox, an Unitarian minister in London, she contributed 13 hymns to the Hys. and Anthems, pub. by C. Fox, Lond., in 1811, for use in his chapel. Of these hymns the most widely known are— "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and "He sendeth sun, He sendeth shower." The remaining eleven, most of which have come into common use, more especially in America, are:

1. Creator Spirit! Thou the first Holy Spirit.
2. Darkness shrunk Calvary. Good Friday.
4. O, and watch the Autumn leaves. Autumn.
5. O hallowed memories of the past. Memories.
7. O sing a song of praise. Praise.
8. O Love! thou makest all things even. Love.
9. Part in Peace! it is day before us. Close of Service.
10. Sing to the Lord! for His mercies are sure. Praise.
11. The mourners came at break of day. Easton.

Mrs. Adams also contributed to Novello's musical edition of Songs for the Months, n. d. Nearly all of the above hymns are found in the Unitarian collections of G. Brit. and America. In Martineau's Hymns of P. and P., 1873, No. 389, there is a rendering by her from Fènelon: — "Living or dying, Lord, I would be Thine." It appeared in the Hys. and Anthems, 1841.

Addis, Scott, Henry, b. at Devonport, 1806; educated for the Congregational Ministry; ministered to charges at Torquay, 1837, Maidenhead, 1838-1843; and Taunton 1843-1860, and died suddenly in Liverpool, Oct. 2, 1860. He published no volume of poems or hymns, and is known to hymnology through his "And is there, Lord, a cross for me," a pleasing production on the text, "Take up the cross and follow Me," which he contributed to the New Cong. 1859, No. 650.

Addison, Joseph. b. at Milton, near Amesbury, Wilts, May 1, 1672, was the son of the Rev. Lancetl Addison, sometime Dean of Lichfield, and author of Devotional Poems, &c., 1669. Addison was educated at the Charterhouse, and at Magdalen Coll., Oxford, graduating B.A. 1691 and M.A. 1693. Although intended for the Church, he gave himself to the study of law and politics, and soon attained, through powerful influence, to some important posts. He was successively a Commissioner of Appeals, an Under Secretary of State, Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and Chief Secretary for Ireland. He married, in 1716, the Dowager Countess of Warwick, and, at Holland House, Kensington, June 17, 1719. Addison is most widely known through his contributions to The Spectator, The Tatler, The Guardian, and The Freeholder. To the first of these he contributed his hymns. His Cato, a tragedy, is well known and highly esteemed.

Addison's claims to the authorship of the hymns usually ascribed to him, or to certain of them, have been called in question on two occasions. The first was the publication, by Captain Thompson, of certain of those hymns in his ed. of the Works of Andrew Marvell, 1776, as the undoubted compositions of Marvell; and the second, a claim in the Athenæum, July 10th, 1880, on behalf of the Rev. Richard Richmond. Fully to elucidate the subject it will be necessary, therefore, to give a chronological history of the hymns as they appeared in the Spectator from time to time.

—This, as furnished in successive numbers of the Spectator, is:

1. The first of these hymns appeared in the Spectator of Saturday, July 26, 1712, No. 441, in 4 st. of 6 l. The article in which it appeared was on Divine Providence, signed "C." The hymn itself, "The Lord my pasture shall prepare," was introduced with these words:

"David has very beautifully represented this steady reliance on God Almighty in his twenty-third psalm, which is the form in which Taylor, in his pastoral hymn, and with those allusions which are usual in that kind of writing. As the poetry is very exquisite, I shall present my readers with the following translation of it."

(Orig. Broadsheet, Brit. Mus.)

2. The second hymn appeared in the Spectator on Saturday, Aug. 9, 1712, No. 453, in 13 st. of 4 l., and forms the conclusion of the sermon on "Gratitude." It is also signed "C.," and is thus introduced:

"I have already obliged the public with some pieces of divine poetry which have fallen into my hands, and as they have met with the reception which they deserve, I shall now add another piece of the same nature which has not appeared in print, and may be acceptable to my readers." (Orig. Broadsheet, Brit. Mus.)

Then follows the hymn:—"When all Thy mercies, O my God."

3. The number of the Spectator for Tuesday, Aug. 19, 1712, No. 461, is composed of three parts. The first is an introductory paragraph by Addison, the second, an unsigned letter from Isaac Watts, together with a rendering by him of Ps. 114th; and the third, a letter from Steele. It is concluded in the first two we have dealt.

The opening paragraph by Addison is:

"For want of time to substitute something else in the Room of them, I am at present obliged to publish Compliments above my Desert in the following Letters. It is no small Satisfaction, to have given Occasion to ingenious Men to employ their Thoughts upon sacred Subjects from the Approbation of such Pieces of Poetry as they have seen in my Saturday's papers. I shall never publish Verse on that Day but what is written by the same Hand; yet shall I not accompany those Writings with Eulogiums, but leave them to speak for themselves." (Orig. Broadsheet, Brit. Mus.)

In his letter Dr. Watts, after some compliments to "Mr. Spectator," says:

"Upon reading the hymns that you have published in some late papers, I had a mind to try yesterday whether I could write one. The 11th Psalm appears to me an admirable ode, and I began to turn it into our language; and more to the same effect, finishing with:—"If the following essay be not too incorrigible, bestow upon it a few brightenings from your genius, that I may learn how to write better, or write no more." The hymn which follows is—"When Israel, freed from Pharaoh's hand," in 6 st. of 4 l. Although this rendering of Ps. 114 is unsigned in the Spectator, its authorship is determined by its republication in Dr. Watts's Psalms of David, 1719.

4. According to the promise thus given the remaining hymns in the Spectator appeared in every case, on a Saturday. The first was:—

"The spacious firmament on high," which appeared on Saturday, Aug. 23rd, 1712, No. 465, that is, four days after the promise made in the note to Dr. Watts's letter and hymn. It is in 3 st. of 6 l. signed "C.," and is introduced at the close of an essay on the proper means of strengthening and confirming faith in the mind of man. The quotation, "The heavens declare the glory of God," Ps. xix. 1, &c., is followed by these words:

"As such a bold and sublime manner of Thinking furnished out very noble Matter for an Ode, the Reader may see it wrought into the following one." (Orig. Broadsheet, Brit. Mus.)

5. The next hymn was given in the Spectator on Saturday, Sep. 20th, 1712, No. 489, in 10 st. of 4 l., and signed "O." It begins:—"How are Thy servants blest, O Lord," and closes an essay on "Greatness" as a source of pleasure to the imagination with special reference to the ocean. It is thus introduced:

"Great painters do not only give us Landscapes of Gardens, Groves, and Meadows, but very often employ their Pencils upon Sea-Pieces. I could wish you would follow their example, and if this small hint may deserve a Place among your Works, I shall accompany it with a Divine Ode, made by a Gentleman upon the Conception of his Travels." (Orig. Broadsheet, Brit. Mus.)

The "Travels" alluded to are evidently those of Addison on the Continent from 1699 to 1702. Referring to an incident in his return voyage, Mr. Thomas, in a letter to Dr. Addison in the Edinburgh Review of July, 1843, says:

"In December, 1700, he embarked at Marseilles. As he glided along the Ligurian coast, he was delighted by the sight of myrtles and olive trees, which retained their verdure under the winter solstice. Soon, however, he encountered one of the black storms of the Mediterranean. The captain of the ship gave up all for lost, and confided himself to a capuchin who happened to be on board. The English ecrite, in the meantime, fortified himself against the terrors of death with devotions of a very different kind. How strong an impression this pious passage made upon him, appears from the Ode, "How are Thy servants blest, O Lord," which was long after published in the Spectator."

6. The last hymn of this series was:—"When rising from the bed of death." It appeared in the Spectator on Saturday, Oct. 18th, 1712, No. 513, in 6 st. of 4 l. and signed "O." It is appended to a letter purporting to have been written by an "excellent man in Holy Orders whom I have mentioned more than once as one of that society who assist me in my speculations." The title begins "Sickness," and the concluding words are:

"it is this Series of Thoughts that I have endeavoured to express in the following Hymn, which I have composed during this my Sickness."

7. The whole of these hymns, including that by Watts, have been in common use during most of the past, and during the whole of the present century; and although lacking the popularity which they once possessed, they are still found in the front rank in all English-speaking countries. They have also been translated into various languages, including, "The Lord my pasture," &c.; "When all Thy mercies," &c.; "The spacious firmament," &c., into Latin in the rev. R. Bingham's Hymnologia Christiana Latina, 1871.
ii. Addison's Claims.—The claims of Addi- son to the authorship of five of these six hymns (omitting that by Dr. Watts) are not of a character to be removed or explained away. 1. First we find them included in essays which are acknowledged to be his and bear his recognised signature, "E."

"O". 2. They are clearly by the same writer as the prose of the essays, and are the natural outcome and reproduction, in metre, of their turns of thought and modes of expression. 3. They are all Saturday hymns, and are declared by Addison himself to be in every case "by the same hand." That the hand was the hand of Addison is evident from a curious side-light which is thrown upon the subject by comparing the passage with which he introduced the hymn "When all Thy mercies, &c., on Saturday, Aug. 9, 1712, as given in the original Broadsheet of that day, and the same passage as rewritten, and published in the first edition in book form of the Spectator, late in the same year. The first (although already quoted we give it again for readiness of comparison) is:

"I have already obliged the public with some pieces of divine poetry which have fallen into my hands, and as they have met with the reception which they deserve, I shall, from time to time, communicate any work of the same nature which has not appeared in print, and may not be amiss to my readers." (orig. Broad- sheet, Brit. Mus.)

This passage reads thus in the first ed. of the Spectator, in book form, 1712:

"I have already communicated to the public some pieces of Divine Poetry, and as they have met with a very favourable reception, I shall from time to time publish some of the same nature which has not yet appeared in print, and may be acceptable to my readers." (Spectator, 1st ed. King's Copy, Brit. Mus.)

This last reading is repeated in all subsequent editions of the Spectator, and was evidently rewritten to remove the somewhat unbecoming assertion that the hymns "have met with the reception which they deserve;" to harmonize it with the paragraphs concerning hymns in a later number of the Spectator and to render it and them uniformly consistent with the received impression that he was the author of those pieces of "Divine Poetry" which appeared in the Saturday numbers of the Spectator.

4. Addison died in 1719. In 1721 Thomas Tickell, one of the contributors to the Spec- tator, and to whom Addison left his papers with directions concerning their use, published the same in 4 vols., as The Works of the Right Honourable Joseph Addison, Esq., London, Printed for Jacob Tonson, at Shakespeare's Head, over against Katherine Street in the Strand, M.DCC.XXI. In these vols., both the Essays and the Hymns are given. They are also repeated in The Christian Poet. A Miscel- lany of Divine Poems all written by the late Mr. Secretary Addison, &c., London, Printed for E. Curll, in the Strand, M.DCC.XXVIII. The positive evidence for Addison is thus complete.

Andrew Marvell.—The first and only claim on behalf of Marvell was made by Captain Edward Thompson in The Works of Andrew Marvell, Esq. Poetical, Controver- sial, and Political, containing many original Letters, Poems and Tracts never before printed, with a New Life of the Author. By Cap. Ed- ward Thompson, in 3 vols. London, Printed for the Editor, by Henry Baldwin, M.DCC.LXVI. In his Preface to this work Thompson says:

"Since the death of Mr. Thomas Hollis I have been favoured by his success with many manuscripts, manu- scripts, and scarce compositions of our authors. I was unable to procure anywhere else; and by the attention and friendship of Mr. Thomas Hakewill, I have been put in possession of a volume of Mr. Marvell's poems, written with his own hand, and the rest copied by his orders; this valuable acquisition was many years after the death of Mr. nettleton, which serves now (in his own words) to detect the theft and ignorance of some writers."

Thompson then proceeds in the same pre- face to give extracts from this ms. but without naming, in any instance, the handwriting in which he found the quotations, thus leaving it an open question as to whether any given piece was in the handwriting of Marvell, or of some one else. The hymns in the Spectator which he claims for Marvell are:—"When Israel, freed from Pharaoh's hand," (Dr. Watts): "When all Thy mercies, O my God," and "The spacious firmament on high."

The first of these he vehemently and circularly accuses Tickell of stealing from Marvell; the reason for attacking Tickell, instead of Addi- son, arising probably out of the fact that Steele's letter in the same number of the Spectator as the hymn, as noted above, is signed "T." This ignorance on his part of Steele's signature, is equalled by his further ignorance of the fact that the piece in question was given by Dr. Watts as his own in his Psalms of David, in 1719, and had thus been before the public as Watts's acknowledged work, for some 57 years!

The argument as against Addison for the two remaining hymns is summed up in the accusation of theft on Addison's part, and the statement:

"How came these to Mr. Addison's hands? I cannot explain; but by his words ('I have already communi- cated,' &c., as above) they seem to be reprinted by corres- pondents, and might perhaps come from the relations of Marvell."

To this we need only add that in the subse- quent collection of Marvell's Works are these claims made, or the pieces reprinted; and that the able and learned editor of The Complete Works in Verse and Prose of Andrew Marvell, M.P., the Rev A. B. Grosset (Fuller Worthies Library), maintains in his "Memo- rial Introduction," pp. lix.-lxiv., that—

"The claim put in by Captain Thompson for Marvell having written the well-known Songs of Zion, called Paraphrases on the Psalms, and the Proverbs, is not high; and 'When all Thy mercies, O my God,' and 'When Israel, freed from Pharaoh's hand,' and also the celebrated ballad of 'William and Margaret,' cannot be sustained. As matter of fact it went by default at the time the claim was originally made, seeing that, challenged to produce the ms. book alleged to contain these verses, no such book has ever been produced, and seems, since as been destroyed. I have no idea that Captain Thompson meant to impose; but from his own account it is clear that with the exception of one volume evidently unnumbered of Marvell's own poems—and for three of the greatest (one being the Havannah ode) we are indebted to it—it is clear that we have now long since produced, and long subsequent, to Marvell, some other scribe had turned the vacant leaves into an album or commonplace book."

The discussion of the claims on behalf of Marvell, which appeared in the Gentleman's Magazine, 1776, has not been overlooked. As, however, the writers argued from insufficient data, it would have produced confusion to have noticed that discussion in detail.

iv. Richard Richmond.—The latest claim to the authorship of the piece “When all Thy mercies, O my God,” has been made on behalf of one Richard Richmond, sometime Rector of Wolvaston in Cheshire, and a friend of Lancelot. This hymn is found in an undated letter in the possession of John Ellis, one of Queen Anne’s Under Secretaries of State. The writer of the letter begs for preferment at the hands of Ellis. The hymn is thus referred to therein:—

“Appropriate this most excellent hymn, suitable, fit, to your excellent virtues, and hope it may prove a motive for your honour’s Christian benevolence to the author in adversity, to comfort the sowres in life, shall be thankful to Heaven, and your worship’s most gracious hand.” (Addison, July 10, 1690.)

In addition to the arguments already set forth on behalf of Addison, we have, in this undated extract of bad English, a clear proof that the writer could never have penned those lines which appeared in the Spectator of Saturday, Aug. 9, 1712. The paragraph also, when rightly construed, shows that by the term author used therein, Richmond meant himself as the writer of the letter, and not as the author of the hymn. It is quite clear that he copied the hymn from the Spectator, and incorporated it, with slight alterations, in his letter, to give grace to his ill-looked appeal for preferment at the hands of Ellis.

From a literary, as distinct from a historical, point of view, there is abundant proof in the Essays and the Hymns that they were, in each case, the prose and poetic expressions of the same hand. This has already been indicated in the titles we find given to the Essays. One example will show how conclusively this argument may be wrought out. It is from No. 453, on “Gratitude”:—

“If gratitude is due from man to man, how much more from man to his Maker? The Supreme Being does not only confer upon us those bounties, which proceed from Himself, but He extends those benefits which are conveyed to us by others. Every blessing we enjoy, by what means soever it may be derived upon us, is the gift of Him who is the great Author of good, and Father of mercies.”

This thought is then illustrated by references to the examples set to Christian poets by Greek and Latin poets and Jewish writers, who all excelled in their Odes of adoration and praise; and the essay closes with:—

“When all Thy mercies, O my God, My soul survey’s: Transported with the view, I’m lost In wonder, love, and praise.”

In this the thought, style, and mode of expression, so far as prose and verse can agree, are the same, both in the Essay and in the Hymn. This evidence is also strengthened when we find that the Hymn, when compared with Addison’s Poems, are strongly marked by the same individuality. We may hold that Addison’s signature varied in the Spectator, and embraced the letters “G,” “L,” “I,” and “O”; and that the original text of each hymn is given in all good editions of that work.

J. J.

Addison, Lancelot, b. at Crosby Ravensworth, Westmoreland, 1632, and educated at Queen’s Coll., Oxford. Until the Restoration he spent part of his time at Oxford and part in retirement. He then became chaplain to the garrison at Dunkirk; and in 1663, to that at Tangier. In 1670 he was appointed Chaplain in Ordinary to the King, shortly after, Rector of Milton, Wilts, and Prebendary in the Cathedral of Salisbury. Finally, in 1683, he was preferred to the Deanship of Durham; d. 1703. In addition to some prose works, he published Devotional Poems, Festive and practical, on some of the chief Christian Festivals, Fasts, Graces, and Virtues, &c. Lond., Henry Bonwick, 1699.

Aedes Pater suprema. Prudentius. [Evening.] Given in all editions of his works, including Aurelii Prudentii Clementia V. C., Opera Omnia, vol. i. pp. 97-105, with notes (Lond., Valpy, 1824). It is No. vi. of the Cathevronum, and extends to 152 lines. Of the complete hymn we have no tr. into English, but three centes therefrom have been tr. thus:

1. Aedes Pater suprema—Be present, Holy Father. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the Hymnal of 1854, No. 10, being a rendering of II. 1-12, 125-128, 141-152, and a dactyl, of the original in the first line. It was repeated in the People’s Hymn, 1867, No. 436, and with alterations in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 17. In this last, two st. (v. vi.) were added from II. 129-132, and 137-140. This cento is usually given for Sunday evening.

2. Fluxit labor diei—The toil of day is over.—By J. A. Johnston, added to his English Hymnal, 1861, No. 256. It is a free rendering based upon st. iii.—vii. of Dr. Neale, as above.

3. Cultor Dei memento—Servant of God, remember. This portion of the hymn, given in Daniel, 1., No. 110; Card. Newman’s Hymn. Eccl. 1836 and 1855; Wackernagel and others, is composed of II. 123-152, with the addition of a duxology. It was used in the Sarum Breviary. “At Compline on Passion Sunday, and Daily up to Maundy Thursday.” Also in the Mozarabic Breviary; the Mozarabic Hymnarium; and in an 11th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961, f. 238). The tr. in C. U. is:—“Servant of God! remember,” by W. J. Blew. First printed with music on a broad-sheet, and reprinted in The Ch. Hym. and Tune Bk., 1852; 2nd ed. 1855. It is from the Sarum text, and in 7 st. of 4 l. In 1870 it was included in Mr. Rice’s Hymns, No. 105.

Translations not in C. U.:—

Adeste, Coelitum chori. Nicholas le Tourneux. [Easter.] In the revised Paris Breviary, 1736, this hymn was for the Ferial Office at Matins (Sundays included) in Easter-tide, beginning on Low Sunday and continuing to the Feast of the Ascension, and is marked with the initials "N." and "F." It is also used in the Roman Missal of Lyons and other modern French Breviaries. The Paris Breviary text was reprinted in Card. Newman’s Hymn Ecclesiastic, 1838 and 1865, and J. Chandler’s Hymn. Brev. of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 68. [W. A. S.]
ADESTE FIDELES

Translations in C. U.:

1. Angels, come on joyous pinion. By I. Williams, 1st pub. in his Hymns, tr. from the Paris Breve; 1839, p. 128, in 6 st. of 6 l. In 1851 it was given, somewhat altered, by Dr. Korison in his Hymns and Anthems, No. 81. In the Anglican H. Bk., 2nd ed., 1871, No. 152, it is altered to "Come, once more with songs descending."

2. Heavenly choirs with anthems sweet. By R. Campbell, written in 1849 [c. MSS.], and included in his collection commonly known as the St. Andrew's Hymnal, 1850, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is the most popular of the renderings of the "Adeste, Caelitum." In 1853 it was given, with alterations, and the omission of st. iii., in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, No. 87. This was repeated by Kennedy, 1863, No. 697, with the addition of "Alleluia," as a refrain to each verse. In the Appendix to the Hymnal N., enlarged ed., 1864, No. 38, st. iii. is restored; but the dogology is displaced in favour of a much weaker rendering. In Mr. Shipleys Annus Sanctus, 1853, the text was given from the Campbell MSS., and st. iii., vi., vii. are added by J. C. Earle.

3. Angels to our Jubilee. By W. J. Bley. 1st printed by subscription for use in his church [K. MSS.], and then in his Hys. and Tune Bk., 1852, in 8 st. of 4 l. This was repeated in the People's H., 1867, No. 119, and Rice's St. from Blee, 1870, No. 50.

4. Come, ye heavenly Choirs descending. By J. R. Woodcroft, contributed to his Hymns, &c., 1852, No. 38, and republished in the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1875; Chope's Hymnal, 1864, No. 100, and other collections. It is in 6 st. of 4 l., of which st. v. is from I. Williams as above.

Adeste fideles laeti triumphantes
[Christmas.]

As to the authorship and actual date of this hymn nothing positive is known. It has been ascribed to St. Bonaventura, but is found in no edition of his Works. Most probably it is a hymn of the 17th or 18th century, and of French or German authorship. The text appears in three forms. The first is in ii., st. iv.; the second, that in use in France, and the third the English use, both in Latin and English. The full text from Thaurus Arumns Animae Christianae, Mecelin, N.D. (where it is given as a second sequence for Christmas and said to be "Ex Graduali Cisterciensi") is:

1. Adeste fideles. Laeti triumphantes; Venite, venite in Bethle-
2. eman Natum vide
tum Regem Angelorum; Venire adoremus Dominum.
3. Deum de Deo; Lumen de Lumine,

In the English and French centres there are various readings; but we need only note three:
—st. v., l. 1, Patria for "Parentis"; st. vii., l. 1, Io for "hymnos"; and rarely, exultans, for "nunc hymnos"; st. viii., l. 2, hodierni, for "hodiernam"; and of these the second is probably the original text. The English cento is composed of st. i., ii., vii. and viii., and the French, generally of st. i., ii., vi., vii., and, very rarely, st. iv. also. Towards the close of the last century it was sung both in England and in France at Benediction during Christmas. As early as 1797 the hymn was sung at the Chapel of the Portuguese Embassy, of which Vincent Novello was organist, and the tune (ascribed by Novello to John Reading, organist of Winchester Cathedral, 1675-1681, and of the College to 1692) at once became popular. The use of the French cento may be gathered from the following rubric from the Nouveau Paroisiqnt Nantais, Nantes, 1837:

11. Ani Fêtes de Noël.

(Resp.) Venite adoremus, venite adoremus, venite adoremus Dominum. Les Chants contiennent: Adeste, fideles, etc.; et on répète a chaque strophe: Venite, etc.

The hymn was so familiar that it is not printed in full.

We find st. ii., iii., iv., and vi., in the Office de St. Omer, St. Omera, 1823, in the Paroisiqnt Complet du Déiése de Autun, Autun, 1837, in the Amiens Paroisiqnt, 1844, in the Rouen Paroisiqnt, Rouen, 1873, and in the Paroisiqnt Romain, Paris, n.d., but c. 1806, st. i., iii., iv., v. and vi., which are also in an undated Tours Paroisiqnt Complet, Paris, of which the "Approximation" is dated July, 28th, 1827, the hymn is given in both the English and French forms. At p. 583 it occurs as "Hymne Qui so chante, dans plusieurs eglises de Paris pendant le temps de la Nativité;" this is the English form, with various readings, consisting of st. i., ii., vii., viii.; then follows, "Hymne pour le temps de Noël," the ordinary French version st. i., iii., v. and vi., and both also occur in A Coll. of Ps., H., Anthems, &c., Washington, 1830.

Translations in C. U.:

1. Come, faithful all, rejoice and sing. Anon. in 4 st. of 5 l. in Every Families Assistant at Compline, Benedictio, &c., 1789. Somewhat altered it was republished in G. L. Haydock's Coll. of Catholic Hys., 1823. In the Vesperis; or, Evening Office of the Church, Dublin, 1808, it appeared as "Ye faithful souls, rejoice and sing." This is in use in a few Roman Catholic collections for Missions and Schools. In the Crown of Jesus H. Bk., it reads, "Ye faithful, come, rejoice and sing."

2. Ye faithful, approach ye. By F. Oakeley. This is a tr. of the English form of the Latin text. It was written in 1841 for the use of the congregation of Margaret Street Chapel, London, of which he was then the Incumbent. It was never published by the translator, but came into notice by being sung in his chapel. The original text was included in the People's H., 1867, No. 24, the Wellington College H. Bk., 1863, &c., and has also been repeated in several Roman Catholic collections of recent date.

3. O come all ye faithful, joyfully triumphant. This form of Canon Oakeley's tr. is the most popular arrangement of the Adeste fideles we possess. It first appeared in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, and has passed from thence into a great number of collections both in G. Britain and other English-speaking countries, the second line sometimes reading "Joyful and triumphant," and again "Rejoicing, triumphant." The Parish H. Bk., 1863-75, adopts this latter reading, and in addition it includes other alterations of importance.

4. Be present, ye faithful. In Chope's Hymnal, 1854, and later editions, is Canon Oakeley's tr. re-written.

5. Approach, all ye faithful. This tr. by "C." in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864, dates from 1845. Another tr. beginning with the same first line, was included in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853. It can be distinguished easily from the Irvingite tr. by st. iv. This reads in Cooke and Denton, "The Son Everlasting," and in the Irvingite collections, "To Thee, who on this joyous day, &c.

6. O come, all ye faithful, triumphantly sing. By E. Caswall, 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 290, and in his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 146. This tr. is in several collections, and sometimes slightly altered, as in the New Mitre, 1874, and others.

7. Come hither, ye faithful. This, as given in Schall's Caritat Song, 1870, p. 37; and the Prot. Episco. Hymnal, 1872, is E. Caswall's tr. with alterations.

8. O come, all ye faithful. By W. Mercer. This tr. can be distinguished from others beginning with the same first line by the st. iii., which reads, "Raise, raise, choir of angels," &c. It was written for and first appeared in his Ch. Psalter and H. Bk., 1854. In popularity it ranks next to the tr. by Canon Oakeley, being found in many collections throughout English-speaking countries.

9. Be present, ye faithful. By J. M. Neale. Pub. in the Hymnal N., enlarged ed., 1858. Although opening with the same line it is a different tr. from that in Chope's Hymnal, noted above. This second stanza of Chope reads: "Very God of Very God," and this "God of God, eternal."

10. O come, all ye faithful. Two trs. by J. A. Johnston are given in his English Hymnal, the first (with st. ii., "He, God of God, &c") in 1832, the second (st. ii., "Who God of God is") in 2nd ed., 1856, and 3rd ed., 1861.

11. Draw nigh, all ye faithful. This is Dr. Neale's tr. re-written by J. Keble for the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857. It was repeated in Kennedy, 1863, and, with slight changes, in the Sarum H., 1868.

12. O come, all ye faithful. By J. Ellerton, written for, and first pub. in Church Hys., 1871. It may be known by st. iv., which opens with "Thou, who didst deign to be born for us this morning."

15. O come, all ye faithful. This arrangement in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1884, is a cento compiled from the above trs.

16. Hither, ye faithful, haste with songs of triumph. In the American Presb. Ps. & Hys. Philadelphia, 1843, No. 174. These trs. have as a rule much in common. The greatest variety is found in the rendering of the lines in st. ii., "Deum de Deo, Lumen de lumine." These are:—

- For He, God of God, He, Light of Light eternal. R. C. Singleton, 1871.

These renderings show clearly that the majority of the translators had the Nicene Creed and not the Adeste fideles in their minds as they wrote. This is also the case with those trs. which are not in C. U.

Translations not in C. U.:—

ADESTO SANCTA

15. O come, all ye faithful. R. Campbell. St. Andrew's Hymnal, 1850.

[ J. J.]

Adoro te devote.

[Holy Communion.] The authorship of this short hymn on the Holy Trinity is unknown. Its earliest form is in a ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 1130) printed in the Latin Hymn. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 161. Amongst the English Brevisaries it is in those of York, Hereford and St. Albans; on the Continent, those of Mainz and Basel: and also in those of the Orders of the Carmelites, Dominicans, and Fratres Humilitati; but with varying texts. In Mone, i. p. 10, the text is given together with references to mss., and notes, which give the oldest ms. dating from the 14th cent. He also gives two refrains which are sometimes associated with the hymn. Daniel, i. No. 304, gives only the first four lines with a reference to Cassander; but in iv. p. 234, he gives the full text as in Mone, together with Mone's references. It is also in Neale's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1851, p. 157; Hymn. Sarum, 1851, p. 115; the Domin. H. Bk., &c. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:

1. Be present, Holy Trinity; Like Splendour, &c.
   By J. M. Neale. Appeared in the Hymnal X. 1852, No. 35, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in later editions. In 1867 it was repeated, unaltered, in the People's H., No. 161, and in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 337.

2. Be with us, Holy Trinity.
   By J. A. Johnston, 1st pub. in 2nd ed. of his English Hymnal, 1856, No. 148, in 5 st. of 5 l. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1122, it is slightly altered, specially in the doxology.

3. Be present, Holy Trinity; Co-equal light, &c.
   By J. D. Chambers, in his Lausis Saxon, Pt. i., 1857, p. 215, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the Salisbury H. Bk. 1857, No. 123, and Sarum, 1868, No. 179, the tr. is an arrangement by J. Keble from Dr. Neale with lines 1, 2, of st. i. from this tr. by J. D. Chambers.

4. O Holy Trinity! be present.
   By F. Pott, in his Hgs. fitted to the Order of Com. Pr., 1861, No. 107, in 5 st. of 4 l., and in later editions. [J. J.]

Adored for ever be the Lord. [Ps. xcviii.] This cento in the Amer. Episcopal Hymnal, 1872, No. 421, is composed; st. i., of 4 lines, from Tate and Brady's version of Ps. 28, and st. ii.-iv. Anon.

Adoro te devote, latens Deitas. St. Thomas of Aquino. [Holy Communion.] Of the actual date of the composition of this hymn we have no record. As in 1259 the author was engaged in Paris in writing on the Eucharist, and in 1263, in drawing up the existing office for the festival of Corpus Christi, at the request of Pope Urban IV., and for which he wrote the well-known hymns, Fange lingua gloriosi Corporis mysterii; Lauda Sion, Sacris sollemnis; and Verbum supernum (q. v.), we may fix the date, somewhat indefinitely, as c. 1260. Although never incorporated in the public service of the Church, it was added at an early date to various Missals for private devotion.

In 1841 Daniel included it in vol. i. No. 242 with a short note. In 1833 he was followed by Mone, No. 209, with a slightly differing text, from a Reichenau ms. of the 13th or 14th cent.; and extended notes, references, various readings and critical remarks; together with two refrains, one, which follows each stanza, (in Paas's Nucl. Devot. p. 232, and in Hymnod. Sacra, p. 330).—Ave Jesu verum manu, Christe Jesu aduige fidem omnium credentium: and the second (ms.at Koblenz of the 17th cent.):—Bone Jesu, pastor fideltim aduige fidem omnium in te sperantum. These notes, &c., are repeated with additions, by Daniel, iv. p. 234. Dr. Neale's note, Medieval Hymns, 1851 and 1867, &c., is:—

"The following hymn of S. Thomas Aquinas to the Holy Trinity was never in public use in the Catholic Church; but it has been appended, as a private devotion, to most Missals. It is worthy of notice how the Angelic Doctor, as if anxious to employ any patch of words on approaching so tremendous a Mystery, has used the very simplest expressions throughout."

In the foregoing, the text, slightly different from Daniel and Mone, specially in st. vi., is given in Card. Newman's H. Ecol. 1838 and 1865 (from a modern ed. of the Paris Brev. where it reads, "Adoro te supernus, latens Deitas"), and in The Dom. H. Bk. Lond., 1887. This last is also different, not only from Daniel and Mone, but from Card. Newman also. It has Mone's two refrains arranged as one in two lines.

Translations in C. U.:

1. O Godhead hid, deviously I adore Thee. By E. Caswall, 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 247, in 7 st., and with the refrain as in The Dom. H. Bk. This was repeated in his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 161, with alterations. The tr. of 1849 is somewhat extensively used in R. C. Hymnals, sometimes with the omission of the refrain. It is given so also in Canon Oakley's tr. of the Paradise of the Christian Soul.

2. Humbly I adore Thee, hidden Deity. By J. M. Neale, 1st pub. in his Medieval Hymns, 1851 and 1867, &c., in 7 st. of 4 l. This was included with slight alterations in the People's H., 1867, No. 178. It is also found in some works of private devotion.

Woodford. In Bp. Woodford's rendering various changes have been made from time to time, two of which are worthy of notice, the first of st. l., and the second of st. iv. The first st. originally read:

1. "Thee we adore, O hidden Saviour, Thee, Who in Thy Supper with us deign'st to be, Both flesh and spirit in Thy presence fail; Yet here Thy presence we devoutly hail."

This we find altered in Hgs. for Christian Seasons, Gainsburgh, 2nd ed., 1854. "Thee we adore, O hidden Saviour, Thee, Who in Thy Sacrament dost design to be, Both flesh and spirit at Thy presence fail;" &c.

This was repeated in H. & M., 1861 and 1875; The Hymnary, 1872, and others.

(2) Another reading of line 2 is:—"Who in Thy Sacrament art pleased to be." This was given in the Sarum, 1868, and repeated in the New Hymns, 1875.

(3) A third reading is:

"Thee we adore, O hidden Saviour, Thee, Who in Thy Feast with us vouchsaf'st to be, Both flesh and spirit at Thy Presence fail;" &c.

This appeared in Chope's Hymnal, 1857.

(4) A fourth reading is:—

"Thee we adore, O unseen Saviour! Thee, Who in Thy Feast with us vouchsaf'st to be, Both flesh and spirit at Thy Presence fail;" &c.

This was given in Pott's Hymns, fitted to the Order of Com. Pr., 1861.

(5) The fifth reading is:

"Thee we adore, O unseen Saviour! Thee, Who in Thy Feast art pleased with us to be, Both flesh and spirit at Thy Presence fail;" &c.

This appeared in the S.P.C.K. Ch. Hymns, 1871; and again in Thring's Coll., 1882, and has the sanction of the translator.

(6) The sixth reading is in T. Darling's Hymns for the Ch. of Eng., where l. 2 reads—"Who in this mystery vouchsafest to be." This is one of nine alterations by Mr. Darling. Mr. Darling's text is the most inaccurate of any with which we are acquainted.

The second change of importance is in st. iv., l. 3, which reads in the original—"To gaze on Thee unveiled, and see Thy face." In the Gainsburgh Hgs. for Christian Seasons, as above (2nd ed. 1854), this reads—"To gaze on Thee, and see with unveiled face," and was copied by H. & M., 1861-75, The Hymnary, 1872, and others. Darling reads—"To gaze on Thee unveiled, and face to face. For eye behold Thy glory," &c. Minor changes are also given by various editors. These are of little moment, and appear without the translator's sanction.

Bp. Woodford's authorised text is in Sarum, 1868, No. 221. He has also sanctioned that adopted by Church Hymns, and by Mr. Thring (K. MSS.).

4. Prostrate I adore Thee, Deity unseen. In the App. to Hymnal N., No. 216, is based upon the l. of Pusey, Caswall, and Chambers, with refrain.

1. I adore Thee truly, hidden Deity. By W. J. Irons, in his Ps. & Hgs. for the Church, 1875.

Translations not in C. U.:

Aemilie Juliane [Emilie].

Aeterna Christi munera, et martyrum victoriae. Ambrosian. This hymn, originally written for "Martyrs," has been adapted for "Apostles," and (in another form) for "Martyrs" in the Rom. Brev. Under these circumstances it will be necessary to notice the history and use of each.

1. The original text.

This hymn is received by the Benedictine editors of St. Ambrose as a genuine work of that Father, on the authority of the Ven. Bede; who, in his work, De arte metrica, speaks of it as a "hymn for blessed martyrs, composed with most beautiful grace," "palatable" and "more comely than hymnus beatorum martyrum." (See Bede, in Migne's Patrol., tom. 16.)

Mone, No. 733, in his note on the hymn, says, "Pezzoli remarks justly that the congregation of St. Maur [i.e. the Benedictine editors] ascribed this hymn on an obscure reference of Bede to St. Ambrose, whose it is not, though it is yet most likely of the 5th century."

Amongst the earliest MSS. in which it is found are two of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961, f. 248; Jul. A. vi, f. 64b), and another, perhaps of the 8th or 9th cent., formerly belonging to that eminent scholar in the Anglo-Saxon and cогitate, languages, Franciscus Juniatus. The latter was No. 110 among the MSS. bequeathed to the Bodleian by Fr. Juniatus at his death in 1677, but "has been missing from the Library for more than 100 years." [F. Madan, Sub-Lib. B. Magd. Lib., Aug. 21, 1884.] It was, however, printed from a copy by Fr. Juniatus by Jacob Grimm, at Gottingen, in 1830, 8vo, Hymnorum veteris ecclesiae xxvi. Interpretatio Theotica [Brit. Mus.].

The text is given by Daniel, i. pp. 26-28; additional notes, ii. p. 381, iv. p. 87; Mone, No. 733; the ancient Breviaries of Harewood; of the Benedictines, of the Hermitage of the Order of St. Augustine, of York, of Milan, the Monarabic, &c.; Trench, 1849 to 1864; Lat. H. of Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1681, from a Durham MS. of the 11th cent.; Snodbeck, 1868; Magoni, 1876 and 1878. In some of these there are slight variations in the text.

It should be added that in some Monastic Breviaries this hymn has been adapted to Festivals of Confessors and Virgins. [W. A. S.]

By J. M. Neale, pub. in the enlarged ed. of the Hymnal N., 1854, No. 80, in 5 st. of 4 l., and from thence into one or two collections, including the Hymner, 1882, No. 114. It is from the York Brev., and consists of st. i., iii., iv., and v. of the original.

2. The eternal gifts of Christ our King. The Martyrs' victories let us sing.
By J. D. Chamber-r, from the York Brev., 1st pub. in his Lauds Spons., P't. ii., 1866, p. 15, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the People's H., 1867, No. 211, it is given unaltered. In the Hymner, 1872, No. 390, a mixed et from Neale, Chambers, and others, is given, and is wrongly ascribed, in the Index, to the Hymnal N.

land, 1846.
2. The eternal gifts of Christ the King. Blew, 1852.
3. Sing to the Lord with joy and praise. Magoni, 1876 and 1878.

ii. Form for Apostles.

Aeterna Christi munera, Apostolorum gloriam. This form of the hymn is an adaptation for "Apostles" as distinct from "Martyrs." It is in numerous Brevia-ries, including the Roman, York, Sarum and others. The same text, however, is not strictly maintained. The lines of the original which are thus variously altered are 1-8 and 21-28, replaced by a doxology not in the original and varying in the respective Brevia ries in which the hymn is given.

The text from the Durham MS. of the 11th cent. is in the Lat. H. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society, 1851; the Rom. Brev., Card. Newman's Hymnale Collectaneum, 1852) and the Sarum Hymnale. (See Tr. Sarum, 1856.) Daniel gives the Rom. Brev. text together with the original i. pp. 27-28; Mone, No. 662, gives the text from MSS. of the 12th cent., &c., with extended notes. The hymn is also found in an 11th cent. MS. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961, f. 247).

Translations in C. U.:—
1. The Lord's eternal gifts. By E. Caswall, 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 204, and in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 108. This is in use in a few Rom. Catholic hymnals for schools and mission services. Altered to "The Eternal Spirit's gifts," it is also No. 296 in Hope's Hymnal, 1864.

2. Eternal gifts of Christ the King. By W. J. Blew, was printed on a broadsheet for use in his church, cir. 1850 [E. MSS.], and pub. in his Ch. H. & Tune Bk., 1852. This is given in Rice's Sel. 1870, from that work as, "Th' eternal gifts of Christ the King," a borrowed line from Dr. Neale.

3. The eternal gifts of Christ the King. By J. M. Neale. It appeared in the Hymnal N., 1852, No. 37, and later editions of the same work. Also unaltered (with the addition of Bp. Ken's doxology), in Skinner's Daily Service H., 1864, and the Hymner, 1882, No. 86. In nearly every other case, however, where it has been adopted, various alterations have been introduced, as in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, H. A. & M., 1861-75 (revised in Kennedy), the Hymnary, 1872, where it reads, "Christ our King," &c. In Church Hys., 1871, No. 193, st. i.-iii., slightly altered (st. i., 1, 3, 4), from the H. A. & M., arrangement of Dr. Neale, and not from J. D. Chambers as stated by Mr. Ellerton in his note thereon (Ch. Hys. folio ed. Notes, 193). The remaining st. iv., v., are from a ms. tr. by Mr. Ellerton.

3. In Mone, 1853, i., it is from an 8th cent. Ms. at Trier; and No. 159 is from a Ms. of the 15th cent. at Stuttgart. He adds a long note on what he regarded as the acrostic character of the hymn.

4. Daniel, ii. p. 381, has a further reference, and in iv. p. 40, cites a Rheims Ms. of the 10th cent. and gives an extended note with special reference to Mone's conclusions respecting the acrostic character of the hymn. Daniel refuses to accept Mone's conclusions. The arrangement, however, is certainly alphabetical, with the exception that two lines begin with c and one (the 9th) with o (ortus) instead of h (hortus). Daniel’s text extends to s, and Mone's to t.

5. The old text is also found in two 11th cent. Ms. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961, f. 224; Jul. A. vi. f. 29); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 27, it is printed from an 11th cent. Ms. at Durham.

6. The text, old or revised, is also in Card. Newman’s Hymnæ Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1865, and others, in addition to those works already noted. The variations in the text are very slight.

AETERNA COELI gloria. [Friday.] This hymn is sometimes ascribed to St. Ambrose. Not being quoted, however, by early writers, it has not been received as certainly genuine by the Benedictine editors (Migne’s Patrol. tom. xvii.). It dates from the 5th century, and if not by St. Ambrose, is purely Ambrosian. The text has often been reprinted, sometimes alone, and again with notes, references, and criticism. Of the latter the best are:

1. Daniel, 1841, i. No. 46, where we have the old text in 5 st. of 4 l., with the revised version from the Rom. Brev. in parallel columns and headed "Hymnus ad Laudes" ("A hymn at Lauds.") It is the Hymn on Fridays in the Ferial Office at Lauds from the Octave of the Epiphany to the first Sunday in Lent, and from the Octave of Corpus Christi to Advent in the Roman and many other old Breviaries. Daniel gives the variations found in Ciclopecus, Belelus, Fabricius, &c.

2. Hymn. Suriab., Lond., 1851, pp. 55, 56, for use at the periods mentioned above. In this work variations are given from the Use of York; from Monastic uses, as Evesham, Worcester, St. Alban’s, Canterbury, &c.

AETERNE REX

2. Eternal Light, Divinity. By R. F. Littledale, made for, and 1st pub. in the People's H., 1867, No. 163, and signed "L." [J. J.]

Aeterne Rector siderum. Card. Bellarmine. [Evening.] This hymn is in the Roman Brev., 1632, as the Hymn at Lauds, on the Feast of the Holy Guardian Angels (Oct. 2nd). It was inserted in the Breviary by Pope Paul V., who when still Cardinal Camillo Borghese, in a conversation with Leonardo Donato, the Venetian ambassador, remarked, that if ever he became Pope he would not assume himself like Clement VIII. in disputing with the Republic of Venice, but would proceed at once to excommunication. Donato, on his side, remarked that if ever he became Pope he would not set much value on the excommunication. One became Pope, the other Doge. The Doge employed the noted Fra Paolo Sarpi to write the history of the Council of Trent against the Interests of the Papacy; the Pope opposed to him Cardinal Bellarmine. Possibly this was proof for, and interest of the Cardinal may have led to the adoption of this hymn by the Pope. Text with note in Daniel, iv. p. 306. [See Custodes hominum.] [W. A. S.]

Translation not in C. U.:

O'er the morning stars Who reignest. Ogolond, 1848, p. 131.

Aeterne rerum conditor. St. Ambrose. [Sunday Morning.] This hymn by St. Ambrose is received as genuine by the Benedictine editors. For this genuineness, the following evidence is complete:

(1) St. Augustine, Retraet. Lib. I. C. 21, writes: "In this book I have spoken in a certain place of the Apostle Peter, that the Church is founded on him as on a rock, which doctrine is sung also by the mouth of multitudes in the verses of the most Blessed Ambrose, when speaking of the rock he says:"

"Io, e'en the very Church's Rock Melts at the crowing of the cock."

("Hoc ipsa petra ecclesiae Canente, culpam diluit.")

(2) The Venerable Bede, De arte metrico, followed by other writers, considers that the substance of this hymn is taken from the Hexameron of St. Ambrose (written about the year 390?), Lib. V. c. 24. Or, as Daniel says, the hymn may have been written first, and then expanded into the prose version.

The use of this hymn has been most extensive. In the Motarabic Brev. (1509, f. 2) it is the hymn at Matins on the 1st S. in Advent, and generally on Sundays in Advent, Lent, Palm Sunday, Whitsun Day, &c.; in the Sarum, York, Evesham, Hereford, and St. Albans, at Lauds on Sundays from the Octave of the Epiphany to Lent, and from the 1st Oct. to Advent; in the Worcester at Matins (so also some old Breviaries of the Benedictine Order (Daniel, i. p. 15); and in the Roman, for Sundays at Lauds, from the Octave of the Epiphany to the 1st S. in Lent, and from the S. nearest to the 1st Oct. to Advent.

The text of this hymn is found in the Januari ms. of the 8th cent., No. xxv., and in two 11th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961, f. 219b; Juturna, A. vi. f. 19). In the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, it is printed from a Durham ms. of the 11th cent., and is one of the most primitive of the following works for the Advent office, in their date: Paris, 1836, p. 200; Daniel, i. 15, iv. 3; Trench, 1864, 243; Card. Newman's H. Eccl., 1838, &c. Daniel and Trench are specially rich in illustrative notes.

The variations in the Rom. Brev. are also found in the Sarum works. [W. A. S.]

2. Framar of the earth and sky. By Card. Newman. The earliest date to which we have traced this tr., is in R. Campbell's St. Andrew's Hymnal, 1850. In 1853 it was repeated in Card. Newman's Verses, and again in his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868. In this latter work this tr., in common with others, is dated 1836-38. The text from Campbell is repeated with slight alterations in the Hymnary, 1872.

Aeterne Rex altissime, Redemptor. [Ascension.] The text of this hymn has been so altered at various times that the true original and the origin of its various forms are most difficult to determine. The researches of the modern hymnologists, when summarized, give the following results:

1. Daniel, vol. i. No. 102, gives the text in 7 st. of 4 l., and a doxology, from a 15th cent. ms. at Wurzburg; interpolating therewith 6 st., which are only found in the Motarabic Brev. He adds in parallel cols. the revised text of the Rom. Brev. 1632.

2. The Rom. Brev. form has continued down to and is in use at the present time, as the hymn at Matins for the Ascension-day, and from thence daily till Whitsuntide, unless the Festival of an Apostle or Evangelist interrupts the usual order. It is composed of st. i., iii., vii., x., xi., xii. and xiii., of the old form, somewhat altered. This text is in all modern eds. of the Rom. Brev. and Card. Newman's Hynm. Eccl., 1838 and 1865.

3. We have next the Hymn, Stariish, Lond., 1851, pp. 101-2, where it is given as the Hymn at Vespera on the Vigil of the Ascension, and daily to Whitsuntide: also at Matins on the Feast of the Ascension itself. Variations are added from the York Brev., which assigns it to the first and second Vespers of the Ascension.

Digitized by Google and throughout the Octave.—St. Alban’s, “to the Ascension of the Lord at Vesper;”—Worcester, “the Ascension of the Lord at Matins,” &c. Different readings are also given from a Canterbury MS. of the Anglo-Saxon times.

4. Mone, No. 171, gives st. i.-iv. of the old text from MSS. of the 14th and 15th cent. at Karlsruhe. This form he holds is by St. Ambrose. In addition he gives at No. 172, st. v.-vii. from MSS. of the 14th and 15th cent. at Karlsruhe, &c., and holds that they are not by St. Ambrose, and yet by a writer of the 6th cent. The Mozarabic Brev., etc., he considers to be the work of a Spanish imitator of Prudentius of the 5th cent.

5. It is also in the Mozarabic Brev. 1502, f. 135; in an 11th cent. MS. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 51); and in another of the same cent. (Vesp. D. xii. f. 759). In the Latin Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 90, it is printed from a Durham MS. of the 11th cent.

In 1855, Daniel, iv. pp. 73-83, gave an extensive note on this hymn, dealing with its complex authorship, &c. He entered fully and with much feeling into the verbal and metrical questions which had tempted him to oppose some of the opinions of Mone on the authorship, &c., of the hymn. The note is too long for quotation, but may be consulted with advantage. The hymn “Tu Christe nostrum gaudium” is a portion of this hymn. It begins with line 37. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:

2. 0 Thou Eternal King most high. By E. Caswall, from the Rom. Brev., given in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 101, and again in his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 57, in 8 st. of 4 l. (see orig. tr.) In 1858, 6 st. were included in the Lyra Catholica, 2d ed. 1884, and others, and in full with alterations in the Hymnary, 1872. Another altered form is, “0 Thou most high! Eternal King,” in the Irvingite Hymns for the use of the Churches, 1864. Some of these alterations are borrowed from Johnston’s tr. of 1852. Caswall’s tr. is extensively used in Roman Catholic hymnals for Schools and Missions.

3. King Eternal, power unbounded. By W. J. Copeland, from the Rom. Brev., in his Hymns for the Week, &c., 1848, in 8 st. of 4 l. This was included in Stretton’s Church Hymns, 1850, unaltered. In an altered form, “King Supreme! of power unbounded,” it appeared in Rorison’s Hymns & Anthems, 1851, and later editions.

4. 0 King eternal, Lord most High. By J. A. Johnston, in his English Hymnal, 1852, No. 118. It is also in later editions.

5. Eternal Monarch. King most High. By J. M. Neale, from the Sarum Brev., pub. in his Hymnal X. 1852, No. 31. It is included in the Hymmer, 1882, No. 67. After undergoing considerable alterations by the compilers of H. A. & M., it came forth in the 1st ed. 1861, as “O Lord most High, eternal King.” This is repeated in the revised edition, 1875, and other collections.

6. Christ above all glory seated. By Bp. J. R. Woodforde, made for and 1st pub. in his Hymns arranged for the Sundays, &c., 1852, in 6 st. of 4 l. (2nd ed. 1855.) In 1857 it was repeated in Chope’s Hymnal; in 1863 and 1875, in the Parish H. Bk., and also in S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys; Sarum; Ch. Hys.; Thring’s Coll. and others. It is somewhat indebted to Copeland’s tr., two or three lines being verbatim therefrom. It is the most popular of all the versions of this hymn.

In Murray’s Hymnal, 1852, an attempt was made to represent all the 8 st. of the Rom. Brev. by compiling a cento thus: st. i., ii., iii., Bp. Woodforde; st. iv., v., vi., Copeland, slightly altered: st. vii., viii., Bp. Woodforde; but it has gone almost, if not altogether, out of C. U.

7. Most High and Everlasting King. By R. F. Littledale, from the Sarum Brev., made for and first pub. in the People’s H., 1867, No. 140, and signed in the Index “P. C. E.”

Trs. not in C. U.:

Aeterni Festi gaudia. Adam of St. Victor. [St. Augustine.] The earliest form of this sequence, which dates from the 12th cent. is in a Rheinnaus. of the 13th cent. cited by Morel, p. 203, where it reads Interni festi gaudia. This reading is followed by Daniel, ii. p. 250; Krechein, No. 502; and others.

L. Gautier, who printed from a 14th cent. ms. at Paris, gives the opening line as above—“Aeterni festi gaudia,” the first word being the only change throughout the sequence.

Dr. Neale says:

“Gautier reads Eterni, but I understand the poet to mean that the external celebration of the Festival is only the unspoken expression of the internal joy of the heart.” Med. Hys. 3rd ed. 1867, p. 133.

Clichoveneus, 1517, remarks that the author gives the “title of internal feast to that interior joy and exultation in the Lord of the pious soul which it perceives to exist within itself when pervaded by the divine sweetness; and, feeling tranquility and peace of conscience with God—separated and fixed, too, from all the cares of the world—it gives itself up to God alone, and is continually intent on His praise and contemplation.”

[W. A. S.]

The trs. of this sequence are, i. those which include the whole text, and ii. those in centos.

1. The full text. “Interni festi gaudia.”

ii. Centos. "Interni, &c.;" and "Harum laudum, &c."

1. Our festal strains to-day reveal. By J. M. Neale. This is a cento composed of st. i-v., viii., ix. of the original. It was given in the enlarged ed. of the Hymnal N., 1854, &c.

2. The praises that the Blessed know. This is a second cento by Dr. Neale. It appeared in the Hymnal N., with the foregoing, and is composed of st. x., xi., vii., vi., and xiii. in the order named; and begins with the Latin stanza "Harum laudum praeciosa." It is repeated with st. xii. for vi. in the People's H., 1867, No. 277.

3. Blessed souls in heaven rejoice. By Henrietta Mary Chester, written for the Hymnary, 1872, No. 380, and given therein under the signature of "H. M. C." This cento begins with "Harum laudum," &c., and consists of st. x., xi., vi., vii., xiii. in the order named, and a duxology. [J. J.]

Aeterni Patris Unice. Anon. [St. Mary Magdalen.] This hymn has been ascribed to St. Odo of Cluny; and is found in a ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii f. 153b) added to the "Ludia Mater ecclesia" (q. v.). Both hymns are apparently in a later handwriting than the first part of the ms. Daniel, i. No. 548, reprinted the text of Card. Newman, changing the opening word from "Eterna," to "Aeterni. Mone." (iii. p. 424), reprinted the text of a ms. of the 14th cent. and added thereto numerous references to ms. and various readings; and Daniel, iv. 244, the revised text of the Roman Brev. Summi parentis Unice. The text of the York Brev. is given in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838, and the Roman. Brev. form in Birge's Annotated H. A. & M. with st. ii. 1. 2. "Reconditum ac erario," for "Reconditum est ac erario," in error. The older text sometimes reads, "Patria Aeterni Unice." [W. A. S.]

Afflicted soul, to Jesus dear. J. Fawcett. [Support in Affliction.] First pub. in his Hymns adapted to the circumstances of Pub. and Priv. Devotion, 1782, No. 13, in 7 st. of 4 l. In its original form it is rarely found in common use. An altered and abbreviated form, beginning "Afflicted Saint, to Christ draw near," was given by Rippon in his Bapt. Sel. 1871, in 6 st., and later eds. This was repeated by Cotterill in his Sel. 1810, No. 50, and again in the 8th ed. 1819, No. 165, in 5 st., representing st. i., iii., v., vi. and vii. of the original. This is the arrangement which has come into C. U. in G. Brit. and America, sometimes as "Afflicted Saint, to God," &c. Orig. text in Lyra Brit. 1807, p. 225.

Affliction is a stormy deep. Nathaniel Cotton. [Affliction.] Part of his rendering of Ps. xlii., which appeared as "With fierce desire the hunted hart," in Dr. Dodd's Christian's Magazine, April, 1761, in 12 st. of 4 l. and signed "N." It was republished in his (posthumous) Various Pieces in Verse and Prose, 1791. In 1812 Collyer divided it into two hymns, Nos. 59-60, in his Coll., the second beginning "Affliction is a stormy deep," in 5 st. These stanzas were transferred, with two slight alterations, to Stowell's Sel. 1831, and, sometimes with numerous alterations, to other hymnals, including Elliott's Ps. & Hym. 1835, and Bickersteth, Christ. Psalmol. 1883. Windle's text, in his Met. Psalter, Ps. 42, is from Stowell's Sel. 1831. Its modern use is not so extensive in G. Brit. as in America.

Again from calm and sweet repose. Charles Philip. [Morning.] Pub. in Mary Anne Jeffery's Sacred Offering, 1835, p. 141, in 5 st. of 4 l. and entitled "Morning Hymn." It is found in several American hymnals, including Hatfield's Oh. H. Bk. 1872, No. 15, but is unknown to the English collections. We have no date of 1822 for this hymn, but no direct evidence. [W. T. B.]

Again our ears have heard the voice. J. Montgomery. [Close of Service.] This hymn of 2 st., for the close of Divine Service, was given in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, p. 472, and again in the S. W. Hymns, 1853, No. 354. It was included in Bickersteth's Christ. Psalmol. 1883, but its use is very limited.

Again our earthly cares we leave. [Divine Worship.] Appeared in Cotterill's Sel. 1810, No. 98, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "For our whole hearts we offer up of God our W. It is based on J. Newton's "O Lord, our languid souls inspire," st. ii. being spe-orically from Newton. The cento was most probably arranged and rewritten by Cotterill. Its use in G. Brit. is somewhat limited, but in America it is extensive, and is given in the collections of various denominations.

Again the Church's year hath run its round. Godfrey Thring. [Advent.] Written in 1865, and pub. in his Hymns Congregational, and Others, 1866, in 6 st. of 4 l. pp. 5 & 6 as an Advent Hymn; and again in his Hymns and Sacred Lyrics, 1874, pp. 26-7, and in various hymnals. Authorized text in Thring's Coll. No. 102. It has been specially set to music by Henry Hugo Pierson, Hymn Tunes, 2nd Series, Simpkin & Marshall, 1872.

Again the day returns of holy rest. W. Mason. [Sunday.] 1st pub. in the Protestant Magazine, May 1796, as one of two hymns, this being for use "Before Morning Service," and the second: "Soon will [shall] the evening star with silent ray" as "Before Evening Service." The first hymn is in 5 st. of 4 l. and the second in 4 st. of 4 l., both being in the same measure, and each having the same chorus. Shortly after 1801 they were included in the former of a leaflet in the Foundling Hospital Coll., and subsequently included in the enlarged edition of the same, in 1809. In 1811 both hymns were pub. in the author's Works, 4 vols., with the note appended to the second hymn, "This and the foregoing hymn are adapted to an elegant movement of Plyel, in his Opera 23rd. They have also been set to music by Dr. Burney and Mr. M. Cambridge."

Both hymns have come into modern use through J. Kemphorne's Ps. & Hys. 1810, Cotterill's Sel., 8th ed. 1819, and later collections. The morning hymn is the more popular of the two, and is in somewhat extensive use, but often as, "Again returns the day of holy rest"—as in Hall's Mitre, 1836, the Leeds H. Bk., 1833, the New Cong., and others. The American use of this hymn is very extensive.

[W. T. B.]

Again the Lord of life and light. Anna L. Barbauld, we Atkin. [Easter.] Contributed to Dr. W. Enfield's Hymns for Public Worship, &c., Warrington, 1772, No. IX., in 11 st. of 4 l. and appointed "For Easter Sunday." In the following year it was re-pub. lished in Mrs. Barbauld's (then Miss Atkin) Poems, Lond., J. Johnson, 1773, pp. 118-120, with alterations, and with the same title as in Dr. Enfield's Hymns, &c. In his Coll. of 1812 Dr. Colyer divided the hymn into two parts, Pt. i. being st. i.-iv., and Pt. ii. st. v.-ix., and st. x. being omitted. This second part, as hymn 688, opened with: "—Jesus, the Friend of human kind." It has, however, fallen out of use. Of the centos which have been compiled from the original, there are in C. U.:—

3. In S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., 1852 and 1869, the same as No. 2, with the addition of a doxology.
4. In the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858 and 1880, st. i.-iv., Pt. i. from Dr. Collyer's Coll. as above.
5. In the Islington Ps. & Hys. 1830-62, Kennedy, 1863, as:—"This day be grateful homage paid," being st. iii., iv., vi., vii., ix. The hymn in various forms is also in considerable use in America.

These facts will indicate the extent to which the original has been used, specially when it is remembered that these centos are repeated in many collections not indicated above. The full original text is given in Lyra Brit., 1867, pp. 33-36, and Ld. Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1869, pp. 61-62. The second cento has been rendered into Latin as:—Eccle! iterum Dominus vite lucisque revealat, by the Rev. R. Bingham, and included in his Hymn. Christ. Lat., 1871, pp. 85-87. [J. J.]

Again the morn of gladness. J. Ellerton. [Children's Hymn of Praise.] Written at the request of the Vicar of Teddington, as a processional for Sunday School children on their way to church, 1874, and first pub. in Children's Hys., S. P. C. K., No. 16; and in J. Curwen's New Child's O. H. Bk., No. 6.

Again we lift our voice. C. Wesley. [Burial.] Written on the death of one Samuel Hutchins, and included in Hymns and Sacred Poems, in 1749 (vol. ii.), "Samuel Hutchins was a Cornish smith, one of the first race of Methodist preachers, who died at an early age. An account of his life, written by his father, was published by J. Wesley in 1746." The hymn was embodied in the 1780 ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., No. 51, and from thence it has passed into other hymnals. Orig. text, Poems of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-72, vol. p. 214.

"Αγε μου, λήγει λύρα, Συναίσι, Bp. of Potelemmais. Ode i. of the ten Odes which he composed at various periods of his life (375-430). The full Greek text is given in the Anth. Grac. Carm. Christ. 1871. No tr. is in C. U. Those which we have are:—

1. Come, sweet harp, resounding. By I. Williams in his Thoughts in Past Years, 1858.
2. Come, sweet-voiced lyre, to the soft Telian measure. By A. Stevenson, in his Ten Hymns of Synais, ed., 1883:—

Of these trs. the only one from which a cento could be taken for C. U. is that of I. Williams. [J. J.]

"Αγε μου Ψυχα, Συναίσ, Bp. of Potelemmais. This is Ode iii. of the ten Odes, of which the above is the first. It was written to his "own beloved Libya," during a time of peace, and on his return from the court of Arcadius. It is the longest of the Odes, and is impassioned and patriotic. The full Greek text is given in the Anth. Grac. Carm. Christ., 1871.

The trs. into English are:—(1) "Lift up thyself, my soul," by Mr. Chatfield, and pub. in his Songs and AGNUS DEI

Translators in C. U.:—
Dr. Neale, following the York Brev. arrangement, gave, in the enlarged ed. of the Hymnal N., 1854, a tr. of each:—
Prime. "Let every age and nation own."
Terc. "The Virgin Mary hath conceived."
Sext. "He, by Whose hand the light was made."
None. "Now the old Adam's sinful stain."
The same translations were repeated in all subsequent editions of the H. N. From these translations the editors of the Hymnary, 1872, compiled No. 144, "Come, ye nations, thankful own," the metre being changed from the L.M. of the H. N. to 7's.

Translations not in C. U.:—
1. Let all the world confess from heaven. ("Agnoscat omne saeculum.")
2. What the old Adam stained and soiled. ("Adam vetus.") Blew, 1852.
3. Let thankful worlds confess from heaven. Chambers, i. 77, embracing the whole hymn. [J. J.]

Agnus Dei Quotidie peccata mundi.
The use of this modified form of part of the Gloria in Excelsis (q. v.), founded on John, i. 29, seems to be referred to in the rubric for Easter Eve in the Sacramentary of St. Galenius, a. d. 492. In the time of Pope Sergius I. (687—701), he is said to have been sung at the Communion of priest and people ("Statuit ut tempore confessantium Dominici Corporis Agnus Dei, &c., a cleru et populo decantaretur.") Anamnesis Bibliothecarius records this in Historia de Vitis Romanorum Pontificum. It is the opinion of Bona that Pope Sergius ordered it to be sung thrice; Le Brun, on the contrary, thinks it was only sung once. In the 11th century the last three verses of its third repetition, "misericordia, nobis," began to appear as "dona nobis pacem," and a little later in Masses for the dead, the last clause, instead of "dona nobis pacem," runs as a special prayer for the departed, "dona eis requiem sempiternam." This occurs also in the English Missales of Sarum, York and Hereford, and is the universal custom of the Roman Church at the present day, which also repeats the words, "Ecce Agnus Dei, ecce Quis tollis peccata mundi," as the priest turns to deliver the sacramental wafer to the people.

According to the Sarum Use the Agnus Dei was incorporated in the Litany, but only to be sung twice, and the third clause is placed first. This was followed in the English Litany of 1544 (as now in our own Litany), and in the First Prayer Book of Edward VI., 1549, was repeated in the Communion Office with the following rubric:

"In the communion tune the clerks shall sing:
   "i. O Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the whole world, have mercy upon us.
   "O Lamb of God . . . grant us Thy peace.

This was omitted in 1552, and all subsequent revisions, though Bp. Cosin suggested its restoration in 1662: but just as the Adoro Te was used frequently as a private devotion, so this translation of the Agnus Dei has continued in almost unbroken use in various Eucharistic manuals of English divines; e.g. in Bp. Cosin's Coll. of Private Devotions, 1627, and the revised ed., 1664; Dean Lancelot Addison, 1689; Rev. Jas. King, 1726; and the very popular New Weeeks' Preparation, 1739.
Translations in C. U.:——

O Lamb of God, that takest away, &c. —By G. Moultrie. This metrical arrangement of the Augeus Dei was first pub. in the Church Times, July 23, 1864, and his Hymns and Lyrics, 1867, p. 118, in 3 st. of 5 l., and in 1872 was transferred to the Hymnary, with slight alterations in the last stanza. [V.]

The Augeus Dei has also come into English use through the German, in the following manner:—

(1) O Lamm Gottes unschuldig. By Nicolaus Dev- literally, or Hovesch, first pub. in Low German in the Geystlyke leder, Rostock, 1531, and in High German in V. Schumann's G. B., Leipzig, 1539. Both forms are included in Wackernagel, iii. p. 568, in 3 st. of 7 l., as in the case of the Latin, st. i. only being printed in full. Included in almost all subsequent hymn-books as recently as the __L.__, 1851, No. 110. It has been much used in Germany at Holy Communion during the distribution of the elements; on Good Friday, at the close of sermon; and on other occasions. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. O Lamb of God most holy. By A. T. Russell as No. 26 in the Dalston German Hospital Coll., 1848, in 2 st. of 7 l., repeated in his Ps. and Hys., 1851, No. 156, in 3 st. In both cases the stas. are identical, save in l. 7.

2. O Lamb of God, most stainless. By Miss Winkworth, as No. 48 in her C. B. for England, 1853, in 3 st., identical, save in l. 7.

3. O Lamb of God, most Holy. Once for us sinners dying. By Miss Borthwick, in full from Knapp, contributed as No. 66 to Dr. Pagenstecker's Coll., 1854.

Other trs. are:——

(1) "O Lamb of God, our Saviour," by J. C. Jacobii, 1722, p. 16 (1732, p. 31), and thence as No. 217 in pt. 1 of the German Prophecies and Psalms, 1754, and known as the "O Lamb of God, Unspotted," as part of the Litanies at Baptism, p. xxiv. of the Moravian B. B., 1801, and continued as a hymn in later eds. (2) "O Lamb of God, Who, bleeding," contributed by Prof. T. C. Porter to Schaff's Christ in Song, ed. 1879, p. 465. (4) "O Lamb of God, most holy. Upon the cross," from the version in Knapp's Ps. & Hys., 1857, No. 538 (ed. 1865, No. 568), st. ii. iii. being from the Dresden G. B., 1736 (Fischer, ii. 189), in the British Herald, Oct. 1846, p. 344, and repeated as No. 415 in Heid's Praise Bk., 1872.

(ii.) Christe du Lammet Gottes. In the Reforma- time period, this tr. of the Augeus Dei, in 3 st. of 3 l., was regarded as a prose antiphon rather to be included in the Liturgy than in the Hymn-book. Thus Erk, (Choral Bucb, 1863, note to No. 38, p. 245,) quotes it as in Low German in the Brunswick Kirchenordnung, 1528, and in High German in that for Saxony, 1540. It is given as a hymn in the __L.__, 1851, No. 88. The trs. in C. U. are, (1) "Lamb of God, our Saviour," in full, by A. T. Russell as No. 20 in the Dalston German Hospital Coll., 1848. (2) "Lamb of God, O Jesus! Thou who," Sc., in full, as No. 68 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

(J. M.)

Agricola, Johannes [Sneeder], b. April 20, 1492, at Eisleben, where his father was a tailor. During his University course at Wittenberg, Luther took a great interest in him, entertained him at his own table, took him with him to Leipzig for the dispute, in 1519, with Dr. Eck, and in 1525 procured for him the position of Rector of St. Andrew's School at Eisleben, and preacher at St. Nicholas's Church there. He remained in Eisleben till 1536, working hand in hand with Luther; but after the latter's removal to Wittenberg, in 1536, as one of the lecturers in the University, he developed Antinomian views, and, in 1547, pub. a series of tracts which Luther answered in six disputations, 1588-40. On his appointment as Court Preacher at Berlin, in 1540, he formally renounced these opinions, and professed adherence to Wittenberg orthodoxy. But after his subsequent appointment as General Superintendent of the Mark, he gradually not only sought the esteem of the great, but, in order to gain the favour of the Emperor, joined with two representatives of the Roman Church in drawing up a Formula of Union (The Interim) which was presented to the Imperial Diet, held at Augsburg, and adopted by the Diet on May 16, 1548. By this action he disgusted the Lutherans and procured for himself only discredit. He d. at Berlin, Sept. 22, 1566. He was one of the best preachers of his time, and compiled the earlier collections of German Proverbs, first pub. at Zwickau, 1529 [the Brit. Mus. copy was printed at Hagenau, 1529] (Koch, i. 278-281. Allg. Deutsche Biogr., i. 146-48.

Four hymns by him appeared in the early Lutheran hymn-books, two of which were retained by Luther in Bala's Gesangbuch, Leipzig, 1545.

1. Ich ruf zu dir, Herr Jesu Christ. [Supplication.] Wackernagel, iii. pp. 54-55, gives two forms of this, in 5 st. of 9 lines, the first from Geistliche Lieder, Erfurt, 1531, the second from an undated broadsheet before 1530, entitled, "A new hymn of supplication for Faith, Love, and Hope, and for a Holy Life; composed by John of Eisleben, preacher to John Duke of Saxony." Fischer, i. 345, refers to the Nürnberg broadsheet, c. 1526, quoted in Wackernagel's Bibliographie, 1855, p. 89, and adds that in his opinion the distasteful into which Agricola fell after the outbreak of the Antinomian controversy caused the suppression of his name in the hymn-books. After appearing in Klug's Geistliche Lieder, 1529, the hymn was included in almost all subsequent hymn-books, and so recently as No. 379 in the __L.__, 1851.

It is sometimes erroneously ascribed to Paulus Sporerus, an assumption originating with the Rege G. B. of 1664. It was a favourite hymn of Valerius Herberger, of P. J. Spener (who requested it to be sung at his deathbed), and of many others.

Translations in C. U.:——

1. Lord Jesu Christ, I cry to Thee. A good tr., omitting st. iv., by A. T. Russell, as No. 200 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. Lord, hear the voice of my complaint. A full and very good tr. as No. 116 by Miss Winkworth in her C. B. for England, 1853.

Other trs. are:——

(1) "I call on the, Lord Jesu Christ," by Rp. Over- date, 1539 (Remyarts, 1846, p. 560), repeated, slightly
Ah, I shall soon be dying. J. Ryland. [Death anticipated.] Dr. Ryland's son says that this hymn was written by his father while walking through the streets of London, and dates it 1800, (s.mss.). This date is an error, as the hymn appeared in the Evangelical Magazine, Oct. 1798, in 8 st. of 4.1, as "Reflections," and with the note:

"The following lines passed through the mind of a country minister as he was walking the streets of London, and considering how far several persons appeared now to be advanced in life whom he had known in their youth a very few years back, and how many others of his acquaintance had been already removed."

The hymn was repeated in the Baptist Register, 1800, p. 312, and in the 27th ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1827-8, No. 550, pt. iii. From thence it has passed into collections both in G. Brit. and America. It is also included in Sedgwick's reprint of Dr. Ryland's Hymns, 1860.

Ah, Jesus, let me hear Thy voice. A. Reed. [Desiring Christ.] Contributed to his Supplement to Dr. Watts, 1817, No. 108, and also included in his Hymn Book, 1842, No. 355 in 5 st. of 4.1, under the title, "Thou wilt hear me." It was first pub. in the Wesley Church Ser., 1872, No. 14. Its use in G. Brit. is very limited, but in America it is regarded with great favour. In his Ch. H. Bk. Dr. Hattfield omits st. 4. Orig. text in Lyra Brit. p. 476, and Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

Ah, Lord, with trembling I confess. C. Wesley. [Backalighting.] From his Short Hymns, &c., 1762, vol. ii., No. 30. It appeared in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780; and is retained in the new ed., 1875, No. 317. It has also passed into various collections in G. Brit. and America, and is included in the P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-72, vol. x. p. 165.

Ah, lovely appearance of death. C. Wesley. [Burial.] 1st pub. in his Funeral Hymns (1st Ser.), 1746, No. v., and entitled "On the sight of a Corpse." The body is supposed to have been that of a young man who died at Cardiff, Aug. 1744; as, concerning him, C. Wesley wrote in his Journal of that date, "The Spirit, at its departure, had left marks of its happiness on the clay. No sight upon earth, in my eyes, is half so lovely." In 1780 it was included in the Wes. H. Bk., but omitted in the revised ed. of 1875. Orig. text, P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-72, vol. vi. p. 193. The text of this hymn was revised by the author about 1782, and reduced to 5 st. Details of the ms. alterations are given in the P. Works, vol. vi. p. 212. Although omitted from the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, it is still retained in many collections in G. Brit. and America.

Ah, mournful case, what can afford. Ralph Erskine. [Longing for Heaven.] 1st pub. in his Gospel Sonnets (2nd ed., Edin., 1720) as section i. of pt. v., entitled "The deserted Believer longing for perfect Freedom from Sin," in 20 st. of 4 lines. St. xiv.—xx. beginning—"O send me down a draught of love"—were included in the Sacred Songs of Scotland, 1860 (Edin., A. Elliott), p. 41, as No. 376 in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, and adopted, as No. 230, in the Scottish Pres. Hymn., 1876.

Ah, my dear Lord, Whose changeless love. C. Wesley. [In Temptation.] 1st pub. in Hymns and Sacred Poems by J. & C. Wesley, 1739, in 14 st. of 4.1. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1266, is composed of st. i., ii., iii., vii., x. and xii. In its original form it is unknown to modern hymnals, and the use of this cento is very limited. Stanzas xi.—xiv. as "Fondly my foolish heart essays"—were given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as No. 282. The same stanzas are No. 291 of the revised ed. 1875. Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 131.

Ah, my dear loving Lord. C. Wesley. [Spiritual life within.] This poem, of 15 double stanzas, in two parts, is the last of three entitled, "The Backslider," which appeared in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1742. In 1780 the hymn "My gracious, loving Lord," was compiled therefrom, and included with alterations, in the Wes. H. Bk. from whence it has passed into many collections of the Methodist bodies. Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 114.

Ah, what a wretch am I. C. Wesley. [Watch-night.] 1st pub. in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, being No. 2 of "Hymns for the Watch-night," in 10 st. of 8.1. Of these, st. ix., x., beginning, "Thou seest my feebleness," are found in some collections, including the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, Bap. Ps. and Hys., 1858, and others. The cento "Gracious Redeemer, shade," in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 and 1875, and several collections, is also included in this hymn. It begins with st. v. (Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 261). In the American Bk. of Hys., 1848, and the Hys. of the Spirit, 1861, it reads, "Father, this slumber shake."

Ah, when shall I awake. C. Wesley. [Prayer.] From his Hymns on God's Everlasting Love, first pub. in 1741, in 11 st. of 8.1. (second series), No. vii. Of the original, 6 st. were included in the 1780 ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., No. 294. Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 61.

Ah, whither flee, or where abide. [Retirement.] Contributed by Miss Winkworth to Lyra Mystica, 1865, p. 263, in 7 st. of 8.1, as from the German. The original has not been traced.

Ah, whither should I go. C. Wesley. [Lent.] 1st pub. in his Hymns on God's Everlasting Love, 1741, No. 14, in 16 st. of 8.1. In 1780 st. i.—iv. were given in the Wes. H. Bk. as one hymn, and st. xiv.—xvi., "Lo! in Thy hand," as a second, under the division "For mourners convicted of Sin." Although the latter was omitted from the revised ed. 1875, yet both hymns are found in a considerable number of collections, both in G. Brit. and America. Orig. text in _P. Works_, 1868–72, vol. iii. p. 89.

Ah, why am I left to complain. C. Wesley. [Lent.] From his Short Hymns, 1762; again 1794; and in _P. Works_, 1868–72, vol. x. p. 26. It was included in the _West. H. Bk._, new ed., 1875, No. 777.

Ah, wretched souls who strive in vain. Anne Steele. [Lent.] A hymn on "The Christian's Noblest Resolution," which appeared in her _Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional_, 1790, vol. i. p. 161, in 5 st. of 4 l., from whence it passed into the _Bapt. Coll. of Hymn. of Ash and Evans_, 1769, No. 286, and signed "T."; into Rippon's _Bapt. Sel._, 1787, No. 334, and others. It is also found in Sedgwick's reprint of Miss Steele's Hymns, 1863.

Ah, wretched, vile, ungrateful heart. Anne Steele. [Lent.] Under the title of "The Inconstant Heart," this hymn was pub. in her _Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional_, 1760, vol. i. p. 119, in 5 st. of 4 l.; again in the next ed., 1780; and again in Sedgwick's reprint of her _Hymns_, 1863. Its use is unknown, or nearly so, in G. Brit., but in America it is given in several of the most important modern collections, including Hatfield's _Ch. H. Bk._, 1872, No. 970, and others.

Διούτους φωτιά. [St. Mark.] Three homoea (hymns of the same structure) from the office for St. Mark (Ap. 25) in the _Menae_. The only fr. is that by Dr. Littledale—"Mark, shining light of Egypt"—which was made for and published in the _People's H_. of 1867, No. 247, and signed "F. R." The doxology is not in the original.

Ainger, Alfred, M.A., graduated Trin. Coll. Cambridge, b. 1860, m. 1864. In 1860 he became curate of Alrewas, Staffordshire; in 1864 Assistant Master of Sheffield Collegiate School, and in 1866 Reader at the Temple Church, London. Mr. Ainger's _Harvest hymn_ "Another year is ended," was written for the _Harvest Festival at Alrewas_, 1862, in 5 st. of 8 l. On appearing in _Harland_, ed. 1864, No. 216, two stanzas were reduced to one, thus forming a hymn of 4 st. Its use is not extensive.

Ainsworth, Henry, was a leader of the Brownist party in England, and one of those nonconforming clergy who, in 1604, left this country for Amsterdam. He was a learned man and skilled in Hebrew. He became very poor in exile, living on the meanest fare, and acting as porter to a bookseller. He was of a warm temperament and apt to be quarrelsome; d. 1622 or 1623, suddenly, which gave rise to a suspicion of unfair play on the part of the Jewish community. His translations from the Hebrew Psalms were printed at Amsterdam and entitled _The Books of Psalms: Englished both in Prose and Metre_, 1612. It contained a preface and had musical notes. There is a copy in the Bodleian Library.

_J. T. B._

Aird, Marion Paul, b. at Glasgow, 1815, where she resided for some time, and then proceeded to Kilmanock, where her _Home of the Heart_ and other _Poems Moral and Religious_ were pub. 1846–1863, her _Heart Histories. Violets from Greenwood, &c., in prose and verse_, 1853, and _Sun and Shade_, 1860. Miss Aird is included in J. G. Wilson's _Poets and Poetry of Scotland_, 1876, vol. ii. p. 389. Very few of her hymns are in C. U., amongst those is "Had I the wings of a dove, I would fly."

Akerman, Lucy Evelina, née Metcalf. An American Unitarian writer, dau. of Thomas Metcalf, b. at Wrentham, Mass., Feb. 21, 1816, m. to Charles Akerman, of Portsmouth, N. H., resided at Providence, R. I., and d. there Feb. 21, 1874. Mrs. Akerman is known as a hymn writer through her:—

Nothing but leaves, the Spirit grieves, which was suggested by a sermon by M. D. Conway, and 1st pub. in the _N. Y. Christian Observer_, cir. 1858. In the _Scottish Family Treasury_, 1859, p. 136, it is given without name or signature, and was thus introduced into G. Brit. In America it is chiefly in use amongst the Baptists. Its popularity in Great Britain arose out of its incorporation by Mr. Sankey, in his _Sac. S. & Solos_, No. 34, and his rendering of it in the evangelistic services of Mr. Moody. The air to which it is sung is by an American composer, S. J. Vail.

Alanus de Insulis, or of Lille in Flanders, called also Alanus Anglica, lived in the last half of the 12th and part of the 13th cent. There appears to be much doubt, which has resulted in much controversy, as to whether or not there were two individuals bearing the name of Alanus de Insulis, or whether Alanus the poet, known as "Doctor Universalis," was identical with Alanus the Bishop of Auterre, the friend of St. Bernard. It is unnecessary to discuss the question here. There is no doubt that the poet is identical with the "Doctor Universalis." The principal works of this author were:—

1. _Parables_, a work described by Archbishop Trench in his _Sac. Lat. Poetry_, 3rd ed., 1874, as having been in high favour before the revival of learning.

2. _Anti-Claudianus_, a moral poem of considerable length, divided into nine books, called "Distinctiones." It is upon this work that his fame chiefly rests.

3. _Liber de Planctu Naturae_, written partly in verse, and partly in prose.

Legnerr (p. 1020) says of this author "Inter sevi sui poetar faecil familia duxit," Ouldin (_De Script. Eccles._, ii. p. 1405) that the _Anti-Claudianus_ is a singularly festive, lepore, et elegantia conscriptum." Reimarus (Anthology, i. p. 329) speaks highly of his merits; while Archbishop Trench, though denouncing somewhat to the full praises of the others, allows that in such passages as the one commencing, "Est locus ex nostro secretus cli- mate" (which is the description of a natural paradise), "Ovidian both in their merits and defects, we must recognise the poet's hand," _Sac. Lat. Poetry_, 1849 and 1874.

Only one complete ed. of this poet's works is known, viz., _Alani Opera_, ed. C. de Foc, 1801; but his _Anti-Claudianus_ and _Liber de Planctu Naturae_ are given at length in T. Wright's _Anglo-Latin Satirical Poets, &c._, of the 12th cent., 1872, Alard, Wilhelm, s. of Frans Alard, who was confessor of the Reformed Faith during the persecutions of the Duke of Alva, was b. at Wilster, Nov. 22, 1572. He was not only by birth a mestet of a noble Burgundian family, but of one distinguished for three or four generations in classical and theological literature. Indeed, in 1721, a volume was published at Hamburg by one of the family entitled Decus Alardorum scriptis Chlarorum. Wilhelm Alard, amongst other compositions, published three small volumes of Latin hymns:—

1. Exequirum Psarum Centuria, Lipsiae, 1623.
2. Exequirum Psarum Centuria Secunda, 1628.
3. Exequirum Psarum Centuria Tertia, 1630.

These hymns were held in high esteem when they first appeared, the first volume passing through four editions during the author's lifetime. They are now almost forgotten. Archbishop Trench has given one short specimen from each of the first two centuries in his Sac. Lat. Poetry, 1849 and 1874, from the first, a hymn "Accessuri ad aeternam Communiosem Oratio ad Jesum Svetatorem," p. 216; and from the second, "De angelo custode," p. 240. The latter very graceful composition, commencing, "Cum me tenent fallaciam," is also in Loftie's Latin Year, and, tr. into English, in D. T. Morgan's Hym., &c., of the Lat. Church, 1880.

The poet during his latter years was pastor and superintendent at Krempe, in Holstein, where he d. May 9, 1645. [D. S. W.]

Alas! and did my Saviour bleed? I. Watts. [Passional.] 1st pub. in the 1st ed. of his Hymns and Spiritual Songs, 1707, and again in the enlarged ed. of the same 1709, Bk. ii., No. 9, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Godly sorrow arising from the Sufferings of Christ." At a very early date it passed into common use outside of the religious body with which Watts was associated. It is found in many modern hymn collections in G. & C., but in G. & C. its most extensive use is in America. Usually the second stanza, marked in the original to be left out in singing if desired, is omitted, both in the early and modern collections.

A slightly altered version of this hymn, with the omission of st. ii., was rendered into Latin by the Rev. R. Bingham, as "Anne funebria sugetum," was included in his Hymnol. Christ. Lat., 1871, pp. 245-247.

Alas! by nature how depraved. J. Newton. [Lent.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 29, in 7 st. of 4 l., and based on the words, "How shall I put thee among the children?" Jer. iii. 19. As given in Snype's S. of G. & G., 1872, No. 450, and elsewhere, it is composed of st. 1-iv. of the original.

Alas! what hourly dangers rise. Anne Steele. [Watchfulness.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1769, vol. i. pp. 79-86, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Watchfulness and Prayer," Matt. xxvi. 7 It was also reprinted in subsequent eds. of the Poems, and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. In Williams & Boden's Coll., 1801, No. 362, it was abridged, but this example has been mostly followed to the present day. Its use in G. Brit. is very limited; but in America it is somewhat extensive, and varies in length from 3 to 5 st., the Sobb. H. Bk., 1858, No. 637, being an exception in favour of the complete text, with the single alteration of "my" to "mine eyes" in st. 1.

Alber, Erasmus, son of Tileman Alber, afterwards pastor at Engelroth, was b. at Sprellingen c. 1500. After studying at Wittenberg under Luther and Melancthon, he became, in 1525, schoolmaster at St. Ursel, near Frankfurt-am-Main, and in 1527 at Heldenberger, in Hesse-Darmstadt. In 1548 he was appointed by the Landgrave Philip of Hesse pastor at Sprellingen and Göthenhain, where he devoted himself specially to the children of his charge. After 11 years' service he was appointed by the Elector Joachim of Brandenburg court preacher at Berlin, but proving too faithful for the court, was, in 1541, removed as chief pastor to Neu Brandenburg. In 1542 he became pastor at Stade, in Wetteravia, and while there received, in 1543, the degree of Doctor of Theology from the University of Wittenberg. He was then invited, in the beginning of 1545, by the Landgrave Philip IV. of Hanau Lichtenberg, to perfect the work of the Reformation in Babenhausen, but no sooner had he fairly entered upon it than, in the end of October, he received his dismissal. After a short stay at Sprellingen and at Wittenberg, he became preacher at Magdeburg, where he strongly denounced the Internation Agricola. On the capitulation of Magdeburg, in 1551, after a 14 months' siege, he fled to Hamburgh, and then went to Liibek. Finally, in 1552, he was appointed by Duke Albrecht I. of Mecklenburg, General Superintendent of Mecklenburg, and preacher at St. Mary's Church in Neu Brandenburg. In addition to losing all his own and his wife's property by confiscation and necessary expenditure, he was there unable to obtain from the Town Council the payment of his stipend. On May 4, 1553, he applied for the payment of 60 florins to relieve his urgent necessities. The refusal broke his heart. He returned home to die, and fell asleep at 9 A.M. on May 5, 1553.

One of the best writers for children in his day, and an ardent controversialist and martyr of freedom of speech, he has been compared, as a hymn-writer, to the Reformers Luther, in the Reformation period. His hymns, 26 in all, were first collected by Dr. Stromberger, and pub. at Halle, 1587. Being mostly long, and unadaptable in style, not many of them have kept a place in the hymn-books, though they have been justly styled "powerful and living witnesses of a steadfast faith and a manly trust in God only." (Kock, i. 301-306; As. Dr. Biog. Bisch. 1. 219-230; Dr. Stromberger's Preface: Bode, pp. 35-36: the last stating that his father was a schoolmaster in Mecklenburg.) Two have been put into English. One of these, beginning "Christe, du bist der helfe Tag," is a tr., and is noted under, "Christe quix lxi es et dies!"

The only original hymn by Alber tr. into English is—
1. Nun freut euch Gottes Kinder all. [Ascension.]

Translators: Albertini, Johann Baptist, s. of Jakob Ulrich v. Albertini, a native of the Grisons, Switzerland, who had joined the Moravians, and settled among them at Neuwied, near Coblenz, b. at Neuwied Feb. 17, 1769. After passing through the Moravian schools at Neuwied and their Theological Seminary at Barby, in both of which he had Friedrich Schleiermacher as a fellow-student, he was, in 1788, appointed one of the masters in the Moravian school at Niesky, and in 1789 at Barby. In 1796, he was appointed tutor at the Theological Seminary at Niesky, and ordained as

The fine melody (in the Irish Ch. Hymnal called "Godsberg") is also by Albertini.

Translations in C. U. —

1. God, the Lord of what's created, in full in J. C. Jacobii's Die. Hgs. 1720, p. 35. In his 2nd ed. 1732, p. 169, altered to—"God, the Lord of the Creation"; and thence slightly altered as No. 41 through the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, with a dox, as in the Magdeburg 4th ed. 1696. In 1789, No. 743, altered to—"God omnipotent Creator"; with st. ii., iv., vii., omitted; st. iii., viii. being also omitted in the 1801 and later ed. In 1808, st. iii.—v. were included as No. 511 in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., with st. ii., vii. from A. T. Russell.

2. God, Thou Lord of Earth and Heaven, in full, by H. J. Buckoll in his II. from the German, 1842, p. 22. His trs. of st. iv.—vi. beginning—"Now the morn new light is pouring," were included as No. 3 in the Rugby School H. Bk., 1850 (ed. 1876, No. 4), and of st. v., vi. altered to "Jesus! Lord! our steps be guiding," as No. 130 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

3. God, who heaven and earth upholdest. A good tr. omitting st. iv. and based on Jacobii, by A. T. Russell, as No. 64 in the Dalston Hospital Coll., 1848. In his own Ps. & Hgs., 1851, No. 3, the trs. of st. vi., vii. were omitted, and this was repeated as No. 218, in the New Zealand Hymnal, 1872. The Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk. takes st. i. partly from Miss Winkworth.

4. God who madest earth and heaven. Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth in her English Ch. Hymns, 1st ser. 1856, p. 213 (later ed., p. 215, slightly altered). In full in R. M. Taylor's Par. Ch. Hymn., 1872, No. 27. A cento from st. i., II. 1—4; vi., II. 1—4; vii., II. 4—1; with vi., II. 5, 6; and vii., III. 5, 6, was included as No. 23 in the Irish Ch. Hymn. 1873. In 1868, included in L. Reihen's Church at Sea, p. 79, altered to—"Creator of earth and heaven." In 1863 it was altered in metre and given as No. 90 in the C. B. for England. From this Porter's Church Hymn., 1876, No. 54, omitted st. iii. Also in the Ohio Lutheran Hymnal, 1880, No. 293.

5. God, who madest earth and heaven. A good tr. omitting st. vii., and with st. i., II. 1—4, from Miss Winkworth, contributed by R. Massie, as No. 501, to the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Ox. ed. 1804, No. 7, omitting st. v.).

6. God of mercy and of might. A good tr. (omitting st. v., vi.) by Dr. Kennedy, as No. 811, in his Hymnal, Christ., 1863, repeated in Dr. Thomas's Aug. H. Bk. 1866, No. 510; and, omitting the tr. of st. vii., as No. 31, in Holy Song, 1899.

Albinus, Erasmus

Albinus, Johann Georg, eldest s. of Zacharias Albinus, pastor at Untermessa, near Weisenfels, Saxony, 1621-1633, and at Stuhlbargwerben, 1633-1635, was b. at Unter- Nessa, March 6, 1624. After his father's death, in 1635, he was, in 1638, adopted by his cousin, Lucas Politius, a tutor at St. Nicholas's Church in Leipzig. After his cousin's death, in 1643, the Court preacher, Sebastian Mitternacht, of Naumburg, took an interest in him, and he remained at Naumburg till he entered the University of Leipzig, in 1645.

He studied for eight years at Leipzig, during which time he acted as house tutor to the Burgomaster, Dr. Friedrich Kühlewein, and was then, in 1653, appointed Rector of the Cathedral School at Naumburg. This post he resigned when, in 1657, he became pastor of St. Peter's at Naumburg. There he proved himself a zealous pastor, working ever "the glory of God, the edification of the Church, and the everlasting salvation, wellbeing, and happiness of his hearers." During his ministry he suffered greatly, not only from bodily infirmities, but from ecclesiastical encroachments and bickerings. The end came when, on Rogation Sunday, May 25, 1679, he quietly fell asleep in Jesus, at 2:30 p.m. On his tombstone his eldest son placed the inscription, "Cum vivere, moriisque, et nunce cum mortuis vivit, quia seiebat, quod vita via sit mortis et mortis vita introitus."" During his student days he was known as a poet, became, in 1654, a member of the Fruitbearing Society, and was also a member of Philipp v. Zesen's Patriotic Union. As a poet he was, says Koch, "distinguished by ease of style, force of expression, and liveliness of fancy, and his love of music was so strong that it was pervaded by a deep religious spirit" (Koch, ii. 392-98; All. Deutsche. Biog., 222-223). Of the many hymns he composed, and pub. in his various poetical works, only three have been tr. into English, viz.:

1. Alle Menschen müssen sterben. [For the Dyng.] This hymn, which Koch, iii. 397, calls "his best known hymn, and a pearl in the Evangelical Treasury of Song," was written for the funeral of Paul von Hessenberg, a Leipzig merchant, and was thus sung, from broadsheets, June 1, 1652. It was given in Niedling's Wasserwelle, Altenburg, 1663, and gradually came into universal use, passing through Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, into most subsequent collections, as in the U. L. S., 1851, No. 804, in 8 st. of 8 t. It was a great favourite of P. J. Spener, who sang it regularly on Sunday afternoons, of J. F. Hochstetter, Prelate of Murrhardt, and many others (Koch, viii. 628-631).

2. Holt! der Himmel in der Welt. [Morning.] The text is quoted in full from the original broadsheet (Ducal Library, Gotha), the title of which ends "Mit seiner Poesie und Musik erweckt wollen Johannes Rosenmüller." Rosenmüller is not, however, known as a hymn-writer, and this statement is hardly sufficient to overthrow the traditional ascription to Albinus. The trs. in C. U. are:

3. Death o'er all his sway maintains. A good tr. of st. i., iii., -v., by A. T. Russell, as No. 260 in his Ps. & Hym., 1851. Included, considerably altered and beginning, "Death in all this world prevails," as No. 745 in Kennedy, 1863.

4. All that's human still must perish. "All must die! there's no redemption," by Dr. R. Kiihl, in the C. P. J. 1844, p. 96. Other trs. are:

(2) "All that's human still must perish," by Dr. John Ker, in the C. P. J. 1844, p. 96. Other trs. are:

(3) "All must die! there's no redemption," by Dr. G. Walker, 1844, p. 107.
ii. Straf mich nicht in deinem Zorn. [Ps. vi.] Of the origin of this hymn, J. C. Wetzel, i. 46, and ii. 404, relates what seems rather an apocryphal story to this effect:—

Johann Rosenmüller, while music director at Leipzig, had been guilty of improper practices with some of his scholars. He was thrown into prison, but having made his escape, went to Hamburg. Thence he sent a petition for restoration to the Elector Johann Georg at Dresden, and to support his petition enclosed this hymn, which Albinus had written for him, along with the beautiful melody by himself (in the Irish Cl. Hymn., 1766; called Nasaaz, in the Darmst. G. B. 1689, p. 49).

This, if correct, would date it about 1655, and Koch, iii. 398, says it was printed separately in that year. The earliest hymn-book in which it is found is Luppius's Andächtig Singender Christen Mund, Wesel, 1692, p. 20. It is a beautiful hymn of Penitence (by Miss Winkworth assigned to Ash-Wednesday). Included as No. 273 in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and recently as No. 535 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, in 7 st. of 8 l. The tr. in C. U. are:

1. O do not against me, Lord. A good tr. of st. i., iii., vii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 79 in his Ps. & Hymns. 1851.

3. Not in anger, Lord, Thou wilt. A tr. of st. i., iii., vii., signed "X. X." as No. 59 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll. 1864.

4. Cast me not in wrath away. A tr. of st. i., iii., vii., by E. Cronenwett, as No. 235 in the Ohio Lutheran Hymnal. 1880.

Other trs. are:

iii. Welt, Aile! ich bin dein müde. [For the Flying.] 1st printed on a broadsheet for the funeral of Johann Magdalene, daughter of the Archidiaconus Abraham Teller, of St. Nicholas's Church, Leipzig, who died Feb. 27, 1649, and included in Albinus's Geistlicher geharnischter Kriegesheld, Leipzig, 1675. Also given in the Raytrew G. B. of 1690, p. 542, and recently as No. 842 in the Unc. L. S. 1851, in 9 st. of 8 l. The tr. in C. U. is:

World, farewell! Of thee I'm tired. A full and good tr. in the 2nd Ser. 1858, of Miss Winkworth's Lyra Ger., p. 207. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 198. st. iii., iv., vi. were omitted. Her trs. of ll. 1–4, of st. viii., vi., iv., beginning, "Time, thou speedest on but slowly," were included as No. 1305 in Robinson's Songs for the Sanctity, 1865, as No. 1392, in the H. & Songs of Praise, New York, 1874, and Ct. Praise Bk., 1882, No. 652. Another tr. is:

"World, farewell, my soul is weary," by Miss Dinan, 1857, p. 113. [J. M.]

Albrecht, s. of Casimir, Margrave of Brandenburg-Culmbach in Lower Franconia, b. at Ansbach, Mar. 28, 1522. After his father's death he was well and piously educated by his uncle and guardian, Georg of Brandenburg. Distinguishing as a boy for daring, on attaining his majority he adopted the profession of arms, gaining for himself the title of the "German Alcibiades." He accompanied the Emperor Charles V. to his French war in 1544, and again, against the Schmalkald Evangelical Union, in 1546. But in 1552 he took his proper stand as an Evangelical prince against the Emperor, and set earnestly to work to break down the Imperial power. While ravaging Lüneburg he was met in battle, July 9, 1553, at Sievershausen, by his old friend Moritz, Elector of Saxony, and in the bloody conflict his forces were shattered, and Moritz mortally wounded. On Sept. 12 he was again defeated at Brunswick, and after being besieged at Schneinfurt, received his final overthrow at Eutinburg, June 13, 1554, escaping to France with only sixteen followers. In his troubles he acknowledged the hand of God on him, and repented of his former errors. By the intercession of his uncle he was permitted to appear at Regensburg to plead for the restoration of his lands. On his return he was seized with a fatal illness while visiting his brother-in-law, the Margrave Charles II. of Baden, at Pforzheim, and died there, repentant and firm in the faith, Jan. 8, 1557 (Koch, i. 339–343: Allg. Deutsche Biog., i. 252–257, &c.). The only hymn ascribed to him is—

Was mein Gott will, das g'scheh allezeit. [Trust in God.] Wackernagel, iii. p. 1070–71, gives two forms of this hymn, the first from Fünff Schöne Geistliche Lieder, Dresden, 1556, the second from a broadsheet at Nürnberg, c. 1554. Both contain 4 st. of 10 l., but as st. iv., in 1556 is a doxology, the hymn may originally have had five st. or only three. Bode, pp. 324–5, quotes a broadsheet, Nürnberg, N.D., probably earlier than the above, where it has only 3 st. In the Copenhagien G. B., 1571, it is entitled, "Da altern Churfürsten Markgraf Albrecht's Lied," which leads Wackernagel to remark, "Who wrote it for him, or who could have dedicated it to him, there is no proof." On the other hand, Koch, i. 341–343, Louxmann in Koch, viin. 361–364, and Fischer, ii. 335–336, are inclined to ascribe it to him as author. Whoever was the author, the hymn is a very good one, and has always been a favourite hymn of consolation in sorrow, and at the hour of death, among the pious in Germany. The second form, which is that tr. into English, is included, as No. 641, in the Unc. L. S., 1851.

The trs. are:

(1) "God is my comfort and my tower;" a tr. of st. ii. "Gott ist mein Trust, mein Zuversicht," as No. 329 in L. of the L. H. 1719. "God is always best," by B. Latrobe, as No. 467 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1749, and repeated in later eds. (2) "God works His will, and best it is," by Dr. Walker, 1860, p. 45. (4) "What'er God will, let that be done," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 141, included in the Schiff-Gilman Library of Rel. Poetry, ed. 1883, p. 523. (6) "What my God wills, be done alway," in the Family Treasury, 1877, p. 111, without name of translator. [J. M.]
Alderson, Eliza Sibbald, née Dykes, granddaughter of the Rev. Thomas Dykes, of Hull, and sister of the Rev. Dr. Dykes, b. in 1818, and married, in 1850, to the Rev. W. T. Alderson, some time chaplain to the West Riding Ho. of Correction, Wakefield. Mrs. Alderson is the author of the following hymns, the first of which is likely to attain a commanding position:

1. And now, beloved Lord, Thy soul resigning.

[Passionate.] A hymn of more than usual merit, in 6 st. of 4 l., written in 1868 at the request of Dr. Dykes. In 1875, st. ii., iv., v. and vi., were given in the revised ed. of H. A. & M., No. 121, with a special tune Commendatio by Dr. Dykes. The full original text is restored in Thring’s Coll., 1882, No. 170.

2. Lord of glory, Who hast bought us. [Alms-giving.] Written in 1864, in 5 st. of 8 l., and pub. in the App. to H. A. & M., 1868, No. 372, and repeated in the revised ed. 1875, No. 367. Mrs. Alderson says, “It was the very strong feeling that a tithe of our income was a solemn debt to God and His poor, which inspired it.” Dr. Dykes’s tune “Charitas” was composed for this hymn.

Aldridge, William, b. at Warminster, Wilts, 1737, for some years a minister in Lady Huntingdon’s Connexion, and then of Jewry St. Chapel, London, d. Feb. 28th, 1797. A copy of his Hymns, 1776, is in the Cheshunt Coll. Library, and a second in the Brit. Mus. These Hymns reached the 5th ed. in 1789.

Alexander, Cecil Frances, née Humphreys, second daughter of the late Major John Humphreys, Milltown House, co. Tyrone, Ireland, b. 1823, and m. in 1850 to the Rt. Rev. W. Alexander, D.D., Bishop of Derry and Raphoe. Mrs. Alexander’s hymns and poems number nearly 400. They were mostly for children, and were published in her Verses for Holy Seasons, with Preface by Dr. Hook, 1846; Poems on Subjects in the Old Testament, pt. ii. 1854, pt. ii. 1857; Narrative Hymns for Village Schools, 1853; Hymns for Little Children, 1848; Hymns Descriptive and Devotional, 1858; The Legend of the Golden Prayers, 1859; Moral Songs, N.D.; The Lord of the Forest and his Vassals, an Allelujah, at Dr. Hook’s request, contributed to the Lyra Anglicana, the S.P.C.K. Ps. and Hymns, Hymns A. & M., and other collections. Some of the narrative hymns are rather heavy, and not a few of the descriptive are dull, but a large number remain which have won their way to the hearts of the young, and found a home there. Such hymns as “In Nazareth in olden time,” “All things bright and beautiful,” “Once in Royal David’s city,” “There is a green hill far away,” “Jesus calls us o’er the tumult,” “The roseate hues of early dawn,” and others that might be named, are deservedly popular and are in most extensive use. Mrs. Alexander has also written hymns of a more elaborate character; but it is as a writer for children that she has excelled.

[J. D.]
translations were collected and published in New York in 1861, under the title, The Breaking Crucible and other Translations. Of these translations the following are in use:—"O Sacred Head, now wounded," a tr. of "Salve Caput," through the German; "Near the cross was Mary weeping," a tr. of "Statut Mater"; and "Jesus, how sweet Thy memory is," a tr. of "Iesu dulcis memoria." The annotations of these trs. are given under their respective Latin first lines. [F. M. B.]

Alexander, Joseph Addison, b. 1869, brother of Dr. J. W. Alexander, and a minister of the Presbyterian Church, b. in Philadelphia, April 24, 1869, graduated at Princeton, 1826, became Adjunct Professor of Latin, 1833, and Associate Professor of Biblical Literature, 1838, d. at Princeton, Jan. 28, 1869. Dr. Alexander was a great Hebraist, and published Commentaries on Isaiah, the Psalms, etc. His poem, The Doomed Man, was written for, and first published in, the Sunday School Journal, Philadelphia, April 5, 1837. It has striking merit, but moves in one of those doctrinal circles which hymns generally avoid. Parts of it are found as hymns in a few Calvinistic collections, as, "There is a time, we know not when," in the New York Ch. Praise Book, 1851, No. 288. This is sometimes given with the second stanza, "There is a line, by us unseen," as in Nason's Col., and Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865. Unknown to English collections. [F. M. B.]

Alexander, Sir William, b. at Menstrie, the family estate, near Stirling, in 1580. In 1614 he was knighted by James I., and in 1633, created Earl of Stirling by Charles I., d. in London, Feb. 12, 1640, and was buried in the East Church, Stirling, April 12, 1640. He had the principal share in that version of the Psalms which, published as the work of King James, was sought to be forced upon the Scottish Church, 1633—37 [Scottish Hymnody, sect. ii. 3]. Bishop William of Lincoln, in his funeral sermon for King James, says that James's "work was stained in the one and thirty Psalms." A complete edition of Alexander's works, other than the Psalms, was published in 4 vols., 1870—72, as the Poetical Works of Sir William Alexander, Earl of Stirling (Glasgow, M. Ogle & Co.).

This is the usual account. Dr. Charles Rogers, however, in his Memorials of the Earls of Stirling and the House of Alexander (Edin., W. Paterson, 2 vols., 1871), conjecturally dates his birth 1567, says he was the only son of Alexander, describes him as Knight in 1600, and says his licence was for 21 (not 31) years. [J. M.]

Alexander, William, D.D., Bishop of Derry, son of the Rev. Robert Alexander, Preb. of Aghaladway, Ireland, b. in Londonderry, April, 1824, and educated at Trumbridge School, and Exeter and Brasenose Colleges, Oxford, Entering holy orders, Bishop Alexander has held successively the Rectories of Camusjuxta-Morne, co. Tyrone, and the Deanery of Emily, 1864, and since 1867 has held the united Bishops of Derry and Raphoe. Bishop Alexander's sacred poetry is found in the Dublin University Magazine, The Spectator, Good Words, Lyra Brit., and Lyra Anglicana, together with his Oxford prize poems, The Death of Jacob, and The Waters of Babylon, and in his Specimen Poetical and Critical, privately printed, 1867. Little use, however, can be made of these compositions for hymnological purposes.

Alexander, William Lindsay, D.D., LL.D., of Pinkieburn, Musselburgh, s. of William Alexander, Esq., Leith, b. in the vicinity of Leith, August 24, 1808. After studying at the Universities of Edinburgh and St. Andrew's, he became, in 1828, Classical Tutor in what is now The Lancashire College. After studying for some time Hulsean, he, in 1833, became minister of North College, 3rd Congregational Church, Edinburgh, removing with his congregation in 1861 to a new church in George IV. Bridge, called the Augustinian Church, and retired from the pastoral charge of the same in 1877. He d. at Pinkieburn, Dec. 20, 1884. He was, from 1854 to 1881, Professor in the Scottish Congregational Hall. In 1846 he received the degree of D.D. from the University of St. Andrew's, and in 1884 that of LL.D. at Leith. He became a member of the O. T. Revision Company in 1870. He wrote and edited many valuable theological works. His Sel. of Hym. known as the Augustine H. Bk., in which his original hymns and translations appeared, was first pub. in 1849. [Scottish Hymnody, § vi.] [J. M.]

Alford, Henry, D.D., son of the Rev. Henry Alford, Rector of Aston Sandford, b. at 25 Alfred Place, Bedford Row, London, Oct. 7, 1810, and educated at Trin. Coll., Cambridge, graduating in honours, in 1832. In 1833 he was ordained to the Curacy of Ampton. Subsequently he held the Vicarage of Wymeswold, 1835—1835; the incumbency of Quebec Chapel, London, 1835—1857; and the Deanery of Canterbury, 1857 to his death, which took place at Canterbury, Jan. 12, 1871. In addition to his held several important appointments, including that of a Fellow of Trinity, and the Hulsean Lectureship, 1841—2. His literary labours extended to every department of literature, but his noblest undertaking was his ed. of the Greek Testament, the result of 20 years' labour. His hymnological and poetical works, given below, were numerous, and included the compiling of collections, the composition of original hymns, and translations from other languages. As a hymn-writer he added little to his literary reputation. The rhythm of his hymns is musical, but the poetry is neither striking, nor the thought original. They are evangelical in their teaching, but somewhat cold and conventional. They vary greatly in merit, the most popular being "Come, ye thankful people, come," "In token that thou shalt not fear," and "Forward be our watchword." His collections, the Psalms and Hymns of 1814, and the Year of Praise, 1877, have not achieved a marked success. His poetical and hymnological works include—

Aliqua. The nom de plume of Mrs. Eliza O. Peirson, an American writer.

Aliquis. A volume of Hys. for Villagers, was pub. in 1821, under this nom de plume.

Alix. The nom de plume of J. H. Evans (q.v.) in the Family Visitor, 1827, &c.

All around us, fair with flowers. [Life's Work.] Given as an app. in Longfellow and Johnson's Bk. of Hymns, 1846, No. 306, and their Hymns of the Spirit, Boston, U.S.A., 1864, No. 575, in 5 st. of 4 l.

All creation groans and travails. J. M. Neale. [Cattle Plague.] Written for the Fast Day for the Great Cattle Plague, 1866, and first published in the Guardian. Shortly afterwards it was issued by Novello, with suitable music. During the latter part of the same year it was included in Neale's original Selects, Hys., &c., pub. under the supervision of Dr. Liddell and Dr. Neale having died a few months before. It is entitled "Cattle Plague Hymn," and consists of 10 st. of 4 l. In 1872 it was reprinted in the Hymnary.

All from the sun's uprise. G. Sandys. [Ps. c.] This spirited and somewhat quaint rendering of Ps. c. appeared in his Paraphrase upon the Psalms of David, 1836, and 1840, pp. 120-21; and again, as a part of his Paraphrase upon the Divine Poems, 1638 and 1640, in 3 st. of 8 l. It was also repeated in a beautiful edition of the Paraphrase of the Psalms, 1648 [Brit. Mus.], and again in an edition by the Rev. Richard Hooper. As given in Martineau's earlier Hymns, &c., 1840, and in his later Hys. of Praise and Prayer, 1873, it is unaltered.

All glorious God, what hymns of praise. P. Doddridge. [Praise.] In the "P. mss." this hymn is headed, "Of being prepared for the inheritance of the Saints in light. A song of praise for Col. i. 12," and is dated "Dec. 13, 1736," No. xxxix. The same text was given in J. Oton's ed. of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 208, in 3 st. of 4 l. and, with slight changes, in J. D. Humphrey's ed. of the same, 1830, No. 324. Although a hymn of praise of more than usual merit in many ways, it is rarely given in the English collections, and found in but a few of the American hymnals.

All glory to God in the sky. C. Wesley. [Christmas.] This is No. xviii. of his Hymns for the Nativity of our Lord, 1741, in 5 st. of 8 l. In 1750 it was given in full in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 211, and has been repeated in all later editions. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 125.) Its use amongst the Methodist bodies in all English-speaking countries is considerable; but outside of Methodism it is but little known.

All glory to our gracious Lord. C. Wesley. [Ps. cxviii.] This paraphrase of Ps. cxviii. in 22 st. of 6 l., although pub. in the Psalms and Hymns of J. & C. Wesley, 1743, did not appear, in any form, in the Wes. H. Bk. until the revised ed. of 1875, when two centos were given as one hymn (No. 616), in two parts, the first b. s. 1, 3, 10, 11, 12 and 15; and the second, "Jesus is lifted up on high," st. 17-22. Full original text in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. viii. pp. 204-205.

All hail, dear Conqueror, all hail. F. W. Faber. [Easter.] Appeared in his Jesus and Mary, or Catholic Hymns, &c., 1849, No. xii. in 10 st. of 4 l. and entitled "Jesus Risen." It was repeated in later editions of the same work, and in his Hymns, 1862. It is usually given in modern collections in an abbreviated and sometimes altered form. Amongst the hymnals in which it is thus found are the Appx. to Hymnal N., No. 155; Hys. and Carols (Ch. Sisters' Home), No. 40; and the Scottish Presb. Tborz Hymn., No. 3; whilst the Holy Family Hys. retain the full text.

All hail, Incarnate God. Elizabeth Scott. [Glory of Christ's Kingdom.] Contributed, under the signature of "S.," to Ash and Evans's Baptist Coll. of Hys., 1769, No. 358, in 4 st. of 6 l., and headed "The increasing Glory and Perpetuity of the Messiah's Kingdom." In 1787, on its republication in Rippon's Baptist Sel., No. 430, to the st. ii. which reads:—

To Thee the hoary head
Its silver honors pays;
To Thee the blooming youth
Devotes his brightest days;
And every age their tribute bring
And bow to Thee, all-conquering King"

this note was added:—

"Composed on seeing an aged saint and a youth taken into church communion together."

In modern collections it is almost entirely confined to those of the Baptists and Congregationalists. It was introduced into the American hymnals through Stoughton's ed. of Rippon, 1813. Orig. text in Baptist Ps. and Hys., 1838, No. 193. [W. T. B.]

All hail, mysterious King. P. Doddridge. [Christ the King.] This hymn on Rev. xxii. 16 is not in the "P. mss." This is its 1st pub. (posthumously) in his Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 359, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Christ the Root and Offspring of David, and the Morning Star." It is also repeated in later eds. of the same work, and in the corrected and enlarged ed. by J. D. Humphreys, 1839. Its use in Great Britain is limited, and confined almost exclusively to the older collections; but in America it is given in several hymnals.

All hail, Redeemer of mankind. C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] One of the most pronounced and efficient of C. Wesley's Sacramental Hymns. It appeared in the Hymns on the Lord's Supper by J. & C. Wesley, 1745, No. cxxiv., in 4 st. of 6 l., and was re-published in the P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1888-72, vol. iii. pp. 308-9. Its use as a congregational hymn is of recent date. In Pott's Hye, fitted to the Order of Com. Pr. 1861, and Thring's Coll., 1882, st. ii. is omitted. This is also done in the Hymnary, 1872; but in this last, verbal alterations are introduced into the text of the hymn, and an additional stanza, "accepted in His Holy Name," has been appended thereto. The most striking stanza in the original hymn is the third, in which the daily celebration of the Holy Communion is set forth:

"Yet may we celebrate below,
And daily thus Thine offering show
Exposed before Thy Father's eyes;
In this tremendous mystery
Present Thee bleeding on a tree,
Our everlasting Sacrifice."

As a congregational hymn it is unknown outside the collections of the Cn. of England.

All hail the glorious morn. John Peacock. [Res. and As. of Christ.] 1st printed in his Songs of Praise composed from the Holy Scriptures, in Two Parts, Lond., Pasham, 1776. It is in 6 st. of 8 l., is No. 37, and is headed, "The Resurrection and Ascension of Christ." In 1806, it was included in Dobell's Coll. with slight alterations, and thence passed into a few American hymnals.

[W. T. B.]

All hail! the power of Jesus' Name. E. Perronet. [On the Resurrection.] In the Nov. number of the Gospel Magazine, 1779, the tune by Shrubsole, afterwards known as "Miles Lane," appeared with the following words:

"All hail! the pow'r of Jesus' Name;
Let angels prostrate fall,
Bring forth the royal diadem,
To crown Him Lord of all."

In the following April, 1780, the complete hymn, with the title, "On the Resurrection, the Lord is King," was given in the same magazine, the additional verses being:

"Let highborn seraphs tune the lyre,
And as they tune it, fall
Before His face who tunes their choir,
And crown Him Lord of all.

Crown Him ye morning stars of light,
Who fixed this floating ball;
Now hail the strength of Israel's might,
And crown Him Lord of all.

Crown Him, ye martyrs of your God,
Who from His altar call;
Exalt the stem of Jesus' rod,
And crown Him Lord of all."

In 1785 it was included by the author in his Occasional Verses, Moral and Sacred, p. 22, and entitled, "On the Resurrection." One of the earliest compilers to adapt the hymn was G. Burler, in the 2nd ed. of his Coll., 1787, No. 190. It is headed "The Coronation Hymn," and consists of 4 stanzas, being st. i., vii., v., and viii. of the original, with the following alterations:

St. i. 1. 4. "And crown," St. lii. 1. 1. "Ye world, redeem'd of Adam's race,
Ye ransom'd from sin's base race.
Ye world, redeem'd of Adam's race,
Ye ransom'd from sin's base race."

St. iv. "Let every tribe, and every tongue,
Throughout this earthy ball,
Celebrate, one harmonious song,
And crown him Lord of all."

It may be worth notice that this hymn is immediately followed by another written in imitation of it, and headed "The Prince of Peace" (adapted to the same tune). The 1st stanza is:

"Let saints on earth their anthems raise,
Who taste the Saviour's grace;
Let saints in heaven proclaim his praise,
And crown him "Prince of Peace."

This hymn is in 4 stanzas, and is signed "E." (i.e. Jonathan Evans). In the same year another and much altered form appeared in Dr. Rippon's Sl. of Hye., 1787, No. 177. As this adaptation is the received text in G. Brit. and America, we give it (with the alterations and additions made by Dr. Rippon, in italics), together with the curious titles which were added to the stanzas:

The Spiritual Coronation, Cant. iii. 11.

All-hail, the power of Jesus' name!
Let angels prostrate fall,
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown Him Lord of all.

2. Martyrs.

[Crown Him, ye martyrs of our God,
Who from His altar call,
Exalt the stem of Jesus' rod,
And crown Him Lord of all.]

[Ye chosen seed of Israel's race,
A remnant weak and small;
Hail Him, who saves you by His grace,
And crown Him Lord of all.]

[Ye Gentile sinners, never forget
The wormwood and the gall;
Go spread your trophies at His feet,
And crown Him Lord of all.]

5. Sinners of every age.

[Abides, men, and sires, who know His love
Who feel your sin and thrill,
Now joy with all the hosts above,
And crown Him Lord of all.]
ALL HAIL! THE POWER

6. WINDERS OF EVERY NATION.
Let every creature,
On this terrestrial ball,
To Him all majesty ascribe,
And crown Him Lord of all.

Oh that, with yonder sacred throng,
We at His feet may fall;
We'll join the everlasting song.

By comparing this text with that of modern hymns, it will be at once seen that this revised and rewritten form of the text is that upon which all modern forms of the hymn are based, and that the correct designation is "E. Perronet, 1779-80: J. Rippon, 1787." The first line has also been altered in some collections to (1) "All hail! the great Emmanuel's name" (sometimes "Emmanuel"). This was given in Wilks's "History of Whitefield's Coll.", 1798, and has been continued to modern hymns. We have also: (2) "All hail! the great Redeemer's name," in a very limited number of hymn-books.

A claim to the authorship of this hymn has been made for the Rev. John Duncan, D.D., who became in 1800 minister of the Scots church, Peter Street, Golden Square, London. The sole foundation, however, for this claim is the following accidental mention of the hymn to Duncan in J. Dobell's "Sel., 1806. As Dobell's error took the form in later years of a persistent family tradition among Dr. Duncan's descendants, and as their claim on his behalf has received great attention, and is widely known, the following résumé of the facts is called for:

Edward Perronet, after the rupture with Lady Hunsdon, continued to preach to a small congregation of dissenters at Canterbury, where he d. in 1792. He wrote many small poetical pieces of which a few were printed, but always anonymously. In 1792, Shrubsole, who had been a chorister in Canterbury Cathedral, and was then about 20 years of age, wrote for Perronet's hymn, then still in use, the tune afterwards known as "Miles Lane." This tune, with the words of the first verse of the hymn annexed, was sent, doubtless by Shrubsole, to the "Gospel Mag.," where it was published in Nov. 1792. The inquiry would then be naturally made for the remainder of the hymn, which accordingly was given complete in the magazine in April following. In 1795, Dr. Dobell, in "The Class-Verses," published a collection of Perronet's miscellaneous pieces, edited by one of his friends. His name is, as usual, not given, but that the volume of his works is unrememberable. One of the pieces is addressed to the memory of his father, the Rev. Vincent Perronet, and others, apparently, to various members of his family who are indicated by their initials only. In the "Address to the Reader" from "the Author," Perronet himself says—"The following miscellaneous productions were not originally intended for public view, as they are but the unpremeditated effusions of mere private amusement, and only occasionally shown by way of personal respect to a handmaid of the friends of the Author; who having enticed a copy of these, and many others, to a particular acquaintance, has been at length persuaded to admit of their being made public.

Now, as the hymn "All hail the power" in "Occasional Verses," but it is immediately followed by another hymn, beginning "Hail, holy, holy, holy Lord!" which was suggested in manner, and clearly by the same hand. It may be added that the copy of "Occasional Verses" in the library of the Brit. Mus. has a list of the pieces bound up with it. One of these, "Select Passages of the Old & New Testament versified, 1756," is known to be by Perronet, and the Brit. Mus. copy contains his name in autograph characters on many corrections of the text. The other tract, entitled A Small Collection of Hymns, &c., Canterbury, 1792, may also be ascribed to him with certainty. Ten years previously he had another tract with a somewhat similar title:—A Small Collection in Verse, Containing, &c., 1782.

In 1787, Rippon published a reprint of the hymn as above. In 1796, William and John Bedon reprinted Rippon's text (omitting one stanza), and gave the names of Perronet, as author of the hymn, and of Shrubsole, as composer of the tune.

Dr. Duncan settled in London about 1790, previous to which time he had preached in Hampshire and Dorsetshire, lastly at Fordington, where he probably had the acquaintance of Dobell, who lived close by at Poole.

When, many years afterwards, Dobell was compiling his Selection, Duncan appears to have been among those from whose writings, advice or hints, Dobell took the text. Duncan's name is appended to one of the four "Recommendations" prefixed to the 1st ed. It is more than probable therefore that Dobell, when selecting the hymn, had obtained a copy of "All hail the power." The form in which the hymn is given by Dobell is neither Perronet's nor Rippon's, but a mixture of both, with two or three slight verbal alterations; and if, as is highly probable, Dobell obtained the hymn from Duncan, and still more, if, as is possible, the arrangement sent to Dobell was really made by Duncan for the "Lyric Repository," the ascription of the hymn to the latter is readily accounted for.

The error is repeated in the 3rd ed. of Dobell's "Lyrics," showing either that the opposite notice to notice it, or, as often happens, the correction was not attended to. Dobell also ascribes to Duncan another hymn, "Exalted high at God's right hand," from the first edition in Rowland Skinner's "Prison Psalter of Ps. & Hymns, 1783, and is always ascribed to him.

Dobell's error in both cases probably arose from the name copy.

The mixed version of the hymn as given by Dobell is in 9 stanzas as follows:—Heading, Ovationation, Cant. vii. 1, 11, No. as Perronet, st. 11 as Perronet, st. ii. as Perronet, st. iii. as Perronet, v. iv. as Perronet; st. v. v. as Rippon; st. vi. as Rippon; st. vii. as Rippon; st. viii. as Rippon; st. ix. as Rippon; st. x. as Rippon.

In Isaac Nicholson's "Col.," 1807, the hymn is given with Rippon's text, omitting Rippon's st. v., but the editor, copying Dobell, has ascribed the authorship to Duncan.

In 1819, when Thomas Young, Perronet's successor at Canterbury, compiled his " Beauties of Dr. Watts, &c.," he used Dobell's Sel., and, not knowing the author, repeated the ascription of "Exalted high" to Duncan, but correctly gives "All hail" to Perronet, from whose tract of 1756, and his occasional Verses, he quotes some other pieces. In the 3rd ed. of the "Beauties of Dr. Watts, &c.," 1817, and London, 1826, giving the latter verse, retaining the Perronet ascription to "All hail," omitted that of Duncan to "Exalted high," whereby implying that he had discovered his error with regard to Duncan.

Shrubsole's tune appears to have become popular, especially among the dissenters, soon after its publication, and the name "Miles Lane" was in all probability given it in use by a considerable number of Independents who met at a chapel in Miles Lane, London, 1765, where they were succeeded by a body of Scotch dissenters. This name, "Miles Lane," is found in Isaac Smith's "Collection of Psalm Tunes," 4th ed. [G. A. C.]

The use of this hymn in various forms and many languages is very extensive. In the number of hymn-books in which it is found in one form or another, it ranks with the first ten in the English language. A rendering in Latin, "Salve, nomen potestatis," is given in Bingham's "Hymnal. Christ. Lutin. 1871." [J. J.]

All hall, Thou great Redeemer, hail.

All hall, Thou Resurrection. W. H. Havergal. "Easter." Written in 1867, and first pub. in Spicke's "S. of G. & C.," 1872, No. 253, 3 at. of 8. 1. It was also included in "Life Echoes, 1883." (HAY, Mss.)

All hail, victorious Lord. B. Woolf. [Ps. cx.] This version of Ps. cx. in 4 st. of 6 l. appeared in the author's Psalms of David and other Portions of the Sacred Scriptures &c., undated, but pub. about 1810. This work was revised and republished as "A New Metrical Version of the Psalms," c. in 1821. This paraphrase, as found in the Islington Ps. & Hymns, and the New Conv. 1850, is composed of st. i. and iii. of the original. The full text is not found in any modern collection, and for collation must be consulted as above.

All hail ye blessed band. [Holy Baptism.] This cento appears in The Service of Song for Baptist Churches, Boston, U.S.A., 1871, No. 815. Its construction is peculiar, as the following directions for its use at the public administration of Holy Baptism to adults will indicate:

"Stanzas 3 to 8 inclusive of this hymn are designed to be sung during the intervals of a baptism; one verse as each candidate goes down into the water, or comes forth from it, according to choice. As it is generally found difficult for a congregation to sing unitedly and at the right time in the administration, it has been suggested that a choir sing these stanzas, the congregation unison in the first two and the last two, as indicated."

To meet these requirements the cento has been thus composed:

St. i. ii., "All hail ye blessed band," to be sung by the congregation, are from Mrs. Lydia Sigmoury's hymn, No. 515, in Winchell's Additional Hymns, U.S.A., 1832; st. iii. iv., "Saviour, thy law we love," to be sung by the choir, are also by Mrs. Sigmoury, and from the same source as st. i. ii. st. v. vi., "Here we behold the grave," to be sung by the choir, are by the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, from his Hymns, 1846, No. 834. st. vii., "Oh! what if we are Christ," is by Sir H. W. Baker, from Murray's Hymnal, 1852, and, in common with st. vi., "Ashamed who now can be," (Anon.), has to be sung by the choir. The concluding stanzas, ix., x., "Come, sinners, wash away," are (Anon.) They are to be sung by the congregation. Taken together, it is the most dramatic hymn for Divine worship with which we are acquainted.

All hearts to Thee are open here. J. Montgomery. [Divine Worship.] Written for the special annual service of the Rev. Hill Sunday School, Sheffield, held May 12, 1837, and printed on a fly-leaf for the occasion. [M. mss.] It was included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 116, in 6 st. of 4 l. In J. H. Thom's Hymns, 1858, st. v. is omitted.

All heaven was hush'd, Our risen Lord. G. Raveson. [Ps. cx.] Contributed to the Leeds H. Bk. 1853 No. 149, in 8 st. of 4 l., from thence it has passed into a few collections, but its use is not extensive. In the author's Hymns, Verses, & Chants, 1876, pp. 23-24, it is given with slight variations. This is the authorized text of the hymn.

All is bright and gay around us. J. M. Neale. [SS. Philip & James.] This Saints' day hymn is in the 3rd series of the author's Hymns for Children, 1846, No. xviii.

All is o'er; the pain, the sorrow. J. Moultrie. [Easter Eve.] The original, entitled "Hymn for Easter Eve," is dated "April 2nd, 1836." It is in 20 st. of 4 l., and was pub. in his work, My Brother's Grave and other Poems, 1837 (3rd ed. 1852, p. 262). In the Ps. & Hys. adapted to Pub. Worship, Rugby, 1839, commonly known as Buckell's Coll., a cento, composed of st. i., ii., iii. and xx., unaltered, was given as No. 2. This was repeated in later editions of the same work, and has passed from thence into many collections, both in G. Brit. and in America. In the American hymnals it is usually altered, as in the Hymnal of the Prot. Episcop. Ch. 1872, No. 92; Hys. & S. of Praise, 1874; Hys. of the Ch. 1869, and others. In the last-named collection it is attributed to "J. E. L." (i.e. Jane E. Leeson) in error. The closing lines of st. r. read in the original:

"Yet once more to seal His doom, Christ must sleep within the tomb."

These lines have been omitted from Thring's Coll. 1882, No. 184, in favour of:

"Yet awhile, His own to save, Christ must linger in the grave"—

by the Rev. J. Ellerton.

All knowing God! 'tis Thine to know. T. Scott. [Charitable Judgment.] This hymn is No. 115 in Enfield's Warrington Sel., 1772, in 5 st. of 4 l., and is headed "Charitable Judgment." It is found in a few modern collections, principally amongst the Unitarians, but usually as—"All seeing God, 'tis Thine to know,"—and abbreviated, as in Martineau's Hys., 1840, No. 496, and Courtauld's Ps., Hys., and Auths., 1860, No. 328. [W. T. B.]

All mortal vanities be gone. I. Watts. [Vision of the Lamb.] This is No. 25 of Bk. i. in his Hymns and Spiritual Songs, 1709, in 9 st. of 4 l., and based upon Rev. v. 6-9, "A vision of the Lamb." It is in use in G. Britian and America, although to a limited extent.

All people that on earth do dwell. [Ps. cx.] The memories which have gathered round this rendering of the 100th Psalm, together with the uncertainty of its authorship, require us to trace its history, to note its true text, and to determine, if possible, its author.

I. History.—It appeared for the first time in the Psalter, pub. in London by John Daye, in 1560-1, and in the Anglo-Genevan Psalter, printed at Geneva, in 1561. In the full English Psalter of 1562 it is not found, but in an appendix to the edition of 1564 (Brit. Mus.) it is given, and again in the body of the work in 1565 (Brit. Mus.). It was also included in the Scottish Psalter of 1564. From 1564 it reappeared in all editions of the English and Scottish Psalters, and is also found in most hymn-books published during the past 150 years.
II. Text.—The original text from the only copy of Daye's Psalter, 1560-1, known, and in which it is printed in the old black-letter text of the period, is as follows:—

"Psalm C.

All people y' on earth do dwell, sing to ye' lord, with cheerful voice
Him serve we' fear, his praise forth tel, come ye' before him and rejoice.

The lord ye' know is God in deed;
with out our aide, he did us make:
We are his flock, he doth us see,
and for his shepe, he doth us take.

Oh enter then his gates with praise approaching, in his courts, your courses unto;
Praise, lauds, and blesses his name always,
for it is semyly so to doe.

For why? the lord our God is good,
his mercy is for ever sure:
His trueth at all times firmly stood and shall from age to age endure."

[Orig. ed. 1560-1, London, J. Daye.]

In what form this text reached Geneva, whether in ms. or in a copy of Daye's edition, cannot be determined. Within a few months, if not simultaneously, the same text, varying only in the spelling of some words (the flock of Daye's ed. being spelt folke, &c.), was given in the Anglo-Genevan ed. of 1561, and again in many later editions of the English Psalter.

In the subsequent history of the text the following variations have crept in:

St. i, l. 3. "Him serve with fear," changed to "mirth." This is found in the Scottish Psalter of 1653, and is taken from the c.m. version of Ps. c. given in the older English Psalters.

St. ii, l. 1. "The Lord ye know is," changed to "Know that the Lord is," &c., is also in the Scottish Psalter of 1650, and is from the same c.m. version as in st. i.

St. iii, l. 3. "Folke" changed to "Flock." This was possibly a printer's error to begin with, caused by transposing the o and l. It is found as early as the Psalter printed by "The Assignes of Richard Day, London, 1555," and has continued in the text from that date to Thrags's Coll., 1882. In that work Mr. Thrall has appended the old text of 1560-1, and added thereto a doxology by Dr. Neal, based on Brady and Tate. This doxology is also found in II. A. & M., and other collections.

III. Authorship.—This is somewhat difficult to determine. The evidence is this:—

1. Daye's Psalter, 1560-1. No signature.
5. Daye's Appendix, 1564. No signature.
7. Daye's Psalter, 1566. No signature.
10. Daye's Psalter, 1587. "I. H."

These are all the Psalters known which have any value in determining the question. This evidence is certainly in favour of W. Kethe, and this is the more conclusive when we remember that the Britwell Psalter, 1561, and the Scottish Psalter of 1564, are reprints of the Anglo-Genevan Psalter, with such corrections in spelling as an English work printed on the Continent would call for, and constitute together (*\) a distinct family from the Daye Psalters. The metre is also in Kethe's favour, and decisive against both Sternhold and Hopkins. Its correct subscription is therefore "W. Kethe, 1560-1."

The historical account of the Psalters here named is given in the English Psalters, the Scottish Hymnody, and the Old Version, iii., in which it is set forth.

Although the history of tunes forms no part of our work, a few facts concerning "The Old Hundredth" may not be unacceptable. It first appeared in the enlarged edition of the French Genevan Psalter, published in 1551, as the tune to Ps. cxxiv. The first half of the tune is a musical phrase which is found in various combinations both before and after that time; but the latter part of the tune, and the form of the whole of it, is the work of Louis Bourgeois, who, and not Guillaume Franck, is now known to be the editor of this edition of the French Genevan Psalter. Kethe's version of Ps. c. was doubtless written for this tune.

All powerful, self-existent God. [God unchangeable.] Pub. anonymously in B. Williams's Coll. of H. for Pub. Worship on the Genl. Principles of Natural and Revealed Religion. Salisbury, 1778, No. 8, in 6 st. of 4 l. and headed "The Immortality of God." It is based on Ps. cii. v. 27. In 1781 it was also included in his Bk. of Psalms, Salisbury, p. 286, as version vi. of Ps. cii. After passing through several Unitarian Collections, it appeared in Longfellow and Johnson's Amer. Hys. of the Spirit, 1804, No. 80, in 5 st., being st. i., ii., and vi. of the original in an altered form. Orig. text as above.

All praise to Him who dwells in bliss. C. Wesley. [Evening.] 1st pub. in J. Wesley's Coll. of Ps. & Hymns, 1741, as "An Evening Hymn," in 5 st. of 4 l. In the Scottish Psalter of C. Wesley, 1808-72, vol. ii. p. 27, it is repeated without alteration.

Although in somewhat extensive use both in Great Britain and America, it has never found a place in the Wes. H. Bk. In the Hymnary, 1872, No. 75, a doxology has been added. Usually it is given in its original form.

All praise to our redeeming Lord. C. Wesley. [Christian Fellowship.] No. xxxii. of his Hymns for those that seek and those that have Redemption in the Blood of Jesus Christ, 1747, in 3 st. of 8 l. and entitled, "At Meeting of Friends." It was not included in the Wes. H. Bk. until after the death of J. Wesley, and was added in one of the editions of that collection during its partial revision in 1800-1. It has become a favourite hymn amongst the Methodist bodies in all English-speaking countries, but its use, otherwise than by the Methodists, is limited. Orig. text in P. Works, 1808-72, vol. iv. p. 252.

All praise to the Lamb! Accepted I am. C. Wesley. [ Assurance.] Appeared in his Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1759, vol. i., No. 190, in 18 st. of 3 l. It is not in C. U.
ALL PRAISE TO THEE

All thanks to God. C. Wesley. [Thanksgiving.] One of the most celebrated open-air preaching places in Cornwall is the well-known Gwennap Pit, near Redruth. It is a circular hollow, covering an area of about 80 square yards, and sloping to a depth of some 50 feet. It has the appearance of a huge grass-covered funnel, with rings of seats formed out of the ground, and reaching from the bottom upwards. It seems to have had its origin in the running together of a mining shaft. In this amphitheatre the Wesleyan preachers frequently preached during their tours in Cornwall. In his journal C. Wesley notes under the date of Sunday, Aug. 10, 1746, that therein "for nearly two hours nine or ten thousand, by computation, listened with all eagerness" to him as he preached. The following day, being deeply impressed with the multitude, and the success of his work, he wrote the hymn: "All thanks to God," &c. In the following year it was given as No. 121 of Hymns for those that Seek and Those that Bare Redemption, &c., 1747, in 8 st. of 81, and entitled, "Thanksgiving for the Success of the Gospel." When included by J. Wesley in the Wes. II. Bk. in 1780, st. iv. was omitted, and some alterations were also introduced into the text. That arrangement has been retained in later editions, and is repeated in other collections. Its use is somewhat extensive both in G. Brit. and America. Orig. text in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 210. [J. J.]

All that I was, my sin, my guilt. H. Bonar. [Pardon through Grace.] 1st pub. in the Bible Hymn Book, of which Dr. Bonar was editor, 1845, No. 219, in 5 st. of 41, and based upon "Ps. 51, 1, 2. "He shall wash me in His blood," &c., and entitled, "By the grace of God I am what I am." It was repeated in subsequent editions of the Bible H. Bk., and again in the author's Hymns of Faith and Hope, 1st series, 1856, and later editions, with the title "Mine and Thine." Its use, both in G. Brit. and America, is somewhat extensive, and usually the text is unaltered, as in Stevenson's Hymns for Church and Home, 1873. The line, st. 1, l. 2, "Bade me in Christ believe," in his Hymn Ps. & Hymns, 1859 and 1880, and in the S. Cong., 1859, is from the former collection. The dox. as in Kennedy, 1863, is not in the original.

All that's good, and great, and true. Godfrey Thring. [Praise and Thanksgiving.] Written in 1863, and 1st pub. in his Hymns Congregational and Others, 1866, No. 24, in 7 st. of 41, and entitled "Nature's Harmony." It was repeated in his Hymns and Lyrics, 1874, pp. 108-9, and again in his Ch. of E. H. Bk., 1882, where it is given most appropriately as a hymn for children.

All the night and nothing taken. H. Alford. [MISSIONS—S. S. TEACHERS.] Contributed to his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 167, in 3 st. of 61, and appointed for the 5th Sun. after Trinity, being based on the Gospel of that day. It is repeated in Snepp's S. of G. & C., 1872, No. 771.

All the sacrifice is ended. S. J. Stone. [Easter.] Written for his Lyra Fidelium (on the article of the Creed, "He descended into Hell: the third day He rose again from the dead")., and 1st pub. therein, 1886, No. v., in 5 st. of 61. It was repeated in his Supplemental Hymnal, London, Macintosh, 1873: in the author's Ch. Service for Children, 1884; and in his Carmina Congervata, 1884.

All the world in sin was lying. S. Baring-Gould. [Redemption.] Printed in the Church Times, July 39th, 1864, and thence into the People's H., 1867, No. 453, in 8 st. of 41.

All things are possible to him. C. Wesley. [Concerning Holiness.] No. 10 of his "Hymnus for those that wait for full Redemption," which was given in the Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii., in 8 st. of 61. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 300.) In the
All Things Are Ready

Wes. II. Bk. of 1780, and later editions, and also in other collections in which it is found, st. iii. and vi. are omitted, the statement in the former,

"I without sin on earth shall live, Even I, the chief of sinners!"

and in the latter,

"The unchangeable decree is past,
The sure predestinating word,
That I, who on the Lord am cast,
I shall be like my sinless Lord:
'Twas fix'd from all eternity:
All things are possible to me:"

being evidently unacceptable both to J. Wesley, and those who have reprinted the hymn from his collection. Its use as a congregational hymn outside the Methodist bodies is almost unknown.

All things are ready, Come. A. Middle. [Invitation.] Written in July, 1800, and first pub. in The Ambassador's Hymn Book, 1861, No. 49, in 5 st. of 4 l. s.m., from whence it has passed into numerous collections both in G. Brit. and America. It ranks with the most popular of the author's productions. Orig. text, in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk. 1866, No. 504.

All things are ready! there's a place of rest. [Holy Communion.] This Eucharistic hymn, which is suited more to private devotion than public worship, we have failed to trace to its original source. It is known to us in three forms:—

1. All things are ready! Jesus waits to give.
This is found in a collection of Hymns, pub. at Chipping Norton, 1859, in 3 st. of 4 l., and said to be Anon, showing that it had been copied from an earlier work.

2. All things are ready! there's a place of rest.
This text in 4 st. is the same as the first four st. in Thring's Coln., No. 526, which were taken by Mr. Thring from a collection now to him unknown. It consists of the first form of the hymn as above, and another stanza which is given as the first.

3. The cento in Thring. This is No. 2, with a fifth st. and a new line, st. iv., 1, 4, by Mr. Thring.

All things bright and beautiful.
Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphrey. [God, our Maker.] A successful and popular hymn for children, on the article of the Creed, "Maker of Heaven and Earth," which appeared in her Hymns for Little Children, 1848, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is usually given in an unaltered form, as in Thring's Coln., 1882.

All things praise Thee, Lord most high. G.W. Conder. [Praise.] Pub. in 1874, in his Appendix to the Leeds II. Bk. of 1833, No. 6, in 6 st. of 6 l. It is given in many collections, its popularity arising to some extent from its remarkable word-painting. This is a distinguishing feature of the author's compositions both in prose and verse. The hymn is sometimes abbreviated by the omission of one or more stanzas. In Thring's Coln., 1882, No. 249, st. iii. and iv. are thus omitted with advantage.

All ye that pass by. C. Wesley. [Invitation.] This "Invitation to Sinners" appeared in the Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i. No. xxii., in 7 st. of 6 l. In 1760 it was included, with the omission of st. iv., in M. Madan's Ps. & Hgs. No. xxi.; again in the collections of De Courcy, R. Convyer, and

All we like wandering sheep have strayed. [Passionate.] Thus Anon. hymn has not been traced beyond the Rev. T. M. Fallow's Sel. of Hgs. for Pub. and Prie. Use, Lond., Masters, 1847, No. 58, in 4 st. of 4 l., where it is appointed for Good Friday. In 1852 it was repeated in the English Hymnal, No. 103, with the addition of a doxology:—

"Yet still He uncomplaining stands," to "Yet uncomplaining still He stands" in Kennedy, 1863, No. 600.

[W. T. B.]

All wondering on the desert ground. J. E. Bode. [Feeling the Multitude.] One of the most popular and successful of his Hymns from the Gospel of the Day, 1860, in 5 st. of 4 l., the Gospel being the 25th Sun. after Trinity, St. John vi. 5. It has passed into various collections at home and abroad, including Alford's Year of Praise, 1867, the New Zealand Hymnal, 1872, and others. Orig. text in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862.

All ye Gentiles, praise the Lord. J. Montgomery. [Ps. cvii.] 1st pub. in his Songs of Zion, 1822, in 3 st. of 4 l., and again in his Original Hymns, 1853, p. 91, where it is entitled, "Exhortation to Universal Praise and Thanksgiving." It is sometimes given as—

"All ye nations, praise the Lord," in both English and American hymnals. It was introduced into congregational use at an early date, and has attained to a fair position.

All ye that [who] love the Lord, rejoice. J. Watts. [Ps. cxvii.] 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, dec., 1719, in 8 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Praise God, all His saints: or, The Saints judging the World." To it he appended a note in explanation of his rendering of verses 6-9, "Let the high praises of God be in their mouth," &c.

"This Psalm seems to be written to encourage the Jews in the wars against the heathen Princes of Canaan, who were divinely sentenced to Destruction: But the four last Verses of it have been too much abused in later Ages to promote Sedition and Disturbance in the State; so that I chose to refer this Honour, that is here given to all the Saints, to the day of Judgment, according to those Expressions in the New Testament, Mat. xix. 28, Ye shall sit on twelve Thrones, judging the Twelve Tribes of Israel, or. vi. 3, We shall judge angels; Rev. ii. 27 and iii. 21, I will give him a Throne over the Nations, he shall rule them with a rod of Iron," &c.

Notwithstanding this defence, the unsuitability of these stanzas for congregational use is emphasised by their omission in most collections in G. Britain and America.

All ye that pass by. C. Wesley. [Invitation.] This "Invitation to Sinners" appeared in the Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i. No. xliii., in 7 st. of 6 l. In 1760 it was included, with the omission of st. iv., in M. Madan's Ps. & Hgs. No. xxi.; again in the collections of De Courcy, R. Convyer, and others in the Ch. of England; Williams and Boden, and others amongst the Congregationalists; and in the collections of various denominations: but not until the publication of the Supp. to the We. H. Bk. in 1830 was it added to that work, and thereby officially recognised by the Wesleyan Conference. It is retained in the revised ed. of the We. H. Bk. 1875, and is in extensive use in t. Brit. and America. Orig. text in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 371.

All ye who faithful servants are Tate & Brady. [Holy Communion.] This is Hymn ii. of the three hymns for Holy Communion which were given in the Supp. to the N. V., 1699. It is based on Rev. xix., and is in 4 st. of 4 l. It is found in a few modern hymnals only, including Kennedy, 1863, No. 646, and the Sarum, 1868, No. 225, in both of which the change is in st. iv. of l. 1, “bless’d” to “best,” and l. 4, “Is call’d” to “Is made a welcome guest,” are given. The text is otherwise correct.

All ye who seek a rest above.
Godfrey Thring. [Holy Communion.] Written in 1863, and 1st pub. in his Hymns Congregational and Others, 1866, pp. 72-3, in 5 st. of 6 l. In 1874 it was republished in his Hymns and Lyrics, pp. 141-2; and again in his Coll., 1st ed., 1866, but not in the 2nd ed., 1872.

All yesterday is gone.
[Invitation.] This hymn, in 3 st. of 4 l., is found in a few English collections early in the present century, including Pratt’s Coll., 1829, through which it probably passed into the American collections. Its use in G. Brit. is very limited. In America it is found in several hymnals. It is an earnest and simple invitation to accept of present offers of salvation. Its authorship is unknown.

Alleluiarc singen gerne. xviii cent.
[Love to Christ.] Included as No. 593 in J. J. Gotschalk’s Universal Ges. 1767, in 11 st. of 12 l., and in the U. L. S., 1851, No. 294. Repeated altered (reading horen) as No. 514 in the Berlin G. B., 1829, in 4 st. of 8 l. The only tr. is, “All with Jesus are delighted,” by Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (ed. 1856, p. 114).

[J. M.]

Alleluia = Hallelujah. Hymns beginning with this word are arranged in this work according to the mode of spelling adopted by the authors and translators.

Alleluia (Greek, ἀλληλοοία; Hebrew, אֶלֶלְיוּאָ) An ascription of praise derived from two Hebrew words meaning “Praise Yah,” or “Praise the Lord.” It occurs frequently in the Book of Psalms, from Ps. civ. onwards, both in the text and as a heading (Vulgate); once in the Book of Tobit (xiii. 18), and four times in the Revelation (xix. 1, 3, 4, 6). It passed at a very early date into frequent and general amongst Christians. St. Jerome speaks of the Christian ploughman shouting it while at his work. [Ep. xviil. ad Marcellum.] Sidonius Apollinaris alludes to sailors using it as the “celeusma,” or exclamation of encouragement while plying the oar. [Lii. ii. Ep. 10.] Christian soldiers used it as a battlecry, as when the Britons under the guidance of St. Germanus of Auxerre won the “Alleluia victory” over the Picts and Scots a.d. 429.

Tradition says that when the early Christians met on Easter morning, they saluted each other with the exclamation, “Alleluia, the Lord is risen.” The word passed early into liturgical use, and (untranslated, like other Hebrew words, “Amen,” “Hosanna”) assumed a fixed position in the services of the Church. Its uses are:

1. In the Eastern Church it is closely connected with the Great Entrance. It occurs once at the close of the Chasubic Hymn in the Greek Liturgies of St. James (Hammond, ii. 296), and of St. Mark (Ibid. p. 178), and three times in the same position in the Liturgy of Constantineple (Ibid. p. 101). It occurs frequently in the Greek office for the Dead (Ibid. p. 226), and its use is not intermitted even in Lent (Ibid. p. 265). In the Greek Masses it occurs thrice at the end of the Hexapalms at the 13th antiphon after the Gloria Patri concluding the three opening Psalms of the first, the third, and the sixth Hours.

2. Its liturgical use in the Western Church has been varied.

1. In the Mozarabic liturgy its normal and invariable position was after the Gospel, at the commencement and conclusion of the “Lauda” (as its use begins to be recognized even in Masses for the Dead, and even on such featural occasions as the first day of Lent. It also occurs nearly as invariably in the “Sacrificium,” or “Glory.” According to original usage the “Alleluia” was retained in the Spanish Church all the year round, but its omission in Lent was ordered by Can. xi. 15 of the charter of Council of Toledo, and is witnessed to by Isidore of Seville (De Eccles. Off. l. 12). Such omission only commences after the First Sunday in Lent, on which day additional “Alleluias” were inserted in the Introit.

2. Gallican usage is unknown, but in this, as in other points, it was probably identical with the Spanish rite.

3. In the African Church the use of “Alleluia” was confined to Sundays and to Easter and Ascension-tide (Breviaries de Eccles. t. 1. 13).

4. In the Roman Liturgy it is used after the Gradual, before the Gospel. Originally its use was confined to Easter Day (Sozomen, Hist. Ecc. vii. 19), though some persons have supposed Pascha in this passage to mean Easter Day. It was used in Easter-tide, the year except from Septuagesima Sunday to Holy Saturday, and according to present rule it is also omitted on feasts, as Laetare, or on the Feast of the Assumption, if it falls on a week-day, and on all Vigils except those of Easter and Pentecost, in Masses for the Dead, and on Ember days.

5. In the Roman Breviary “Alleluia” is said after the opening “Gloria Patri” at all the Hours except from Septuagesima Sunday to Maundy Thursday, when “Laus tibi, Domine, Rex aeternae glorie” is substituted for it, and during Easter-tide it is added to all “Antiphons,” of which at other seasons it would not form a part. It is also added during Easter-tide to the verses following the Antiphons to the Psalms, and to the Responsory after Lessons before its following verse; and to the short Responsory after the Chapters at Terce, Sext, and None, being said twice here, and twice after the first verse instead of part of the Responsory, and once after the second verse.

iii. Beyond this enumeration we need not go, as the labour involved in tracing out the use of “Alleluia” in the hundreds of local Breviaries which exist, would yield little return in practical utility. Dr. Neale’s note on the use of Alleluia in his Mediaeval Hymns, 1851 and 1867, under “Alleluia dulce carmen,” is very beautiful, but too long for quotation.

iv. We will close with a short list of Hymns, Sequences and Processions commenced with the word “Alleluia,” or with the first two syllables of that word.
1. "Alleluia! best and sweetest. Of the hymns of praise above. By J. Chandler, 1st pub. in his _Hymns of the Primitive Church_, 1837, No. 59, in 4 st. of 6 l., and is the first of two renderings of the hymn. This _tr._ is found in a great number of collections. From the first two lines contain the _tr._ but usually with a few alterations in the rest of the hymn. In the _S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys._, No. 37, it reads "Alleluia! peace instilling," and in the _Bapt. Ps. & Hys._, 1858, No. 633, "Hallelujah! high and glorious."

2. _Alleluia! song of sweetness, Voice of everlasting gladness._ By W. J. Blew, printed on a broadsheet for use in his church, cir. 1850 [E. MSS.], and then included in his _Ch. H. & Tune Bk._, 1852, from whence it passed into Rice's _Sel._ from that work, 1870, No. 23.

3. _Alleluia! song of sweetness. Voice of joy, eternal lay._ By J. M. Neale. It appeared in the 1st ed. _Med. Hys._, 1851, p. 130, in 4 st. of 6 l., and was "corrected for the _Hymnal N._" (Med. Hys. 2nd ed. p. 184), where it was given in its new form, in 1852, No. 46, and again in the 2nd ed. of the _Med. Hys._, 1863. This _tr._ equals in popularity that of Chandler, but it is more frequently and extensively altered. Without noticing minor instances, we find the following: "Alleluia, song of sweetness, Voice of joy that cannot die," in _H. A. & M._, 1851 and 1875, and many others. "Hallelujah! song of gladness, Voice of joy that cannot die," in Thring's _Coll._, 1882, &c. Of these altered forms of Neale's text, that of _H. A. & M._ is most frequently adopted.

4. _Alleluia! song of gladness, Utterance of perennial joy._ By J. A. Johnston, given in his _English Hymnal_, 1852, No. 75, and in later editions.

5. _Alleluia! song of gladness, Voice of everlasting joy._ This _tr._ appeared in Cooke and Denton's _Hymnal_, 1853, No. 44. It is based upon Chandler; but it has so much in it that is new, that practically it is a fresh _tr._ In 1857, it was included in the Winchester _Ch. Bk._, No. 247, and subsequently in Barry, Spoon's _Songs of Our _Ch._ Comp.,_ and _Stokoe Bk._, and others. It is also given, but somewhat altered, in the _Parish H. Bk._; the R. T. S.'s _Hys._, No. 337; and the _New Cong._, No. 714. In some of these it is ascribed to Dr. Neale in error.

6. _Alleluia! song of sweetness._ By J. D. Chambers, in his _Lauda Sola_, 1857, p. 120, and from thence, in an altered form, into the _Welling- ton College H. Bk._, 1860, p. 95.

7. _Alleluia, sweetest anthem, Voice of joy that may not die._ By J. Keble. This _tr._ is based upon Dr. Neale's, and was contributed to the _Salisbury H. Bk._, 1857, No. 63, and repeated, with alterations, in the _Salisbury, 1868_. It was also included in Keble's _Misc. Poems_, 1869, p. 149.

8. _Alleluia! song of sweetness._ No. 61 in Pott's _Hymns_, &c., 1861, is the _H. A. & M._ text, slightly altered; and No. 102, _Ch. Hys._, 1871, is st. i., ii. and iii., from Pott's _Hys._ and st. iv. from Neale direct.

9. _Alleluia, song of sweetness, Strain of everliving joy._ By R. C. Singleton, made for, and 1st pub. in his _Anglican H. Bk._, 1868. It was re-written for the 2nd ed., 1871.

The close resemblance of these _tr._s to each other has made the annotations a task of some difficulty. By far the greater number of compilers have worked with second-hand materials, and these, when re-arranged, have produced complications in the text of the _tr._ that is embarrassing, and as the omission made good by adopting Neale's original _tr._ of that stanza. The text of Thring and others is equally complicated.

Translations not in _C. U._—

1. 0. _Glorious is the song._ J. Chandler (2nd _tr._), 1837.

2. _Hallelujah! note of gladness._ W. L. Alexander, 1849.

3. _Alleluia, sweetest lay._ R. Campbell, 1850.
Alleluia nunc decantet. [Common of Apostles.] According to Mone, No. 667, this hymn is found in a Reichenau ms. of the 14th cent. among the Notkerian sequences, and marked as for SS. Philip & James. It is also in the Sarum, York and Hereford Missals. Dr. Neale included it in his Seq. ex Miss., p. 214, as a “Seq. for the Com. of Apostles”; Daniel, v. 353, repeats the text, readings, and references; similars of whose title is “Dei Apostoli” (troparium). It is also in Kehrlein, No. 374. The sequence is 27 lines of varying length. Of these 26 lines end in the latter “a.” It will be noticed that in the hymn no reference is made to St. Paul; possibly, as suggested by Mone, because he was not an eye-witness of the life and sufferings of our Lord. The tr. in C. U. is:

Alleluia psalms ed. laudibus. This anonymous hymn, Mone, 1853, i. p. 87, assigns to the 5th cent., on the ground that it was included in the Mozarabic Brev., in which no hymns were admitted which are of later date than the 8th cent., and that the shortened endstrophe indicated that date. He gives the text from a Munich ms. of the 10th cent., and adds numerous readings and a few notes. Daniel, 1855, vol. iv. pp. 63–65, repeats this text, with slight changes, together with Mone’s various readings with additions.

It is the Hymn at Vespers in the Mozarabic Brev. (Toledo, 1502, f. 80) for the first Sunday in Lent, and the Saturday preceding. See Migne’s Patrol., tom. 86, col. 259, also col. 806; where it is described as the Hymn on the occasion of hearing the “Vespers in Carnes teneundae.” The Hymn on Ash-Wednesday itself, however (Verid quiris in Capite Jejuniti: the head or beginning of the fast), is Bemignitatis fons Deus, the same as at Lauds and Vespers on the three days’ fast which precedes the Feast of the Epiphany in that rite (excepting the Vespers of the third day, or Eve of the Epiphany), Patrol., col. 149.

The text is also in the Hymn. Sarisc., Lon., 1831, pp. 60, 61, where it is given as the hymn at Matins on Septuagesima Sunday and through the week, and as from a ms. (date 1064), formerly belonging to Worcester Cathedral; which ms. professes to contain Ambrosian Hymns for the different Hours, according to the Constitutions of our Father Benedict, and to have St. Oswald as its compiler.

In the Hymn. Sarisc., various readings are also given from three old ms. of the 10th or 11th centuries, which have interlinear Anglo-Saxon versions. The refrain of this hymn—"Alleluia perenne"—is an allusion to the fact that the Alleluias of heav’n are continuous, whilst those of earth are broken.

In addition to the works noted above, the text is in Neale’s Hymns Ancient & Modern, 1851, p. 102; and the Latin Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church (Suttre’s Society), 1851, p. 57, from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham. In the British Museum it is found in three mss. of the 11th cent. (Harl. 2961, f. 235 b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 47; Jul. A. vi. f. 43.) For the Eze of this and similar hymns see Alleluia.

Translations in C. U.:

1. Alleluia sound ye. In strains of holy land. By J. D. Chambers, 1st pub. in his Lauls Synon, 1857, in 9 st. of 6 l., including the refrain. In 1858, st. i., ii., iv., v., and viii. were included, with slight alterations, in Sarum, as No. 185.

2. Alleluia! now be sung. By J. Skinner, made for and 1st pub. in his Daily Service Hymnal, 1864, No. 75, in two parts, part ii. being: “Bright and lovely morning star.” This tr., although somewhat elaborated, is suited to congregational use, and is worthy of being better known.

3. Sing Alleluia forth in duteous praise. By J. Ellerton. 1st pub., with an explanatory and historical note, in The Churchman’s Family Magazine, 1865. In 1866 it was embodied in the Rev. R. Brown-Borthwick’s Suppl. Hymn and Tune Bk., and again, after revision by the translator, in the App. to H. A. & M. of the same year. It was revised a second time for Ch. Hym., 1871, and has also been printed elsewhere with the alteration of a word or two, but usually with the translator’s consent. Orig. tr. as above; authorised tr. in Ch. Hym. Since its publication in H. A. & M., 1868, it has been included in almost every hymnal of note in G. Britain, and most English-speaking countries. It is the most vigorous, musical, and popular rendering of the “Alleluia psalms edite” which we possess.

Translation not in C. U.:

Alleluia! let the holy sounds of cheerful praise ring. Crippen’s Anc. Hymn., 1864, p. 25. [J. J.]

Alleluia, sing to Jesus. W. C. Dix. [Holy Communion.] Written about the year 1866, the author’s design being to assist in supplying a then acknowledged lack of Eucharistic hymns in Church of England hymnals. It was 1st pub. in his Altar Songs, 1867, No. vii., in 5 st. of 8 l., and appointed especially for Ascension-tide, with the title “Redemption by the Precious Blood.” From Altar Songs it was later unaccreditedly included in the App. to H. A. & M., 1868, No. 320, and subsequently into numerous collections both in G. Brit. and America, sometimes in a slightly altered and abbreviated form.

Alleluia! With a diadem of beauty. W. T. Brooke. [Saints’ Days.] This verseification of Rev. J. M. Rodwell’s prose translation of the Song of the Saints from the Abyssinian hymnal of Jared was 1st pub. in the Monthly Packet, Nov. 1871. in a series of articles on the “Songs of Other Churches,” by the Rev. L. C. Biggs. In 1882 it was included in Mr. Brooke’s Churchman’s Manual of Private and Family Devotion, and is in 8 st. of 7 l. [W. T. B.]

Allen, Elizabeth-Lee. [Smith, E. L.]

Allen, Henry. [Allison, H.]

Allen, James, b. at Gayle, Wensleydale, Yorkshire, June 24, 1734, and educated with a view to taking Holy Orders, first with E
ALLEN, Jonathan. Concerning this hymn-writer, to whom is credited the hymn, "Sinners, will you scorn the message?" we can only say that this hymn appeared in Hys. adapted to Pub. Worship, collected from various Authors, Exeter, S. Woolmer, 1801, edited by Richard Pearse Allen, Minister of Castle Street Meeting, Exeter; and that in D. Sedgwick's marked copy of John Dobell's New Selection, &c., 1806, it is attributed to Jonathan Allen. What authority Sedgwick had for this ascription we cannot determine. It is, however, true that his manuscript containing Allen's hymn, "Sinners, will you scorn," &c., is sometimes given with st. i. and ii. transposed, as "Hear the heralds of the Gospel," as in the Amer. Hap. Praxis Bk., N. Y. 1871.

Allen, Oswald, s. of John Allen, banker, of Kirkby Lonsdale, Westmoreland, and great-nephew of James Allen (q.v.): b. at Kirkby Lonsdale, 1816, and educated in that town. After residing for a time in Glasgow, he returned to Kirkby Lonsdale, and joined the staff of the local bank; d. October 2, 1878. In 1861 (Preface, Oct. 1861), he pub. Hymns of the Christian Life, Lond., Nisbet. It contains 148 hymns, a few of which are in C. U.

Allen, William, d.d., b. at Pittsfield, Mass., 1784, graduated at Harvard, 1802. He became Pastor of Pittsfield, 1810; President of Dartmouth University, 1817, and of Bowdoin College, 1820-1829. He d. at Southampton, 1868. He published the American Biographical and Historical Dictionary, 1859; Psalms and Hymns, 1833. The latter contains versions of all the Psalms, and 200 original hymns. Some of the hymns, especially those about slavery, are curious. Five are found in Campbell's Comprehensive H. Bk., Lond., 1837. His compositions have almost entirely passed out of use.

Allendorf, Johann Ludwig Conrad, b. Feb. 9, 1693, atJosbach, near Marburg, Hesse, where his father was pastor. He entered the University of Giessen in 1711, but in 1713 passed on to Halle to study under Francke, and then, in 1717, became tutor in the family of Count Henkel of Odersberg. In 1721 he became tutor to the family of Count Erdmann v. Promnit at Soran, and in 1724 was appointed Lutheran Court preacher at Göthen, when one of the Count's daughters was married to the Prince of Anhalt-Göthen. After the death of his first wife the Prince married her younger sister, but the latter dying in 1750, the need for a Lutheran Court preacher ceased, he being of the Reformed Confession. Allendorf was then summoned by Count Christian Ernst v. Stiroben to Wernigerode, where a sister of his former patronesses was the wife of the Count's eldest son. There he was assistant in two churches till 1755, when he was appointed pastor of the Lieder Church, and a member of the Consistory. In 1760 he became pastor of St. Ulrich's Church in Halle, and successfully laboured there till, on June 3, 1773, "As a Simeon of eighty years he received his peaceful summons home to rest in the arms of Jesus" (Koch, iv. 411-416; Ally. Deutsche Biog., i. 349, &c.). His hymns, which are "hymns of love to Christ, the Lamb of God, and the Bridegroom of the believing soul," appeared principally in the Einige gutz neue auserlesene Lieder, Halle, 1736, and the Einige gautz neue Lieder zum Lobe des Dresdeinigen Gottes und zur gewünschten reichen Erbahrung vieler Menschen. The latter, known as the Cäthnische Lieder, contains hymns of the Pietists of the younger Halle School, such as Lehri, Allendorf, Wotiersdorf, Kunth, &c.; and to its first ed., 1736, Allendorf contributed 45 hymns, while the 4th ed., 1744, contains in its second pt, 46, and the 5th ed., 1768, in its third pt, 41 additional hymns by him—in all 132.

Four of his hymns have been tr., viz.:

1. Das Brünnelein quillt, das Lebenswasser geliesset. [H. Communion.]
   Founded on Ps. lxv. 1st pub. in 1753, p. 14, and included, in 1736, in a different ed. of 8 1., as a "Brunnenlied.
   Repeated as No. 1570 in the Berlin G. L. ed. 1863. The only tr. in C. U. is:

   The Fountain flows!—its waters—all are needing, omitting st. iv., vi., by H. Mills in his House Grammar, 1845 (ed. 1856, p. 43). The tr. of st. i.—iii., vi., altered to "The Fountain flows! waters of life bestowing," were included, as No. 819, in the Luth. General Synod's Coll. 1850.

2. Die Seele ruht in Jesus Armen. [Eternal Life.]
   Founded on an anonymous hymn in 5 st. beginning, "Ich ruhe nun in Gottes Armen," included as No. 655, in pt. ii., 1714, of Freylinghausen's G. B. ; but not in the Einkuert . . . . Lieder, Dresden, 1694 [Leipzig Town Library]. According to Lauermann in Koch, viii. 689, Allendorf's hymn was first printed separately. In pt. ii. of the 4th ed., 1744, of the Cäthnische Lieder, as above, p. 264, in 13 st. of 101. entitled, "Of a soul blessed there with the beauteus vision," Rev. xxi. 4. Written in the spirit of Canticles, it is included in full in the Neue Sammlung, Wernigerode, 1752, No. 92, but is generally abridged, Knapp, in his Ec. L. S., 1850, No. 3059 (ed. 1865, No. 3123) altering it and omitting st. vi.,ix.,x. Lauermann relates that Dionysus Schlypalias, of the Holy Cross Church in Dresden, told his wife on Jan. 1, 1764, while he was yet in perfect health, that he would die during the year. He comforted her apprehensions with st. vi.—xi. of this hymn, which consoles herself shortly before his death on April 6 of that year. The only tr. in C. U. is:

   Now rests her soul in Jesus' arms. A good tr. of st. i., ii., viii., xii., xiii., in the 1st Ser., 1855, of Miss Winkworth's _Lyra Gecr_, p. 250 (later eds. p. 252). Thence, omitting st. xii., as No. 362 in E. H. Bickerdike's _Ps. & Hgs._, 1858. Another tr. is, "In Jesus' arms her soul doth rest," by Mrs. Beran, 1858, p. 42.

3. _Jesus ist kommen. Grund eigener Freude._ [Adoed.] First pub. in 1736 as above (ed. 1738, p. 192), in 23 st. of 6 l., as a hymn of triumph on the Coming of the Saviour to our world, St. John iii. 31. In the Sporer _G. B._, 1859, 11 st. are selected, and in the _Württemberg G._, 1842, 6 st. are given as no. 94. The only tr. is, "Jesus ist kommen, O je heiland!" by Miss Warner, in her _H. of the Church Militant_, 1858 (ed. 1861, p. 433).

4. _Unter Lilién jener Freuden._ [Longing for Heavens.] A beautiful hymn on the Joys of Heaven, more suited for private than for Church use. It appeared as, "In den Auen jener Freuden," in the _Sammlung Geist- und lichlicher Lieder_, Herrnhut, 1731, No. 1094, in 8 st. of 6 l. When repeated in 1733, p. 67, and in 1738, in the _Götische Lieder_, as above, Ps. xxxiv. 3, was given as a motto, and the first line as _Unter Lilién_. Included in this form as No. 241 in the Berlin G. L. S. ed. 1833. Laumann, in _Koch_, viii. 847-869, relates that it was repeated on her death-bed by the first wife of Jung-Stillings, and that it was a favourite hymn of Wilhelm Hofacker, a well-known Württemberg clergyman. The only tr. is, "Glorious are the fields of heaven," by Mrs. Beran, 1859, p. 131. [J. M.]

Alles ist an Gottes Bogen. Anon. xvii. cent. [Trust in God.] This hymn on Christian faith and patience is mentioned by Koch, v. 605, as anonymous and as dating c. 1673. In the _Nürnberg G. B._ of 1676 it is No. 943 (ed. 1690, No. 949), in 6 st. of 6 l., marked "Anonymous." Included as No. 488 in the _Un. L. S._, 1851.

Translation in C. U.:—

All things hang on our possessing. Good and full in the 2nd Series, 1858, of Miss Winkworth's _Lyra Gecr_, p. 189, and thence, as No. 130, in her _C. B. for England_, 1863, and in full in the _Ohio Luth. Hymnal_, 1880, No. 326. [J. M.]

Alline, Henry [Allen], b. at Newport, R. I., June 14, 1748, was sometime a minister at Falmouth, Nova Scotia, and d. at North Hill, N.S., Feb. 7, 1784. Alline, whose name is sometimes spelt _Allen_, is said to have founded a sect of "Allenites," who maintained that Adam and Eve before the fall had no corporeal bodies, and denied the resurrection of the body. These peculiar views may have a place in his prose works, but they cannot be traced in his 457 _Hymns and Spiritual Songs_, in five books, of which the 3rd ed., now rare, was pub. at Dover and Boston, U.S.A., 1797, and another at Stonington, Conn., 1802. Of these hymns 37 are found in Smith and Jones's _Hymns for the Use of Christians_, 1805, and some in later books of that body. The best of these hymns, "Amazing sight, the Saviour stands," from the 1st ed. of _Hymns and Spiritual Songs_ (1790 ?), is preserved in Hatfield's _C. H. Bk._, 1872, No. 569, where it is given anonymously from Netleton's Village _Hymns_; also in the _Bapt. Praise Bk._, and others. Alline's hymns are unknown to the English collections. [F. M. B.]

Allon, Henry, D.D., an Independent Minister, b. at Welton, near Hull, October 18, 1818, and educated at Checlosed Coll., Herts. In 1844 he became co-pastor with the Rev. T. Lewis of the Union Chapel, Islington, and succeeded to the sole pastorate on the death of Mr. Lewis in 1852. In 1865 Dr. Allon became co-editor with Dr. Reynolds of the _British Quarterly Review_, and in 1877 the sole editor of this journal. _Memoir of the Rev. J. Sherman_, pub. in 1860, and his Sermons on _The Vision of God_, 1876, are well known. As a composer of hymns he is represented by one hymn only, "Low in Thine agony," a good hymn for Paschal tide, contributed to his _Suppl. Hymns_, 1868, No. 24. His services to Hymnody, especially in the musical department, have been of value. In addition to acting as co-editor of the _New Cong. H. Bk._, 1859, he pub. _Supplemental Hymns_, 1868, enlarged ed. 1875; _Children's Worship_, 1878; and _The Congregational Psalmist Hymnal_, 1888. His musical compilations are the _Congregational Psalmist_, London, 1858, in conjunction with Dr. Gauntlett, in which his Historical Preface and Biographical Notes display considerable research and accuracy (various eds. 1868, 1875, 1883, raising the original 330 to 650 tunes); _2nd sect. of the same_. _Chant Book_, 1860; _3rd sect_. _Anthems for Congregational Use_, 1872; _4th sect._, _Tunes for Children's Worship_, 1879. These musical works, together with his essay, "The Worship of the Church," contributed to Dr. Reynolds's _Ecclissia_, 1870; and his most valuable lectures delivered in connection with the _Y. M. C. A._ in Exeter Hall:— _Church Song in its Relation to Church Life_, 1861-2; and _Psalmdy of the Reformation_, 1863-4,—have done much toward raising the musical portion of Nonconformist worship to a higher and more cultured position. [J. J.]

Allsop, Solomon S., b. 1824; resided in Jamaica, where his father laboured as a missionary, from 1827 to 1830, when he returned to England. Joining the Nonconformist ministry he has been successively Pastor at Whittlesea, Longford, March, and Burton-on-Trent. In 1879 he was President of the Baptist Annual Association. When at Longford, 1864-68, Mr. Allsop wrote several hymns for the local Anniversary. Of these, "Our hymn of thanks we sing to-day" was included in Stevenson's _Sch. Hymnal_, 1880, No. 323, in 5 st. of 6 l.

Alma Redemptoris Mater quae per via coeli. [B. V. M.] One of four Antiphons to the B. V. M. used at the termination of the Offices, the remaining three being the _Are Regina_, the _Regina coeli_, and the _Salve Regina._ It is ascribed to _Hermannus Contractus_, who d. 1054. In _Daniel_, ii. p. 318, the text is given in full, together with a note setting forth its use, with readings from a Munich ms. probably of the 13th cent. It is also in a 14th cent. _Sarum Breviary_ in the _British Museum_ (ms. Reg. 2 A., xiv.f. 235 B): in the Roman Breviary: Modena, 1480, f. 512; the York Breviary, 1493, (reprint, 1883, ii. 494), &c. Concerning its use we may add from Daniel and other authorities:—

That it is appointed to be said at the end of Compline from the Saturday before the first Sunday in Advent to the end of Ordinary, inclusively, and that in the old Franciscan Breviary, dated 1497, it is to be sung till Quinquagesima Sunday. In the Breviaries of Rome, Paris, &c., it is to be said at the end of Compline from the 1st Vestry of the 1st Sunday in Advent to the Feast of the Purification, inclusively; also after Lauds during this time, if the choir where the office is read be left, or other Hours, shall be said immediately after Lauds, then this Antiphon should be used at the end, once for all. Should the Feast of the Purification be transferred, on account of some privileged day (as S-Pauperes Majoris Sunday) falling on the same time, then the Alma Redemptoris Mater is not to be continued beyond Feb. 2, according to decrees of the Roman Congregation of Rites, 1681, 1693, 1765.

How well this Antiphon was known in England in the Middle Ages we may judge from the use which Chaucer made of it in his "Princess's Tale," where the whole story is associated therewith. In the tale it is introduced in the following lines:—

"This litel child is his litel book leering, As he sate at the schole at his prime, Alma Redemptoris herde singe. As children lered his antiphonere: And as he dorst, he drew him nere and nere, And hearken at the wordes and the note, Til he the firste vers coude al by rote."

The Poet then explains the way in which the child mastered the Antiphon, together with the music to which it was set; and describes his singing it in the public streets, his murder by the Jews for so doing, and the subsequent results. This Antiphon is distinct from the Sequences, Alma Redemptoris Mater quam de codis miat pater," given in Daniel, v. 113; Mone, ii. p. 200; Neale's Sequ. Missallius, p. 72, and others. The Sequence Mone quotes from a ms. of the 13th cent. Of this there is, so far as we are aware, no tr. into English. From the constant use of the Antiphon, both in public and private, by all Roman Catholics, translations, either in prose or verse, are in nearly all their devotional manuals. It is only necessary to specify the following:—

Translation in C. U.:—

Mother of Christ, hear thou thy people's cry.

Ben. E. Casswood, 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 38, and in his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 22. Its use is confined to the Roman Catholic collections for schools and missions.

Translations not in C. U.:—

2. Sweet Mother of our Saviour blest. J. Wallace, 1874.

Almighty Father of my frame.

Anne Steele. [Praise.] The first hymn of her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i. pp. 1–2, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Desiring to praise God." It was repeated in the new ed. of the same, 1780, pp. 1–2, and again in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, &c., 1863. It came into C. U. through the Bristol Bap. Coll. of Hgs. of Ash and Evans, 1769, No. 40. Its modern use, except in America, is very limited.

Almighty Father, bless the word.

[After Sermon.] This hymn appeared customary in Dr. W. A. Muhlenber's Church Poetry, Phila., 1823. It was repeated in the Amer. Prayer Book Coll., 1828, as No. 39, in 2 st. It is found in several American collections, but is not in C. U. in Great Britain.

Almighty Father, gracious Lord.

Anne Steele. [Prautoricet and Grace.] "Praise to God for the Blessings of Providence and Grace," is the title of this hymn in 16 st. of 4 l. in her Poems, &c., 1760, and 2nd edit. 1780. A cento therefrom in Dr. Alexander's Augustine H. Bk., 1849–63, is composed of st. 1, ii, vii–ix, xv, and xi. It is also found in some American collections. Another arrangement of stanzas beginning with the first st. was included in Cotterill's Sel., 1810. Of this, st. iii., ii. 5–8, is altered from Cowper.

Almighty Father, heaven and earth.

E. A. Dayman. [Offertory.] 1st pub. in the Sarum Hymnal, 1868, No. 292, and appointed as an "Offertory Hymn." Together with 2 st. as a "General Heading," and 2 st. as a "General Ending," it embodies two parts of 4 st. of 4 l., and a doxology. In the Hymnary, 1872, No. 522 it assumed the form of a single hymn, embracing the "General Heading," "Part i.," the 1st st. of the "General Ending," and the dox., thus omitting one stanza of the latter, and the whole of pt. 2. Some slight alterations are also introduced therein.

Almighty Father, let Thy love.

Almighty Father of mankind. M. Bruce. [Providence.] We attribute this hymn to M. Bruce on grounds stated in his Memoir in this work. It was written probably about 1764, and 1st pub. in J. Logan's Poems, 1781, No. 3, in 3 st. of 4 l. Its use is not extensive in G. Brit., but it is found in many of the American hymnals. Text from Logan in Dr. Grosart's Works of Michael Bruce, 1865.

Almighty Father! robed with light.

Almighty Father! Thou hast many a blessing.

Almighty God, be Thou our Guide.

[Security in God.]
Anon., in Holy Song for all Seasons, Lond., Bell & Daldy, 1869, No. 336, in 5 st. of 4 l.

Almighty God, Eternal Lord. [Before a Sermon.]
A cento mainly from hymns by C. Wesley as given in the We, H. Bk. 1780. The 1st st. is from “Come, O Thou all victorious Lord,” st. 1, the 2nd, from “Thou Son of God, Whose flaming eyes,” st. v., the 4th, from “Father of all in whom alone;” and the 3rd and 5th, possibly by the compiler. As the cento has not been traced to an earlier date than Cotterill’s Sel., 1810, No. 96, it was probably compiled by Cotterill from the We. H. Bk. To modern collections in Great Britain it is almost entirely unknown, but its use in America is somewhat extensive. The concluding line, “And faith be lost in sight,” anticipated Dr. Neale’s “Till hope be lost in sight,” in H. A. & M., 1875, No. 226, st. iv., and other hymnals. The history of the hymns from which this cento is compiled may be found under their respective first lines.

Almighty God, in humble prayer.
J. Montgomery. [For Wisdom.]
This hymn is in the “m. mss.” but undated. It was pub. in Montgomery’s Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 498, in 6 st. of 4 l. and entitled “Solomon’s Prayer for Wisdom.” It is repeated, without alteration, in his Original Hymns, 1833, No. 70. In modern collections it is usually given in an abbreviated form, as in Windle’s Metrical Psalter & Hymnal, 11, Harland’s Ch. Psalter, No. 199, the Amer. Sobb. H. Bk., &c.

Almighty God of love.
C. Wesley. [Missions.]
A cento composed of Nos. 1157, 1158, and 1159 of his Short Hymns, &c., 1762, vol. i. p. 391. In this form it was given in the We. H. Bk. 1780, and has been retained in all editions of that work. It has also passed into numerous collections, specially of the Methodist bodies, both in G. Brit. and America. Orig. in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ix. p. 469.

Almighty God, the pure and just.
E. Oster. [Lent.]
1st pub. in the Mist H. Book, 1838, No. 1, in 4 st. of 4 l. and again with slight variations in the Author’s Church and King, July 1837. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 631, it is subject to further alterations which are repeated in detail from Cooke & Denton’s Hymnal, 1853, No. 69, but with the omission of their doxology.

Almighty God, Thy Name I praise.
Dorothea A. Thrupp. [God the Father.]
Conributed to her Hymns for the Young (1st ed. in. o. c. 1830, 4th ed. Lond. 1836), No. 63, in 3 st. of 4 l. and entitled, “Praise to God for Mercies.” From thence it passed into MRS. Herbert Mayo’s Sel. of Hys. & Poetry, &c., Lond., E. Suter (1st ed. 1858, 4th ed. 1849), with the signature “D. A. T.” It is found in several collections for children, including the Ch. S. S. H. Bk., 1868, and others.
[W. T. B.]

Almighty God, Thy piercing eye,
I. Watts. [ Omniscience.]
1st pub. in his Divine Songs, 1715, in 6 st. of 4 l. and entitled, “The All-seeing God,” and again in all subsequent editions of the same work. It is given in various collections in Great Britain and America, principally in those for children, and sometimes in an abbreviated form. Orig. in the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 298. In one or two American collections it is attributed to Bedelone in error.

Almighty God, Thy sovereign power.
J. Julian. [Alms giving.]
Written for and 1st pub. in St. Mary’s Ch. S. S. H. Bk., Preston, Lancashire, 1874, in 5 st. of 4 l.

Almighty God, Thy word is cast.
J. Caseed. [After Sermon.]
Written about 1815, and 1st pub. in Cotterill’s Sel., 5th ed. 1819, No. 208, in 5 st. of 4 l., and given for use “After a Sermon” [s. mss.]. It was reprinted in Montgomery’s Christ. Psal., 1825, No. 252. From that date it grew in importance as a congregational hymn, until its use has become extensive in all English-speaking countries, in some cases with the omission of one or more stanzas, and in others, with the addition of a doxology. Two texts, purporting to be the original, are extant. The first is that of Cotterill as above, from which the hymn has been taken in a more or less correct form until 1802, when the second was given from the original ms. in Lord Selborne’s Bk. of Praise, 1862, p. 470, and Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 131. One of the best arrangements of the hymn is a slightly altered form of the latter in Thring’s Coll., 1882, No. 151.

Almighty God, to-night.
J. M. Neale. [Evening.]

Almighty God, whose only Son.
Sir H. W. Baker. [Missions.]
Contributed to the App. to H. A. & M., 1868, No. 357, in 7 st. of 4 l., and repeated in the revised edition of 1875, and other collections.

Almighty King, whose wondrous hand.
W. Cooper. [Grace and Providence.]
No. 81, Bk. iii., of the Olney Hymns, 1779, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled “Grace and Providence.” It has not attained to the position of many of Cowper’s hymns, and is found in a few collections only, including Martineau’s Hymns, &c., 1810 and 1873.

Almighty Lord and King. [God unchangeable.]
An anonymous hymn in Dr. Alexander’s Augustine H. Bk., 2nd ed. 1858.

Almighty Maker, God!
I. Watts. [Praise.]
1st pub. in his Horae Lyricae, 1706, in 11 st. of 4 l., and entitled “Sincere Praise.” In its complete form it is unknown to the collections, but centos differing in length and arrangement, but all opening with the first stanza, are found in numerous hymnals in G. Brit. and America.

Almighty Maker, Lord of all. [Holliness.]
This hymn is given in J. H. Thom’s Unitarian Hys., Chants & Anthems, 1858, No.
433, as from "Rees's Col," i.e. Kippis's Coll. of which Abraham Rees was one of the editors, 1755: No. 206, where it is given as from "Select Collection of 1756."

Almighty Ruler of the skies. I. Watts. [Ps. viii.] His l. m. parap. of v. 1, 2, of Ps. viii., 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, 1719, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Hosanna of the Children; or, Infants praising God." His explanation of the opening stanzas is given in a note thus:—"These two first verses are here paraphrased and explained by a history of the Children crying unto Christ, Matt. xxxi. 15, 16, where our Saviour cites and applies those words of the Psalmist."

Although not of the first importance, it might be utilized as a hymn for Palm Sunday. Its use is limited. The New Cong., copying from the Leeds H. Bk., 1833, omits st. iii. and v.

Almum flamen, vita mundi. [Whitsuntide.] This hymn is of unknown origin and date. It is in the Corolla Hymnorum, Cologne, 1806, p. 40. Daniel, ii. p. 386, gives it in 7 st. of 9 l., without note or comment. It is not known to be in use in any liturgical work. [W. A. S.]

Translation in C. U.:—

Lord of Eternal Sanctity. By E. Caswall, 1st pub. in his Masque of Mary and other Poems, 1858, in 7 st. of 10 l., and again in his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 131. In this form it is not in C. U., but a cento, beginning with st. ii., "Come Thou, who dost the soul endue" (Veni, Spiritus Creator), was compiled for the Hymnary, 1875, No. 329, and received the sanction of Mr. Caswall, shortly before his death (t. mss.). Another tr. not in C. U. is "Genial Spirit, earth's emotion," by Dr. Rynasten in his Occasional Hymns, 1862.

Alone! to land alone upon that shore. F. W. Faber. [Death.] Pub. in his Hymns, 1862, No. 148, in 10 st. of 6 l. From two it cent are in C. U., both beginning with the same first line as above, and altered throughout; the first being No. 6 in the Scottish Hymnal, 1871, and the second, No. 909, in the Bapt. Hymnal, 1879.

Altenburg, Johann Michael, b. at Alach, near Erfurt, on Trinity Sunday, 1584. After completing his studies he was for some time teacher and preceptor in Erfurt. In 1605 he was appointed pastor of Ilversgehegn and Marbach near Erfurt; in 1611, of Trochtelborn; and in 1621 of Gross-Sommern or Sommerda near Erfurt. In the troubles war he was forced, in 1631, to flee to Erfurt, and there, on the news of the victory of Leipzig, Sept. 17, 1631, he composed his best known hymn. He remained in Erfurt without a charge till, in 1637, he was appointed diaconus of the Augustine Church, and, in 1638, pastor of St. Andrew's Church. He d. at Erfurt February 12, 1640 (Koch, iii. 115-117; Allg. Deutsche Biog., i. p. 363, and x. p. 766—the latter saying he did not go to Erfurt till 1637). He was a good musician, and seems to have been the composer of the melodies rather than of the words of some of the hymns ascribed to him. Two of his hymns have been tr. into English, viz.:—

1. Aus Jakobs Stamm ein Stern sehr klar. [Christmas.] Included as No. 3 of his Christliche dice Beichte und andächtige neue Kirchen- und Haus-Gesänge, pt. i., Erfurt, 1820, in 3 st. of 5 l. According to Wetzel's A. H., vol. i., pt. v. p. 41, it was first pub. in J. Fürstner's Hohen Festtags-Schrölein, 1811. In the Une. L. S., 1851, No. 24 he has been tr. as "From Job's root, a star so clear," by Miss Manington, 1864, p. 13.

2. Versage nicht du Hauselein klein. [In Trouble.] Concerning the authorship of this hymn there are three main theories:—i. that it is by Gustavus Adolphus; ii. that the ideas are his and the diction that of his chaplain, Dr. Jacob Fabricius; and iii. that it is by Altenburg. In tracing out the hymn we find that:—

The oldest accessible form is in two pamphlets published shortly after the death of Gustavus Adolphus, Leipzig, x.v. but probably in the end of 1632 (Royal Libr., Berlin): and in Martin Lange's Blätter Sieg-Crone, Leipzig, 1633 (Town Library, Hamburg). In the Episcopon the hymn is entitled, "Königlicher Hymnus, den er in der Wohnung der Magens zeichnen Treffen imlichen zu Gott gesungen"; and in the Sieg-Crone, p. 73, "Der S. König. Mayt. zu Schweden Lied, der von der Wur Schlauch gesungen.

In both cases there are 3 st.:—

i. Versage nicht, du Hauslein klein.
ii. Träste dich dees, dass deine Sach.

But God gieb in deis dein Gnad above, and—

iv. Ach Gott gieb in deis dein Gnad

v. Hillfluff dass wir nach deinem Wort.

No author's name is given. In the Bayreuth G. B., 1664, p. 232, are marked as an addition by Dr. Samuel Zehner; and by J. C. Olearius in his Lieder-Schatz, 1765, p. 141, as written in 1633 (1633?), when the Crets had partially burnt Schlesiengau, where Zehner was then superintendent.

The third form of importance is that given in Jerome Weber's Leipzig G. B., 1636, p. 651, where it is entitled "A soul- relieving hymn of Consolation upon the watchword—God with us—used by the Evangelical army in the battle of Leipzig, 7th Sept., 1631, composed by M. Johan Altenburg, pastor at Alachen, in his Dringen," (i.e. Sämmera in Thuringia.) It is in 5 st., of which st. i.-iii., are the same as the 1633, and are marked at Altenburg. St. iv., v., iv.

iv. Drifmey getreus des kleinen Heer

v. Amen, das hillf Herr Jesu Christ.

are marked "liturantiumentum," as such is the form in C. U. as in the Berlin G. L. S. ed. 1863, No. 1242.

In favour of Altenburg there is the explicit declaration of the Leipzig G. B., 1634, followed by most subsequent writers. The idea that the hymn was by Gustavus Adolphus seems to have no other foundation than that, in many of the old hymn-books it was called Gustavus Adolphus's Battle Hymn. The theory that the ideas were communicated by the King to his chaplain, Fabricius, after the battle of Leipzig, and by Fabricius, while he was maintained his title of Altenburg's Hymnologische Forschungen, 1832, pt. ii. pp. 55-98, but rests on very slender evidence. In Koch, v. 134-141, there is a copy of the original tune and striking words, etc. If, then, we must deny to the hymn Albert Knapp's characterization of it as "a little feather from the eagle wing of the philosophers," so much the more its original title as his "Swan Song" remains true. It was on the morning of the 2. Nov. 1632, that the Cret's army, under the dragon and the evangelical under Gustavus Adolphus stood over against each other at Lützen ready to strike. As the morning dawned Gustavus Adolphus summoned his Court preacher Fabricius, and commanded him, as also the other chaplains of all the other regiments, to hold a service of prayer. During this service the whole host sung the pius king's battle hymn.

"Versage nicht, du Hauslein klein."
It was his knees and prayed fervently. Meanwhile, a thick mist had descended on the field so that nothing could be distinguished. When the host had now been set in battle array he gave them as a sign for the fight the saying, "God with us," mounted his horse, drew his sword, and rode along the lines of the army to encourage the soldiers for the battle.

First, however, he commanded the tunes Ecce Rawy and Ec waUd was teQo1 grunmg lieu to be played by the kettle-drums, trumpets, and the soldiers joined as with one voice. The mist now began to disappear, and the sun shone through. "Then, after a short prayer, he cried out: "Now will we set to, please God," and immediately after, very loud, “Jesus, Jesus, help and today for the honor of Thy Holy Name." Then he attacked the enemy at full speed, defended only by a leathern gorget. "God is my banner," he said to the servant who wished to put on his cloak and aiding armor. About 11 o'clock in the evening the fatal bullet struck him, and he sank, dying, from his horse, with the words, "My God, my God!" Till twilight came on the fight raged, and was doubtful. But at length the Evangelical host obtained the victory, as it had prophetically sung at dawn.

This hymn has ever been a favourite in Germany, was sung in the house of P. J. Spener every Sunday afternoon, and of late years has been greatly used at meetings of the Gustavus Adolphus Union—an association for the help of Protestant Churches in Roman Catholic countries. In translations it has passed into many English and American collections.

Althus Proctor, Vetuslius. St. Columbia. This very curious hymn was first made known to modern scholars by the late Dr. J. H. Todd, in Fear, ii, p. 205 of the Liber Hymnorum edited by him in 1869 for the Irish Archceological and Celtic Society, where it is given with a prose translation by the editor. A physical version of this by Dr. W. MucllLaine is given in his Lyra Hibemica Sacra, Belfast, 1875, commencing, "The Father exalted, solemn of days, unbegetten," and the Latin text is reprinted in the Appr. thereto. In 1882 the Marquess of Bute issued a prose version, together with the original text and valuable notes thereon as The Altus of S. Columbia, edited with Prose Paraphrase and Notes by John, Marquess of Bute, Edinb. Blackwood, 1882.

Am I a soldier of the Cross? I. Watts. [Holy Fortitude.] Appended to his Sermons, pub. in 1721-24, in 3 vols., vol. iii., and intended to accompany a sermon on 1 Cor. xvi. 13. It is in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Holy Fortitude." In Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., No. 571, st. vi. is omitted, but the rest are unaltered. Orig. full text in all editions of Watts's Works. In the New Cony. No. 623, it is given in an abbreviated and slightly altered form as — "Are see the soldiers of the Cross?" This is also found in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, and other collections. It dates as early as the Leeds H. Bk., 1853. The American use of this hymn is extensive.

Amazing grace, how sweet the sound. J. Newton. [Grace.] No. 41, Bk. i. of the Olney Hymn., 1779, in 6 st. of 4 l., entitled "Faith's Review and Expectation," and based upon i. Chron. xvii. 16, 17. In G. Brit. it is unknown to modern collections, but in America its use is extensive. It is far from being a good example of Newton's work.

Ambrosius (St. Ambrose), second son and third child of Ambrosius, Prefect of the Gauls, was b. at Lyons, Arles, or Treves—probably the last—in 340 A.D. On the death of his father in 353 his mother removed to Rome, with her three children. Ambrose went through the usual course of education, attaining considerable proficiency in Greek; and then entered the profession which his elder brother Satyrus had chosen, that of the law. In this he so distinguished himself that, after practising in the court of Probus, the Praetorian Prefect of Italy, he was, in 374, appointed Consul of Liguria and Aemilia. This office necessitated his residence in Milan. Not many months after, Auxentius, bishop of Milan, who had joined the Arian party, died; and much was felt to depend upon the person appointed as his successor. The church in which the election was held was so filled with excited people that the Consul found it necessary to take steps for preserving the peace, and himself exhorted them to peace and order: when a voice suddenly exclaimed, "Ambrose is Bishop," and the cry was taken up on all sides. He was compelled to accept the post, though still only a catechumen; was forthwith baptized, and in a week more consecrated Bishop, Dec. 7, 374. The death of the Emperor Valentinian I, in 375, brought him into collision with Justina, Valentinian's second wife, an adherent of the Arian party: Ambrose was supported by Gratian, the elder son of Valentinian, and by Theodosius, whom Gratian in 379 associated with himself in the empire. Gratian was defeated in battle by a confederate of Maximus, and Ambrose was sent to treat with the usurper, a piece of diplomacy in which he was fairly successful. He found himself, however, left to carry on the contest with the Arians and the Empress almost alone. He and the faithful gallantly defended the churches which the heretics attempted to seize. Justina was foiled; and the advance of Maximus on Milan led her to flight, and eventually to her death in 383. He was probably the year before (387), that Ambrose received into the Church by baptism his great scholar Augustine, once a Manichean heretic. Theodosius was now virtually head of the Roman empire, his colleague Valentinian II., Justina's son, being a youth of only 17. In the early part of 390 the news of a riot at Thessalonica, brought to him at Milan, caused him to give a hasty order for a general massacre at that city, and his command was but too faithfully obeyed. On his presenting himself a few days after at the door of the principal church in Milan, he was met by Ambrose, who refused him entrance till he should have done penance for his crime. It was not till Christmas, eight months after, that the Emperor declared his penitence, and was received into communion again by the Bishop. Valentinian was murdered by Arbogastus, a Frank general, in 392. The murder and his puppet emperor Eugenius were defeated by Theodosius in 394. But the fatigue of the campaign told on the Emperor, and he died the following year. Ambrose preached his funeral sermon, as he had done that of Valentinian. The loss of these two friends and supporters was a severe blow to Ambrose: two unquiet years passed, and then, worn with labours and anxieties, he himself rested from his labours on Easter Eve, 397. It was the 4th of April, and on that day the great Bishop of Milan is remembered by the Western Church, but Rome commemorates his consecration only, Dec. 7th. Great he was indeed, as a scholar, an organizer, a statesman: still greater as a theologian, the earnest and brilliant defender of the Catholic faith against the Arians of the West, just as Athanasius (whose name, one cannot but remark, is the same as his in meaning) was its champion against those of the East. We are now mainly concerned with him as musician and poet, "the father of Church song" as he is called by Grimm. He introduced from the East the practice of antiphonal chanting, and began the task, which St. Gregory completed, of systematizing the music of the Church. As a writer of sacred poetry he is remarkable for depth and severity. He does not warm with his subject, like Adam of St. Victor, or St. Bernard. We feel," says Abp. Trench, "as though there were a certain coldness in his hymns, an aloofness of the author from his subject." A large number of hymns has been attributed to his pen; Daniel gives no fewer than 92 called Ambrosian. Of these the majority (including one on himself) cannot possibly be his; there is more or less doubt about the rest. The authorities on the subject are the Benedicentiae ed. of his works, the Pauline and the Pauline ed. of his hymns, and the Theaurus Hymnologicus, of Daniel. The Benedicentiae editors give 12 hymns as asassignable to him, as follows:

1. Asterna Christi munera.
2. Aeterne rerum Conditor.
3. Consors Paterni lumina.
4. Deus Creator omnium.
5. Fiat porta Christi pervia.
6. Illuminans Altissimus.
7. In medio turris surgit hora terra.
8. O Lux Beata Trinitas.
10. Sommo refectis artibus.
11. Splendor Paternae gloriae.
12. Veni Redemptor gentium.

Histories of these hymns, together with details of the into English, are given in this work, and may be found under their respective first lines. The Bolandists and Daniel are inclined to attribute to St. Ambrose a hymn, Gratias tibi Jesu nucos, on the finding of the relics of SS. Gervasius and Protasius. These, we know, were discovered in 386, and it is by no means unlikely that the bishop should have commemorated in verse an event which he announces by letter to his sister Marcellina with so much satisfaction, not to say exultation.

A beautiful tradition makes the Te Deum laudamus to have been composed under inspiration, and recited alternately, by SS. Ambrose and Augustine immediately after the baptism of the latter in 387. It should, however, be noticed that the story rests upon a passage which there is every reason to consider spurious, in the Chronicon Dacius, Bp. of Milan in 550. There is no hint of such an occurrence in the Confessiof of St. Augustine, nor in Paulinus' life of St. Ambrose, American to all that God hath said.

C. Wesley. [Divine Holiness, and Human Depravity.] Appeared in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1742, in 36 st. of 4 L, in three parts, and entitled "Unto the Angel of the Church of the Laodiceans." In 1780, J. Wesley compiled the following centes therefor from the Wes. H. Bk.:

2. O let us own works forsake. Composed of st. iii, viii, ix, x of Part ii.

3. Saviour of all, to Thee we bow. Composed of st. l-xvi. of Part iii.

American Hymnody. Psalmody rather than Hymnody was the usage of America prior to 1800. The famous Bay Psalm Book, or New England Version of 1640, published at Cambridge, New England, by Stephen Day, was the first volume printed in those Colonies; and from its rarity the few extant copies of the first edition are very highly valued. Isaiah Thomas, the founder of the American Antiquarian Society, supposed that "not less than seventy editions were printed in Boston, London, and Edinburgh." The revision of that version by Thomas Prince in 1757 met with less favour (and is scarcer) than the original, which about that time began to be superseded by the Version of Tate & Brady. The Tate & Brady Version, with Supplement of Hymns, mostly by Watts, were printed at Boston between 1750 and 1800. Towards the end of the century numerous editions of Watts's Psalms and Hymns appeared, chiefly in New England, and continued to appear after the publication of the amended versions of Watts's Psalms, by Joel Barlow, in 1785, and Timothy Dwight, in 1800. Hymn-compiling began after the Revolution, and its course can best be followed under the headings of the several religious bodies.

1. Protestant Episcopal Church. The Episcopal Church issued, in 1789, the Version of Tate & Brady with twenty-seven hymns, to which thirty more were added in 1803. These were superseded by an abridged version of the Psalms, mostly from Tate & Brady, in 1833, and a Collection of Hymns, also by Tate & Brady, published anonymously in 1827. The latter, entitled II. of the Prot. Episc. Ch. at forth in General Convention in the years 1829, 1808, and 1826, and commonly known as the Prayer-Book Collection, except for its originals, hardly deserved the repute it long enjoyed. It continued to be used exclusively in the Sunday services for 35 years, and was bound up with the Prayer Book till 1871.

After 1831, in some dioceses Hymns Ancient and Modern, or one or two Selections from it or other sources, were allowed. In 1856, sixty-six Additional Hymns were put forth; and in 1871 the present Hymnal. This, although a great advance upon the Prayer Bk. Collection of 1826, does not compare favourably with the leading Anglican books of to-day. It was slightly revised, and not materially improved, in 1874. The voluntary system of the English Church with regard to Hymnody has unfortunately not been permitted to her American daughter, who is in consequence left behind in the march of scholarship, activity, and taste. Of private collections which might be used at week-night services, &c., we may mention Dr. C. W. Andrews's Church Hymns, of 1844 and 1857, and Hymns for Church and Home, 1859-60. The latter did much in preparing the way for the Hymnal of 1871.

II. Presbyterian.-This body, in common with the Congregationalists, for a long time used Watts and Brady. Their first official Psalms and Hymns appeared in 1828-29, and amended editions of it in 1830-1834, and in 1843. The Church Psalms of 1843, with the Supplement of 1847, was long the chief manual of the New School body. Among prominent extant collections, the Presbyterian Hymnal, of 1874, is to be distinguished from the inferior Hymnal of the Presbyterian Church of 1867. Of books not put forth by authority, nor strictly denominational, and which have been used by Congregationalists and others as well as by Presbyterian, Leavitt's Christian Lyre of 1820-1 contained originals, and is of historic importance. The same is true of Thomas Hastings's Spiritual Songs, 1831, 2, 3, in which the hymns of the three leading American writers—Hastings, Hay Palmer, and S. F. Smith—first appeared. Dr. C. S. Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1843, and his Spiritual Songs, 1878, aim rather at popular usefulness than literary accuracy, and have won great success. On the other hand, The Sacrifice of Praise, 1863, was carefully edited with notes. The late Dr. E. F. Hatfield, one of the leading hymnological scholars of America, produced in The Church Hymn Book, 1872, a work exceptionally trustworthy for texts, dates, and ascriptions of authorship. No less valuable in these respects is Hymns & Songs of Praise, published in 1874 by Bros. Hitchcock, Eddy, and Schauff; these three eminent compilers having expended on it much care, skill, and taste. These two books, though not so widely circulated as some others, are essential to every hymnic library.

III. Congregationalists.—The first Congregational compilation which shewed thought and research was the Hartford Selection of 1720—by Dr. Benjamin Prince, a work of unusual merit for its day. It contained many originals, as did also Nettleton's Village Hymns, 1824, which was long and widely used, and exerted an influence of considerable importance. Its Missionary Hymns, then a new feature, were numerous, and drawn largely from Hymns for the Monthly Concert, Andover, 1823, an important but almost unknown tract by L. Bacon (q. v.), Worcester’s Watts’s, and Select Hymns, 1823, long held a prominent place. So did Mason and Greene’s Church Psalmody, 1831. Bacon’s Supplement to Dwight, 1835, kept Dwight’s Watts in use till the Connecticut Congregational Psalms and Hymns appeared in 1845. Abner Jones compiled Melodies of the Church in 1832, and his son Darius E. Jones, Temple Melodies, in 1851, and Songs of the New Life, 1869. Mr. H. W. Beecher’s Plymouth Collection, 1855, represented the original mind of its composer, and has many points of excellence. The Sabbath Hymn Book, 1858, prepared by Professors Park and Phelps of Andover, though careless in authorship and texts, was the most attractive and valuable of American hymnals to its date. Elias Nason’s Congregational Hymn Book, 1857, and sundry others of lesser note, appeared in Boston. The year 1880 marks the reaction from the excessive bulk of 1200 to 1500 hymns to about 600 in the Hymn Book of the Rev. H. Richards’s Songs of Christian Praise, and Hall and Lazar’s Eclectic Hymnal. The last named shows a new departure; no less in its large use of recent material and following of English models, than in the admirable carelessness of its editing, and in a biographical index, covering thirty-three double columns, of authors, translators, and composers. The index is based upon that compiled by Major Crawford and the Rev. J. A. Eberle for the Irish Ch. Hymnal, 1876.

IV. Baptists.—The Baptists soon abandoned the exclusive use of Psalms, and commenced the compilation of independent collections of hymns. A Philadelphia Collection of theirs, published in 1790, cites one of Newport, Rhode Island, still earlier. Of Joshua Smith’s Divine Hymn, a ninth edition bears date 1798. In New York, too, John Stanford issued a collection of 200, chiefly from Rippon, in 1792, and gave authors’ names. The Boston Collection, 1808, Parkinson’s, 1809–17, and Macdougal’s, 1815, were of note, and Winchell’s Arrangement of Watts, with Supplement, 1817–32, had a great sale. The Psalmist by Baron Stow and S. F. Smith, published in 1843, was an exemplary work, and met with general acceptance throughout the north, as did Manty’s Baptist Psalmody, 1850, in the south. The Baptist Harp, 1849, and Devotional Hymnal of 1864, are of some importance. A great many 32mos. and 48mos. of revivalistic character—the Virginia Selection, Doer Selection, Mercer’s Chester, &c.—have been in use. Of more sober type is Linsley and Davis’s Select Hymns, 1836. The leading books to-day are the Baptist Hymn Book, Praise Book, and the Service of Song, all of 1871. In addition to purely Baptist collections, editions of the chief Congregational Collections for the use of Baptists have had an extensive sale. These include the Church Psalmody of Mason and Greene, the Plymouth Collection of H. W. Beecher, and The Sabbath Hymn Book of Park and Phelps. Collections by Free Will Baptists appeared in 1832 and 1838, and by The Old School, or Primitive Baptists in 1836 and 1838. The older of the two Baptist sects calling themselves Chris-TANS, made a large beginning in 1805 with the collection of Elias Smith and Abner Jones. Of their later collections the most noteworthy is the Christian Hymn Book, Boston, 1863. The other body of this name has its strength in the South and West. It has used a book compiled by its founder, Alexander Campbell, and another published at Dayton, Ohio.

V. Methodists.—American Methodists used at first a Pocket Hymn Book (a reprint of that by Spence, which was attacked by J. W. West in the 10th of which Hymns appeared in 1790, and the 27th in 1802. In 1802 it was revised by Coke and Asbury. The latter issued a Supplement to it in 1810. In 1836 an official book, excluding all others for Sunday services, was issued, and another in 1849. These were displaced by the Methodist Hymnal, 1878. The Southern Methodist Episcopal Hymns of 1847 took less liberties with the texts, and adhered more closely to John Newton’s and Wesley’s general views in the one Northern successor. The Methodist Protestant body has had three hymn-books, published respectively in 1837, 1859, and 1871. The Wesleyan Methodists and the African Methodists also use compilations of their own. Many books, Methodist in character if not in name, and adapted to camp-meetings and the like, came out after the beginning of the century and later, containing excursions, not a few of which had certain rude and tervid elements of poetic merit. Eminent among these was a Baltimore Collection of about 1800, several pieces from which are still in use. This type is now represented by the numerous Gospel Songs, &c., of America, and Sacred Songs and Solos (Sankey) in England, which are indeed spiritual songs, rather than hymns; having immense temporary popularity and influence, but are rather Joshua’s gourds than plants of permanent standing in the song-garden. The splendid provision, both in quantity and quality, made by Charles Wesley, seems, here as in England, to have deterred those who followed his views and methods from attempting to produce serious hymns after his pattern in any considerable measure.

VI. Universalists.—The Universalists have been very active, and their activity began very early. In 1792 they issued two collections, that of Richards (q. v.) and Lane, in Boston, and one in Philadelphia. In 1808 appeared 415 Hymns composed by different authors (Hosea Bullon, Abner Kneeland, and four others) at the request of the General Convention of Universalists, an inferior work, as works produced under such circumstances usually are. Among later books are those of Bullon and Turner, 1821; and R. Stretcher, 1829: Hosea Bullon, second collection, 1837; Adams & Chapman, Christian Devotion, 1846; J. G. Adams, 1861; and Prayers and Hymns, 1868. All these contain originals.

VII. Unitarians.—The Unitarians have been still more prolific in compiling, and in composing nearly as much so, but not in the same perfunctory way, and with far greater success. Possessing a large share of the best blood and brain in the most cultivated section of
AMERICAN HYMNODY

America, they exhibit a long array of respectable hymnists whose effusions have often won the acceptance of other bodies, and must be largely represented in these pages. Special service has been done at home by Dr. A. P. Putnam, of Brooklyn, whose admirable Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith (1875), through a large volume, does not exhaust the subject, but is to be supplemented by another. Amongst their most notable collections, usually from Boston, are Belknap's, 1795; Sewall's (New York), 1827; Greenwood's, 1830-35; that of the Cheshire Association (Conn.), 1844; Dr. J. F. Clarke's, 1844-55; Drs. Hodge & Huntington's, 1855; S. Longfellow and S. Johnson's Book of Hymns, 1844-48, and Hymns of the Spirit, 1861; and the Unitarian Hymn Book, 1829. The last is the most widely used, but is by no means the one of most marked character, careful editing, or general literary merit.

VIII. Roman Catholic.—The Roman Catholic Church in the United States has done nothing worthy of mention, unless the reprint, with additions, of E. Caswall's Lyra Catholica of 1849 be regarded as a selection for congregational purposes.

IX. Lutherans.—Such Lutherans as in the latter part of the 18th cent. used the English tongue were supplied by the pious efforts of Dr. Kuhn, 1763, of Strobeck, 1797, and of Williston, 1806; and later by the various collections of the Tennessee, Ohio, and General Synods; by those of the New York Ministerium 1814-34; and by the Ministerium of Pennsylvania, 1865. The latter, prepared with unusual care, was revised in 1868 as the Church Book of the General Council.

X. Reformed Dutch.—The Reformed Dutch, now the "Reformed," body, had their own version of the Psalms as early as 1707, and issued successive collections of Psalms and Hymns, in 1789, 1814, 1831, and 1850. These were superseded and greatly improved upon by their Hymns of the Church, 1869.

XI. German Reformed.—This body, which in common with the Reformed Dutch has of late dropped from its title all that indicated its distinctive origin, has produced or included one or two hymnists, but no collection of note.

XII. The productions of several small denominations—Adventists, United Brethren, &c.—offer no special claim to notice beyond the fact that the collections of the Moravians are mainly based upon those of England; and that those of Mormons might fill a chapter as literary curiosities, but cannot be considered here.

XIII. Comparatively few American hymnists have collected their verses in book form. Thus, in many cases, the only way, and that an insecure one, of indicating the original text of any hymn is by referring to the place of first publication so far as known. The number of such authors of hymns, and it may be added, of compilers, is far greater than would be supposed by those who have not carefully studied the subject, and licterto it has been inadequately treated. C. D. Cleveland's Lyra Sacra Americana, 1868, by no means covers the ground. This is the more to be regretted, as that work has become the text book for the higher American hymnody of the hymnal compilers of Great Britain. Mr. Rider's Lyra Americana is but a meagre and random selection. In the present work it is designed to mention, though with inevitable baldness and brevity, all writers and hymns that have made any extended mark, including some lyrics, out of a number unduly large, that unfortunately are anonymous. The books chiefly, though by no means exclusively, taken as a basis for this survey, are the following; together with the number of hymns in each, and the number embraced in each total of hymns of a purely American origin, the percentage being about one in seven.

XIV. The English use of American hymns has been, until recent years, very limited, and mainly confined to the older collections of the English Nonconformists, and the Unitarian Hymnals. In the two hundred and fifty hymns of the higher order of merit in American hymnody, which are now in common use in Great Britain, are found choice selections from all the leading denominations in the States, and ranging from the earliest productions of Presbyter Davies to the latest of Dr. Bay Palmer and Bishop Cox. The marked success which has attended the few translations from the Latin and German that have been embodied in English Hymnals attests their merit, and indicates a wealth of hymnic power in our midst which should be more fully developed and utilized. In Great Britain the noblest forms of American Hymnody are known to the few; whilst the Gospel Songs of our reviviscial schools are the mainstay of similar efforts in the mother country. Our review is materially increased by this extensive use of the ephemeral form of our hymnody; success compelling attention where literary merit has failed to do so.

XV. The alphabetical arrangement required by a Dictionary precludes that grouping of the American work which would best set forth its nature and extent. In this Dictionary the hymns are annotated under their respective author's names. To assist, however, in ascertaining the full extent of American Hymnology, the subjuncted synopsis, arranged in Denominational and Chronological order, has been compiled:—

To any one desirous of grasping the whole subject of American Hymnody, the foregoing synopsis will be of value. By reading the various articles in the chronological order given, the rise and growth of the hymnological literature of the various denominations may be determined, and the relative importance of each writer can be ascertained.

XVI. In conclusion I would add that nothing like an adequate survey of the field of American Hymnody has been attempted, within my knowledge, until now. I have aimed to mention every hymn of native origin which has come into at all extended use, and to give some account of the writer of each. The material has been gathered from all quarters, and, of course, under difficulties. I cannot hope to have attained absolute accuracy or completeness, though the effort in their direction has been strenuous. The limits assigned to the American portion of this Dictionary necessitated severe compression, and gave room for little beyond the dryest facts, names, dates, titles, and first lines. But these annotations when taken together can hardly have failed to notice any author or hymn whose merit has been generally or widely recognized; and they will make it apparent that the subject is larger than would be supposed by those by whom it has not been studied.

AMPLEST GRACE

Amidst the mighty, where is he.

John Morison. [Cross and Consolation.] 1st appeared as No. 29 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, as a version of Lam. iii. 37-40, in 4 st. of 4 lines. The only variation in the public worship edition issued in that year by the Ch. of Scotland and still in use is from pine to clothes in st. ii., 1, 2. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (q.v.) ascribed to Morison. From the 1781 it has passed into a few modern hymnals, and is included as No. 286 in Kennedy, 1865, slightly altered. [J. M.]

Amidst Thy wrath, remember love.

I. Watts. [Ps. xxxviii.] 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, 1719, in 10 st. of 4 l., with the title "Guilt of Conscience and Relief; or Repentance and Prayer for Pardon and Health." Various arrangements of stanzas are given in modern hymnals, no collection repeating it in its full form. In America it is generally known as "Amid Thy wrath," &c.

Amidst us our Beloved stands.

C. H. Spurgeon. [Holy Communion.] Written for and 1st pub. in his O. O. H. Bk. 1866. It is in one or two American collections.

Amilie Juliane. [Emilie Juliane.]

Among the deepest shades of night.

Ann Gilbert, née Taylor. [A Child's Hymn.] Appeared in Hymns for Infant Minds, by J. and A. Taylor, 1810, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Thou God seest me." It is found in various collections for children. Orig. text in Stevenson's H. for Ch. and Home, with "to hell" for "in hell," st. iv., l., 1. It is sometimes given as "Amongst the deepest shades."

Amplest grace with Thee I find.

A. M. Toplady. [Christmas.] 1st pub. in his Poems on Sacred Subjects. Dublin, 1759, pp. 73-4, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "On the Birth of Christ." Although not in C. U. in G. Britain, it has passed into a few American collections, and usually in an abbreviated form. Orig. text in Selwyn's reprint of Toplady's P. Works, Lond., 1860.

[W. T. B.]
'Αναστάσεως ήμέρα. This is the first of eight Odes which form the great hymn commonly known as "The Golden Canon, or The Queen of Canons," of St. John of Damascus. The Odes alternate with those of St. Cosmas in the Greek Office for Easter Day in the Pentecostarion, and each is sung in order in the service as appointed therein. The date of its composition was probably the middle of the eighth century. St. John having died about A.D. 780. The design of the series of Odes which constitute the Canon is to set forth the fact of the Resurrection, its fulfilment of ancient types and figures and prophecies, and the benefits which it has brought to mankind: out of which arises the call for praise and thanksgiving. This is accomplished in the following manner:—

Ode I. The fact of the Resurrection; a new Passover; therefore rejoice. 11. This is the New River from the rock: and the New Light. 1v. This is the Salvation seen by Habakkuk, the male that opens the womb, the yearling Lamb, the Antitype of the law. 2. Here are praises, irising praises, not ointments; haste to meet the Bridegroom. vi. He has broken from Hades, and with it has brought freedom to man, vii. He came down from the pure and fountain-like Three, the Holy Women found Him, therefore keep the Festival-viii. Yea, on this morning of praise, taste the vine's new fruit, and let the Festival be from this morning of praise Him, thou New Jerusalem. He is ours to the end; we therefore praise Thee, "O Christ, our Pascha."

Although a complete Greek Canon consists of nine Odes, only eight are given in this Canon for Easter, and in other Canons of the great Festivals. By a rigid rule the Odes must follow the order and keynote of nine Scripture Canticles, one, for example, being drawn for the morning, and another Jonah's prayer. No. ii. Canticle is of a severe and threatening character, and is therefore omitted from Festival Canons. Hence the omission of an Ode based thereupon in this Canon for Easter; and why (as in the Canon for Christmas Day) Ode ii. is also missing. (See Greek Hymnody, § xvi. 11, and Χριστός γεννάται for the series of Canticles.)

The complete Office, as sung in the Greek Church every Easter Day, was included by Dr. Littledale in his Offices from the Service Books of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, pp. 86-224. The Canon is also found in the Abbé Migne's Patrologia, tom. xcv. p. 839. Dr. Neale introduces his tr. in his Hymns of the Eastern Church with the quotation of a most striking and eloquent description of an Easter morning in Athens, when, with great rejoicing, this Canon is sung:

"As midnight approached, the Archbishop, with his priests, accompanied by the King and Queen, left the church, and stationed themselves on the platform, which was raised considerably from the ground, so that they were distinctly seen by the people. Everyone now remained in breathless expectation, holding their unlighted taper in readiness when the glad moment should arrive, while the priests still continued murmuring their melancholy chant in a low hall-whisper. Suddenly a single report of a cannon announced that twelve o'clock had struck, and that Easter day had begun; then the old Archbishop, elevating the cross, exclaimed in a loud exulting tone: "Χριστος ανεστη, Χριστος εστιν!" and instantly every single individual of all that host toiled with countenance broken through and dispelled for ever the intense and mournful silence which they had maintained so long, with one spontaneous shout of indescribable joy and triumph, "Christ is risen! Christ is risen!" At the same moment, the oppressive darkness was succeeded by a blaze of light from thousands of torches, which, communicating one to another, seemed to send streams of fire in all directions, rendering the minutest objects distinctly visible, and casting the most vivid glow on the expressive faces, full of exultation, of the rejoicing crowd; bands of music struck up their gayest strains: the roll of the drum through the town, and further on the pealing of the cannon announced far and near these welcome tidings of great joy: while from hill and plain, from the seashore and the far olive grove, rocket after rocket ascending to the clear sky, answered back with their mute eloquence, that Christ is risen indeed, and told of the angels whoforetold repeating those blessed words, and other hearts that leap for joy; everywhere men clasped each other's hands, and congratulated one another, and embraced: the place was illuminated with delight, as though to each one separately some wonderful happiness had been proclaimed;—and so in truth it was,—and all the while, rising above the mingling of many sounds, each one of which was a sound of gladness, the aged priests were distinctly heard chanting forth a glorious old hymn of victory in tones so loud and clear, that they seemed to have regained their youth and strength to tell the world how 'Christ is risen from the dead, having triumphed death beneath His feet, and henceforth the tomb' had everlasting life.'"

Mr. Hatherley, in his annotated and musical edition of the Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1882, has pointed out that this writer was wrong in regarding this Canon as the "glorious old hymn of victory." The glorious old hymn in one stanza is: Χριστάνι ανάστησι εκ νεκρών (Littledale, p. 87), which Dr. Littledale has rendered:

"Christ has risen from the dead, Death by death hath done He tread, And on those within the tombs He bestoweth life." (p. 210.)

It is after this has been repeated several times, and certain ceremonies are performed, that the great Canon of St. John of Damascus is sung. The eight Odes of this Canon, the first of which has taken a permanent position in the hymnals of most English-speaking countries, are:—

Ode i. 'Αναστάσεως ήμέρα. 'Τις της Ημέρας της Επανάστασης. By J. M. Neale in Hymns of the E. Church, 1862, p. 42, in 3 st. of 8 l. (3rd ed. p. 306) as the First pub. as a hymn for congregational use in the Parish Hymn Book, 1863, No. 52, beginning, "The Day of Resurrection." From that date it grew in general esteem and has been extensively adopted, sometimes with the opening line as above, and again as by Dr. Neale. Orig. tr. in H. E. Church, p. 42. Blank verse tr. in Dr. Littledale's Offices, &c., p. 211. The break in the refrain, st. iii., is copied from the original.

Ode iii. Δείξτε πόμα νίκης. Come and let us drink of that New River. By J. M. Neale, from his Hymns of the E. Ch., p. 44; also blank verse tr. in Dr. Littledale's Offices, &c., of the H. E. Ch., p. 212.

Ode iv. 'Εις τῆς θέας φωλαξίαν. Stand on thy watch-tower, Habakkuk the prophet. By J. M. Neale, Hymns of the E. Church, p. 45; also blank verse tr. in Littledale's Offices, &c., p. 213.

Ode v. Ὅρθρωσιμών ὑπὸν Βασίλειον. Let us rise in early morning. By J. M. Neale, from Hymns of the E. Church, p. 46; also blank verse tr. in Littledale's Offices, p. 214. Of Dr. Neale's tr., st. i.-iii. are given as No. 266 in Willing's bk. of Common Prayer, 1872.

Ode vi. Καταρακάς έν τοις καταρακτίοις. Into the dim earth's lowest parts descending. By J.
And are we yet 63

And am I born to die? [C. Wesley. [Death and Eternity.] This hymn, similar in character to the above, appeared in the same work—Hymns for Children, 1763, in 6 st. of 6 l. In 1780 it was included in the Wes. H. Bk., and from there it has passed into all the collections of the Methodist bodies, and several others, in G. Britain and America. Stevenson gives some interesting details of circumstances attending the singing of this hymn, in his Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 54. Orig. text in P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868–72, vol. vi. p. 432.

And are we now brought near to God? P. Doddridge. [Nearness to God.] In the “p. sec.” this hymn is undated, and the text differs from that pub. by J. Orton in Doddridge’s Hymns, 1755, but whether the alterations were by Doddridge or Orton cannot be determined. The hymn is in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled, “Nearness to God thro’ Christ.” In 1809, it was republished by J. Doddridge Humphreys, in Scripture Hymns, by the Rev. Philip Doddridge, D.D., new and corrected ed. The hymn in full is not in C. U.; but a cento, composed of 2 st. i., ii. of the 1755 text, and two additional stanzas, based upon Doddridge’s hymn, “High let us swell our tuneful notes” (q.v.), is in somewhat extensive use in America. It appeared in the Amer. Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, No. 95, and from thence passed into later hymnals, including the Hymnal of the Prot. Episco. Church, 1871.

And are we wretched yet alive? I. Watts. [Lent.] This somewhat uncommon and strongly worded hymn has passed out of use in G. Britain, but is still found in several modern American hymn-books of importance. It appeared in Watts’s Hys. and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. ii., No. 103, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled, “Repentance flowing from the patience of God.”

Ancient of ages! humbly bent before Thee. Sir J. Bowring. [Mission.] A short hymn on behalf of missions, of more than usual merit. It appeared in his Hymns, 1825, in 2 st. of 7 l. In Miss Courtault’s Unitarian Ps., Hys. and Anthems, Lond., 1860, it is given as No. 16.

And am I born to die? C. Wesley. [Death and Eternity.] 1st pub. in his Hymns for Children, 1763, No. 59, in 6 st. of 8 l. J. Wesley included it in the 1780 ed. of the Wes. H. Bk. and it is retained in the revised ed. of 1875. From the Wes. H. Bk. it has passed into numerous hymnals both in G. Britain and America, and sometimes in an abbreviated form. Orig. text, P. Works, 1808–72, vol. vi. p. 425.

And am I only born to die? [C. Wesley. [Death and Eternity.] This hymn, similar to the above, appeared in the same work—Hymns for Children, 1763, in 6 st. of 6 l. In 1780 it was included in the Wes. H. Bk., and from there it has passed into all the collections of the Methodist bodies, and several others, in G. Britain and America. Stevenson gives some interesting details of circumstances attending the singing of this hymn, in his Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 54. Orig. text in P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868–72, vol. vi. p. 432.

And are we joys so quickly fled? C. Wesley. [Christ walking on the sea.] A long hymn of 14 st. of 6 l., on St. Matt. xiv. 23–33. (Christ and Peter.) 1st pub. in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, under the heading “The Tempest.” In its full form it is unknown to the collections; but a cento, “Oft when the waves of passion rise,” was given in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 291, and repeated in various hymnals, including Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858; Sir J. Mason’s Orphanage H. Bk., and others. It is composed of st. iv., v., vii., viii., xiv., slightly altered. Orig. text in P. Works, 1868–72, vol. iv. p. 454.

And are we wretched yet alive? C. Wesley. [Meeting of Friends.] From his Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii., No. 256, in 4 st. of 8 l., and entitled, “At Meeting of Friends.” The 3rd st. is usually omitted, as in the 1780 ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., and the revised ed., 1875. It is commonly used as the opening hymn of the Wesleyan Conference. In all English-speaking countries it is a favourite hymn with the Methodist bodies, and in America especially it is included in the collections of various denominations. Orig. text, P. Works, 1868–72, vol. v. p. 496.

And art Thou, gracious Master, gone? T. Kelly. [Reproach of the Cross.] 1st pub. in the 3rd ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1809, No. 124, in 5 st. of 6 l., as the first of a series of hymns on the "Reproach of the Cross." It is also found in all subsequent eds. of the same work. In 1812, Dr. Colyer gave it in his Sel.; it was repeated by Montgomery in his Christ. Psalms, 1823; and by Bickersteth in the Christ. Psalmody, 1833, thus coming into C. U. The hymn, "Shall I to gain the world's applause," is a cento therefrom, composed of st. 1 of st. ii., iv. and iii., in the order named and slightly altered. This cento in Mr. W. appeared in Nettleton's (Amcr.) Village Hymns, 1824, No. 411, and from thence has passed into a few American collections.

And art thou with us, gracious Lord? P. Doddridge. [In trouble.] Not in the "Mess," and 1st pub. in J. Orton's ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 98, in 5 st. of 4 l., with the heading, "The timorous Saint encouraged by the Assurance of the Divine Presence and Help." Is. xii. 10." The same text was repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, 1839. Its use is limited, and in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., st. ii. is omitted. In a few collections, including Lat. Carpenter's Unitarian H. Bk., Bristol, 1831, and others, a cento is given as, "Art thou still with us, gracious Lord?" It is composed of st. i., ii., and iv., slightly altered.

And can it be that I should gain C. Wesley. [Thanksgiving for Salvation.] Written at Little Britain, in May, 1738, together with the hymn, "Where shall my wondering soul begin?" on the occasion of the great spiritual change which C. Wesley at that time underwent. His diary of that date gives minute details of the mental and spiritual struggles through which he passed, evidences of which, and the ultimate triumph, are clearly traceable in both hymns. It was 1st pub. in J. Wesley's Ps. and Hymns, 1738, and again in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1739, p. 171, in 6 st. of 6 l. When included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, st. v. was omitted, the same arrangement being retained in the revised ed. 1875, No. 201. It has passed from that hymnal into numerous collections in G. Britain and most English-speaking countries. Stevenson's note on this hymn, dealing with the spiritual benefits it has conferred on many, is full and interesting (Meth. H. Bk. Notes, p. 135). Orig. text in P. Works, 1868–72, vol. i. p. 103.

And can my heart aspire so high Anne Steele. [Submission.] 1st pub. in her Poems, &c., new ed., 1780, vol. iii. p. 132, in 4 st. of 4 l., headed, "Fillet Submission," and based on Heb. xii. 7. It was included in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863, p. 147. Its use is mainly confined to American collections of various denominations.

And did the Holy and the Just. Anna Steele. [Redemption.] A more than usually successful hymn by this writer. It appeared in her Poems, &c., 1790 and 1860, vol. i. p. 175, in 6 st. of 4 l., entitled, "The wonders of Redemption." It is based on 1 Pet. iii. 18. It was also included in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863, p. 108. It was first brought into C. U. by Ash and Evans in their Bapt. Bristol Coll., 1763. Its use in G. Britain is limited, but in America it is found in many collections.

And did the Son of God appear J. Montgomery. [Christ our Pattern.] This hymn was written for J. H. Gurney's Coll. of Hys., Lutterworth, 1838, No. 7. Respecting it Gurney says in the Preface, "One hymn, No. 7, in this collection, written upon a subject suggested to him [Montgomery] by the Editor, has never before been published." This hymn was repeated in the Mary-le-bone Ps. & Hys., 1851, and in Montgomery's Original Hys., 1853, No. 126, in 6 st. of 4 l. The title is "Christ Jesus our Pattern in doing and suffering."

And dost Thou fast, and may I feast J. B. Monsewll. [Holy Communion—Lent.] 1st pub. in his Hymns of Love and Praise, 1863, in 9 st. of 4 l. It is appointed for the 1st Sun. in Lent, and based on the words, "Can God furnish a table in the wilderness?" Ps. lxxxviii. 19. In Allon's Supp. H., 1868 and 1875, 1. iv. and vii. are given as No. 198.

And have I, Christ, no love for Thee. S. Stennett. [Holy Anxiety.] Contributed to Rippon's Bapt. Sel., 1787, No. 252, in 5 st. of 4 l. It has passed into several hymn-books. It is also found in his Memoir by W. Jones, 1824. Orig. text, Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 610.

And have I measured half my days C. Wesley. [Pleading for Pardon.] Appeared in Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. 1, in 16 st. of 4 l., and again in the P. Works, 1868–72, vol. iv. p. 322. In 1780, J. Wesley included st. xiii. and xvi. in the Wes. H. Bk. as: "God is in this and every place." The same is retained in all subsequent editions of that work, and has passed into general use amongst the Methodist bodies, and also in a few American collections of other denominations.

And is it so? A little while. [Death and Eternity.] An anonymous hymn in the American Tract Soc. Songs of Zion, 1864, the Presb. Ps. & Hys., Richmond, 1867, and others.

And is it true, as I am told? Amelia 7. Hull. [Child's Hymn.] Contributed to Miss H. W. Soltas's Pleasant Hymns for Boys and Girls, n.d., but pub. in 1862. It consists of 6 st. of 6 l. It is usually found in an abbreviated form, and sometimes with alterations. The hymnals which number it amongst their contents include the Hy. Comp., No. 421; Snopp's Songs of G. & G., No. 929; Major's Bk. of Praise, &c. [W. T. B.]
And is my soul with Jesus one?
Joseph Irons. [Union with Christ.] From his Zion's Songs, &c., 3rd ed., 1825, No. 191, into Snav's Songs of G. & G., 1872, unaltered except in first line, which reads in the original,"And is my soul and Jesus one?"

And is salvation brought so near?
P. Doddridge. [Salvation.] Not found in the "p. ass," and 1st pub. by J. Orton in his ed. of Doddridge'sHymns, &c., 1755, No. 262, in 4 st. of 4 l. on Rom. x. 6-10, and repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839.

And is the gospel peace and love?
Jane Steele. [Example of Christ.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760-80, vol. 1. pp. 122-123: and repeated in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, &c., 1863, pp. 75-76. It is in 7 st. of 4 l. and entitled, "The Example of Christ." In 1787 it was introduced into congregational use by Dr. Rippon, in his Bapt. Sel. of Hymns., No. 109. This was followed by the Bapt. New Sel., 1828, No. 121, and others to modern collections. In Snav's Songs of G. & G., 1872, No. 555, st. i., ii., iii., and vi. are given unaltered. It is also in American use.

And is the time approaching?
Jane Borthwick. [Anticipation of Heaven.] Appeared in her Thoughtful Hours, 1859, in 8 st. of 4 l. and entitled "Anticipations." It is not in C. U. in G. Britain, but is found in several American hymnals.

And is there in God's world so dear a place?
John Keble. [Happiness.] 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 14 st. of 6 l. and appointed for the 2nd Sun. in Lent. The heading is:—

"And when Esa heard the words of his father, he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me, O my father. Genesis xxv. 19. (Compare Hebrews xii. 17. 'He found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.')"

The poem is based upon these quotations, and is accompanied by the following note:—

"The author earnestly hopes, that nothing in these stanzas will be understood to express any opinion as to the general efficacy of what is called a death-bed repentance. Such questions are best left in the merciful obscurity with which Scripture has enveloped them. Esa's probation, as far as his birthright was concerned, was quite over when he uttered the cry in the text. His despondency, therefore, is not parallel to anything on this side of the grave."

This poem as a whole is not in C. U. A cento therefrom composed of st. i., ii., viii., was given in the Gainsborough Hymn. for the Christian Seasons (1st ed., 1854), No. 116.

And is there, Lord, a cross for me?
H. Addiscott. [Submission.] 1st pub. in The New Cong: H. Bk., 1850, No. 630, and entitled "Take up the Cross." It is appropriated to the "Trials of the Christian Life."

And is this life prolonged to me?
L. Watts. [Decision for Christ.] Appended to his Sermons, 1721-24, vol. iii., and later eds., vol. ii., No. 39, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is based on his Sermon 39 on 1 Cor. iii. 22, "Whether Life or Death.—All are yours," to which he gave the title, "The Right Improvement of Life." The hymn is not in extensive use. It is sometimes abbreviated. The text in the New Cong. No. 498, is slightly altered.

And let our bodies part. C. Wesley. [Parting.] From Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii., No. 233, of 10 st. in two parts. The first part, in 6 st., was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, and is retained in the revised edition, 1875, No. 535. In some collections a shorter version compiled from this is given. Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 462. From this hymn, and another, a cento has been formed, "O let our heart and mind," thus, st. i.-iv., st. i., ii. of the above, st. v., vi., from st. viii. and v. of "Saviour of sinful men" (q. v.) This is found in Bapt. Ps. & Hymns, 1838 and 1880. The original hymn is also found in a few American collections. A second cento from this hymn alone was given in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840, and again in his Hys. of Praise & Prayer, 1873, No. 694. It begins, "And what though now we part," and is composed of st. i., 1-4, st. i., 4-8, and st. 1, 4-14, as in the Wes. H. Bk. but somewhat altered.

And let this feeble body fail.
C. Wesley. [Burial.] From his Funeral Hymns, 1759 (2nd Series), No. iii., in 9 st. of 8 l. In 1830, 7 st. were included in the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk. as hymn 734, and as hymn 948 are retained in the revised ed., 1875. Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. vi. p. 216. In America it is used somewhat extensively, and by various denominations.

And live I yet by power divine?
C. Wesley. [Recovery from Sickness.] This hymn, in 17 st., on 2 Kings xx. 1-11, was written in 1738 by C. Wesley during his residence at Oxford, and as a thanksgiving after a dangerous sickness. It was pub. in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1739. In 1780, the hymn "God of my life, what just return" was compiled therefrom, and included in the Wes. H. Bk., as No. 149. It is also found in many other collections, being held by the Methodist bodies in much esteem. Orig. text in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 74.

And may I hope that when no more.
Joseph Swain. [Trust in God.] Printed in his Walworth Hymns, 1792, in 10 st. of 4 l. In its full form it is not in C. U., but selections appear in Denham's Saints' Melody, 1837, &c., and also in the Amer. Bapt. Praise Book. Orig. text in the 1869 reprint of Swain's Hymns. [W. T. B.]

And must I be to judgment brought?

And must I part with all I have?
B. Beddome. [Self Dental.] Given in Rip-
AND MUST THIS BODY

pon's Sel., 1787, No. 281, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is almost unknown to modern collections in G. Brit., but in America it is found in several yhymns, including the Bap. Hy. & Tune Bk., 1871; Songs for the Sanctuary, 1863; the Dutch Reformed Hys. for the Church, 1869; Hatfield's Ch. H. Bk., 1872; and others. In all of these, the arrangement of the stanzas and the text varies, both from each other, and from the original. Orig. text in modern ed. of Rippon, and in R. Hall's ed. of Beddome's Hymns, 1817, No. 225, in 4 st. of 4 l.

And must this body die? I. Watts.
[Triumph over Death.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1707, in 6 st. of 4 l. and entitled "Triumph over Death in Hope of the Resurrection" (Bk. ii., No. cx.). In an altered form it was given by J. Wesley in his Ps. and Hys. pub. at Charleston, South Carolina, in 1736-7. It was not included in the Wes. H. Bk.
in 1780, but added in the Suppl. of 1830; Wesley's text of 1736-7 being retained, with st. iii., 1, 1, "And ever" for "And often" (the original reading of Watts) being omitted. In the revised ed. of 1875, this has again been abridged by the omission of the last stanza.
The text of the Wes. H. Bk. is thus by Watts and J. Wesley. In other collections it is usually Watts unaltered. Its use in America is very extensive.

And now another day is gone, I'll sing, &c. I. Watts. [Evening.] "An Evening Song," in 4 st. of 4 l. from his Divine Songs, &c., 1715, in a few modern collections for children, including Major's Bk.
of Praise for Children, No. 288, and others.

And now, 'mid myriad worlds enthroned. Godfrey Thring. [Saturday.]
Written in 1868, and 1st pub. in his Hymns & Sacred Lyrics, 1874, pp. 19-20, and subsequentlv in various hymnals. Authorized text, Thring's Coll., 1882, No. 79.

And now, my soul, another year.
S. Browne. [New Year.] In his Hymns & Spiritual Songs, &c., 1720, Bk. i., pp. 34-5, in 8 st. of 4 l, and entitled "New Year's Day." Its use is very limited in G. Britain, but somewhat extensive in America. As given in modern hymn-books it is generally in an abbreviated form, as in Major's Bk. of Praise,
No. 293, Snipp's Songs of G. & G., No. 915.

And now the wants are told that brought. W. Bright. [Close of Service.]
Written in 1865, and 1st pub. in his Hymns and other Poems, 1866, entitled "Hymn for the close of a Service," p. 36. In 1868 it was republished in the Appendix to H. A. & M., with the addition of a doxology.

And will the Eternal King. P.
Doddridge. [Personal Dedication.] Written according to the "p. mss," Jan. 3, 1736, and 1st pub. by J. Orton in his ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, 1755, in 3 st. of 4 l., and again in J.
D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839. Found in various collections. Orig. text in Bap. Ps.
& Hys., 1858, No. 396.

AND WILL YE GO

And will the great Eternal God?
P. Doddridge. [Opening of a Place of Worship.] Written for the opening of a new place of worship at Oakham. In the "p. mss" it is undated. In 1753 it was included by J. Orton in his ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., No. 49, in 6 st. of 4 l., and repeated in J. D. Humphreys'
ed. of the same, 1839. In 1826 it was embodied in an altered form in the Amer.
Prayer Bk. Coll., as, "And wilt Thou, O Eternal God." This arrangement, in common with the original, is in extensive use in America. A cento from the original is also given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, No. 994, as "Great God, Thy watchful care we bless."
It is composed of st. iii., iv., and vi., slightly altered.

And will the Judge descend? P.
Doddridge. [Judgment.] This hymn is not in the "p. mss" and was 1st pub. by J.
Orton in Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No.
189, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is based upon St. Matt.
xxv. 41, and entitled "The Final Sentence, and Misery of the Wicked." In its full form it is not usually given in the collections. The most popular arrangement is st. i., iv., vi.
This is found in various collections in G.
Britain. Its greatest use is in America, where it ranks in popularity with the best of Doddridge's hymns.

And will the Lord thus condescend?
Anne Steele. [The Love of Christ.] 1st pub.
in her Poems, 1769, vol. i. p. 67, in 6 st. of 4 l, based on Rev. iii. 20, and entitled "The Heavenly Guest." In 1759 it was included in the Bristol Bapt. Coll. of Ash and Evans, and came thus into C. U. It was also repeated in a new ed. of the Poems, 1780, and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863, p. 42. At the present time its use is mainly confined to America.

And will the majesty of heaven?
P. Doddridge. [Condescension.] This hymn on Ezek. xxiv. 31, is in the "p. mss," but undated. It was 1st pub. by J. Orton in his ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 144, in 5 st. of 4 l., with slight differences from the ms. and with the ms. title of "God, the Shepherd of Men," expanded to "God's Condescension in becoming the Shepherd of Men." It was also republished in J. D. Humphreys'
ed. of Doddridge, 1839.

And will ye go away? S. Deacon [Falling away from Christ.] This is No. 273 of his Barton Hymns, 1787, in 6 st. of 4 l., and is headed "A Serious Question." It was probably in the 1st ed. of those hymns, 1785, but we have not been able to ascertain.
In 1804 it was repeated, without alteration, in John Deacon's New and Large Coll. of Ps. and Hys. No. 461. As known in a few modern collections, specially amongst the Baptists, it is re-written and enlarged to 9 st. This form was given to it in Rippon's Sel., 27th ed., 1827, No. 439, pt. ii., and retains only a few lines of S. Deacon's text. Its signature is "Anon., Rippon's Sel., 27th ed. 1827, based on S. Deacon, 1797."
And wilt Thou now forsake me, Lord? [Confession.] An anonymous hymn which appeared in vol. ii. (called Ps. i. & iv.) of a Sel. by the Countess of Northesk, entitled The Sheltering Vine, 3rd thousand, 1823. A slightly different version is in the American Sabbath H. Bk., N. Y., 1858, No. 761, and other American collections.

And wilt Thou yet be found? C. Wesley. [Resignation.] 1st pub. in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1740, in 22 st. of 4 l., and entitled “Resignation.” It was repeated in subsequent editions of the same, and in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 266. In its full form it is unknown to the collections, but a portion therefrom, consisting of st. ix.-xx., and beginning “When shall Thy love constrain,” was given in the Wes. H. Bk. 1780, No. 133, and continued in all later editions. It has also passed from thence into other collections, and especially in those in use amongst the Methodist bodies.

Another cent., beginning with st. x., “Ah! what avail my strife,” is also in limited use; whilst a third, “And can I yet delay,” opening with st. xv., is given in a large number of American hymnals.

Anderson, John, s. of Andrew Anderson, a miner, was b. near Yoker, Renfrewshire, in 1801, and educated at the University of Glasgow, and at the Divinity Hall of the Associate Burghers, at Perth. In 1827 he became the first minister of the Associate Burgher Church, at Helensburgh, Dumbartonshire. The congregation which he succeeded in gathering together passed with him into the communion of the Established Church of Scotland in 1839. In 1843, both minister and people made a second change, in joining the Free Church movement of that year. d. at Helensburgh, Jan. 10, 1867. In the ecclesiastical controversies of his day he took a prominent part, specially in the Voluntary controversy, the Free Church movement, and the Reformation of 1858. His prose works were somewhat numerous, and included a Life of Christ, 1861. He also wrote some poetical pieces, and translations. He is known to hymnology as the first to publish a complete tr. of Luther’s hymns as Hymns from the German of Dr. Martin Luther, 1846. In 1867, a short memoir, by John Oatt, together with extracts from his prose and poetical writings, appeared at Glasgow (T. Murray & Son) as Notes of an invalid. [J. J.]

Anderson, John, b. in 1820 at Dunbarton, Perthshire, of which parish his father, Dr. John Anderson, was some time minister, and educated at the University of St. Andrew’s. In 1844 he was licensed as a Proctor in the Scotch Church, and subsequently was appointed to St. John’s parish, Dundee; the East Church, Perth, 1845; and Kilmarnock, 1853. He has pub. The Pleasures of Homer; The Legend of Glencoe; and Bible incidents and their Lessons, 1861.

Anderson, Maris Frances, b. in Paris, France, Jan. 30, 1819, and married to G. W. Anderson, Professor in the University of Lewisburg, Pennsylvania. Two of her hymns are given in the Baptist Harp, 1849. Of these:—

“Our country’s voice is pleading,” has come into C. U. [F. M. B.]

Andreás, Johann Valentin, son of Johanes Andreás, afterwards Prelate of Königsbronn, b. Aug. 17, 1586, at Herrenberg in Württemberg. After completing his University studies, and acting for some time as a travelling tutor, he was, in 1614, appointed diaconus at Villingen, in 16.0 Decan at Calw, in 1639 Court-preacher at Stuttgart, in 1650 Prelate of Heidelberg, and in March, 1654, Prelate of Adelberg with his residence in Stuttgart : d. at Stuttgart, June 7, 1654. Distinguished as a man of high and deep piety, as a church reformer, as a philanthropist, and as a theological writer, poetry was not one of the serious employments of his life, though he was admitted in 1646 a member of the Fruitbearing Society (Koek, iii. 151-167: Allg. Deutsche Biog., i. 441-447). He wrote few hymns, and only any of these have kept a place in the German Hymn-Books. The only one translated into English is:

Edele Lieb, wo bist dir bei uns verstecket. [Love forgotten.] First pub. in his Geistliche Kurzaus, Strassburg, 1619, p. 135, in a vol. of 6 l.—a poem rather than a hymn. Tr. as “Generous Love! why art thou hidden so on earth?” by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 235. [J. M.]

Andrew, St., of Jerusalem, Abp. of Crete. (660-752). b. at Damascus; he embraced the monastic life at Jerusalem, whence his name, as above. He was duly elected on the death of Theodore, Patriarch of Jerusalem, to attend the 6th General Council at Constantinople (860). He was there ordained deacon, and became Warden of the Orphanage. “During the reign of Philippus Bardesanes (711-714) he was raised by that usurper to the Archiepiscopate of Crete; and shortly afterwards was one of the Pseudo-Synod of Constantinople, held under that Emperor’s auspices in 712, which condemned the Sixth (Ecumenical Council and restored the Monothelite heresy. At a later period, however, he returned to the faith of the Church, and refused the error into which he had fallen.” (Neale). He died in the island of Hierissus, near Mitylene, about 732. Seventeen of his homilies are extant, the best, not unnaturally, being on Titus the bishop of Crete. He is the author of several Canones, Triodion, and Iliomela; the most celebrated being The Great Canon. [Greek Hymnody, § xvii. 7.] Whether he was the earliest composer of Canones is doubtful, but no earlier ones than his are extant. Those ascribed to him are:—1. On the Conception of St. Anne; 2. On the Nativity of the Mother of God; 3. The Great Penitential Canon. 4. On the Raising of Lazarus. 5. 6, 7, 8. On the First Days of Holy Week. 9. On the 26th Fast-day between Easter and Pentecost. Fuller biographical details in Dict. Christ. Biog., vol. i. pp. 111-12. [H. L. B.]

Andrews, Lancelot. [User, James.]

'Aνέστης τρίημερος. St. Joseph the Hymnographer. [Ascension.] This Canon for Ascension Day is found in the Pentecostarion, and was written about the middle of the ninth century. It is commonly regarded as St. Joseph's greatest production, and places him high amongst the Greek sacred poets. Dr. Neale remarks that "This is the crowning glory of the poet Joseph; he has here with a happy boldness entered into the lists with St. John of Damascus, to whom, on this one occasion, he must be pronounced superior." (H. of the E. C., 1st ed., p. 141.) The finest points of this Canon, such as the lower angels shouting to the higher as the Lord ascends (Ode iii.); the wonder at the Human Body of the Lord: (Ode iv.); and the rejoicing of angels and of nature, have their origin in the earlier Canons; but their dramatic treatment by Joseph is of greater majesty. In common with all the festival Canons it consists of eight Odes only. [Greek Hymnody, § xvi. 10, and xviii. 3.] These Odes are as follows:—

Ode i. 'Αγίας τριμορφος
"After three days Thou didst rise."

Ode ii. Ἐξαιρέτης πλάσμος
"Exalt, exalt, the heavenly gates."

Ode iii. Ιησοῦς ο ζωδής
"Jesus, Lord of Life Eternal."

Ode iv. Νεκρώσας τὰν θάνατον
"Now that death by death hath found."

Ode v. Πάραστασις ἡ δύναμιν
"Rain down, ye heav'n, eternal bliss."

Ode vi. Θυγατερὰς σε, φασι "Waiting Him up on high."

Ode vii. Τίν ἐν οὐδὲν ταίς φωσι
"Of twofold natures, Christ, the Giver."

Ode viii. Ων τῶν δορυφορί
"Holy gift, surpassing comprehension!"

The only tr. of this Canon into English is the above by Dr. Neale, which appeared in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862. The acrostical arrangement of the original, derived probably from the alphabetical Psalms, and adopted to assist the memory, is reproduced by the translator. Odes v.—ix. have not come into C. U. Of the rest, i. and iii. are given in I. a Meminisation, 1884; iii. in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1870; iv. in the People's, 1867; and other collections. In the Hymnary, Ode iv. has an additional stanza by the Editors.

In Dr. Neale's tr. the Theotokion (address to the B. V. M.) is omitted. Mr. Hatherley, in the 4th ed. of the Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1882, gives the various readings of the several editions of the work, together with music for each Ode. He also draws attention to the fact that Ode viii. is not by St. Joseph, but by John the Monk (St. John of Damascus), whose Canon for the Ascension is also in the Office, and is sung together with that of St. Joseph.

Angel of God, what'er betide. C. Wesley. [Personal Consecration.] Pub. in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1740, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "At setting out to preach the Gospel." It is not given in the Wes. H. Bk., but st. i., iv., li. in the order named are in C. U. in America to a very limited extent, including the Hymn of the Spirit. Boston, 1864, No. 418. Orig. text in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 294.

Angel voices over singing. F. Pott. [Choir Festival.] Appeared in his Hymns fitted to the Order of Common Prayer, 2nd ed., 1866, in 5 st. of 7 l., and from thence has passed into Harland, Snape, Thringham, Church Hymns, and others. It is one of the author's most successful and popular efforts. Its original title is "For the Dedication of an Organ, or for a Meeting of Choirs." Its use has extended to America, and other English-speaking countries.

Angel voices sweetly singing. H. Bonar. [Heaven.] 1st pub. in the 2nd Series of his Hymns of Faith and Hope, 1863, in 12 st. of 4 l. As given in Snape's S. of G. and G., 1872, st. ii. and vii. are omitted. Otherwise it is unaltered.

Angelice Patrone, Beate Spiritus. [Guardian Angels.] This hymn, of unknown authorship and date, is in the Corolla Hymnorum, Cologne, 1806, p. 67. Daniel gives it without note or comment in ii. p. 376. It is also found in Smarrock, p. 338; Bässler, No. 137, and others. [W. A. S.]

Translation in C. U.:

Sweet Angel of mercy. By E. Caswall. It appeared in his Masque of Mary and Other Poems, 1858, in 8 st. of 8 l., and in his H. and Poems, 1873, p. 180. It is given in a few Roman Catholic collections for Schools and Missions.

Angels, assist to sing. [Ps. cxlvii.] This version of Ps. 148 appeared in the Christian Guardian, 1848, with the signature "Thelphilus." From thence it passed into a few collections, including the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, in 4 st.; Hatfield's Amer. Church H. Bk., 1872, in 2 st. (i., ii.) and others; but its use is limited.

Angels from the realms of glory. J. Montgomery. [Christmas.] This hymn, which ranks as one of the most popular of the author's compositions, first appeared in his Iris newspaper [Sheffield], Dec. 24, 1816, in 5 st. of 6 l., and entitled "Nativity." In the 8th ed. of Cotterill's Sel., 1819, it was repeated without alteration, and again in the 9th ed., 1820. On its republication by Montgomery in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 487, the title was, "Good tidings of great joy to all people," and the following changes were introduced:—

<thead>
<tr>
<th>St.</th>
<th>Change</th>

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>i.</td>
<td>&quot;Rock&quot; to &quot;rock.&quot;</td>
</tr>
<tr>

<td>&quot;Watch&quot; to &quot;Watching.&quot;</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>v.</td>
<td>&quot;Revels&quot; to &quot;revolve.&quot;</td>

</table>

These changes (together with the new title) were retained in his Original Hymnus, 1835, No. 239; and must be regarded as the authorised text. By many compilers the closing stanza:—

"Sinner, with true repentance, Doom'd for guilt to endless pain," &c.

has been, in some instances, omitted, and in others a doxology has been substituted. That given in A Hymn Book for the Services of the
ANGELS FROM YOUR

Church, &c., by the Rev. Isaac Gregory Smith, 1855, reads:—

"Lord of heaven, we adore Thee,
God the Father, God the Son,
God the Spirit, One in glory,
On the same eternal throne.

Hallelujah:

Lord of heaven, Three in One."

Another found in the Salisbury Hymn Book, 1857, and others, including the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns and Thring's Coll., is:—

"Saints and angels join in praising Thee, the Father, Spirit, Son!
Every more their voices raising
To the eternal Three in One.

Come ye, worship;
Worship Christ, the new-born King."

Of the first four stanzas a rendering into Latin:—Angeli sancta reginse lucis, by the Rev. R. Bingham, appeared in his Hymno Christ. Lat., 1871, pp. 79-81.

The use of this hymn in various forms in English-speaking countries is extensive, abbreviations being the rule. Amongst American Hymnals, the Hymn of the Church, 1869, and the Bap. Praise Bk., 1871, give the full revised and authorised text of 1825 and 1828.

Angels from your blissful stations.
W. H. Bathurst. [The Second Advent.] Printed in 1819 in his Metrical Musings, entitled "The Second Advent," pp. 34-35. It is in 5 st. of 6 l., and was included unaltered in Spepp's S. of G. & G., 1872, where it is dated 1831 in error.

[W. T. B.]

Angels roll the rock away. T. Scott. [Resurrection and Ascension.] Contributed to Ash & Evans's Bristol Baptist Col., 1769, No. 158, where it is headed "The Resurrection and Ascension." It is in 6 st. of 4 l., each st. being followed by "Hallelujah," and is signed "G," the signature of Thomas Gibbons; in the 2nd ed. it was signed "U," i.e. "unknown," but in later editions, the 3rd, 1778, the signature was Dr. S., and the 5th 1786, Dr. S—ft. In this form it passed through Rippon's Bapt. Sel., 1787, into C. U. both in G. Britain and America, and these st., more or less altered, are still in extensive use. In 1773, T. Scott republished the hymn in his Lyric Poems, &c., as No. 14, with a new first verse:

"Trembling earth gave awful sign," and the "Hallelujah" following each line of the 1st st., and with several alterations. Hafield (Amer.) follows this 1773 text.

In 1775, Dr. Thomas Gibbons sent an altered version of the hymn to the Gospel Mag., where it appeared in the Sept. number in 9 st. of 4 l. This with further alterations was included in 1784 in his Hymns adapted to Divine Worship, as No. 60, where he notes it as—"Altered and enlarged from an H. in Mercer's, Ash & Evans's Col. p. 109." The confusion which has arisen respecting the authorship of this hymn is thus accounted for. Its use in one or another of its various forms is very extensive, and especially in America. An altered form of st. i., iv., and v. has been rendered into Latin — "Angeli, rupem removete; magnam," by the Rev. R. Bingham, and pub. in his Hymnol. Christ. Lat., 1871, p. 109. As Scott's original text is most difficult to acquire, we reprint it from the 1768 ed. of Ash & Evans:—

"Hymn 4. Peculiar Measure."

"The Resurrection and Ascension."

"Angels, roll the Rock away,
Death, yield up thy mighty prey.
See! He rises from the Tomb, Glowing with immortal Bloom.

"Hallelujah."

"Tis the Saviour, Angels, raise Fame's eternal Trump of Praise;
Let the Earth's remotest Bound Hear the Joy-inspiring Sound.

"Hallelujah."

"Now ye Saints, lift up your Eyes.
Now to glory see Him rise.
In long Triumph up the Sky,
Up to waiting worlds on high.

"Hallelujah."

"Heaven displays her Portals wide,
Glorious Host, through them ride,
King of Glory, mount Thy Throne,
Thy great Father's and Thy Own.

"Hallelujah."

"Praise Him all ye heavenly Choirs,
Praise, and sweep your golden Lyres;
Shout, O Earth, in rapturous Song,
Let the Strains be sweet and strong.

"Hallelujah."

"Every Note with Wonder swell,
Sin o'erthrown, and captiv'd Hell;
Where is Hell's once dreaded King?
Where, O Death, thy mortal Strug.

"Hallelujah."

[W. T. B.]

Angels round the throne are praising. Elizabeth Parson. [Praise.] A beautiful hymn of praise for children. It is No. xvi. of her Willing-Class Hymns, written in 1840-44, and afterwards printed for private circulation.

Angels that high in glory dwell. I. Watts. [Against swearing, &c.] 1st pub. in his Divine Songs for Children, 1715, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Against swearing and cursing, and taking God's name in vain." Its modern use is limited, and in the Meth. F. C. S. S. B. Bk., No. 228, it is slightly altered.

Angels where'er we go attend. C. Wesley. [Ministry of Angels.] Two centos beginning with this stanza are in C. U. as follows:—(1) Mercer, Ox. ed. App. 1873, No. 322. This is compiled from the hymn: "Which of the petty Kings of earth," by C. Wesley, which was included from his ms. in Dr. Leifeld's Orig. Hymns, 1842, in 12 st. of 4 l., and again in the P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-72, vol. xiii. pp. 118-119, in 6 st. of 8 l., and based on Heb. i. 14. The arrangement in Mercer is—st. i. is Wesley iii., 1. 1-4; ii. is Wesley i., 1. 5-8; iii. and iv. are Wesley v.; and v. and vi. are Wesley vi. (2) The second cento is in the American Dutch Reformed Hym. of the Church, N. Y. 1869, thus: st. i. and ii. as in Mercer, slightly altered: iii. is Wesley i., 1. 1-4; and iv. is lines 5-8 of st. vi. of Wesley's hymn, "Ye simple souls that stray." (q. v.) 1747.

Angelus Silesius. [Scheffer, Johann.]
Anima Christi sanctifica me. [Holy Communion.] The author of this hymn is unknown, and the earliest date to which it has been assigned is the 14th cent. It is found in the very rare Heures a Lusage de Lengres. Imprime a Troyes chez Jean le Coq, without year or pagination. It is also in the Hortulana Animarum, Lyons, 1516, and 1519; Rambach, i. p. 360, and Daniel, i., No. 498.

In the last it is included among the hymns written by unknown authors, before the 16th cent., and not inserted by authority in the Office of any Breviary or Missal. Daniel also gives an additional interpolation from the Lenguas Horas, which has been ascribed to Ignatius of Loyola. As he was born in 1491, and did not embrace a religious life until 1521, this ascription is certainly an error.

Translations in C. U.:

1. Prose tr. of both forms as in Daniel are given in many Roman and Anglican books of devotion. Of the first form there is — "A Soul of Christ, sanctify me," in the Treasury of Devotion, 1891, p. 89; and of the second, with the same first line, in Shipley's Divine Liturgy, 4th ed., 1876, p. 1.

2. Soul of Jesus, make me holy. This is a metrical paraphrase and expansion of the original in 60 lines. It appeared anonymously in the Old Porch, April, 1855, and passed through the Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 106, into a few Roman Catholic Collections for Schools and Missions, but usually in an unattributed form. Given in the Irvingite Hymn, for the Use of the Churches, 2nd ed., 1871, No. 301, as "Heart of Jesus, make me holy," and is here attributed to "J. W. Chadwick." Chadwick's, however, is the shorter form noted below. Another arrangement of this tr. is, "Blood of Jesus; stream of life," No. 85 of Hymns for use at St. Ethelburga's, Bishopsgate, London, 1875.

3. Soul of Jesus, once for me. By M. Bridges. This is also a paraphrase of the original. It was pub. in his Hymns of the Heart, 1849, in 8 st. of 6 l. It was included in Shipley's Divine Liturgy, 1862; Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 171; and, reduced to 4 st., in the People's H., 1867.

4. Soul of Jesus, make me pure. By J. W. Chadwick, pub. in the People's H., 1867, No. 558, in 2 st. of 6 l.

5. Soul of Christ, my soul make pure. By E. A. Dayman, made for and 1st pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 443, in 2 st. of 6 l. It is translated somewhat freely from the original.

This hymn has also been rendered into German, and thence again into English:

Anna Sophia, dau. of the Landgrave Georg II. of Hesse-Darmstadt, was b. at Marburg, Dec. 17, 1838. Carefully educated, especially in Holy Scripture and the Christian Fathers, she was in 1857 elected Probstin of the Lutheran Fürsten-Tochter-Stift at Quedlinburg, where she became Abbess 1868, and died Dec. 13, 1883 (Koch, iii. 549-554; Stromberger's prefacce, &c.).

Her hymns, contemplations on the union of the soul with Christ, in the spirit of the Canticles, mostly appeared in her devotional work:—

Der treue Selen-Freund Christus Jesus mit nach denklichen Sinn-Gemahlen, anmutigen Lehr-Gedichten und neuen geistreichen Gesängen, abgedruckt und vorgedruckt, Jena, 1863. The only one tr. into English is Wohl dem der Jesus liebet (Holy Scripture), her best hymn, 1858, App. p. 26. The trs. are: (1) "How happy they, who know such joy," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 97. (2) "What joy to love the Saviour," in the British Heral, Nov. 1866, p. 363, repeated as No. 433 in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. [J. M.]

Anni peractis mensibus. [Whitsuntide.] In the Lat. Hymn of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, p. 95, it is quoted from the Durham ms. of the 11th cent. as a hymn for Pentecost, at Minster, in 5 st. of 4 l. It also is in an 11th cent. ms. in the Brit. Mus. (Vesp. D. xii. *f. 81). Tr. by J. D. Chambers, in his Laudis Sion, 1857, in 5 st. of 4 l., as "A year's swift mouths have passed away." It was repeated in Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal, 1861, No. 146.

Anne Christi saeculorum Domine. [Common of Apostles.] This hymn is of unknown authorship. Its full form consists of four general stanzas, and nine stanzas proper of saints.

It is found in three uss. of the 11th cent. in the Brit. Museum (Harl. 2961, f. 248, ff.; Jul. A. vi. 60, b. f. Vesp. D. xii. *f. 96). In the Durham ms. of the 11th cent. (printed as Lat. Hymn. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 124), the four general stanzas are added to "Jam bone poster Petra" (pt. of "Anna Christi"). The full form is in Don, No. 666, from a 15th cent. ms. beginning with the stanza to St. Andrew, "Andrea peia," followed by 5 st. proper of the festivals of SS. James and John; Philippus; Bartholomew; Thomas; Matthew; Simon and Thaddeus; and Matthias; and concluding with 4 general stanzas of "Anna Christi." are given as the hymn at Vespers at the Festival of an Apostle or Apostles, except in Eastertide. Also at Vespers and Matins occasionally, in the forms Bres or bres with the same exception. Daniel, l. No. 294, given only four times. The St. John Bres. text is also in Card. Newman's Hymn Rec., 1846. [J. M.]
Translations in C. U. —
1. O Christ, then Lord of worlds. Thine ear.
   By J. M. Neale. Pub. in the enlarged ed. of the Hymns N., 1854, No. 75, in 4 st. of 8 l., from whence it has passed into a few collects.
   In the St. Raphael’s Coll., 1860, special stanzas were introduced after the Sarum manner (these added stanzas are all original) for SS. Andrew, Thomas, John and James, Matthias, Peter, Bartholomew, Matthew, and Simon and Jude, and some of these were repeated in Skinner’s Daily Service (Hymns N., 1864, with additional ver. for St. Barnabas and for SS. Philip and James, the latter altered from Bp. Wordsworth’s hymn on that festival in his Holy Year, “Blest be, O Lord, the grace of Love.” It is altered in the Hymnary, 1872, to “O Christ, Thou Lord of all.”

2. Ruler of the ages, Christ, we now implore Thee. By R. F. Littledale, made for and 1st pub. in the People’s H., 1867, No. 196, in 4 st. of 4 l, and signed “F. R."

3. Ruler of ages, Christ, vouchsafe to bow Thine ear. From the Antiphoner and Grad, 1880, and repeated in the Hymner, 1882. In the same book the varying verses of Sarum use are also translated.

Translations not in C. U. —

   J. D. Chambers, 1867.

"Ἀνώθεν, παρθένοι, βοήθεσθι γερσίνερος θυσος. St. Methodius. This hymn is found in The Banquet of the Ten Virgins, and is printed in the Anth. Gr. Car. Christ.
   1871. From the latter work it was translated by A. W. Chatfield, for his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1870, pp. 141-149, where it is given as “The Virgins’ Song.” No portion of this fine rendering has come into common use. A cento or two might be compiled therefrom with ease. Its structure, character, &c., are fully described in Greek Hymnody, § 2 q.v. The opening line of Mr. Chatfield’s tr. is “The Bridesmaids come, overhead.”

   Frances R. Hassey. [Praise.] Written at Leamington, June 30, 1872. This hymn literally expresses F. R. H.’s thrill of praise, when her own prayers and conversations received in her friend (A. B.) enrolling ‘on our Captain’s side.’ “Another life to live for, when another song is sung.” (“Hay. Miss.”)
   It was first printed in The Christian, July 11, 1872, and then pub. in her Under the Surface,
   1874, and Life Mosaic, 1879, in 11 st. of 4 l.

Another day begun! J. Ellerton.
   [Tuesday.] Written Feb. 13, 1871. Appeared in the Parish Magazine for May, 1871, as one of three “Week Day Hymns,” in 5 st. of 4 l., and appointed for Tuesday. During the same year it was included in Church Hymns, No. 56, with st. ii., 1, 3, “sinful soul” changed to “guilty soul,” and st. v. altered from the original, which read —

   “Another day of grace!
   To bring us on our way,
   One step towards our resting-place.
   The endless Sabbath-day.”

   In 1882 the revised text was repeated in Another day has past along. J. Edmiston. [Sunday Evening.] In his Cottage.

   Minstrel, 1821, a hymn of 4 st. appeared with the above first line, as No. 2, and headed “Lord, touch us to pray,” while, in No. 10,
   “The Cottager’s Refections upon the Sabbath Evening,” another hymn of 5 st., “Sweet is the light of Sabbath eve,” was given. In Hatfield’s Amer. Church H. Bk., 1872, a cento from these was given as No. 48, consisting of st. i. of the first-named hymn, and st. i., ii.,
   iii. and v. of the latter, with slight alterations.

Another portion of the span. Charlote Elliott. [Saturday Eve.] From her Hymns for a Week, 1839, in 9 st. of 6 l., into Snapp’s Songs of G. and G., 1872, No. 905.

Another six days’ work is done. J.
   Stennett. [Sunday.] This poem “On the Sabbath” appeared as one of his “Miscellany Poems,” in his Works, 1752, vol. iv. pp. 231-234, in 14 st. of 4 l. In its full form it is unknown to any hymnal; but centos therefrom are in modern collections, nearly all beginning with the first stanza as above:

1. A cento in 6 st. in the Bristol Baptist Coll. of Ash and Evans, 1769, from whence it has passed through a series of Baptist Hymnals to the Bapt. P. a nd Hymns, 1868, No. 410, and other modern collections. It is composed of st. i., x., xii., xiii., and xiv., and with an added st. introduced as the second, “Come, bless the Lord, whose love assigns,” &c., the authorship of which has not been traced.

2. Another which was given in Williams and Boden’s Coll., 1801, No. 451, and thence through various collections to the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, the New Coll., No. 153, and others. It is the above cento with the omission of the original st. xii., “With joy,” &c.

3. A third cento, in Bickerstaff’s Christian Psalmody, 1823, No. 290, in 4 st., being i., x., xii., and xiii., of the original, and the added st. “Come, bless the Lord,” &c., as in No. 1, is sometimes repeated in modern collections.

4. A fourth is given in Hardman’s Ch. Praller, No. 32, Windle’s Metrical Praller, &c., No. 19, and others.
   It is composed of Stennett’s st. i., v., xii., and

5. The last cento is repeated in the Ibbington P. and Hym., 1862, No. 387, with the omission of st. xii. of the original.

6. A sixth cento, beginning, “Again our weekly labours end,” and consisting of st. i., x., xii., xiii., and xiv. of Stennett, re-written for Catterills’s Coll., 1810,
   No. 97, is given in several collections, old and new.

7. The seventh cento begins, “Another work its course has run,” It is a slightly altered form of Sten-nett’s st. i., x., xii., and xiii., and is included in the Harrow School Coll.

Most of these centos are in C. U. in America and other English-speaking countries.

[ J. J.]

Another week begins. T. Kelly. [Sunday.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, 2nd ed., 1806, and again, 3rd ed., 1809. In 1812 it was transferred to his Hymns adapted for Social Worship. Subsequently, in common with the rest of the hymns therein, it was again embodied in the original work. It is in 8 st.
   of 4 l., and based upon Ps. ex. viii. 24.

In the American hymnals it is re-written, the change being from s.m. to c.m. It also varies coniderably in the number of stanzas used from 3 in the Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1881, to Another week for ever gone. [Sunday.] An anonymous hymn in Rippon's Comprehensive Ps. and Hymns., 1844, No. 345, pt. iv., in 3 st. of 4 l.

Another week has passed away. W. H. Botkhurst. [Sunday.] 1st pub. in his Ps. and Hymns, &c., 1831, No. 123, in 5 st. of 4 l, and entitled “Saturday Evening.” It is also in Bickersteth’s Christ, Psalms, 1833 and 1841, and others. As given in Kennedy, 1863, No. 865, slight alterations have been introduced. Orig. text as above. It has also been rendered into Latin as, Nobis nunc iterum praeferenti hædomas, by the Rev. R. Bingham, and included in his Hymns, Christ. Lat. 1871.

Another year has now begun. C. Wordsworth, Bp. of Lincoln. [New Year.] 1st pub. in his Holy Year, 1st ed., 1862, No. 14, for “New Year’s Day,” and consists of 9 st. of 4 l. Orig. text in later editions. The cento in Snepp’s Songs of G. & G. is composed of st. i., ii., v., vii., and ix., and that in Barry’s Ps. & Hymns, 1867, of st. i., iii., v., viii., ix.

Another year has passed away. [O. and N. Year.] An anonymous hymn in the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, Meth. Free Ch. S. S. H. Bk. and others. In some collections it is attributed to “Allen,” and in others it is said to be “American.” We have failed in securing authority for either statement.

Another year hath fled, renew. A. T. Russell. [O. and N. Year.] Written Nov. 20, 1850 (s. miss.), and 1st pub. in his Psalms and Hymns, &c., 1851, No. 63, in 3 st. of 8 l. In 1863 it was republished in Kennedy, No. 146, in a slightly altered form, but in Thrang’s Coll., 1882, No. 130, the original text is restored with the exception of st. i., 1, l.l., has for hath, and the repetition of the last line of each stanza which was repeated in the original to suit the tune to which the hymn was written. With the first line as “Another year hath fled, renew,” it is also in use in Canada, and other English-speaking countries.

Another year is dawning. Frances R. Haverghal. [New Year.] Written in 1874 for the ornamental leaflets and cards pub. by Caswell, 1875. It was subsequently included in her work, Under the Surface, 1874, and Life Chords, 1880. It is in 6 st. of 4 l. [Hav. miss.]

Antiphon (Gr. ἀντιφώνος; Lat. Antifona.), i. This word now ordinarily denotes a short versicle said at the beginning and close of a Psalm or Psalms in the Breviary Offices. But it has also borne the following meanings, which are not yet entirely obsolete:

1. A Hymn or Psalm sung antiphonally—that is to say, alternately by two sides of a choir, instead of being recited by a single voice, or sung responsorially by the Priest and choir or congregation. Ignatius, third bishop of Antioch in Syria, is said to have first introduced this mode of singing into the Church’s services, after a vision in which he heard and saw angels praising the Blessed Trinity (Amalarius, De Yoga. Offic. iv. 7). The custom was transferred thence into Western Christendom by St. Ambrose, into his own diocese of Milan, whence it spread into more general use (Rabanus Maurus, De Inst. Clerici. ii. 50).
ANTIPHON

3. A sentence of Holy Scripture, or an original composition, sung by itself without reference to any Psalm. The sentence, "I heard a voice from heaven," &c., in the Anglican Breviary Office, may be referred to as an instance of this, and similar examples occur in the Ambrosian and Mozarabic Offices for the Dead. (Brevisar. Gk., p. 662.)

3. Certain portions of Psalms, or Sentences, generally but not always taken from Scripture, and introduced into the Liturgy. The ancient name for the Introit was "Antiphon adIntroitum," the last two words being frequently understood and not expressed. The "Offertorium" and "Communio" were likewise regarded as Antiphons. So were the short sentences introduced before the Gospel, as "Glória in excelsis Deo, et in terra paix. Alleluia, Alleluia!" before the Gospel on Christmas day in the Milanese and some French Uses, and in the English Uses for the Confession of the Faith, &c., in the Book of Common Prayer. Various Com- munion Sentences or Antiphons are provided in the mystical Antiphonaries, e.g., "Ad te levavi," from the first words of the Antiphon, "to ad Introitum," for the First Sunday in Advent (Leofric Missal, p. xxii.). Vespers for the Dead were called Placebo, from the corresponding Antiphon in the Psalter, and Matins for the Dead were called Dirige, from the corresponding Antiphon in the Psalter, and other days and weekdays were called after the opening words of their Intros, as the First Sunday in Advent was called "Veni, veni, vobis nomen sanctum," and the Second Sunday after Christmas was called "Ave Regina." The Antiphons which have been rendered into English for use in public worship are the above seven greater Antiphons for use at Vespers in Advent. These tr. are usually confined to the first seven, and are both in prose and metre. Taking the prose renderings first, we have the following:

i. Prose Translations.

Of the Antiphons to the Magnificat in the Roman Breviary, prose versions into English exist in the Vesper Books and Primers of that communion; and an adaptation of these has been issued for the use of English Churchmen.

Of the Sarum Antiphons, translations of those to the Benedictus, Magnificat, and Ave Verum, will be found in the Antiphoner and similar parts i. and ii., 1850, and with the addition of those to the Psalms in J. D. Chamber's Psalter, and in his Order of Household Devotion, 1854; and also in the Day Hours of the Church of England, and other books issued for the use of sisterhoods and other communities. Much information on the whole subject may be found in Dr. Neale's Essays on Liturgyology, 2nd edition, 1869, and in Neale and Littlefield's Commentary on the Psalms, 1860-74, 4 vols.

Of the seven greater Antiphons, or the Os, the earliest tr. for Anglican use was made by Cardinal Newman for Tracts for the Times, No. 75, in 1837, but this is not in C. U. Another tr., given in the St. Saviour's (Leeds) Sacred Hymns and Anthems, 1846, met with more favour, being repeated in R. Campbell's St. Andrews' Hymnal, 1850; Murray's Hymnal, 1852; in H. and Itrails in the same year; and with the alteration of a word or two, and the addition of No. viii., in the enlarged ed. of the Hymnal Note, 1854. The seven are in Murray's are retained in the Itrails prefixed to some editions of Hymns A. & M.
ANTIPHON

1. An early metrical rendering of the separate Antiphons was made by Canon William Cooke, and appeared in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal of 1853. Canon Cooke's account of the same is: "Where it was possible, the translator and arranger (who was William Cooke), took the words of Mr. A. J. Beresford Hope's tr. of the hymn 'Veni, veni, Emmanuel, in the Hymnal N.; retaining the prayer of the Prose Anthem for the Advent of Christ.'" The opening line of each Antiphon is as follows: (1) "O Wisdom! spreading mightily;" (2) "Ruler of Israel, Lord of Might;" (3) "O Root of Jesse! Ensign Thou!" (4) "O Israel's sceptre! David's Key!"; (5) "O Day Spring, and Eternal Light;" (6) "O King! Desire of Nations! come;" (7) "O Law-giver! Emmanuel! King!" These were directed to be sung separately, or as one hymn, as desired.

2. A second tr. by Earl Nelson appeared in the Sarum Hymnal, 1868, as "The Advent Anthems." The opening line of each is as follows: (1) "O Wisdom! spreading mightily;" (2) "Ruler of Israel, Lord of Might;" (3) "O Root of Jesse! Ensign Thou!" (4) "O Israel's sceptre! David's Key!"; (5) "O Day Spring, and Eternal Light;" (6) "O King! Desire of Nations! come;" (7) "O Law-giver! Emmanuel! King!" These were directed to be sung separately, or as one hymn, as desired.

3. These Antiphons were also tr. by W. J. Blew, and included in his Church H. & Tune Bk, 1852.

4. Some time Dr. Neale suppose the 12th century, an unknown author took five of these Antiphons, and wove them into a hymn in the following order:—st. i. O Emmanuel; ii. O Ruler of Israel; iii. O Wisdom; iv. O Root of Jesse; v. O King. This hymn began with the line:—

"Veni, veni, Emmanuel" and adding to each verse the refrain, which is not found in the original prose:—

"Gaude, gaude, Emmanuel Nascetur pro te, Israel."

Daniel has given the full text in his Thea. Hymn. ii. 336 (1844). From Daniel's text Dr. Neale translated his:

5. Draw nigh, draw nigh, Emmanuel, and pub. it in the 1st ed. of his Mediatoral Hymns, 1851, p. 119, in 5 st. of 6 st. That tr. he altered for the 1st ed. of the Hymnal N., 1852, the same altered text being repeated in the enlarged ed. of 1854; and the 2nd and 3rd eds. of the Mediatoral Hymns, 1862 & 1863. The altered text is found in the People's H., 1867, and also, with alterations by various hands, in the Hymnary, 1872; H. Comp., 1876; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. It is from the original tr. of 1851 that parts ii.—v. and vii. of No. 74 in Church Hym. are taken, parts i. and vi. being from Canon Cooke's tr. from the original prose (see above). In the trial copy of H. A. & M. in 1859, an altered version of Neale's tr. was given beginning:—

6. O Come, O Come, Emmanuel. This was included in the 1st ed. of 1861, and again in the new ed. 1875; and is repeated in Kennedy, 1893; Allon's Sup. 1866; Wes. H. Bk., 1875; and others. Another tr. is:—

7. O Come, Emmanuel. O come! This is in the Anglican H. Bk., and was made by the editor.

Tr. as:—

Leave all to God. A good tr. (omitting st. iv.) by Miss Winkworth in the 1st Series, 1855, of her Lyra Ger., p. 145, omitting st. ii., iii., vi. In the second ed. p. 146, tr. of st. ii., iii., vi., were added. Repeated thus as No. 118 in her C. B. for England, 1863.

Other trs. are, all omitting st. ii., iii., vi.: (1) "O Lord, I long Thy face to see," by Miss Cox, 1841, p. 97 (1864, p. 115); (2) "My soul is thirsting, Lord, for Thee," by Lady Eleanor Fortescue, 1843 (1847, p. 36); (3) "Call me, O God; I come; for I", by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 7.

The trs. are, (1) "Once more from rest I rise again," by Miss Winkworth, 1865, p. 220 (1876, p. 222). (2) "From best, unconscious sleep I wake again," by Miss Cox, 1864, p. 185.

iv. Wer Geduld und Demuth liebet. [Patience and Humility.] Appeared in 1665, p. 92, and 1867, p. 135, as above (ed. Wendebooc, 1856, p. 43), in 11 st. of 4 l. Tr. as Patience and Humility, by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 225.

Apelles von Lüwenstern. [Lüwenstern.]

"Αφραστον θαύμα. St. Cosmas. From the Office for Easter Eve in the Triodion, i.e. the Lent volume which commences with the Sunday before Septuagesima, and goes down to Easter (see Greek Hymnody, xiv. 7). It is Ode 7 of the Canon, and is based on the Canticum, "The Song of the Three Children." Several Canons during Lent are composed of these Odes only; hence the name of the Lent volume "Triodion." The tr. of this Ode, "Christ, Who set free the Children three," was made by Dr. Littledale for and first pub. in the People's H., 1867, No. 110, signed "L.," and appointed for Easter Eve. The original dates from the early part of the eighth century, and is found in modern Greek Service Books. The hymn "The Sepulchre is holding" is a tr. by Dr. Littledale of θάφεος αφραστον from the same Office as the above. The author of the original, and the date are unknown. Dr. Littledale's tr. was made for and first published in the People's H., 1867, No. 111, signed "L.," and appointed, with the above, for Easter Eve. It is repeated in the Irvingite Hymns for the Use of the Churches. 2nd ed., 1871.

(J. J.)

Apostle of our own dear home. J. E. Millard. [St. Augustine.] Written for the festival of St. Augustine, and 1st pub., with a second hymn for the festival of St. Mary Magdalene, in the Ecclesiastici, c. 1849, and again in Lyra Sacrament, 1850, p. 92. From this later work it was transferred to the People's H., 1867, and signed "J. E. M."

Apostles of the risen Christ, go forth. H. Bonar. [Missions.] Printed in the second series of his Hymns of Faith & Hope, 1863, pp. 114-3, where it is headed "The Great Message," and the motto is prefixed:—

"Quo vos magistri gocia, quo salus
Invicta orbis, sancta cibos vei Portate verbum." Old Hymn.

It is in 5 st. of 6 l. Its use is mainly confined to America. [W. T. B.]

Apparuit repentina dies magna Domini. Amon, cir. 7 cent. [Advent.] The earliest reference which we have to this hymn is in Iles's De Metris (672-735). It is an acrostic, the first verse commencing with A, the third with B, the fifth with C, &c. Dr. Neale speaks of it as "a rugged, but grand Judgement Hymn," dates it "as early as the 7th century," and declares that "it manifestly contains the germ of the Dies Irae." The text is given in Casabianca's Hymn, in Ecclesiastici, Col. 1556; Thomasius, vol. ii, p. 433; Rambach, Anthologia, i. p. 121; Daniel, 1841; vol. i. No. 161; Du Merci, Poésies Populaires Latin, 1843, p. 135; Trench's S. Lat. Poetry, 1849 and 1873, and others. [W. A. S.]

Translation in C. U.:

1. That great day of wrath and terror. By J. M. Neale, in his Med. Hymns, 1851, p. 9. From this tr. a cento has been given in the Camden H. Bk., 1863, No. 235. Mrs. Charles has also rendered it as: "Suddenly to all appearing the great day of God shall come," in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 142, but it is not in C. U.

Apparuit benigntas. [Christmas.] A beautiful poem on the Incarnation quoted by Mone, No. 51, from a 15th cent. ms. at Karlsruhe in 92 lines. There is no tr. of the whole poem, but a cento beginning with L. 5, 0 amar quum extasias was tr. by the Rev. J. M. Neale, for the Hymnal N., 1854, in 8 st. of 4 l., the doctrine being an addition to the original text. This tr., considerably altered in some instances, has passed into the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; H. A. & M., 1861; People's H., 1867; the S. P. C. K. Church Hymn., 1871; the Hymnary, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. It begins in each hymnal:—"O Love, how deep, how broad, how high!" The original lines tr. are given in L. C. Biggs's Annotated H. A. & M., 1867, p. 177.

Appleton, Sarah [Miser].

Approach, my soul, the mercy seat. J. Newton. [Lent.] 1st pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, bk. iii., No. 12, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in all later editions of the same work. It came into early use in the hymnals and has attained to a foremost position as one of the most popular of Newton's productions. In the Olney Hymns it is the second of two hymns headed, "The Effort." The first hymn by Newton on this same subject begins:—

"Cheer up, my soul, there is a mercy seat."

No. 11, in 6 st. of 4 l. as above. Its similarity to "Approach, my soul," has led some to suppose it to have been written by an unknown compiler. In the American College Hymnal, N. Y. 1876, st. ii., iii. and iv. are given as No. 280, "Lord, I am come, Thy promise is my plea." The use of this hymn in any form is very limited.

Aquinas, St. Thomas. [Thomas of Aquinas.]

Are there not in the labourer's day? C. Wesley. [Duty.] 1st pub. in Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i. 124, in 5 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "The way of duty the way of safety." In 1790 it was embodied in the Wes. H. Bk., and from thence has passed into most of the hymnals of the Methodist bodies in G. Britain and America. It was introduced into the collections of the Ch. of England by Toplady, through his Ps. & Hymn., 1776. Orig. text in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 17.

Are we doing as we should do? T. Kelly. [Missions.] Contributed to a ed. of his Hymns, &c., between 1838 and 1853, 4 st. of 8 l. In the 1853 ed. (9th) it is given as No. 585, and headed "Questions for Conscience." Its use is limited.

Are we not sons and heirs of God? I. Watts. [Gravity and Decency.] 1st pub. with his Sermons on Various Subjects, &c., 1721, and was composed on the subject of his sermon on Phil. iv. 8. It was also repeated in 6 st. of 4 l. in later eds. of the Sermons. In Rippon's Sel., 1787, it was given, No. 229, as:—

"Behold the sons, the heirs of God," and as such is known to modern hymnals.

Are your souls the Saviour seeking? [Peace.] This anonymous hymn was given by Mr. Denham Smith in his Times of Refreshing, 1860, in 4 st. of 8 l. It has passed into several collections, including Com. Praise, 1880; Hymns for the Ch. Catholic, 1882, &c.; but in all cases as "Anon."

Arends, Wilhelm Erasmus, s. of E. F. Arends, pastor at Langenstein, near Halberstadt, was b. at Langenstein, Feb. 5, 1677. He became, in 1707, pastor at Crottorf, near Halberstadt, and in 1718, pastor of the church of St. Peter and St. Paul in Halberstadt. He d. at the latter place, May 16, 1721 (Koch, iv. 389; Allg. Deutsche Biog., i. 516: ms. from Pastor Spierling, Halberstadt, and Pastor Schaufl, Langenstein). He is said to have contributed three hymns to pt. ii., 1714, of Freylinghausen's G. B. Of these No. 118, 393, are ascribed to him at p. 3 of the Grischow-Kircher Nachr., 1771, to Freylinghausen's G. B., while the other is left anonymous. It is:—

Rüstet euch ihr Christenleute. [Christian Warfare.] First pub. as No. 360 in 1714 as above, in 4 st. of 11 l. Dr. Jacobs of Wernigerode informs me that Count Christian Ernst of Wernigerode (d. 1771), a well-known German hymno-
ARGLYWYDD, ARWAIN

"A Favourite Hymn, sung by Lady Huntington's Young Collegians.
Printed by the desire of many Christian friends.

Lord, give it thy blessing!

i. Guide me, O Thou great Jehovah,
Pilgrim through this barren land;
I am weak, but Thou art mighty.
Hold me with Thy powerful hand;
Bread of heaven, bread of heaven,
Feed me till I want no more.

ii. Open now the crystal fountain,
Wherein the healing stream doth flow;
Let the fire and cloudy pillar
Lead me all my journey thro';
Strong Deliverer, strong Deliverer,
Be Thou still my strength and shield.

iii. When I tread the verge of Jordan,
Bid my anxious fears subside;
Death of deaths, and hell's destruction,
Land me safe on Canaan's side:
Songs of praises, songs of praises,
I will ever give to Thee.

iv. Musing on myhabitation,
Musing on my heav'nly home,
Fill my soul with holy longings;
Come, my Jesus, quickly come;
Vanity is all I see;
Lord, I long to be with Thee."

This leaflet was undated, but was c. 1772.
During the same or the following year, it was included in the Lady H. Coll., 5th ed., Bath, W. Gye, No. 94. Stanzas i.—iii. had previously appeared in The Coll. of Hys. sung in the Countess of Huntington's Chapels in Sasser, Edinburgh: Printed by A. Donaldson, for William Balcombe, Augmoring, Sasser, No. 202. This is undated; but Mr. Brooke's copy contains the autograph, "Eliz.. Featherstonehaugh, 1772," the writing and ink of which show it to be genuine. We can safely date it 1771. It was repeated in G. Whitefield's Ps. & Hys., 1773, in Congers, 1774, and others, until it has become one of the most extensively used hymns in the English language. There are diversities of text in use the origin of which in every case it is difficult to determine. The most widely known are:

1. Where the 5th line in each stanza reads respectively, "Bread of heaven," "Strong deliverer," and "Songs of praises," the arrangement is from the Lady H. Coll., 1771. This form is given in nineteen out of every twenty hymnals which adopt the hymn, including H. A. & M., etc.

2. Where the 5th line reads respectively, "Lord of glory," "Strong deliverer," and "a strong deliverer," the text is from Cotterill's Sel., 1810 to 1819, where it is changed to the plural throughout.

3. Where the 5th line reads respectively, "Of Thy goodness," "Strong Deliverer," and "Glorious praises," the changes were made in Stallwood's Ps., 1816.

4. The original, with the omission of lines 5 and 6 in each stanza, thereby reducing it to 4 T's, given in many American hymnals, appeared in the Figuer D. H. Coll., 1826.

5. Where there are altered texts, as follows:

6. Where there are added texts, as follows:

7. Where there are only the 5th line, as follows:

These stanzas are a tr. of st. i., iii., v., W. Williams himself adopted the tr. of st. i., ii., iii., and iv. into English, added a fourth stanza, and printed them as a leaflet as follows:
ARISE, AND FOLLOW

This hymn in one form or another has been rendered into many languages, but invariably from the English. These trs. included the Rev. R. Bingham's rendering into Latin, "Magnum specto, Jovis," of the 3d st. arrangement, given with the English text, in his Hymns. Christ. Lat., 1871. [J. J.]

ARISE, and follow me. II Aford. [St. Matthew.] This hymn is No. 201 of his Year of Praise, 1867. In his Poetical Works, 1868, p. 308, it is dated 1844; but it is not in his Ps. & Hys., 1844, nor in his School of the Heart, &c. 1845. We have not traced it in a printed form beyond Johnston's English Hymnal, 1852, No. 205, where it is given with a doxology.

ARISE, and hail the happy [sacred] day. [Christmas.] Pub. anonymously in the Liverpool Liturgy, 1763, p. 155, in 5 st. of 6 l. In 1769 it was given in the Bristol Baptist Coll. of Asch & Evans, No. 96, and subsequently in several of the older hymn-books. In modern collections it is sometimes found as, "Arise and hail the sacred day," as in Hall & Laser's Evangelical Hymnal, N. Y., 1880. The chorus, "O then let heaven and earth rejoice," is not in the original. It appeared in some collections early in the present century. [See Scott.]

ARISE, in all Thy splendour, Lord.
Sarah Stein. [Mission.] In J. Dobell's New Selection, &c., 1803, No. 452, pt. 2, in 6 st. of 4 l., 5 st. of which are from No. 47 of J. Griffin's Sel. of Missionary & Devotional Hys., Porcia, 1797. The hymn "Though now the nations sit beneath," was re-written for American use, by L. Bacon (q. v.) from Dobell.

ARISE, my soul, arise, Shake off, &c. C. Wesley. [Christ the Mediator.] 1st pub. in Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1742, p. 204, in 5 st. of 6 l. and entitled "Behold the Man." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 323.) In 1750 it was included in the Wes. H. Bk. as No. 194 in an unaltered form, and has been repeated in all subsequent editions (ed. 1875, No. 202). From the Wes. H. Bk. it has passed into all the collections of the Methodist bodies in all English-speaking countries, and also into many hymnals outside of Methodism both in G. Britain and America. It has also been rendered into various languages. One in Latin, by the Rev. R. Bingham:—"Surge, surge, Mens mea," is given in his Hymnol. Christ. Lat., 1871. Mr. Stevenson has collected in his Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, numerous illustrations of the direct value which this hymn has been to many.

ARISE, my soul, arise, This earth, &c. J. Gabb. [General.] Contributed to the English Sacred Songster, 1873, together with his tune "Heavenward," No. 37, and re-published, unaltered, in his Wellborn Appendix, 1875, No. 93, but set to another tune (Leypen) also by Mr. Gabb.

ARISE, my soul, arise, Thy [The] Saviour's sacrifice, &c. C. Wesley. [On the Titles of Christ.] Appeared in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1739, in 15 st. of 6 l. In 1780, when included in the Wes. H. Bk., it was given as one hymn in two parts (No. 187), but as early as 1809 the parts were numbered as separate hymns, and they are given thus in the revised ed., 1875, Nos. 194, 195; and in most collections of the Methodist bodies. The second part or hymn is, "High above every Name." In Kennedy, 1863, the second line of part I, as above, begins, "The Saviour's sacrifice." Outside of the Methodist collections the use of both hymns is limited. (Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 146.)

ARISE, my soul, in songs to own.
Joseph Irms. [Praise to God the Father.] From his Zion's Hymns, &c., 3rd ed., 1825, No. 15, in 6 st. of 4 l., into Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, unaltered.

ARISE, my soul, my joyful powers.
I. Watts. [Redemption.] 1st pub. in Hymns and Spiritual Songs, 1709, bk. ii., No. 82, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Redemption and Protection from Spiritual Enemies." Its use, generally in an abbreviated form, has been and still is limited, in G. Britain, but is somewhat extensive in America.

ARISE, my soul, nor dream the hours.

ARISE, my tenderest thoughts, arise.
P. Doddridge. [Sorrow because of Sin.] Written, June 10, 1739, on the text, Ps. cxix. 158 ["He will not cast me out." and 1st pub. in J. Orton's ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, unaltered, in 5 st. of 4 l. and headed, "Behold Transgressors with Grief." Also repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of Doddridge, 1839. It came into C. U. at an early date, both in the Ch. of England and amongst the Nonconformists, and is still retained in numerous collections in G. Britain and America. It is a powerful and strongly worded hymn of the older type, and is suited for use on behalf of missions.

ARISE, ye people, and adore.
Harriet Auber. [Ps. xciii.] 1st pub. in her Spirit of the Psalms, 1829, in 4 st. of 4 l., "Hallelujah" being added to the last st. only. It is in many American Colls., and is more popular there than in England. [W. T. B.]

ARISE, ye saints, arise.
T. Kelly. [Christ the Leader.] 1st pub. in the 3rd ed. of his Hymns on V. F. of Scripture, 1809, No. 77, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed, "He teacheth my hands to war," Ps. xviii. 34. In 1820 it was taken out of the above, and included in Kelly's Hymns adapted for Social Worship, No. 88, but subsequently it was restored to the original work. Full text in Hymns, M. Moses, Dublin, 1853, No. 233. As in C. U. both in G. Brit. and America, it is in an abbreviated form, but the arrangement of stanzas differs in various collections.

ARISE, your voices all unite.
Arm of the Lord, awake, awake.
The Jerrors, &c. C. Wesley. [Missions.]
A cento composed of stanzas from three of the Hymns of Petition and Thanksgiving for the Promise of the Father, pub. by J. & C. Wesley in 1745. Stanzas 1, from hymn 18, st. 1; 2, from hymn 21, st. 2; and 4, from hymn 22, st. 1 and 4. It was embodied in the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk. in 1830, No. 696. In the revised ed. of that Coll., 1875, No. 443, the last stanza is omitted. Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 186.

Arm of the Lord, awake, awake.
The Dove, &c. C. Wesley. [Missions.]
This hymn was included in the first three editions of Hymns & Sacred Poems, all of which were pub. in 1739 (p. 222), but omitted in the fourth and fifth editions. In 1749 it was included in another series of Hymns & Sacred Poems, as the second part of a paraphrase of the 51st Psalm in 10 st. of 4 l. In 1780, 6 st. were included in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 313, and are retained in the revised ed. of 1875, No. 366. The same arrangement is also found in several collections both in G. Brit. and America. Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 362. Another hymn opening with the same first line, and of a similar character, was pub. in C. Wesley’s Hymns written in the time of the Tumults, June 1780, No. ix., Bristol, 1780. The Tumults referred to took place in London. It is not in C. U. Orig. text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. viii. p. 273.

Armstrong, Florence Catherine, daughter of William Armstrong, m.d., of Collanery, Co. Sligo, Ireland, b. March 18, 1843. Her well-known hymn:—

0 to be ever yonder [Longing for Heaven] was written in 1862, and pub. without her consent in the British Herald, Feb. 1863, p. 24, and dated “June, 1863.” It soon attained an extended circulation, and was given in several collections. In 1875 Miss Armstrong acknowledged the authorship in her work, The King in His Beauty and Other Poems.

Arndt, W. E. [Arndt, W. E.]
Arndt, Ernst Moritz, son of Ludwig Nicolaus Arndt, estate manager for Count Patras, in the island of Rügen, was b. at Schortitz in Rügen, Dec. 26, 1769. After studying at the Universities of Greifswald and Jena, where he completed his theological course under Paulus, he preached for two years as a candidate, but in 1798 abandoned theology. After a pedestrian tour through South Germany, Hungary, Northern Italy, France, and Belgium, he became, at Easter 1800, lecturer at the University of Greifswald, and in 1805 professor of history there. But in 1806, lamenting over the tyranny of France, he wrote his fiery Geist der Zeit (pt. ii. 1809, iii, 1818, iv. 1818) which awakened the patriotism of his countrymen, but drew on him the hatred of Napoleon, so that he had to flee to Sweden, and was not able to return to Greifswald till 1810. He again left Greifswald in 1812, and found a home with Baron v. Stein at St. Petersburg. After various wanderings, during which he wrote many pamphlets inciting his countrymen, as none else could, to deeds of valour, and composed his well-known songs (all of date 1813), “Der Gott der Eltern wachse hier.

O du Deutschland, ich muss marschieren.
Was blesen die Trompeten?
Was ist des Deutschen Vaterland?”

which were said to have done more to inspire the troops than a victory won, he settled for some time at Cologne as editor of a patriotic newspaper. In 1818 he was appointed professor of history in the newly-founded University of Bonn. Being accused by the Conservative leaders then in power of teaching Republicanism, he was, in 1820, unjustly deposed though his salary was continued to him, and was not restored till the accession of Friedrich Wilhelm IV. to the throne of Prussia in 1840. In token of respect he was elected Rector of the University 1840-1841, and lectured as professor till 1854. He continued his tranquil life at Bonn, varied by delusive hopes of better things from the Revolutionary periods of 1848 and 1855, till after having passed his ninety-first birthday (when he received some three hundred messages of congratulation which he personally answered) he departed to the Heavenly Fatherland, Jan. 29, 1860.

A man of learning, a true patriot, a distinguished poet, and a man greatly revered and beloved of the people, he was a worthy modern representative of the “old Arndt,” author of the True Christianity, a man of deep religious feeling, and a true-hearted and earnest witness for the Evangelical Faith. By his well-known songs the spirit of the Christian Church was roused. He was one of the prime movers in the reaction which has now rescued most of the German lands from the incursion of the xviith cent. Rationalistic hymnotherapy. To one pamphlet he annexed 300 hymns, his best known. Of the remaining 56 he wrote 37 appeared in his geistliche Lieder, Berlin, 1848, and the rest in the Frankfurt, 1849, and later editions of his Gedichte—the so-called complete edition of which, pub. at Berlin 1866, contains 427 sacred songs and sacred poems, ranging from 1767 to 1859, with a preface dated in Christmas week 1859.

The following 14 hymns by him have been tr. into English:—

i. Der heilige Christ ist kommen. [Christmas.] 1st pub. in 1818, vol. i. p. 319, and tr. as “The blessed Christ is coming,” by C. T. Astley, 1860, p. 24, in 4 st. of 8 l.

iii. Die Welt that ihre Augen zu. [Child’s Evening Hymn.] 1st pub. 1819 (vol. i. p. 285), as above, in 4 st. of 8 l. Tr. by J. Kelly, 1885, p. 109, “The busy world its eyes doth close.”

iv. Es lebt ein Geist, durch welchen alles lebt. [The Spirit of God.] 1st pub. 1818 (vol. i. p. 281) as above in 5 st. of 4 l., and tr. as:—

vi. Goeth nun hin und grabe mein Grab. [Burial of the Dead.] Written in 1818, and 1st pub. 1819 (No. 19) as above in 9 st. of 6 l., and included in Bunse's Versuch, 1833, and since in many other editions, e.g. Uwe L. S., 1851, No. 815. It is the most popular of his hymns and was sung at his own funeral at Bonn, Feb. 1, 1860 (Koch, vii. 147). The tr. in C. U. are:

(1) Go and dig my grave to-day: A good and full tr. in the 1st Series, 1855, of Miss Winkworth's Lyra Ger., p. 241 (ed. 1876, p. 243), and repeated as No. 188 in her C. B. for England, 1864, in Schaff's Christ in Song, ed. 1879, p. 536.

(2) Weary now of wandering here. A tr. of st. i., iv., ix., signed "F. C. C.", as No. 280, in Dr. Pagenstecher's Col., 1864. Other trs. are: (1) "Go! and let my grave be made," by Miss Cox, 1841, p. 83 (1867, p. 83); (2) "Prepare me now my lowly bed," by Isaac F. O. Westmead, 1843 (1847, p. 28); (3) "To now my friends, and dig my grave," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 109; (4) "Now go forth and dig my grave," by A. M. Jeaffreson, in Hidden Hours, 1873, p. 53.

viii. Ich weiss, woran ich glaube. [The Rock of Salvation.] Written in 1818, and 1st pub. 1819 (No. 28) as above in 6 st. of 8 l. In Knapp's Ec. L. S., 1837, No. 1396 (ed. 1865, No. 1349), it begins "Ich weiss, an wen ich glaube." The tr. in C. U. are:

(2) I know Whom I believe in. From Knapp, omitting st. ii., iii., as No. 289 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

x. Und klinget du immer Liebe wieder. [The Love of Christ.] 1st pub. 1855, as above, p. 57, in 5 st. of 6 l. By J. Kelly, 1865, p. 34, "And thou always love proclaim."

xi. Und willst du gar versagen. [Trust in God.] Written in 1854, and 1st pub. as above, 1855, p. 81, in 6 st. of 8 l. It is tr. as "And art thou nigh despairing," in the Family Treasury, 1877, p. 110.

xii. Was ist die Macht, was ist die Kraft. [Holy Scripture.] Written in 1818, and 1st pub. 1819 (No. 30) as above in 6 st. of 6 l., and included in Hofer's Pilgerhafte, Basel, 1863, No. 31. Tr. (1) "What is the Christian's power and might?" by R. Massie, in the British Herald, April, 1865, p. 61. (2) "What is the Christian's might, What is," by R. Massie in the Day of Rest, 1878, vol. viii. p. 335.
the King of Prussia interfered and sent two commissions in 1787 and 1788 on Arnold's behalf.

Now came the turning point in his life. A thief who had broken into the house of the Spiegel was apprehended at Alletsch about 50 miles south. To bring the thief to justice, Spiegel's wife and her youngest daughter, Anna Maria, went thither under Arnold's care.

Before preaching, the young widowed Duchess of Sachsen-Coburg, Arnold was summoned by her to become preacher at her court at Allet, and before entering on his duties was, on May 4, 1770, married in Church at Quedlinburg to Anna Maria Spiegel—a union productive of the happiest results, and which in great measure cured him of his Separatist tendencies, but which brought the ridicule of his enemies upon him, and caused his expulsion from the Angel Brotherhood.

Entering upon his duties at Allet, in 1772, he encountered many oppositions, and thus, in 1776, gladly accepted the call of the Principality of Nassau, where he occupied a position of great importance in the public service, being appointed pastor and inspector of Wertheim in the Altmark (near the junction of the Elbe and Havel), communicated to his father-in-law, who had married the daughter of the King of the district, beginning his labours on the 22nd Sunday after Trinity, 1767, by a sermon on St. Matt. xiii. 45. Unquestioned in word and work, by preaching, by house visitation, and by the composition of devotional manuals (one of which, entitled Praktischer Lieferspiegel, 1773, reached a third ed. in 1776), he sought the good of his flock and won universal love and esteem. His excessive devotion to study (publishing more than 200 works, some being folios, within 20 years) and his sedentary habits, brought on a severe attack of scurvy. On Whitsunday, 1774, when barely recovered from his illness, a recruiting party burst into the church and impressed some of the young men who were in the act of receiving Holy Communion. This outrage was declared by Arnold, and was then removed to bed. In earnest, he was not allowed to his friends to full remuneration of self and of the world and complete dedication to God, in peaceful communion with God not unnointed with the bitterness of an early age, the days passed till, on May 30, 1774, after he had raised himself in bed and exclaimed, "Blessed are those who hunger and thirst after righteousness! for they shall be filled," his spirit peacefully passed away, his mortal body being consigned to the grave on June 1—accompanied by a weeping multitude comprising nearly all the inhabitants of the place.

As a poet Arnold holds a high place, though few of his hymns (mostly written at Quedlinburg) are entirely fitted for use in public worship. Eichmann characterizes his poems as full of originality, as pervaded with a deep sense of meritification and the fear of God, and as full of glowing devotion and intensity of love for Christ. All are tinged, in some very deep, with his mysticism, dealing largely in theosophic language with the marriage of the soul to God. They found admission into the hymn-books of the Separatists and the Pietists, and many of them in modern times are included in Knapp's works. [1] by other authors, the task of discrimination is not easy, and thus it comes to pass that in the collected editions by Albert Knapp (Stuttgart, 1843), and by K. C. E. Steinsbeck (Stuttgart, 1843) a number of pieces are included which are not really by Arnold. Somewhat curiously, Miss Winkworth, in her Christian Singers of Germany, 1863, has selected three pieces, and only three, as favourable specimens of Arnold, and as it happens, not one is really by him. Knapp frequently abridges and alters, while Eichmann gives a valuable introduction, the unaltered text of 129 hymns, and, as an appendix, a selection from the poems not in regular form (Koch, vi. 1:38-159; Eichmann's Instruction, Almg. Deutsche Bögen, i. 587-588). The hymns here noted are arranged thus: I. Probably by Arnold; II. Possibly by Arnold; III. Not by Arnold, but not found earlier than in the works mentioned above. Of these the following have been rendered into English:

I. Hymns probably by Arnold, 1-9.

1. Überzeugt, Jesu Christe. [Love to Christ.] Founded on Canticles viii. 6, and 1st pub. 1703 as above, No. 66 (Eichmann's ed. 1846, p. 121, in 8 st. of 4 l. and included as No. 504 in Freytaghauzen's G. R. 1704, Tr. as "Christ, thou'rt Wisdom unto me," No. 663 in pt. 1 of the Moravian H. Bk. 1734.

2. Holdenligt Gottes-Lamm. [Victory of Love.] 1701 p. 61, as above (Eichmann's ed. 1846, p. 172, in 11 st. of 4 l. and included as No. 554 in Freytaghauzen's G. R. 1704, Tr. as "One, God's beloved Lamb," as No. 829 in pt. 1. of the Moravian H. Bk. 1734. In 1799 altered to "Thou, God's most holy Lamb," and in 1801 and later eds. as "Jehovah! holy Lamb." [Love to Christ.] Founded on Canticles iii. 11, and 1st pub. 1700 as above, No. 41 (Eichmann's ed. 1846, p. 197), in 12 st. of 4 l. Included as No. 716 in the Herrnhut G. R. 1735. Tr. as "Daughters of Zion, who're no more," No. 695 in pt. 1. of the Moravian H. Bk. 1754.

4. Mein König, schreib mir dein Gesetz. [Brotherly Love.] Founded on Ps. cxlvii. 8, and James i. 8, and 1st pub. 1699, No. 125, as above (Eichmann's ed. 1846, p. 55), Knapp, 148, p. 119, in 16 st. of 4 l. Included as No. 37 in Freytaghauzen's G. R. 1704, Tr. as "Thy law, O Lord, be my delight," as No. 479 in the Moravian H. Bk. 1779, and repeated in later eds.

5. O Durchbrecher alter Bande (v. w.).

7. O stilles Lamm, ich euch ein sanfter Wissen. [Love to Christ.] A poem 1st pub. 1696, No. 34, as above (Eichmann's ed. 1846, p. 276), in 21 lines, entitled "Thou art the Virgin, these are they which follow the Lamb," Rev. xiv. 4. In pt. II. 1714, of Freytaghauzen's G. R., a recast beginning "O stilles Gottes-Lamm," in 12 st. of 4 l., was included as No. 478. Texts are—from the second form: (1) "Merk, patient Lamb of God, to Thee," by J. Wesley, in Ps. 22. Hymn, 1747 (P. Wordsworth, 1852-62, vol. II. p. 14), repeated as No. 546 in pt. 1. of the Moravian H. Bk. 1754; (2) "Merk, patient Lamb of God, impart," as No. 434 in the Moravian H. Bk. 1759, and later eds.

8. So führt du doch recht selig, Herr, die Deimung. [Trust in God.] 1st pub. 1698, No. 135, as above (Eichmann's ed. 1846, p. 69), in 12 st. of 4 l., entitled "The best Guide," included as No. 219 in Freytaghauzen's G. R. 1704, and recently as No. 1 in the Fre. L. S. 1841. Dr. Schaff, in his Deutsches G. R., twice, says of it: "It was the favourite hymn of the philosopher Schelling. It is, however, more suited for private use than for Public Worship." It is a beautiful hymn, marked by profundity of thought and depth of Christian experience. The only tr. in C. U. is How

ARNOLD, GOTTFRIED

AROUND THE THRONE

Arnswanger, Johann Christoph, son of Georg Arnswanger, merchant in Nuremberg, was b. at Nuremberg Dec. 28, 1623. He entered the University of Altdorf in 1644, and that of Jena in 1647, where he graduated M.A. Aug. 9, 1647. After short periods of residence at Leipzig, Hamburg, and Helmstadt he returned to Nuremberg in 1659. There he was successively appointed Stadt-rat in 1651, Diaconus of the St. Agnien Church 1652, Morning Preacher in St. Walpurgis's 1654, and Diaconus of the Church of St. Lorenz 1659, where he became Senator 1674, and Archidiakon 1680. He d. at Nuremberg Dec. 10, 1696. (Koch, ib. 517-520 ; Albg. Deutche Bldg., I. 397.)

A lover of music and poetry, he was the correspondent of Anton Ulrich (q.v.), and a member of the Fruitbearing Society (1675). He did not join the Nuremburg Pergnitz Shepherds' Order, seeking in his poetical work simplicity and fitness for popular use rather than their somewhat affected "learnedness." The best of his hymns, some 400 in all, the most important being those pub. in 1659, appeared in his:

1. Neumusische Lieder, Nuremberg, 1659, in two books, each containing 70 hymns, set to music by the best organists and choirmasters in Nuremberg.

2. Reifliche Psalmen und Christliche Pfalmen, Nuremberg, 1663, with 150 hymns in three divisions, with melodies by the musicians of Nuremberg.

Of these hymns the only one tr. into English is:

Around the throne of God, a band [in circling band]. J. M. Neale. [Children's Hymn.] This hymn appeared in Dr. Neale's Hymns for Children, 1st Series, No. xxxi., 1842, in 3 st. of 4 l. (with Bp. Ken's doxology), for Michaelmas Day. Two forms have been the outgrowth. The first, beginning with the same first line, is found, somewhat altered, in Harland's Ch. Psalter, &c., No. 248; Thring's Coll., 1862, in 4 st., with "Thine" for "Thy," st. 3, l. 1, H. A. & M., 1875, No. 333, and other hymnals, and the second, "Around the throne in circling band," in the Sarum Hymnal, 1868, No. 312, and others.

Around the throne of God in heaven

Thousands of children. Anne Shepherd. [Children's Hymn.] Pub. in her Hymns adapted to the Comprehension of Young Minds. No. 29, in 6 st. of 5 l. The date of the 1st ed. of this work is undetermined. Dr. Moffatt tr. this hymn into the Bechuana language for his Kuruman Coll., 1838. In 1853, 4 st. were transferred to the Leeds H. Bk., No. 877, and from thence passed into later collections.
Orig. text in the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 448, with the change in st. v., l. 3, "that precious, purple flood" to "that purple, precious flood." It is in very extensive use in America and other English-speaking countries. Orig. text in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 495.

Around the throne of grace we meet,
J. Montgomery. [Divine Worship.] This hymn seems from its character and construction to have been written for one of the great Whit- sun tide gatherings of S. School children in Sheffield, or for an occasion of a somewhat similar kind. No record, however, is found amongst the "ms." we trace its first publication to his Original Hymns, 1833, No. 323, in 5 st. of 4 l., with the title, "Unity in Faith, Hope, and Feeling." Its use is limited.

Around Thy grave, Lord Jesus, J.
G. Deck. [Holy Baptism.] 1st pub. in Ps. & Hys., Lon., Walther, 1842, pl. i, No. 277, in 4 st. of 8 l. It is given in an unaltered form in Spurges's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 921; and in the Baptist Ps. & Hys., 1838, No. 699, with alterations made for that collection by Mr. George Ramson. The American collections, however, usually follow the original text.

Around Thy table, Holy Lord. Mary Peters, wit.
Bawley. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in Ps. & Hys., Lon., Walther, 1842, pl. i, No. 255, in 7 st. of 4 l. In 1847, it was included, with alterations by Mrs. Peters, in her Hymns Intended to Help the Com. of Saints, No. 85. The form in C. U. is in Dr. Walker's Cheltenham Coll. and others, is that of 1842. In the Amer. Bapt. Praise Bk., N.Y., 1867, No. 795, the Ser. of Songs for Bapt. Churches, Boston, 1871, No. 857, and others, there is a cento composed of the opening stanza of this hymn, together with st. v. and vi., from T. Cotterill's "Bless'd!" with the preface of their God, slightly altered. [W. T. B.]

Around Thy table, Lord, we meet.
[Holy Communion.] The hymn beginning with this line in the 15th ed. of Swell's Sel. (1877) is a cento the greater portion of which is an alteration and rearrangement of Mrs. Peters's hymn as above.

Arrayed in majesty divine, What power, &c. J. Merrick. [Ps. civ.] A cento from his paraphrase of Ps. civ. The original was pub. in his Psalms, Translated or Paraphrased in English Verse, 1765, in 140 lines beginning, "Awake, my soul, to hymns of praise," and repeated, with alterations and additions by the Rev. W. J. Tattersall, in his Coll. of Hys., &c., 1795, and later editions, as are one or two modern collections, is slightly altered from the original.

Arrayed in robes of virgin white.
G. Moullins. [ Martyrs.] 1st pub. in the Church Times, June 10, 1865, under the signature "G. M. and again in the Author's Hymns & Lyrics, 1867, in 6 st. of 6 l., with the heading, "Hymn for Festival of Martyrs, p. 157. In 1867 it was included in the People's H., No. 210, with the substitution of the refrain for the last three lines of the original concluding stanza, thereby attaining uniformity throughout.

Art thou acquainted, O my soul? C. Elliott. [Despondency.] 1st printed in 1834, in the Appendix to the Invalid's H. Bk., the entire Appendix being from Mi's Elliott's pen. It is No. vi., is headed "Under Depression of Spirits," and based onJob xi. 21. It is in 8 st. of 4 l., and is retained in subsequent editions.

[ W. T. B.]

Art thou, Lord, rebuking nations. W. H. Havergal. [In time of war.] Written in September 1831, and printed for the Ch. Miss. Soc. Anniversary in Astley Church, Sept. 25, 1831, the text on that day being Amos viii. 11. It was in 5 st. of 6 l. Included in Life Echoes, 1883. [Hav. ms.]

Art thou, sinner, sighing, weeping.
A. M'dlane. [Invitation.] Written on Dec. 4, 1779, and 1st pub. in the Joyful Tidings H. Bk., 1860, No. 4, in 5 st. of 4 l. [Hav. ms.], is in the metre of "Art Thou wany, &c." and is frequently used in Mission services.

As birds their infant brood protect.
W. Cooper. [Divine Protection.] Appeared in the Oney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i, No. 72, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is based on Ezek. xlivi. 35. It is found in several of the older hymnals, including Cotterill's, 1810 to 1813, Bickersteth's, 1833, and others, but its modern use is confined mainly to America.

As Christ our Saviour's gone before.
G. Thring. [ Ascension.] Written in 1863, and 1st pub. in his Hymns Congregational and Others, 1866, p. 42, and from there has passed into the Uppingham School H. Bk., the Hy. Comp., Thring's Coll., &c. It is based upon the Collect for Ascension Day.

As for Thy gifts we render praise.
[National Hymn.] Licensed to Christopher Barker in 1578 and appended to the subsequent editions of the Accession Service in Q. Elizabeth's reign. It is headed "Anthem or Prayer for the preservation of the Church, the Queen's Majesty & the Realm, to be sung after evening prayer at all times." It has a chorus:

"Save, Lord, and bless with good increase Thy Church, our Queen and Realm, in peace."

After this chorus, which heads the Anthem, come 4 st. of 6 l. and the chorus added above. The hymn has been reprinted in full in the Parker Society's edition of Liturgical & Occasional Forms of Prayer in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Cambridge, 1847, p. 560, but the original spelling is not retained. In 1863 Dr. Kennedy gave in his Hymns. Christ., No. 735, a slightly varying form in the original spelling, but whether the variations are by him, or are due to differences in the early copies is unknown. [W. T. B.]

As helpless as the [a] child who clings. J. Dr. Burns. [Trust.] 1st pub. in his little book of prayers and hymns, The Evening Hymn, 1836, No. 9, in 3 st. of 8 l., and headed "Childlike Trust." It is given in the Appendix to Dr. Walker's Cheltenham Coll., the new ed. of Stowell's Coll. (1st ed., 1881), and others. It is a tender, childlike hymn, for private use, and is sometimes given as a hymn for children.

As high as the heavens, and as vast. J. Conder. [Ps. xxxvi.] The earliest date to which we have traced this version of Ps. xxxvi. is Conder's Hymns of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 13, in 5 st. of 4 l. In 1859 it was reprinted in the New Cong., 1859, No. 49, in an unaltered form.

As many as in Adam die. C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] This cento as in the Meth. Free Ch. II. Bk., No. 711, is compiled from two of C. Wesley's Short Hymns, 1792, vol. ii., thus: st. i. from No. 248, on Matt. xxv. 46; st. ii. from No. 88, on Matt. viii. 2, Full text in P. Works, 1866-72, vol. x. pp. 201 and 400.

As morn to night succeeds. W. C. Diz. [Victory through Suffering.] 1st pub. in the People's H., 1867, No. 459, in 9 st. of 4 l.

As much have I of worldly good. J. Conder. [Contentment.] Appeared in his Star in the East, and Other Poems, 1824, pp. 60-61, in 4 st. of 6 l., and entitled "The Poor Man's Hymn, 'Hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom,' James, ii. 5." In 1856 it was repeated in his Hymns of Praise, Prayer, &c., p. 147, and headed with the text, "The disciple is not above his Master," Luke vi. 40. The congregational use of this hymn began with Bickersteth's Christ. Psalm. 1833, and Conder's Cong. H. Bk., 1839, No. 433. It was repeated by the N. Cong., 1839, No. 348, and Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, No. 740.

As nigh Babel's streams we seate. G. Wilber. [Ps. cxxxvii.] A rendering of Ps. cxxxvii. in 6 st. of 6 l. from his Hymns of the Psalms, 1752, into the Anthologia Davudiana, 1846, pp. 479-81. [English Psaliers, § 10.]

As oft with worn and weary feet. J. Edmeston. [Symphony of Christ.] This is No. iv. of his Fifty Original Hymns, Northampton, 1833, pp. 7-8. The hymn is founded on Heb. iv. 15, and is in 4 st. of 6 l. Orig. text, Lyra Brit., 1867. Its use, which is somewhat extensive, is mainly confined to America. In the Amer. Bap. Prayr Bk., N. Y., 1871, No. 984, it is attributed to "Wilberforce" in error. [W. T. B.]

As panting, in the sultry beam. John Bowdler. [Ps. xii.] A metrical rendering of Ps. xii. from his Select Pieces in Verse and Prose, 1814, p. 60, in 2 parts, each containing 4 st. of 6 l. The first part is found in some of the older collections, including Elliott & Ps. & Hps., 1835, and others, but has almost entirely fallen out of use in G. Brit. It is still found in a limited number of American hymnals. Orig. text, Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 89.

As pants the hart for cooling springs. J. Merrick. [Ps. xxii.] This metrical paraphrase of Ps. xxii. appeared in Merrick's Psalms Tr. or Paraphrased in English Verse, 1765, in 16 st. of 4 l. Various compilations have been made therefrom, as in Collyer's Sel. of 1812, the Islington Coll. of 1830, and others.

As pants the hart for cooling streams. Tate and Brady. [Ps. xxxii.] Appeared in the New Version of the Psalms, 1696, in 6 double stanzas of 4 l. From it numerous compilations have been made extending from three stanzas to six, with T. & B.'s C. M. doxology sometimes added as in H. A. & M., but usually without alterations, save in some special instances to be noted. A copy of the Book of Common Prayer with the New Version appended thereto being within the reach of all, full details of these arrangements from the original are uncall for (see Eng. Psaliers, § 13). The principal texts which have been altered are:

1. That by the Rev. H. F. Lyte, which appeared in his Spirit of the Psalms, 1834, in 4 st. of 4 l., the third stanza being rewritten from T. & B. It is found in several collections both in G. Brit. and America, and may be recognized by comparing any given text with the N. Cong., 57, or Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 513.

2. Another version is found in Hall's Mitre, 1836. From Hall's MS. Notes in his copy private of the Mitre, we find the alterations were made by E. Oder, who assisted Hall in compiling that collection. This arrangement is limited in use.

As pants the hart for water-brooks. [Ps. xiii.] This L. M. version of Ps. xiii., of more than usual merit, is given anonymously in the Peru. Hymnal, Philadelphia, 1874.

As pants the wearied hart for cooling streams. G. Gregory. [Ps. xiii.] 1st pub. in 1787 in George Gregory's translation of Bp. Lowth's Praelectiones Sacrae. It is a tr. of the Bishop's Latin Version of Ps. xiii. It was given in an altered form in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, p. 25, in 9 st. of 4 l., and repeated in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1823, p. 58, with, in the latter case, the signature in the Index—"Bp. Lowth." It has come into C. U. in its altered form, both in G. Britain and America, but abbreviated. It is found in the Amer. Prot. Epis. P. Bk. Coll. as early as 1826. [W. T. B.]

As showers on meadows newly mown. T. Gibbons. [Divine Influence.] Printed in 1784 as No. 28 in Bk. i of his Hymns adapted to Divine Worship, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is founded on Ps. lxxxi. 6, and headed "The Divine Influences resembled to Rain." In 1787 Dr. Rippon included it in his Sel., No. 203. It was repeated in later editions, and thence passed into many collections.
In America specially it has long been in C. U. in various forms, the most popular being st. iv. v. vi. as:— "As in soft silence, vernal showers"—sometimes altered to—"As when in silence, vernal showers."—[W. T. B.]

As some tall rock amidst the waves.

J. Newton. [St. Stephen.]—On "The Death of Stephen," in 6 st. of 4 l., and 1st pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i. No. 120, and republished, without alteration, in later eds. It was in C. U. as early as Cotterell's St., 1819. It is seldom found in modern collections.

As the dew from heaven distilling.

T. Kelly. [Divine Worship.]—This hymn is given in the collections in two forms:—(1) The original, which was pub. by Kelly in the 1st ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1804, p. 58, hy. xci., in 2 st. of 14 l., and is found in modern editions of Rippon's St., in Spence's St. of G. & G., and others, and may be detected at once by the third line of st. i., reading "Richly unto all fulfilling," for the orig. "And revives it, thus fulfilling." In this form the ascription is to T. Kelly, 1804. J. Bulmer, 1835.—[W. T. B.]

As the hart, with eager looks.

J. Montgomery. [Ps. xi].—1st pub. in his Songs of Zion, 1822, in 4 st. of 4 l., and subsequently in various editions of his Poetical Works. It is only in limited use in G. Britain, but is given in several American collections including Songs for the Sanctuary, 1805, and others. Also in Martin and C., 1840 and 1873.

As the sun's enlivening eye.

J. Newton. [Paraph.]—Bull, in his life of Newton, p. 222, gives the following account of the origin of this hymn:—

"In November 1746 Mr. Newton underwent an operation for a tumour in his thigh. He was excruciatingly afflicted, and was very soon to resign his ordinary duties. On this occasion he composed the 1st St. 8 l. in the Olney Hymns."

As intimated, the hymn appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed "Paraph." It came into use in the older collections, and is still found in a few hymnals both in G. Britain and America. The hymn, "For a season called to part," which is given in the New Gen., 1859, No. 448, and other collections, especially in America, is composed of st. iv., v., and vi. of this hymn.

As thy day thy strength shall be.

Frances Havergall. [Daily Strength.].—Written Jan. 1, 1839, and pub. in the Sunday Magazine, July 1847. It was also inscribed by the author in the Album of her sister (Miss M. V. G. Havergall), and from that has been lithographed in facsimile in Miss Havergall's Memorials of her. Miss Havergall's note on the hymn is:—

"The New Year's Bells were ringing in St. Nicholas' Church close to our Rectory (Worcester). I was sleeping with my sister Miss A; she rose and came to hear them, and quoted the text. 'As thy day thy strength shall be,' as a New Year's Motto. I did not answer, but presently returned it to her in rhyming the two first verses (I think). She was pleased, so I finished it the next day and gave it her. The last verse, with a slight alteration, was placed by my cousins on Aunt A's tomb, 1865, thus:—

"Now thy days on earth are past, Christ hath callest thee home at last."—[H. F. C.]

This hymn is not in C. U. in G. Brit., but it has been adopted by various American compilers, and is given in Hymns and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, Songs of Christian Praise, N. Y., 1890, &c.

As to his earthly parents' home.

H. Alford. [Epiphany.]—Composed in 1865 for and 1st pub. in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 56, in 4 st. of 4 l., and appointed for the 'First Sunday after Epiphany.' In 1879 it was transferred from thence to the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., No. 114, in an unaltered form. It is also in other collections, including the latter. Hymns for the Church, N. Y., 1869, No. 130.

As various as the moon.

T. Scott. [Changes in Life.].—Contributed to Dr. Eunfield's Hymns for Public Worship, Worthington, 1772, No. 138, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "The changes of human life appointed by God." In common with all the hymns in that collection it was unaltered. In 1795 it reappeared in the Unitarian hymn-book known as "Kippis's Collection, 1795," No. 579, with the signature "Scott." From the foregoing collections it has passed into various hymnals in G. Brit. and America, sometimes slightly altered, as "As changing as the moon." Orig. text as above. It is somewhat curious that Scott did not include this hymn in his Lyric Poems and Hymns, 1773.

As when the deluge waves were gone.

Sir J. Bowring. [Joy after Sorrow.].—1st pub. in the 3rd ed. of his Matins and Vesper, 1841, in 3 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Joy after Sorrow." In 1869 it was included unaltered in Miss E. Courtland's Ps., Hymns and Anthems, 1860, No. 370.

As when the weary traveller gains.

J. Newton. [Nearest Heaven.].—Included in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 58, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Home in View," and continued in later editions of the same. It was given at an early date in the old collections, and is still in somewhat extensive use both in G. Britain and America, especially in the latter. In great many cases the text is altered and abbreviated. The Bapt. Ps. & Hymns, 1838, No. 576, is an exception in favour of the original. The Rev. R. Burgham has given a Latin rendering of the original with the omission of st. ii. in his Hymnol. Christ. Lat., 1871, p. 67:—"Ut quando fessus longa regione visis."—[W. T. B.]

As with gladness men of old.

W. C. Dix. [Epiphany.].—"Written about 1860 during an illness" (E. M. E.) and first printed in a small collection of hymns for private circulation, entitled Hymns of Love and Joy, and then in the trial copy of H. A. & M. In 1861 it was pub. in 5 st. of 6, almost simultaneously in the St. Raphael's Hymnal, Bristol, and in H. A. & M. From that date it has been incorporated in nearly every new hymnal and in new editions of the older collections in all English-speaking countries. Very slight variations in the text are sometimes found, as in the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875. The author's authorized text is in Ch. Hymns, 1871, and Thrang's Coll., 1882. This hymn was brought into great prominence by Sir Roundell Palmer (Lord Selborne) in his paper on English Church Hymnody, at the Church Congress at York in 1869:—

"Of writers still living, the names of many, and of some very eminent, will at once occur to my hearers; I do not feel called upon to make myself, in this place, either the critic or the eulogist. But I may be permitted to say, that the most favourite hopes may be entertained of the future prospects of British Hymnody, when among its most recent fruits is a work so admirable in every respect as the Epiphany Hymn of Mr. Chatterton Dix; than which there can be no more appropriate conclusion to this lecture, 'As with gladness men of old':"

An anonymous hymn—"As in Eastern lands afar"—given in Holy Song for all Seasons, Lon. Bell & D. Jdy, 1869, in 4 st. of 8 L, is based upon, and is an imitation of "As with gladness men of old." We have not met with it elsewhere. [J. J.]

Ascend Thy throne, Almighty King. B. Beddome. [Missions.] A short hymn in 3 st. of 8 L, on behalf of Missions, which was given in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 370, and repeated unaltered in all subsequent editions of the same. It was also included in B. Hall's ed. of Beddome's Hymns, 1817. The use of this hymn in G. Brit. has almost ceased, but in America it is given in a great number of collections, and is most popular.

Ascended Lord, accept our praise. Bp. W. W. How. [Thursday.] Appeared in the Parish Magazine, as the first of three "Week-day Hymns," March, 1871, in 5 st. of 4 L, and appointed for Thursday. The same year it was included in Ch. Hymns, No. 58, with one change only, at st. iii. 1, 1, "And week" for "Yet week," &c. This latter text, with the omission of st. ii., was also given in Thrang's Coll., 1882.

Aschenfeldt, Christoph Carl Julius, b. March 5, 1792, at Kiel. After studying at Göttingen he became, in 1819, pastor at Windbergen in Holstein. In 1821 he was appointed diaconus, and in 1829 chief pastor of St. Nicholas's Church in Flensburg; as also, in 1890, Prob-t of the district of Flensburg, and in 1851 Superintendent of the German-speaking portion of the Duche, when he resigned the last of those offices in 1854, being appointed oberconsistorialt. He d. at Flensburg, Sept. 1, 1856. His 150 hymns, elegant in form, but marked with some of the eighteenth century coldness, were contributed to various works and appeared in collected forms as:—

(1) Prekerhyme. Geistliche Lieder und Gebete auf die Sonn- und Festtage, Lübeck, 1823, containing 263 pieces, of which 136 are by A, and the rest by his brother-in-law, Heinrich Schmidt, pastor in Eidsbek, Holstein.

2) Geistliches Saatwesen, Schleswig, 1846, including 112 hymns, some of them altered versions of earlier pieces (Ahow, viii. 156-159; Alle. beischten Hymn.-l. 618).

Of his hymns the only one tr. into English is:—

Aus ethischem Geümmel. [Following Christ.] Founded on St. John xiv. 6, and contributed to Wehner's Christophoryncbes (G. D., Kiel, 1819, No. 49, in 3 st. of 8 L, entitled, "Jesus—the Way—the Truth—the Life," and being marked A—dt, has been erroneously ascribed to E. M. Arnot. Included in the Newtons, 1824, p. 269, and in various hymn-books, e.g. the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 623. The trs. of this in C. U. are:—

2. Amid this world's commotion. A good and full tr. by Mrs. Findlay in the 4th Series, 1862, of the H. L. L. (ed. 1862, p. 298; 1884, p. 218). Unaltered as No. 192 in Jellome's Coll., 1877, and as No. 501 in Wilder's Coll. [J. M.]

Ash, John, LL.D., b. at Stockland, Dorsetshire, cir. 1725, and studied for the Bap. Ministry under the Rev. Bernard Foskett, pastor of Broadmead, Bristol. He received a call from this congregation in 1748, moving to Pershore, on the death of Mr. Cooke, in 1751, d. at Pershore, Ap. 11, 1779. His works include an English Dictionary; Dialogues of Eunuchus; and Grammatical Institutes. In conjunction with Dr. C. Evans, q. v., he edited the Bristol Bap. Collection of Hymns adapted to Public Worship, Bristol, Pine, 1763, referred to in this Dictionary as the Bristol Bap. Coll. of Ash & Evans. Dr. Ash was not a writer of hymns. [Bapt. Hymnody.]

Ask, and ye shall receive. J. Montgomery. [Prayer.] Written Sept. 16, 1832, and, according to notes by Montgomery on the original ms., sent in ms. to several persons at different times (m. ms.). It was included by him in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 67, in 5 st. of 4 L, and entitled, "Asking, Seeking, Finding." It is based upon Matt. vii. 7, 8. It is in C. U. both in G. Brit. and America, but in each case to a limited extent.

Ask, and ye surely shall receive. [Prayer.] A cento in the Hymns for the Chapel of Harrow School, 3rd ed. 1866, No. 243, in 5 st. of 4 L. The st. i. v. we have been unable to trace, but st. vi. is from Montgomery's "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," q. v.

"Sleeping in Jesus. By Mrs. MacKay, of Hedgefield. This simple but expressive sentence is inscribed on a tombstone in a rural burying ground in Devonshire and gave rise to the following version."
In reprinting it at p. 1 of her Thoughts Redemed, 1854, Mrs. Mackay says the burying ground adjacent is that of Pennycross Chapel. She adds:

"Distant only a few miles from a bustling and crowded seaport town, reached through a succession of the lovely green larches for which Devonshire is so remarkable, the quiet aspect of Pennycross came soothingly on the mind. 'Sleeping in Jesus' seems in keeping with all around."

From the Amethyst it has passed into numerous hymnals in Eng. Brit. and America, and was recently included, in full, and unaltered, as No. 242 in the Scottish Presb. Hymn., 1876, and as No. 31 in the Free Church H. Bk., 1882, in Thring's Coll. 1882, No. 557, we have a cento composed of the first stanza of Mrs. Mackay's hymn, and st. ii.-vi. from Thring's "Asleep in Jesus, wondrous sleep," as noted below, but somewhat altered. This cento is unknown beyond Thring's Coll. [J. M.]

Asleep in Jesus, wondrous sleep. G. Thring. [Burial.] Written in 1871, and 1st pub. in Presb. Hutton's Lincoln Suppl., 1871; again, with music, in Hymn Tunes, 2nd ed. by Henry Hugo Pierson, 1872, and in the minor as Hymns and Sacred Lyrics, 1874, in 6 of 4 l. In 1880 it was included in the 1st ed. of Thring's Coll., No. 233, but in the 2nd ed. it was superseded by the cento noted above.

"Asseiep πνεύματος λαοῦ. St. John of Damascus. The Canon for St. Thomas's Sunday (i.e. Low Sunday), is based, in common with all the Greek Canons, upon the ninth Canticles of the Greek Service, with the omission of the second, in the case of Christmas and Easter Days (see Greek Hymn., § xvii. 2, and American Hymn. It was written probably about the middle of the eighth century (St. John died about 780): and the Canons are found in the Pentecostarion in the service for St. Thomas's Sunday, commonly known in the Anglican Church as Low Sunday. The translations of the first four Odes are:

Ode. i. "Aspee πνεύματος λαοῦ. Come, ye faithful. Raise the strain... This Ode is based upon the is by J. M. Neale, and appeared in an article on bracer, April, 1859; and again in his Hymns of was included, for the substitution of a doxology and repeated in the revised edition of 1875. The Hymnary text, 1871-2, is, however, unaltered, abbreviated, but all cases the translation is used as an Easter Hymn. In the original there is a refrain to every verse.

Ode. iii. Προκαταλείπω μνήμην Χριστοῦ. On the rock of Thy commandments... This Ode is based upon the Canticle, "The Song of Hannah," 1 Sam. ii. 3. Tr. by J. M. Neale as above. The tone of the is greater than the original. Not in C. U.

Ode. iv. "Νῦν τε μουστ ἔχουσιν Χριστόν. Christ, we turn our eyes to Thee... This Ode is based upon the Canticle, "The Song of Habakkuk," 12 Hab. i. 2. Tr. by J. M. Neale as above, omitting st. iv. Not in C. U. as a congregational hymn, but is found in Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 42.
cause of a portion in the Collegiate Church of St. Andrew in that city; that of the Crown of Thorns, in Paris and other places in France, to be observed on August the 15th, the anniversary of the day on which the relic was brought to Lyon by Gaultier, Archbishop of that city, after having been obtained from the Venetians by the King of St. Louis, afterwards deposited in the Saint-Chapelle in Paris; that of the Five Wounds occurs in the modern Paris Breviary on the Friday after Ash-Wednesday. A relic of the Lance being preserved at Prague, Pope Innocent IV. (1244-1254) instituted the Office for observance in the German Empire, in the following terms: " Granted that the Lance and Sails, and other instruments used in the Lord's Passion, procuring our salvation, are everywhere to be venerated by the faithful in Christ; and year by year solemn offices are celebrated in the church, and take place, having respect to the Passion itself; nevertheless we consider it worthy and fitting if a solemn and special Feast should be celebrated and take place with reference to the special instruments of that Passion, and particularly in those regions in which the instruments are preserved." We see how the observance has extended. (See Guye, Morteley, Lib. I. &c., Cavallari, Comment. in Sacra Rituum Congregationalis Secreta, Lib. I. Cap. iv. Decret. vii.).

Translations in C. U.:

1. See from on high, arrayed in truth and grace.

by E. Caswall, first appeared in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, and again in his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 33, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Prayer of Our Lord on Mount Olivet." The hymn:

2. See from on high, the Source of saving Grace.

in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 240, is an altered version of Caswall's translation.

Assembled at Thy great command.

W. B. Collyer. [Missions.] 1st pub. in his Hymns Partly Coll. and Partly Orig., 1812, No. 945, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "A Missionary Hymn for the Opening of the Service." It was repeated in later editions of the same collection, and also was adopted by several of the older compilers. It is rarely found in modern hymnals in G. Britain, but its use in America is extensive. Usually it is abbreviated to four or less stanzas.

Assembled in Thy house of prayer.

J. Montgomery. [Divine Service.] Written for the Sheffield S. S. Union, Whitsuntide gathering, 1810, and first printed on a fly-sheet for use at that time. The same year it was sent to Dr. Leifchild, and in 1812 it appeared as No. 31, in 8 st. of 4 l., in his collection of Original Hymns, and headed, "For a divine blessing on the ministry of the word." (M. 188.) In Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1858, it reappeared with the same title as No. 98.

Astley, Charles Tamberlane, son of John William Astley, of Dukinfield, Cheshire, born at the Lichfielding, near Mawley, near Widnes, 12 May, 1825, and educated at Jesus Coll., Oxford (of which he was a Scholar), graduating B.A. 1847, M.A. 1849. Taking Holy Orders in 1849, he was Evening Lecturer, Bideford, 1849. Incumbent of Holwell, Oxford, 1850-54. Vicar of Margate, 1854-1864, and Rector of Brasted, 1864-78. Mr. Astley is the author of Songs in the Night, 1869. This work is composed partly of original hymns and partly of tuns from the German. The latter are noted in part under their first lines in German. Of the original hymns, "O Lord, I look to Thee," a hymn for Private Use, in 10 st. of 4 l., is given in Stevenson's H. for the Ch. and Home, 1873, with the omission of st. viii. It was "written at Pisa, during illness, about December, 1858."

Astonished and distressed. B Bedone. [Lent.] Contributed to Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 40, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "The evil heart." From Rippon it has passed into several selections, and is found in use at the present time both in G. Britain and America, sometimes in an altered form. Orig. text as above. A revised version of the text was given in the posthumous ed. of Bedone's Hymns, edited by R. Hall, 1817, No. 469. This is not in C. U. In some collections the hymn is attributed to Toplady. This error arose out of the fact that Walter Riew included it in his unsatisfactory ed. of Toplady's Works.

W. T. B.

At even o'er the sun was set. H. Twells. [Evening.] Written for and 1st pub. in the Appendix to H. A. & M., 1808, in 7 st. of 4 l. It was originally in 8 st. The omitted st., No. iv., which has since been reinstated in Church Hymn, 1871, Thring's Coll., 1882, and others, reads:

"And some are pressed with worldly care, And some are tired with sinful doubt, And some such grievous passions tear, That only Thou canst cast them out."

Since the first publication of the hymn in H. A. & M. in 1808, it has been included in almost every collection published from that date both in G. Britain and America. It ranks with the most popular of evening hymns. The text which has the widest acceptance is that of H. A. & M. These changes, however, in the opening line are found in the collections:

1. "At even, o'er the sun did set;"
2. "At even, when the sun was set."
3. "At even, when the sun did set.

The last reading is adopted in Thring's Coll. and, together with the second, is based upon the passage in St. Mark i. 32. "At even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased," &c., in preference to the reading in St. Luke iv. 40, "Now, (reviced.) When the sun was setting." This preference has the support of the majority of commentators both ancient and modern, the ground taken being the acknowledged unlawfulness (with the Jews) of such a gathering of diseased persons on the day of rest. The Sabbath was ended. The question was discussed by Mr. Twells and another in the Literary Churchman, June 9 and 23, 1852. The weight of evidence given there was strongly in favour of the amended reading. Authorized text in Church Hymn. [J. J.]

At evening time let there be light.

J. Montgomery. [Evening.] This hymn on Zech. xiv. 7, in 3 st. of 6 l., was written at Conway, N. Wales, in Sept. 1828, and is referred to by Holland in his Memoirs of Montgomery, vol. iv. p. 273. It was pub. in his Poetical Portfolio, 1835, pp. 181-2, and in his Poetical Works, 1841 and 1854. It is in extensive use in America. In 1858, the hymn "At evening time, when day is done," appeared in the Bap. Ps. & Hymns, No. 196. This is represented in later eds. of that collection, in the Bap. Hymnal, 1879, and other hymnals. It is this hymn rearranged by George Rawson, and its right ascription is, "J. Montgomery, 1828, written by G. Rawson, 1858,"
AT EVERY MOTION

At every motion of our breath. J. Montgomery. [Value of Time.] Pub. in his Christian Psalmsist, 1825, No. 512, in 5 st. of 4 l, and headed, "The Value of a Moment." In 1833 it was repeated in his Original Hymns, No. 224, but is not among the "M. MSS." It is usually given in an abbreviated form. In J. H. Thom's Hymns, Chants, &c., 1858, it is in 3 st., and in the Scottish Evang. Union Hymnal, 1878, there are 4 sts.

At God's right hand in countless numbers. [Anticipation of Heaven.] This hymn, which is No. 1247 of the Moravian H. Bk. of 1849, and No. 403 of the Irish Church Hymnal, 1874, is thus composed: st. 1 is a single verse written by Ignatius Montgomery as the opening of an "Ode" compiled for the funeral of the Rev. Christian Gottfried Clemens, who died at Bristol 14th Aug. 1813. st. 2 is a tr. of Wern's enct. die angenehmsten Stunden, and st. 3 is a tr. of Angenehme Anwesenblicke (1766). These trs. are by Bishop Molitor (cir. 1774), from the German of Christian Gregory. They appeared as single verses in the (Moravian) Brethren's H. Bk., 1819, and were subsequently, in the edition of 1820, united by its editor, Bishop Foster, to the above stanza, "At God's right hand," &c., thus constituting the complete 8 cents of 3 st. as in the Irish Ch. Hymnal. For these details we are indebted to Major Crawford's Reg. Index of that Hymnal.

At length the worst is o'er, and Thou art laid. J. Keble. [Easter Eve.] 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, as the poem for Easter Eve, and continued in all subsequent editions of the same. It is in 8 st. of 8, in the Harrow School Coll. (var. dates), No. 113, the first stanza only is given.

At length this restless heart is still. T. Davis. [Private Use.] 1st pub. in his Devotional Verses for a Month, 1855, and from there it passed into the Bap. Ps. & Hymns, 1863, in 5 st. of 4 l. To adapt it more fully for public worship the author re-wrote it for his Hymns, Old & New, &c., 1864, as, "Lord, I would count each moment Thine," No. 336. It was repeated in his Annae Sacrae, 1877, and is appointed for Nov. 16, and entitled "Walking at Liberty."

At the tomb where Christ hath been. G. Montrésor. [Easter.] Pub. in his Hymns and "Love is stronger than death." In the same year it was included in the People's H., No. 129. In 1872 it was given in a revised form as "Near the tomb," in the Hymnary, No. 294.

At Thy command, our dearest Lord. J. Watts. [Holy Communion.] This is No. xxi. of his hymns. Prepared for the Holy Ordinance of the Lord's Supper," in his Hymns & S. Songs, 1769, Bk. ii., in 4 st. of 4 l. It is headed "Glory in the Cross; or, Not ashamed of Christ crucified." In G. Britain its use is not equal to that to which it has attained in America.

At Thy feet, O Christ, we lay. W. Bright. [Morning.] 1st appeared in the Monthly Packet for October, 1867, and again in Canon Bright's Hymns and Poems, 2nd ed. 1874, in 5 st. of 6 l. In the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875, it is given in full as No. 6, with the alteration in st. iii. 1 of "on Thy grace" to "in Thy grace." [W. T. B.]

At Thy feet, our God and Father. J. D. Burns. [New Year.] Printed in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, No. 92, and in his Remains by Dr. J. Hamilton, 1889, pp. 224-5, in 6 st. of 4 l, and headed "New Years Hymn," with the text, Ps. lxvi. 2, prefixed. It has attained to a fair position in the hymnals of G. Britain, Canada, and America. The opening line sometimes reads, "At Thy feet, O God our Father."

At Thy transfiguration, Lord. C. Wordsworth, Bp. of Lincoln. [The Transfiguration.] Appeared in his Holy Year, &c., 1869, No. 24, in 12 st. of 4 l, and again, with slight alterations, in later editions of the same, No. 29, but divided into two parts.

Atechinson, Jonathan Bush, b. at Wilson, New York, Feb. 17, 1840, and "licensed as a Methodist Preacher," Sept. 6, 1874. Of his hymns the following are the best known:

1. Behold the stone is rolled away. [Eastcr.] This was Mr. Atechinson's first hymn. It appeared in the S. School Times, Dec. 1874. It is not in use in Great Britain.

2. Fully persuaded, Lord, I believe. [Faith.] Written in 1874 or 1875, and 1st pub. in Gospel Hymns, No. 1. It is given in J. D. Sankey's Sac. S. & Solos, No. 149, with music by W. W. Sherwin.

3. I have read of a beautiful city. [Heaven.] Written about the same time as the former, and published in Gospel Hymns. It is given in J. D. Sankey's Sac. S. & Solos, No. 403, with music by O. F. Presbrey.

4. O crown of rejoicing that's waiting for me. [The Reward.] This hymn is also in J. D. Sankey's Sac. S. & Solos, No. 174, where it is set to music by P. Bliss. [F. M. B.]

Atkins, Lucy. [Wilson, L.] Atechinson, John, D.D., b. at Deerfield, New Jersey, Sept. 6, 1835, and educated for the Ministry, which he now exercises in the American Methodist Episcopal Church. His very popular hymn, "We shall meet beyond the river," was written in Jan., 1867. It appeared in Bright Jewels (to music composed for it in Feb. 1867 by Hubert P. Main), in 1869, No. 43, in 4 st. of 8 l. From the use of both words and music passed into J. D. Sankey's Sac. S. & Solos, No. 109.

Attend, and mark the solemn fast. John Logan and John Morrison. [True Fast-ATTEND, MY EAR

AUBER, HARRIET

ing.] 1st appeared as No. 28 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, as a version of Isaiah viii. 3-9, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the public worship ed. of that year issued by the Church of Scotland and still in use unaltered save st. vi., i. i. In the marking by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (q. v.), given as the joint production of Logan and Morison. From the 1781 it has passed into a few modern hymnals, and is included as No. 65 in Robin's H. adapted to the Ch. Services, 1859. In the Amer. Sab. H. Bk., 1858, st. i.-vi., beginning, “Do I delight in sorrow’s dress,” were included as No. 1148, while st. ii.-vii., beginning, “Let such as feel oppression’s load,” were included as No. 759 in Campbell’s Comp. H. Bk., 1837. [J. M.]

Attend, my ear, my heart rejoice.

P. Doddridge. [Reward of the Righteous.] This hymn is not in the “H. mss.” It was pub. by J. Orton in Doddridge’s Hymns, c., 1755, No. 187, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, “The final Sentence, and Happiness of the Righteous.” Its use is limited.

Attend, while God’s exalted Son.

I. Watts. [New Creation.] 1st pub. in his Hymns & S. Songs, 1709, Bk. ii., No. 130, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, “The New Creation.” It is in limited use in G. Britain and America. The hymn, “Mighty Redeemer, set me free,” found in a few collections including the New Cong., 1859, is composed of st. iv.-vi. of this hymn.

Attend, ye tribes that dwell remote.

John Morison. [The Hope of the Just.] 1st appeared as No. 22 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, as a version of Isaiah xxxiii. 13-18, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the public worship ed. of that year, issued by the Church of Scotland and still in use, it is No. 21, with st. i. ii. 2-4, and iii. ii. 3-4, rewritten. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (q. v.) ascribed to Morison included in a few modern hymnals, as recently in Flatt’s Coll. Paisley, 1871, No. 296. Compare a recast of this beginning, “Attend, ye people, far and near,” by Miss Leeveon her Par. & Hys. for Cong. Singing, 1853, No. 47. [J. M.]

Attolle paullum lumina. [Passiontide.]

The text of this hymn is in Daniel i. 435; Simrock, p. 110: the Corolla Hymnorum, Cologne, 1806, p. 17, and is of unknown authorship and date. Baudler, i. p. 493, cites it as in the Stierns Symphoniarum, 1678. Dr. Neale dates it, in common with “Exitio Sion filiae, Videte, &c.” as being:

“Clearly of the very latest date: certainly not earlier than the sixteenth, it may be the beginning of the seventeenth, century. Their intensely subjective character would be a sufficient proof of this: and their rhyme equally shows it. Feminine double rhymes, in almost all mediaval hymns, are reserved for trochaic measures:—their use, elsewhere, in iambs, gives a certain impression of irreverence which it is hard to get over. Notwithstanding the wide difference between these and mediaval hymns, they possess, I think, considerable beauty, and perhaps will be more readily appreciated by modern readers.” Med. Hys., 2nd ed., 1867, p. 214 [W. A. S.]

Translators in C. U.:

2. O Sinner, lift the eye of faith, is the above translation, in an altered form, made by the Compilers of H. A., and M., and included in that collection in 1861. Concerning the alterations, Dr. Neale says in his 2nd ed. of the Med. Hys., 1863, that “the alteration of the two trochaic into iambic lines” is “an improvement on the original metre.” Although thus commended by Dr. Neale, the use of this form is almost exclusively confined to H. A. and M.

3. O Sinners, lift your eyes and see. By F. Pott, in his Hymns, c., 1861, No. 189, in 5 st. [J. J.]

Atwood, Henry Adams Bergison, M.A., b. Jan. 13, 1800, educated at Queen’s Coll., Oxford, graduating in 1822. He was successively Curate of Kenilworth, Chaplain to the Bishop of Lichfield, and Vicar, in 1839, of Ashleworth, Gloucestershire. In 1837 he published Hymns for Private or Congregational Use, for every Sunday in the year. He d. in 1877.

Auber, Harriet, daughter of Mr. James Auber, b. in London, Oct. 4, 1773. During the greater part of her quiet and secluded life she resided at Broxbourne and Hoddesdon, Herts, and died at the latter place on the 20th Jan., 1862. Miss Auber wrote devotional and other poetry, but only a portion of the former was published in her Spirit of the Psalms, in 1829. This collection is mainly her work, and from it some useful versions of the Psalms have been taken and included in modern hymn-books, about 20 appearing in Spurgeon’s O. O. H. Bk., 1866. Miss Auber’s name is widely known, but it is principally through her exquisite lyric, “Our blest Redeemer, ere He breathed,” and the Epiphany hymn, “Bright was the guiding star that led.” (For criticism of her work, see English Psalmers, § 17.) In addition to these and other hymns by Miss Auber, which are annotated under their respective first lines, the following are also in C. U., but principally in America:

1. Arise, ye people, and adore. B. aster.
2. As Thy chosen people, Lord, Ps. Ixix.
3. Can guilty man indeed believe? Ps. xcv.
4. Delightful is the task to sing. Ps. cxiv.
5. Father of spirits, Nature’s God. Ps. cv.
7. Hasten, Lord, the glorious time. Ps. cxvii.
10. Jesus, Lord, to Thee we sing. Ps. cx.
11. O all ye lands, rejoice in God. Ps. cxv.
12. O God, our Strength, to Thee we sing. Ps. cxvi.
13. O praise our great and gracious Lord. Ps. cxvii.
15. Sweet is the work. O Lord. Sunday.
17. The Lord, Who hath redeemed our souls. Ps. cxix.
18. When all esteems a Father’s love above all. Ps. cv.
20. Who, O Lord, when life is o’er. Ps. cv.
21. Whom have we Lord, in heaven, but Thee. Ps. cvii.
Auctor Beate Saeculi.

[Love of Jesus]

This hymn is of unknown authorship and date. It is for the Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus; for which Feast in some ed. of the Roman Brev. later than 1755 there are two distinct offices with different hymns; the day of observance being that following the octave of Corpus Christi (viz. Monday before the 3rd Sunday after Whitsunday). Auctor beate saeculi is the hymn set second Vespers in the first office when the Feast is kept on its own day, and with the rank of a greater double; and at both Vespers when the Feast is transferred, or kept with the rank of a double of the first or second class, the reason being that in the former case the first Vespers are assisted by the second Vespers of the Octave of Corpus Christi. In England the first office is appointed to be said on the Sunday after the octave of Corpus Christi, with the rank of a double of the second class; religious orders, as a rule, observing it on the Friday succeeding that octave, thus the hymn occurs at both Vespers. In addition to modern ed. of the Roman Brev. the full text is given in Daniel, iv. p. 811, but without note or comment. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U. —

1. Father of mercies, hear Thy pious, &c. By Bp. W. G. Dune, 1st pub. in his Songs by the Way, 1824, from whence it passed into Hall's Hymnal, 1836; Cookie & Denton's Hymnal, 1853; the Sarum, 1868; New Hymn, 1875; Kennedy, 1863, No. 384, and others. (Orig. fr. Songs by the Way, ed. 1875.) This br. is sometimes attributed, as in Miller's Singers & Songs, p. 12, to Dr. Neale, in error.

2. Thou loving Maker of mankind. By E. Caswall, from the Roman Brev. text. Appeared in his Lyra Catholicus, 1849, p. 70, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 39. It is given in several Roman Catholic and other collections, and altered as "O loving Maker of mankind," in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 211.

3. Begin the work, give ear. By J. M. Neale. Appeared in the Hymnal N., 1852, from whence it passed into Murray's Hymnal, 1852, and several later collections.

4. Father of mercies, hear, Before Thy throne, &c. By J. A. Johnston. Contributed to his English Hymnal, 1852 to 1861, in 5 st. of 4 l.

5. A Merciful Creator, hear, Regard us, &c. By J. D. Chambers, in his Land's Hymns, 1857, i. p. 129, in 5 st. of 4 l. This has been repeated in the ed. of 1868; in Dr. Irons's Hymns, 1868; the People's H., 1867, &c.

6. O Merciful Creator, hear, Te us in pity, &c. This rendering in H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, Pott's Hymns, 1861, Ch. Hys., 1871, &c., is a cento from the trs. of Neale, Chambers, and others. It is said in the Index to H. A. & M. to be by the "Rev. J. M. Neale, D.D., and Compilers: from the Latin." It seems from Mr. Kelton's note in Ch. Hymns, that the Rev. F. Pott was one of those "Compilers," and that to him this arrangement is mainly due.

7. O gracious Father, bend Thine ear. Two hymns, beginning with the same stanza, are in C. U. (1) in the Parish H. Bk. 1863; and (2) in Chope's Hymnal, 1864. The latter is the Parish H. Bk. text, with another st. (i.).

Translations in C. U. —

2. Thou gracious Author of our days. J. Chandler, 1837.
3. Hear, our all-gracious Father, hear. Mont, 1837.
7. O merciful Creator, heed. Hewett, 1859. [J. J.]

The text was repeated by Daniel, iv. p. 171, with reference to Du Méril. It is a Pilgrim's song, and as such it might be used as a Processional. Dr. Neale has printed Du Méril's text (without the various readings) in his Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1851, p. 227; and Mr. Ellerton (with the readings) in his Notes on Church Hymnals, 1881, No. 440, where he falls into the error of giving the date of the first, 1843, instead of the second, 1847, volume of Du Méril's work.

Translations in C. U.:

1. O Christ, our King, give ear. By J. M. Neale, 1st pub. in his Med. Hymns, 1851, in 8 st. of 31, including the chorus. The S. P. C. K. Ch. Hymns, 1871, No. 440, omits the chorus and st. ii.

2. O blessed Trinity. No. 269, in the Hymnary, is Dr. Neale's rendering expanded into 7 st. of 61. It was designed as a Processional for the Rogation Days.

Audimur: almo Spiritus. C. Coffin. [Whitsuntide. From his Hymni Sacri, Paris, 1736, p. 57, as a Hymn for Whitsuntide. In the revised Paris Breviary, 1736, it is the Hymn for Lauds at Whitsuntide; as also in Lyons and other modern French Breviaries. Text in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1863. The tr. in C. U. is:

Le, the Father hears our prayer. By C. S. Calverley, made for and 1st pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 321.

Translations not in C. U.:

1. Our prayer is heard; the holy Dove. J. Chandler, 1867.
2. Now our prayers are heard on high. J. Williams, 1839.
3. We are heard; the gentle Spirit. Bower, 1862.
4. Our prayers are heard; the Spirit blest. Chambers, 1867.

Auf, auf, ihr Reichsgenossen. Johann Rist. [Advent. 1st pub. in his Subtactische Sederlinth, Lüneburg, 1651, p. 4, in 12 st. of 8 1, entitled, "On the Gospel of the First Sunday in Advent, which is written by the Holy Evangelist Matthew in his Gospel at the 21st Chapter." Included as No. 16 in the Leipzig Vorruuth, 1673, and recently as No. 1 in the Univ. L. S., 1851.

Translations in C. U.:

1. Arise, the Kingdom is at hand. A tr. of st. i., ix., xii. by Miss Winkworth in the 2nd series, 1858, of her Lyra Ger., p. 4, and repeated as No. 22 in her C. R. for England, 1863. Included in full as No. 499, in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876. The tr. of st. i. 1-4 of st. i., xii. were included as No. 66 in Boardman's Coll., Philadelphia, 1861, and an adaptation in 7 st. of C. M., as No. 115 in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868.

2. Arise, ye heirs of glory. A tr. of st. i., iii., xii., signed F. C. C. as No. 7 in Dr. Pagenerstecher's Coll., 1864.

3. Awake! sons of the Kingdom, the King, &c. A tr. of st. i., iii., x., xii., based on Miss Winkworth's tr. of the same, as No. 16 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

Translations in C. U.:

1. Wake! the welcome day appears. A good tr., omitting st. vii., vii., by Miss Cox in her Sacred Hymns, 1841, p. 23, and repeated with st. ix. slightly altered in her Hymns to the German, 1864, p. 27. "Their tr. of st. i., iv., xi., were included as No. 17 in Rosinon's Coll. of 1854; of st. i., ix., x., as No. 233, in Hodge and Huntington's Coll., 1853, and Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, No. 1176; and of st. i., iv., xi., in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, No. 404.

2. Wake, oh wake, the day arises. A tr. of st. i., iv., xi., by A. T. Russell, as No. 31 in his Ps. & Hymns, 1851.

Auferstehn, ja auferstehn wirst du. F. G. Klopstock. [Burial of the Dead. This beautiful little poem, hardly to be called a hymn, on the Resurrection of the Body, was written after the death, on March 22, 1783, of his first wife, Meta Moller, and 1st pub. in his Geistliche Lieder, vol. 1., Copenhagen, 1788, No. 80, in 5 st. of 5 1. It was sung by the assembled thousands when, on March 22, 1803, he was laid to rest at Meta's side in the churchyard of Ottensen, near Altona. Commonly used also at Easter. Included as No. 1512 in the Berlin G. L. S. ed. 1863. The tr. in C. U. is:

Thou my dust awakening from the dust, by A. T. Russell, as No. 257 in his Ps. & Hymns, 1851, in 5 st. Rather based on the German than an exact translation. Included, beginning "Thou wilt raise our bodies from the dust," as No. 744 in Kennedy, 1863.

Translations not in C. U.:

3. "Rise again! yes, thou shalt rise again, my dust,"
AUGUSTA, JOHANN

"Rise again! yes, rise again with them," by Miss Winkworth, 1849, p. 333.

[J. M.]

Augusta, Johann, seems to have been born at Prag about the year 1560. He was consecrated Bishop of the Bohemian Brethren in 1532, became president of their "select council" in 1537, and d. at Jung-Bunzlau, Bohemia, Jan. 13, 1572. Two of his hymns, written in Bohemian, have passed into English through the German as follows:—

1. A jak jsou mili tvoji příbytkové. [The Christian Church.] Founded on Ps. lxxiv. In the Bohemian Brethren's H. Bk., 1859, f. 164. In 1 st. Pr. into German by J. Gelett in the Kirchengegen, 1864, and thence in Wackernagel, iv. p. 263, beginning "Gott se mir, wo deine leben, ihre heimarliche und all ihren Wohnung." Pr. into German by J. Gambold as No. 369 in pt. 2 of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1849, No. 163), beginning, "Here ample Thy habitations are.

Aurea luce et decore rosae. [SS. Peter and Paul]. This hymn is probably of the 8th cent. It has generally been ascribed to Elpis, wife of the philosopher Boethius; but Mose, on the ground that it is not in classical metres, thinks that this is improbable. Mose's text, No. 684, is from ms. of the 11th and 12th cent. Daniel, 1., No. 137, gives the text in 6 st., along with the Roman Brevis version; with further notes at iv. pp. 164, 571, including readings from a 9th cent. ms. at Horn. Among the British Museum ms., it is found in two of the 11th cent. (Vesp. D., xii. f. 85 b.; Jul. A., f. 55). The text of an 11th cent. ms. at Durham is given in the Lat. Hym. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, p. 105.

This hymn is found in many Brevisaries, e.g., the older Roman, and the Sarum, assigned to the vigil of St. Peter and Paul, etc. St. iii. for St. Peter, beginning, "Jesu bosco pastor Peter," was used separately for the festivals of St. Peter's Chair and St. Peter's Church, etc. St. iv. for St. Paul, beginning, "Doctor egregia Pauli," was used separately for the festivals of this Convent, etc.

In the revised Roman Brevisary, 1632, it was considerably altered, st. i., beginning, "Decora bisterni aures," st. iii., beginning, "Bosco pastor Petri," and st. iv., beginning, "Doctor egregia Pauli." This form is also in Daniel, 1., No. 137.

Translations:—

1. Aurea luce et decore rosae. This has been tr. by J. D. Churster in his Latin Sonym, pt. ii., 1661, as "With golden splendour bright." This, in a form so altered as almost to constitute a new tr., was given in the Antiphoner and Grad, 1860, and the Roman Missal, 1882, No. 116; as "With golden splendour, and with roseate loveliness."

2. Decora bisterni aures. [SS. Peter and Paul]. This has been tr. by E. Cawall in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 159, and his Hymns, 1873, p. 87, as "Bathed in the splendour of the beauteous beam," and by P. W. Fyler in his Jesus & Mary, etc., 1849, as "It is no earthly summer's ray." This latter tr. is adopted by some Roman Catholic hymn-books for Missions and Schools, and is also in the Marques of Bute's ed. of the Rom. Brevisary, 1879.

3. Beato pastor Petri foras. [SS. Peter and Paul]. This tr. is adopted by the Marques of Bute, Rom. Brevisary, 1879, as "Peter, blest Shepherd, hearken to our cry."

4. Egregiae doctora Pauli foras. [SS. Peter and Paul]. This tr. is adopted by the Marques of Bute, Rom. Brevisary, 1879, as "Our great teacher Paul, in wisdom's ways." Also adopted by the Marques of Bute.

Aurora jam spargit polum. [Saturday Morning.] This hymn is ascribed to St. Ambrose; but, not being quoted by early writers, it is not received as certainly genuine by the Benedictine editors; it may be his nevertheless. It is the Hymn at Lauds on Saturdays in the Roman Brevisary, 1632, when the Feriae Epiphaniae are said, from the Sunday after the Octave of the Epiphany to the first Sunday in Lent, and from the Octave of Corpus Christi to Advent. For the text in the Rom. Brevisary, placed in juxtaposition with the original version, see Daniel, 47. See also the editions of St. Ambrose (Migne's Patrologia, tom. 17, the fourth and last of the works of that Father). Also in Thomassin, ii. p. 413, Chloctevoces, and others.

In the Mozarabic Brevisary, ed. 1775, it is given among the hymns as "A hymn to be said on Saturdays in Lent at Matins." (Migne's Patrologia, tom. 36, ed. 897.) In the Hymnarium Sarisburniense, Lond., 1851, p. 58, it is given as the hymn for Feriae Offices on Saturdays at Lauds from the Sunday after the Octave of the Epiphany to Lent, and from the Octave of Corpus Christi to Advent. York, Hereford, Evesham, etc., appear to have had the same use. (See p. 45, where the Sunday after the Octave of the Epiphany is called the Sunday of the Sundays of the Lord, ne in ort., from the beginning of the responds after the first Lesson at Matins: so the Sunday Deus sussurrimus is named from a respond at the Matins in the Sunday after the Octave of Corpus Christi.) The variations of York, Worcester, Evesham, etc., are also given in that work. It is also in three ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961, f. 25 b; Vesp. D., xii. f. 25 b.; Jul. A., f. 30 b.), and in the Latin Hymn. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham.

Mose, i. p. 372, cites it as in a ms. in the Town Library at Trier, probably of the 8th century; and Daniel, iv. p. 40, refers to a Rheinian ms. of the 10th cent. now at Zürich, in which it is also found.

The text of this hymn is also given in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1865; Maclure's Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, Lond., 1876; Sinnemann, p. 8; and by others.

Translations in C. U. :—

1. The morn has spread its crimson hue. By R. Campbell, from the Rom. Brevisary, made for and 1st pub. in his St. Andrews' Hymnal, Edin., 1850, p. 73, in 6 st. of 4 l., and given in later Scottish Episcopal collections.
AURORA LUCIS DUM

2. Dawn sprinkles all the east with light. Contributed to the Hymnal N., 1852, on st. of 4. It is also No. 13 of "Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal;" and as "Dawn sprinkles all the east with light," in the Hymnal of the American Protestant Episcopal Church, 1872. From the fact of its appearing in the Hymnal N. it has usually been attributed to Dr. Neale. On his own authority this is an error. ("S. Mrs."

3. Now morn is o'er the earth spread. By J. D. Chambers, from his Lauds Syon, 1857, p. 33, into the People's H., 1867, No. 432, in 4 st. of 4 l.

Aurora lucis dum novae. N. Le Tourneaux. [Easter.] In the revised Paris Breviary, 1736, this hymn is appointed as the hymn at Lauds on the Sunday after Easter-day, and afterwards at Lauds in the Ferial Office from Easter to the Ascension. The text is given in Carl. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1863. It is tr, as:

1. Morn's rosy hues have decked the sky.
   By Wm. Cooke, written for the Hymnary, and included therein, 1872, No. 267. From the Hymnary it passed into Thring's Coll., 1895, No. 293. The refrain is not in the original.

Translations not in C. U.:

1. The new morn hath risen. 1. Williams, 1839.
2. The orient beams of Easter Morn. J. D. Chambers, 1857.

[A. J.]

Aurora lucis rutilat. [Easter.] This hymn is ascribed to St. Ambrose, but was not received among his undoubted works by the Benedictine editors. (See Migne's Patrol, tom. 17; the 4th vol. of the works of St. Ambrose.) It may be his; but is not specially referred to as such by any early writer.

The text is in Daniel, 1. No. 79 (the revised Roman Breviary version being given side by side with the original), who says it may be found everywhere in old Breviaries, but for the most part mutilated. It is No. 19 of the Junius ms. of the 8th cent., and Mone, No. 144, has it from a ms. of the Abbey of Reichenauf the beginning of the 9th cent., and from later mss. at Karlsruhe, &c. Amongst the British Museum mss. it is in two of the 11th cent. (Vasp. D. xii., f. 79; Jul. A. vi., f. 49); and in the Latin Hym. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, p. 84, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham.

It will be found in the Hymn. Saris. Lond., 1851, pp. 94, 95; headed "Ad Matins, Quondam usque ad Ascens. Dom."

"At Matins, daily, to the Ascension of the Lord" (i.e. commencing on Low Sunday, the octave of Easter). This part ends at line 20. Then follows, at Lauds, Sermone blando Angelus (to end). So the York use. At Canterbury, St. Albin's, St. Andrews de Bromholm (Norfolk), it would appear that Aurora lucis was sung at Lauds entire. Worcester says "Sermone blando Angelus diciter cum Aurora:" the two hymns are said one with the other: one, it may be, at Matins, the other at Lauds.

In the Mozarabic Breviary (Toledo, 1502, f. 297) it is given as the Hymn in the "Ono Primi" in Easter-tide.

The revised version of this hymn, made for the Roman Breviary, 1539, begins Aurora coelum purpurat: and is therein divided as follows: (1) Lines 1-16 of the original became in a revised form the hymn for the Ferial Office at Lauds on Low Sunday (exclusively) the Ascension; (2) Lines 17-32 of the entire hymn, Tristes erant Apostoli (with doxology of eight lines) are assigned to the Common of Apostles and Evangelists in Easter-tide (Tempore Paschali) at 1st and 2nd Vespers and at Matins; (3) Lines 32 to end, Passuale mundo gaudia (in the original Clarus Paschali gaudia), to Lauds of the same Common of Apostles and Evangelists. This division of the latter part for the Common of Apostles and Evangelists, was made by Pope Pius V. (Gavanti, Thes. Sacrorum Rituum.)

[W. A. S.]

In annotating the translations of this hymn, for the sake of unity and clearness, two divisions are given: (i.) Trs. of the Original Text (sometimes with variations), and (ii.) those trs. which are from the Roman Breviary.

I. The Original Text.

In rendering the hymn into English some translators have given the text in full, whilst others have taken a part only. Those in full, together with their use in modern hymnals, are:

1. 1. Aurora lucis rutilat. "Light's glittering morn bedecks the sky."

2. Sermone blando Angelus. "With gentle voice the angel gave."

This tr. by Dr. Neale, in two parts, was published in the Hymnal N., in 1852, and continued in later editions. Pt. i. consists of lines 1-20, and 4 lines, and a doxology not in the original, but in the Sarum Brev., pt. ii. of lines 21-44, and the closing lines of pt. i. repeated.

In 1861, the Compilers of H. A. & M. gave this rendering in that collection with rather extensive alterations, and rearranged in three parts, thus:

1. Aurora lucis rutilat. "Light's glittering morn bedecks the sky."

2. Tristes erant Apostoli. "The Apostles' hearts were full of pain."

3. Clarus Paschali gaudio. "That Eastertide with joy was bright."

To these were added a stanza, and doxology as in the Sarum Brev., to be sung at the end of each part:

Quae sumus. Auctus omnium. "O Lord of all, with us abide."

Gloria Tibi Domine. "All praise be Thine. O rise Lord!"
II. The Roman Breviary text.

As the divisions of the text in the Roman Breviary have been strictly adhered to by translators, it will simplify our work by annotating those translations in the same order.

1. Aurora coelestis purpurea.

1. This holy morn, so fair and bright. By J. C. Copeland, in his Hymns for the Week, 1848, pp. 89–90. This was given in Stretton’s Church Hymns, 1850, No. 46; in Murray’s Hymnal, 1852, No. 59, and other collections.

2. When Christ, by His own servants wept. By J. A. Johnston, 1st pub. in his English Hymnal, 1852, ed. No. 107. It was replaced in the editions of 1856 and 1861 by: “Than.”

3. As mourne a widowed bride. By Archbishop Benson, written for and first published in the Wellington College H. Bk., 2nd ed., 1863, where it is appointed for St. Philip and St. James’s Day evening.

4. Paschalae mundo gaudium.

1. A fairer sun is risen on earth. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hymns for the Week, 1848, pp. 91–92. It was included in Stretton’s Church Hymns, 1850, No. 50; in Murray’s Hymnal, 1852, No. 58, and other collections.

5. The dawn was purple o’er the sky. By J. A. Johnston, in his English Hymnal, 1852, ed. No. 107. It was replaced in the editions of 1856 and 1861 by: “Morn’s glittering light decks the sky.”

6. The morning purples all the sky. By A. K. Thompson, of New York, contributed to Schaff’s Church in Song, 1870, p. 193. This is a free rendering, with an original refrain of four lines to each stanza.

Translation not in C. U.;——

Now morning purples all the skies. Murray, 1876.

3. Now shines the sun with brighter ray. By J. A. Johnston, in his English Hymnal, 1852, No. 112. For the edition of 1856 it was rewritten by the translator as, "Bright rose the sun on that Easter-day." This latter rendering was repeated in the ed. of 1861.

III. Centos.

In this collection, No. 85, "The Apostles wept with hearts forlorn" is thus composed: st. i.-iii., Copeland as above (Tribsc cantus) altered; st. iv.-vi. by Dr. Rosam.

In this collection there are three centos from various translations:

(1) "In accents blend the Angel blest," No. 115.

It is thus composed: st. i., ii., iii., v., vi., Chambers’s Lauda Sing. altered; st. iv. and viii., J. M. Nene, from Hymnal Noted; st. vii., Chope’s Hymnal, 1857, No. 83; later editions, No. 211, altered.

(2) "The Apostles’ hearts with grief were sore," were altered. St. i., editors; st. ii.-v., Chambers, as above altered; st. vi., Chope’s Hymnal, as above altered; st. vii., J. M. Neale, as above.

(3) "In this our bright and Paschal day," St. i. and vii., J. M. Neale, H. Noted; st. ii., iii., Chambers altered; st. iv., J. A. Johnston, altered.

Aurora vails her rosy face. Ralph Erskine. [The Joy of Heaven.] 1st pub. in his Gospel Sonnets (2nd ed., Edin., 1726), as section 6 of part v., entitled "The Song of Heaven desired by Saints on Earth," in 20 st. of 4. Of this 11 st., beginning with st. ii. "Happy the company that’s gone," were included in the Sac. Songs of Scotland, 1860, (Edin., A. Elliott, p. 42). Rewritten 1785 by John Berridge as No. 143 of his Siom’s Songs, beginning "O happy saints, who dwell in light." (See Lord Selborne’s Bk. of Praise, No. exii. and note thereto.)

Aus Lieb’ verwundert Jesu mein. xvi. cent. [Holy Communion.] This appears in the Christ. Cathol. G. B. Nach der Paderbornischen Edition, 1726, p. 263, in 16 st. of 4.; among the hymns for Corpus Christi, as "A Sigh of Love to Jesus." In the Geistreiches G. B., Berlenburg, 1720, No. 90, it has 9 st. In the Trier G. B. (R. C.), 1845, p. 120, it is in 6 st. It has been tr. as—0 Jesu, pairst for love of me. In full from the Trier G. B., signed "Sister M." in Lyra Eucharistica, 1863, p. 352 (ed. 1864, p. 298), and thence as No. 555 in the People’s H., 1867.

Aus tiefer Noth schrei ich zu dir. Martin Luther. [Ps. cxv.] This beautiful, though free, version of Ps. cxv. was written in 1523. Ps. cxv. was a great favourite with Luther, one of those he called Pauline Psalms—the others being Ps. cxxix., li., and cxxii. With its versification he took special pains, and the final result ranks with the finest of German Psalm versions. It first appeared in 4 st. of 7 lines in Ellig. christian. lieder, Wittenberg, 1524, and in Eyn Euchristion, Erfurt, 1524. The form was in use considerably altered, and with st. ii. rewritten as li., iii. appeared in the Geistliche gesangb. Buchlein, Wittenberg, 1524, in 5 st., was included as No. 1 in Luther’s Christliche Gesang zum Gebrihm, Wittenberg, 1542 and since in almost all German hymn-books, as recently in the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 302. Both forms are included in Wackernagel’s D. Kirchenlied, iii. pp. 7-8, and in Schirrick’s ed. of Luther’s Geist. Lieder, 1854, pp. 66-68.

The fine melody in the Irish Ch. Hymnal called De profundis; elsewhere, Luther’s 130th. &c., is possibly by Luther, and first appeared, with the 5 st. form, in 1524.

The hymn was sung, May 9, 1525, at the funeral of the Elector Friedrich the Wise in the Court church at Wittenberg; by the weeping multitude at Halle when, on Feb. 26, 1546, Luther’s body was being taken to its last resting-place at Wittenberg; and again as the last hymn in the Catholic at Strasburg before the city was captured by the French in 1861. St. v. comforted the last hours of Christian, Elector of Saxony, 1591, of Johann Georg I., Elector of Saxony, 1686, and of King Friedrich I. of Prussia, 1723 (Koch, viii. 211-216).

Translations in C. U.:

1. Out of the deep I cry to Thee. My. A free tr. of st. i.-iii., v., by B. Luttrell, as No. 231 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 287). In 1848, it was given, slightly altered from the edition of 1826, and beginning "Out of the depths I cry to Thee, Lord, seek," as No. 4 in the Dulston Hospital H. Bk. The text of 1826, unaltered save st. ii., ll. 3-4, was included as No. 440 in the Irish Ch. Hymnal, 1873.

2. From deep distress to Thee I pray. In full by Dr. H. Milles in his Horae Germanicae, 1845 (1856, p. 71). Thence as No. 70 in the Luth. Gen. Synod’s Cod. 1850-52, and as No. 464 in Temple Melodies, N. Y., 1851.

3. Out of the depths, O Lord. A paraphrase in 12 st. of 6 lines by Miss Fry in her H. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 141. The doxology is from the gloria to the version of Ps. i. by L. Oehler, 1525. This hymn is appended to Luther as No. 1558 in Burg’s Brevisio G. B., 1746. Her st. vii., st. ix., st. v., in order beginning—"Lord, let Thy people be," were included as No. 100, and st. vi., st. iv., beginning — "Lord, Thou hast given Thy faithful word," as No. 97 in Whittmore’s Suppl. to All H. B., 1869.

4. Out of the deep I cry to Thee, O Lord God. A good and full tr. by A. T. Russell as No. 74 in his Ps. & Hymn., 1851. Included in full in Dr. Bacon’s ed. of Luther’s Hymns, 1884, p. 10, and, omitting st. iv., as No. 85 in the New Zealand Hymnal, 1872.

5. From depths of woe I raise to Thee. Good and full by R. Massie in his M. Luther’s Spiritual Songs, 1854, p. 73. Thence unaltered as No. 64 in the 1857 ed. of Metzer’s C. P. & H. Bk. (Or. ed., 1864, No. 156), and since in the Scottish Hymnal, 1870, the Scottish Presb. Hymnal, 1876 (omitting st. iv.), and the Canadian Presb. H. Bk., 1880.
6. Out of the depths I cry to Thee, Lord God; oh hear my prayer. In full by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Hier., 1855, p. 65, and thence unaltered as No. 86 in the West. H. Bk., 1875. The lines 1-4 of the former No. 584 in the Amer. Lutheran Hymn. [A Tune] Bk., Boston, 1898.

7. Out of the depths I cry to Thee, Lord God; O hear my wailing. A good but rather rare tr., as No. 15 in the New Con. 1859, and since as No. 103 in the Meth. N. C. 1863, as No. 42 in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866, and No. 119 in the Appendix of 1874 to the Leeds H. Bk. of 1853. Of this tr. st. ii., v. are given in Dr. Dale's English H. Bk., 1879, No. 483, as "Thy mercy grace and boundless love.

10. In deep distress I cry to Thee, O Lord; my God. A tr. of st. ii., v. signed F. C. C., as No. 184 in Dr. Paget's Coll., 1834.

11. From lowest depths I cry to Thee. Full and good in E. Massie's Sacred Odes, vol. ii., 1867, p. 134, and thence as No. 251 in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876.

12. Out of the depths I cry to Thee, Lord, mark my lamentation, in full, based upon R. Massie as above, as No. 233 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

Author of faith, we seek Thy face.

C. Wesley. [Intercession.] The original hymn appeared in the 2nd ed. of 1741, as No. 64, in vol. ii. of Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1749, and is repeated in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 324. The abbreviated form in C. U. was included by J. Wesley in the W. H. Bk., No. 446. It consists of st. 1. and ii. It is found in various collections in G. Britain and America.

Author of friendship's sacred tie.

C. Wesley. [Friendship.] 1st pub. in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii. p. 193, in 6 st. of 12 l. and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 408. In the W. H. Bk., No. 510, a cento from this hymn was given, beginning, "Our friendship sanctify and guide." This has been repeated in various collections, and specially in those of the Methodist denominations both in G. Britain and abroad.

Author of life divine.

[C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] This hymn for the Holy Communion is from J. & C. Wesley's Hymns on the Lord's Supper, 1st ed. in 1743, No. 40, in 2 st. of 4 l. In 1757 it was included without alteration in the revised edition of H. A. & M. and attributed to John Wesley. There is, however, no evidence that it was the composition of John as distinct from Charles. Wesley. In the absence of positive evidence either way the probabilities are in favour of Charles, rather than his elder brother. It is also in C. U. in America. Orig. text in H. A. and P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 244.

Author of life, with grateful heart.

S. Pearce. [Morning.] Appeared at the end of his Memoirs, by Andrew Fuller, 1st ed., 1800, pp. 286-7, and again in the 2nd ed., 1801, in 5 st. of 4 l. and entitled "An Evening Song." The hymn beginning with this stanza in Major's Book of Praise, is a cento from S. Pearce, thus composed: st. i., the 1st st. as above; st. ii.-v. are st. iii.-vi. from Pearce's Morning Hymn in the same Memoirs as above, thus making a morning hymn. The text in Major is altered from the original.

Author of our salvation.

Thee. C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in Hymns on the Lord's Supper, 1743, No. 28, in 4 st. of 4 l., and based on the words, "As it is a sign and a means of Grace," being the first hymn on that division of the subject. It is now in many G. Brit. in the Hymnal of the Method. Episcopal Church, N. Y., 1878, No. 851, it is given in an unaltered form. Also in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 236.

Author of peace unknown.

C. Wesley. [Friendship.] 1st pub. in his Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii., No. 236, in 4 st. of 6 l., and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 426-7. It is one of several hymns composed by C. Wesley at the time of his marriage. In its original form it is not found in common use. In 1780, however, J. Wesley gave st. ii., iii., and iv. in the W. H. Bk., No. 498, as, "Centre of our hopes Thou art," and from that collection it has passed into several hymnals, specially those of the Methodist denomination.

Ave Christi Corpus verum. Anon. [Holy Communion.] The text of this hymn is given in the W. H. Bk., No. 446, from a Reichenau ms. of the 14th cent. with the title "In elevatone saugunia Christi," which shows it to be a devotion at the elevation of the Chalice in the Mass.

There are at least four hymns which commence with almost the same words, but must not be confounded."Ave Christi Corpus verum"; "Ave verum Corpus natum"; "Ave Christi Corpus Carum"; "Ave verum Corpus Christi."

No. 8 Flesh of Christ Divine. By R. F. Littledale, 1st pub. in the Altar Manual, 1863; the Lyra Eucharistica the same year; and the People's H., 1867, No. 176.

Ave! Colenda Trinitas. [Holy Trinity.] This hymn, of unknown authorship, is given in the Latin Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church, Lon., 1801, p. 146, from a Durham ms. of the 11th cent. It is also in a ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 71); and in Biggs's Annotated H. A. and M., No. 192.

It is tr. as:

All hail, adored Trinity. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Sion, pt. i., 1857, p. 218, in 4 st. of 4 l., and from thence into H. A. and M., 1861; the Hymnary, 1872, Snyp's S. of G. and G., 1872, and others, usually with slight alterations.

Ave! Jesu! Ere we part. C. H. Bateman. [Children's Evening Hymn.] Appeared in the Hymn Class Magazine, 1849, in 2 st. of 11 lines. In many collections, including Stevenson's Hymns for Ch. & Home, 1873, c. 13, a short hymn of 4 st. of 4 l., "Blessed Jesus, ere we part," has been compiled with alterations from this text.

Translation in C. U.:

Jesus! hail! Who, as Thou bledest. By E. B. Pusey. Appeared in 1846 in vol. ii. of his tr. the Paradise of the Christian Soul, and from thence it passed into the Appendixes to the Hymnal N., 2nd ed., 1864, No. 248.

The original poem was written on the death of his mother, June 1, 1823. This fact supplies the key to the line of thought in the opening stanza:

"O, Thou Who dost'nt to sympathize
With all our frail and fleshly tears,
Maker, yet Brother dear,
Forgive the too presumptuous thought,
If, calming wayward grief, I sought
To gaze on Thee too near."

The poem as originally written was too personal for publication in the Christian Year, and, in 1823 (dated Mar. 9, 1826), the four concluding stanzas were omitted, and those beginning in that work, "Ave Maria, blessed Mad," to the end, were substituted, and the poem in its new form was first published then in 1827. The original was included with a special note in his Misc. Poems, 1869, pp. 230-35, and the cento, as a hymn, in the Appendix to the Hymnal N., 2nd ed., 1864, the People's H., 1867, No. 192, and others.

Are maris Stella. Anon. [B. V. M.] This hymn, so well known as to its words, is of uncertain authorship. It has been wrongly ascribed to St. Bernard, as it is found in a St. Gall ms. No. 93, of the 9th cent., and in Venantius Fortunatus (by M. A. Luchi, 1799), but on insufficient authority. The text is given in Daniel, i. No. 171, with various readings. (Other texts are given in vol. ii. p. 286, and vol. iv. p. 186.) Some gives five paraphrases of this hymn, Nos. 460-54; one line of the original is followed by several explanations and simplifications, a certain testimony to the popularity of the original.

It has been treated with so much respect as hardly to have been altered in the Roman Breviary, 1632, and was retained in the revised breviaries of French dioceses (Paris, Lyons, &c.), as one of the few exceptions of old hymns not supplanted. It is appointed for Vespers in the Little Office of the Blessed Virgin, Officium parem beatae Mariæ, Paris, Lyons, &c. Also, as Paris, Le Mans, &c., having it also in the Saturday Office of the Blessed Virgin, Officium beatae Mariæ in Solemnis, and in Fesitas which have no special Vespers.

In the Roman Breviary it is the Hymn for 1st and 2nd Vespers in the Fesitas of the Blessed Virgin Mary; also in the office of the B. V. M. on Saturdays, and in Little Office, Officium parem beatae Mariæ Virginis, at last Vespers, there being no 2nd Vespers in these two latter cases.

The hymn is found in three mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2981, f. 343; Vesp. D. xii. f. 63; Jul. A. vi. f. 58); and in the Latin Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1831, p. 741, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham. It is also given in Basler, Klingsfeld, Simrock, Wackernagle, i. No. 82, and various modern Roman Catholic collections.

Translations in C. U.:

1. Hail, thee Star of Ocean. By E. Caswall, 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 197, where it began "Gentle Star of Ocean," and again in his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 105, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is given in a large number of Roman Catholic collections in G. Britain and America, often in an altered form, and sometimes beginning, "Hail, bright star of ocean."

2. Hail, thee Star, we bless thee. This is by J. R. Beste in his Church Hymn. (R. Cath.), 1849. Its use is not extensive.

3. Hail, thou resplendent Star. In A Sel. of Catholic Hymns, Glasgow, H. Margery, 1861, No. 41, the St. Patrick's Catholic Bk., 1862, No. 60, and other collections this tr. is given without signature. It is based upon Caswall.

Translations not in C. U.:

2. The Star which o'er the sea. J. W. Hewett, 1859.

Ave, plena gratia, cujus. Anon. [The Purification.] In the revised Paris Missal of 1736, this hymn is given as the Sequence for the Feast of the Purification. The text is in Card. Newman's Hymns Ecclesiæs, 1838 and 1865.

Translations in C. U.:

1. Ave, Mary, full of grace. By W. J. Copeland, 1st pub. in his Hymns for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 111, in 10 st. of 3 l., and repeated in Rorke's Hymns and Anthems, 1854, and later editions, in 5 st. of 6 l.

2. Jesus, Son of Mary, hail, No. 73 in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, and some later collections, is Copeland's tr. slightly altered.

3. In His Mother's pure embrace. No. 346 in the Hymnary is the same tr. altered by the editors of that selection.

4. Hail, thou Mother, full of grace. In the Altar Hymnal, 1884, is also Copeland's tr. altered by C. R.

Ave regina coelorum. [B. V. M.] One of the four Antiphons to the B. V. M. (see "Alma Redemptoris mater"). Among the mss. in the British Museum it is found in the St. Alban's Book of the 13th cent. (ms. Reg. 2 A. x. f. 62), and a Sarum Breviary of the 14th cent. (ms. Reg. 2 A. xiv. f. 235 b). It is also in the York Breviary, 1493 (1883 reprint, ii. 493); in the Roman Breviary, Moderna, 1480, f. 512, &c. The text in Daniel, ii. 319, is from a Munich ms. probably of the 13th cent. and other sources.

Translation in C. U.:

Hail, O Queen of Heaven enthroned! By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 39, in 8 lines; and again in his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 23. It is largely used in Roman Catholic collections for schools and missions. Another tr. is "Hail, thou mighty Queen of heaven," by J. R. Beste, in his Church Hymn, 1849, p. 66. It is not in C. U.

Ave verum corpus natum. Anon. [Holy Communion.] The text will be found in Daniel, ii. p. 327. Also as No. 213 in Mone's Collection, with the heading, In elevatione Corporis Christi, and the statement that a Reichenau ms. of the 14th cent. says "Pope Innocent composed the following salutation," (Salutationem sequentem composu Innocentius (Papa), and this prayer has three years of indulgences granted by Pope Leo ("haec oratio habet tres annos indulgentiarum a domino Pape Leone"). Letus, Anecdota sacra, Turin, 1789, p. 107, gives the text with the variation Esto nobis praeventor virtus in examine, instead of Esto nobis praeventum mortis in examine. It is in J. M. Horst's Paradisum Animarum (ed. Cologne, 1644, p. 321), Sect. V., "De Sacrae. Eucharistiae," as a private devotion at the elevation of the Host in the Mass ("sub elevatione"). It is also in Kehrein, No. 137. See Ave Christi Corpus sernum, for a cognate hymn at the elevation of the Chalice.

Translations in C.U.:

1. Hail, true Body! By E. Caswall. 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholic, 1849, p. 249, in 10 lines; and again, slightly altered, in his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 162. In the Roman Catholic hymnals the original tr. is generally used. In the People's H., 1867, No. 177, we have a cento from this tr. of Caswall, that by J. R. Best, and others.

2. Hail, true Body, born of Mary. No. 214 in the Appendix to Hymnal N., 1864, is by H. N. Oxenham, from his Sententiae in latriis and other Poems, 1854 and 1867, somewhat altered.

3. Hail, true Body Incarnate, by W. J. Irons, is No. 67 of his Ps. & Hys. for the Ch., 1873 and 1883. This rendering is specially adapted for Good Friday. 1st pub. in Dr. Irons's Hymns, 1866, No. 113.

4. Hail, true Body! God of heaven. By J. R. Best, pub. with the Latin text in his Ch. Hymns. (Rom. Cath.) Lond., 1849. It may be added that in most of the modern Roman Catholic collections the Latin text is also given, as in this case.

Translation not in C.U.:

Hail, true Body, born of Mary. E. R. Passey, 1849. [J. J.]

Aveling, Thomas William Baxter, d.n. b. Castletown, Isle of Man, May 11, 1815; educated privately at and at Highbury College for the Congregational Ministry, and ordained to the pastoral of Kingsland in 1888, d. at Redhill, July 3, 1884. In 1875 he received the degree of d.n. from the Howard University, United States. His published works include The Irish Scholar, a Narrative, 1841; Narran, or Life's Shadows and Sunshine, 1853; Voices of Many Waters, &c., 1853; The Secret of the Sanctuary, &c., 1859, &c., including contributions to periodicals. Dr. Aveling was sometime editor of The Jewish Herald. In 1834 he published a small volume of poems and hymns. Those of his hymns which have come into C. U. were mostly written from year to year to be sung when he presented his New Year's Sermon to the young. Some of them are in the public through the Magazines. We are not aware that they have been collected. The best known are:—

4. Sing on your heavenly way,
Ye rescued sinners, sing,
Sing on, rejoicing, every day
In Christ, thy eternal King.

5. Soon shall ye hear him say,
Ye blessed children, come!
Soon will He call ye hence away,
And take His wandering home.

This cento was repeated by Dr. Conyers in his Coll. Ps. Hys., 1774, by De Courcy, in his Coll., 1775, and thence through numerous hymnals into Mercer's and Thrift's Cols., Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, and others in the Ch. of England; and through Lady Huntington's Coll., 1764, into a limited number of Nonconformists' hymn-books. In many of these reprints the ye of st. v., l. 3, is changed to you. Amongst modern American collections in which this cento is given in full are:—

4. Dutch Rev. Hymns of the Ch. N. Y., 1889; Hymn. Bk., N. Y. & Chicago, 1874; Hattiefield's Ch. H. Bk., 1872, and the Ch. Praise Bk., 1882; and, with the omission of st. iv., in the Episc. Hymns for Ch. & Home, Phil., 1869; Psalms, Ps. & Hys. Richmond, 1887; Ch.
AWAKE, AND SING

Pastoral, Boston, 1864; Preb. Hymn, Phil., 1874: and the new Episc. Hymnal, 1871. The signature to this cento is "W. Hammond, 1745; G. Whitefield, 1753; and M. Madan, 1760."

2. The third cento appeared in Toplady's Ps. Hys., 1776, No. 118, in the first five being Madan's text as above, with us for ye, in st. v., and the addition of the following:

"There shall our raptur'd tongue Rise in a pleasing strain," and sing, in sweetest notes, the song
"Of Moses and the Lamb."

This stanza is from Watts's H. & S. Songs, 1769, Bk. i. No. 49, st. vi.:

"To our love and joy be full,
And fill our warmer flame,
And sweeter music tune the song
Of Moses and the Lamb."

This cento is the most widely adopted of any, both in G. Brit. and America. It is found in full in Spess's S. of G. & G., the Meth. E. Ch. S. N. H. Bk. and others; and with the omission of st. iii., "Sung till we feel our hearts, &c.," in the Ps. Bk., the Bap. Hymnal, &c. The collections are far too many to name, and any book can be tested by the text as above. The American modern hymn-books which adopt it in full include Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, and the Evang. Hymnal, 1880, in full, with a slight alteration in st. vi.; Songs of Zion (A. R. T. Soc.), 1864; Sabbath H. Bk., N. Y., 1858; Bap. Ser. of Songs, Boston, 1871, &c.; and with omission of st. ii., in Bap. Ps. & Tune Bk., Phil., 1871; Manual of Praise, Oberlin, O., 1880; Evang. Hys. Cleveland, O., 1882; and in Canada, the Preb. H. Bk., Toronto, 1880. Its ascription is "W. Hammond, 1745; G. Whitefield, 1753; M. Madan, 1760; A. M. Toplady [with Watte], 1776;"

4. The fourth form appeared in Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 138. As a cento it has failed to gain a position: but one stanza, No. iv. of cento 2, above rewritten, is retained in cento 5, below. It reads in Hall:

"To pilgrims on the road
To Zion's city, sing:
Rejoicing in the Lamb of God
In Christ, our heav'nly King."

1 In the American New School Presb. Church Psalter, 1843, the arrangement of No. 3 above was given with the omission of st. iii., and the substitution of Halls's "Ye pilgrims," &c., with "Rejoice, ye," for "Rejoicing," for st. iv. This text is second in popularity only to cento 3. It is given sometimes in st. v. and again in 6, and is included, amongst other hymn-books, in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858; New Cong. 1859; Windle: Hys. for the Ch. Catholic, 1882; late editions of Halleck's Sel., and others in G. Brit. and America, in the Meth. Episc. H. Bk., 1849; Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865, &c. The ascription to this is, "W. Hammond, 1745; G. Whitefield, 1753; M. Madan, 1760; A. M. Toplady [with Watte], 1776; Hall's Mitre, 1836."

2 In the Parish H. Bk., 1863-1875, No. 105, we have st. i., ii., iv., v., vi., from Toplady, slightly altered, altogether with the addition of a stanza: This is "W. Hammond, 1745; G. Whitefield, 1753; M. Madan, 1760; A. M. Toplady [with Watte], 1776; Parish H. Bk., 1863."

The last arrangement we have to notice is

No. 335 of Church Hys., 1871. This is Toplady's text, st. i., ii., iv., v., vi., with alterations in the 1st:—

"Awake and sing the song
Of glory to the Lamb,"

which we meet for the first time, and st. v.:

"And sweeter voices swell the song
Of glory to the Lamb,"

of which the first line is Watts's (as above, No. 3) with swell for tune, and the second a fresh departure. It may be noted that this return to Watts was made by Cotterill in his Sel., 1810. The signature to this cento is: "W. Hammond, 1745; G. Whitefield, 1753; M. Madan, 1760; A. M. Toplady [with Watte], 1776; Ch. Hymns, 1871."

In Bingham's Hymno. Christ, Lat., 1871, there is a rendering into Latin of cento 5 in 5 st. slightly altered again, as:—"Jam cantilenam gratulantes tollite.

Beyond what we have here set forth in somewhat wearisome detail, other minute changes are to be found in collections of less importance than those noticed. These may be tested by the quotations given above, and a reference to the original text in Lyra Brit. 1867, pp. 263-5.

[J. J.]

AWAKE, AWAKE, MY SLEPPING SPOUSE.

O. Heginbothom. [Watchfulness.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1794, in 6 st. of 4 l. and based upon St. Luke xii. 38-39. In 1842 it was transferred to Collyer's Coll., No. 633, unaltered, and thus came into C. U. In some American collections, st. v. and vi. are omitted. In America it is also given as "Awake, awake, each drowsy soul," as in the Bap. Psalter Bk., 1874, No. 558. In the Bap. Ch. Psalter Bk., N. Y., 1872, we have st. i., iii., and iv., and in Ch. Pastoral, Boston, 1864, st. i., iii., and vi.

AWAKE, awake, O Zion. B. Gough. [Second Advent.] Appeared in his Lyra Sibylliana, &c., 1863, p. 151, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled. "The coming Millennium," with the quotation of Isa. iii. 1. From that work it passed into the People's H., 1867; Allon's Impartial Hymns, 1868, in 5 st., and in other collections both in G. Brit. and America. It is also included as the opening hymn of Gough's H. of Prayer and Praise, 1875.

AWAKE, awake the SACRED SONG. Anne Steele. [Christmas.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects Chiefly Devotional, &c., 1769, vol. i. p. 85, in 6 st. of 4 l. and headed "The Incarnate Saviour." It was also included in the 1780 ed. of the Poems, and in D. Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1839. It came into C. U. by being adopted by Ash and Evans in their Brit. Coll., 1763, No. 88 from whence it passed into a few hymnals. It is still in use in America, and is given in Hatfield's Ch. H. Bk., 1872, the Bap. Psalter Bk., 1871, and Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, the first omitting st. vi. and the remaining two st. iv.

AWAKE, GLAD SOUL, AWAKE, AWAKE. J. S. B. Monsell. [Easter.] According to the Preface to his Spiritual Songs, this was one of his hymns "written amid the orange and olive groves of Italy, during a winter spent (for the sake of health) upon the shores of the Mediterranean Sea. It was pub. in his Hymns of Love and Praise, 1863, p. 90, in 5 st., and in his Spiritual Songs, 1875, in 8 st. of 81, the new stanzas being II., III., and IV. Three stanzas therefrom are in C. U. (1) in the Hy. Comp., No. 178, consisting of st. I., vi., and vii. (2) in the Scottish Evang. U. Hymnal, No. 40, of st. I., vi., and vii. (3) in the Amer. College Hymnal, N. Y., 1876, No. 145, beginning: “The shade and gloom of life are fled.” This is composed of st. vi. and vii. unaltered. Full text in Schaff’s Christ in Song, 1869-70.

_Awake, Jerusalem, awake. C. Wesley._
_[Exhortation.]_ A paraphrase of Isaiah liii., which appeared in the Wesley Psalms and Hymns, 1741, in 28 st. of 41, c.m., divided into three parts. Two centos from this are in C. U. in America. (1) The Amer. Meth. Episc. Coll., N. Y., 1849, composed of st. I., ii., and iv. of Pt. i., and st. ii. of Pt. iii. (2) II. Bk. of the Evang. Assoc., Cleveland, O., 1882; the same stanzas with the addition of st. iv., Pt. iii. The poem as given in the P. Works of J. and C. Wesley, 1868-72, vol. II. pp. 168-173, has 4 st. in L. M. added to Pt. II. These stanzas were first published in the 1st series of Hymns on God’s Everlasting Love, 1741. Being a part of the same chapter in Isaiah they were omitted from the reprint of the Hymns, &c., and incorporated with this poem in the P. Works, vol. II., 1869.

_Awake, my heart, arise my tongue. J. Watts._ [Spiritual Clothing.] 1st pub. in his Hymns and S. Songs, 1707 (1:69, Bk. i., No. 269), in 6 st. of 41, and again in later editions. It is based on Is. lxi. 10. It came into C. U. at an early date, and is still found in many collections in G. Brit. and America.

_Awake, my love, awake, my joy. J. Mason._ [Morning.] This is cento adapted from Mason’s Songs of Praise for Morning and Evening, and consists of st. i. from the Evening and ii.-iv. from the Morning Hymn. It was included in the Rev. T. Darlington’s Hymns for the Ch. of England, new ed., 1874, No. 198. The original text appeared in Mason’s Songs of Praise, 1683, and in Sedgwick’s reprint, 1859, pp. 16-18.

_Awake, my soul, awake, my tongue. Anne Steele._ [P. ii.] This version of P. ii. extends to 16 st. of 41. It appeared in her Poems, &c., 1760, vol. II. p. 206, and new ed., 1780. The cento given in Martineau’s Hymns, &c., 1840 and 1873; the Amer. Bap. Service of Song, Boston, 1872, and others, is composed of st. I., II., XI., and XVI., slightly altered. Orig. text in Sedgwick’s reprint of Miss Steele’s Hymns, 1859.

_Awake, my soul, in (to) joyful lays. S. Medley._ [Love of God.] Appeared in J. H. Medley’s Coll. of Hymns for Lady Huntingdon’s Chapel, Cambrieland Street, Shore-ditch, 1782, and again in Medley’s Hymns, Bristol and Bradford, 1785, in 8 st. of 41. In 1878 it was included, with the omission of one stanza in Rippon’s Bapt. Sel., 1877, No. 18, and again by the author in his Hymns, &c., 1890, with the addition of st. 4, and the transposing of st. v. and vi. The versions in common use are that in Rippon, 1787, in 7 st., and a selection therefrom, in 5 st. It is also in use in America. Orig. text in Lyra Brit., 1867.

_Awake, my soul, lift up thine eyes. Anna L. Bickersteth._ [Watchfulness.] Contributed to Dr. Enfield’s Hymns, &c., Warrington, 1772, No. 126, in 6 st. of 41, and headed “The Conflict.” In the following year it was repeated in her Poems, Lon., 1773, and again in her Works, &c., 1825, vol. I. p. 390. Its use has been and still is fairly extensive both in G. Brit. and America. Orig. text in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 34, and Lord Selborne’s Bk. of Praise, 1892, p. 485. In the latter the date, 1773, is given in error.

_Awake, my soul, stretch every nerve. P. Doddridge._ [Confirmation.] This hymn is not given in the “D. mss.” It was 1st pub. by J. Orton in his ed. of Doddridge’s Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 296, in 5 st. of 41, and entitled “Pressing on in the Christian Race.” It was repeated in all subsequent editions of the Hymns, and also in Doddridge’s Scripture Hymns, edited by J. Doddridge Humphreys, 1829. One of the earliest collections in which it is found is Ash and Evans’s Bristol Coll., 1799, No. 281, with the omission of st. iv. “That prize,” &c. From that date it came into general use, sometimes in 4 st., and again in 5 st., until it became widely known both in Great Brit. and America. In modern collections it is held in greater favour by those of the Ch. of England than those of Nonconformists. Full orig. text in the New Cong. No. 617, and the 4 st. form unaltered, in Hy. Comp., No. 452. In the latter collection the editor suggests that in Confirmation it be sung after the benedictory prayer, “Defend, O Lord, this Thy servant,” &c. This 4 st. arrangement has been rendered into Latin: “Sors sum, mens mea, strenua,” by the Rev. R. Bingham, and given in his Christ. Lat., 1871, pp. 191-193. A slightly altered form of the hymn, as “Awake, our souls, awake from sloth,” is given in a few hymnals, including Walker’s Cheltenham Coll., 1855 and 1881.

_Awake, my soul, to grateful praise._ [Morning.] This hymn was given in J. H. Garnett’s Lutterworth Coll., 1838, No. 15, in 5 st. of 41, as by “Gardiner.” It was repeated with the same ascription in the Marylebone Pr. & Hy., 1851, and, without name or date, in Kennedy, 1863.

_Awake, my soul, to meet the day.*_ P. Doddridge. [Morning.] This hymn is in the “D. mss.” but undated. In 1755, it was pub. by J. Orton in Doddridge’s Hymns, &c., No. 362, in 7 st. of 41, without alteration, the title being “A morning hymn, to be used at awakening and rising.” It was republished in J. D. Humphreys’s ed. of the Hymns, 1829, No. 389. It is not in C. U. in G. Brit. In the American Hymnal of the Meth. Episco. Ch., 1878, st. i., ii., v., vii., are given, somewhat altered, as No. 96.
Awake, my soul, awake, my love.
I. Watts. [Gospel call to duty.] This may be called a musical paraphrase of his sermon on 1 Cor. iii. 22, "Whether Life or Death—All are yours. It was appended to other hymns, e.g., Sermons, 1721-4, in 5 st. of 8 l., and repeated in later editions. Its use is limited. In Hall's Mitre, 1836, it was given as "Awake our soul, awake our love," in 4 st. This also has almost passed out of use.

Awake, our drowsy souls. Elizabeth Scott. [Sunday.] 1st pub. in the Baptist Coll. of Ash and Evans, Bristol, 1769, No. 307, in 5 st. of 6 l., and appointed as "A hymn for Lord's Day Morning." From that collection it passed into several later hymnals, including Rippon, Dobell, and others; but it is almost entirely unknown to modern hymn-books except in America, having been superseded by "Awake ye saints, awake, and hail," &c., a rearrangement of the same by T. Cotterill, and given in the 1st ed. of his Section, 1810. This form of the hymn is thus somewhat unique: both in Britain and America, and is usually ascribed to "Elizabeth Scott and Thomas Cotterill." In many of the modern American hymnals, st. iv. is omitted; but the English generally give the text from Cotterill as in Baptist Ps. and Hymns, 1839; in this case the only alteration is in "bless" for "blest" in st. i., l. 5. Another form of the hymn is:

"Servants of God, awake." It consists of a. i.-iii. of Cotterill's recast, slightly altered. It appeared in the Harrow School Bk., 1832, and from thence passed into Church Ps. and Hymns, Vol. 1, No. 39. In the H. Bk. of the Evangelical Church, Cleveland, Ohio, 1882, No. 686, st. i.-iii. are given as "Children of God, awake!" and in the Marborough College Hymns, 1869, st. i.-iii. as "Come, sons of God, awake!"

W. T. B.

Awake, our souls, and bless His name. P. Doddridge. [Christ the Door.] This hymn is not in the "D. Miss." and was 1st pub. by J. Orton in his ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is based on St. John x. 9. It is repeated in later editions of the Hymnal, and in J. D. Humphreys' ed. of the same, 1839. In Kennedy, 1855, No. 29, it is given as "Awake, my soul, and bless His name.

W. T. B.

Awake our souls, away our fears.
I. Watts. [The Christian Race.] 1st pub. in his Hymns and Songs, 1709, Bk. 1, No. 48, in 5 st. of 4 l.; and headed "The Christian Race." It has been repeated in later editions of the Hymnal, and may be found in all editions of Watts' Works. Its use in the original, and as altered, is as follows:

1. The original was included in various hymn-books as early as 1727, and is now in extensive use in all English-speaking countries.

2. The original was given in the note: "With the single change of "Thy matchless power" in st. viii., the whole is in extenso used in all English-speaking countries.

A. M. Toplady. [Christ's Intercession.] In the Clergy Magazine, 1774, this hymn was given in 10 st. of 6 l. From the G. Magazine it passed at an early date into various collections, but in an abbreviated form. These included Rippon's Select, 1787, to which possibly more than to any other hymnal, modern collections are indebted for their text both in G. and America. The full original text was included in Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hymns, 1809, p. 150. It is curious to note that this hymn was omitted from Toplady's Ps. and Hymns, 1776, and from an ed. of his Hymns, pub. in 1856.

Awake, sweet gratitude, and sing.
H. F. White. [Heaven.] In Southey's ed. of H. F. White's Remains, 1807, this hymn is given in 7 of 4 l., with the title: "In heaven we shall be purified, so as to be able to endure the splendours of the Deity." Accompanied with the following note:

"The last stanza of this hymn was added extemporaneously by Henry one summer evening, when he was with a few friends on the Trent, and singing it he was used to do on such occasions."

In the few modern collections in which this hymn is found it is found in an abbreviated form. The orig. text is in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 628.

W. T. B.

Awake, ye saints, and raise [lift] your eyes. P. Doddridge. [Exhortation.] This hymn is not in the "D. Miss.," and was 1st pub. by J. Orton in his ed. of Doddridge's Hymnals, &c., 1755, No. 294, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The near Approach of Salvation, an Engagement to Diligence and Love. Rom. xiii. 11." It was also repeated in J. D. Humphreys' ed. of the same, 1839. It came into C. U. at an early date, and is still found in a few important collections in G. and America. In R. Conyers' Ps. and Hymns, 1774, it was altered to "Awake, ye saints, and set your eyes," but this has died out of use. Orig. text in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 394, and Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862, p. 236.

Awake, ye saints, to praise your King. I. Watts. [Ps. 100xxx.] His c. m. version of Ps. 100xxx, in 8 st. of 4 l., 1st pub. in his Ps. of David, &c., 1719. In a note thereon he says: "In the 5th stanza 1 have borrowed a verse from Jer. xiv. 22, "Are there any among the reptiles that can cause rain?" This stanza begins "Which of the stars and stones thou trust?" As a whole the paraphrase is not in general use. A cento beginning "Great is the Lord, and works unknown," is given in N. Cong., No. 215. It is composed of st. ii.-v. and vii.
Away, dark thoughts, awake, my joy. J. Mason. [Christmas.] This is Mason's "Song of Praise for the Birth of Christ," and appeared in his Songs of Praise, 1803, in 4 st. of 8 l., and in later editions including Sedgwick's reprint, 1859. Its use as a congregational hymn is limited. It is quaint, and on the whole unsuited to modern taste.

Away from every mortal care. I. Watt. [Public Worship.] 1st pub. in his Hymns and Sacred Songs, 1763. Bk. ii., No. 123, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "The benefit of Public Ordinances." It has been republished in all later editions of the Hymns, &c., and in Watt's Works. G. Whitefield included st. i., ii., iii., and vi., in his Coll. 1753. This arrangement is often repeated in modern hymnals. In Hattifield's Amer. Church H. Bk., 1872, No. 122, the full text is given with "bears down," in st. iii., 1, 3.

Away, my needless fears. C. Wesley. [Submission.] In Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, 35 hymns were given as "For Christian Friends," of which this was No. 35, in 10 st. of 8 l. From this two cantos have come into C. U. as follows:—

1. In the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk. 1838, st. i., vi., and ix. were given in 6 st. of 4 l., No. 615. This canto is also found in various collections of the Methodist body, and in the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk. 1873, No. 832.
2. In A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hgs. 1776, No. 75, and later editions, st. i., v., and vi., were given with slight alterations, but this canto has almost entirely gone out of use.

Away, my unbelieving fear. C. Wesley. [Confidence.] Hab. iii., 17, 18, 19, is the subject of this hymn. It appeared in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1742, in 4 st. of 8 l., and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 198. It did not form part of the Wes. H. Bk. until the revised ed. 1873, although, through having been given in M. Madan's Ps. & Hgs., 1760, it had been in C. U. in the Ch. of England and amongst Nonconformists for more than one hundred years. Its modern use is limited.

Away with death, away. H. K. White. [Death.] This poem, entitled "Athanasius," was given by Southey in his ed. of H. K. White's Remains, 1807, and repeated in later editions, as also in the numerous reprints of H. K. White's Poems. It is unknown as a hymn, but 20 lines theretofrom slightly altered and beginning, "Hail the heavenly scenes of peace," are in Martin's Hymns, &c., 1840 and 1873.

Away with our fears. Our troubles and tears. C. Wesley. [Whiteunite.] This is No. 32 of his "Hymns for Whitesunday," which were pub. at Bristol in 1746 as Hymns of Petition and Thanksgiving for the Promise of the Father. It is in 5 st. of 8 l. In 1776 four stanzas, somewhat altered, were given in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hgs., No. 290, and these were used in C. U. It did not form part of the Wes. H. Bk. until the revised ed. of 1875. Orig. text in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 263.

Awhile in spirit, Lord, to Thee. J. F. Thrupp. [Lent.] One of the best known and most popular of Mr. Thrupp's hymns. It was written for and 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hgs. for Pub. Worship, 1854, No. 64, in 4 st. of 4 l. In 1861 the Rev. F. Pott included it in his Hgs., &c., No. 72, with st. ii., and iv. transposed, some minor alterations, and a doxology from the Latin. This form was repeated in Ch. Hgs., 1871, No. 105. Orig. text in Thring's Coll., 1882, No. 154, with st. i., 1, 2, "Into the desert would we flee," for "Would we unto the desert flee," an alteration from the Rev. F. Pott as above. The text of Hgs. & Songs of Praise: N.Y., 1874, is that of the Rev. F. Pott with a slight alteration, and the omission of the doxology.

Away with my [our] fears! The glad morning appears. C. Wesley. [Thanksgiving.] This hymn was written for use on the celebration of a Birthday, and in many respects it is eminently suited thereto. It was 1st pub. in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii., No. 190, in 14 st. of 6 l., and entitled "On his Birthday." Under the date "June 17, 1788," J. Wesley refers to this hymn in the following manner:—

"I this day enter on my eighty-fifth year; and what cause have I to praise God, as for a thousand spiritual blessings, so for bodily blessings also? How little have I suffered yet by the rush of numerous years! . . . Even now, though I find daily pain in my eye, or temple, or arm, yet it is never violent, and seldom lasts many minutes at a time. Whether or not this is sent to give me warning that I am shortly to quit this tabernacle, I do not know; but be it one way or the other, I have only to say:—

"My remnant of days I spend in His praise.
Who died the whole world to redeem:
My days are His due, Be they many or few.
And they all are devoted to Him."

When included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 221, st. i., vi., and xi., were omitted. This form is repeated in the new ed., 1875, and also in numerous hymnals of the Methodist bodies at home and abroad. Orig. text in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 449.
AYLWARD, JAMES AMBROSE

Ayward, James Ambrose, b. in 1813, at Leeds, and educated at Hinckley, the Dominican Priory of St. Peter, to which a secular college was attached. Particulars touching the stage of his monastic life may be found in the Obituary Notices of the Friar-Preachers, or Dominican, of the English Province from the year of our Lord 1650. He was ordained in 1838, and assisted in the college, taking the higher classical studies, in 1842. He became head of the college, and continued so till it was discontinued in 1852. At Woodchester he was made successively Lector of Philosophy and Theology, and Prior. He died at Hinckley, and was buried in the cloister-yard of Woodchester. His sacred poems have become his principal monument, and of these he contributed very many to the first three volumes of the Catholic Weekly Instructor, and other periodicals. His essay on the Mystical Element in Religion and on Ancient and Modern Spiritualities, was not pub. till 1874. Referring to him, said to his ser. tr. of Latin hymns, a large number of which are incorporated by Mr. O. Shipley in Annae Sanctae. 1884, Mr. Shipley says: "The second collection of *ser. comm. came from the pen of the late Very Rev. Father Ayward, of the Order of Preachers, a cultured and talented priest of vari'd powers and gifts, whose memory is held dear by all who knew and were influenced by him. He sent to his reward in the year 1872, after nearly forty years' profession as a Dominican, and was buried in the picturesque cloistered churchyard of Woodchester, of which model and peaceful religious houses he was the first Prior." [J. C. E.]

AYRES, H. C., b. about 1849, a member of the Baptist denomination, and a resident in Philadelphia, is the author of:

1. "Oh there in who loves thee." [Love of Christ.] A popular hymn and well known in G. Brit through D. Sankey's Sacred & Sacred. enlarged ed. No. 319. It was written during the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia, the theme having been suggested by the expression, "One there is who loves and waits to bless," used by Mrs. D. Doane (q. v.) in prayer at a meeting of friends at which Mr. Ayres was present. The ms. was presented to Mr. Doane a day or two afterward. It was set to music by Mr. Doane, and pub. forthwith. The orig. text and music are in M. Sankey's S. & S. as above. Mr. Ayres is also the author of:

2. "In other Name." [The Name of Jesus.] This hymn is unknown to the English collectors.

B.

BACON, LEONARD

Bacon, Leonard, D.D., was b. at Detroit (where his father was a missionary to the Indians), Feb. 19, 1802, and educated at Yale College, and at Andover. In 1827 he was ordained Pastor of the Centre Church, New Haven, and retained that charge till 1866, when he was appointed Professor of Theology in Yale Divinity School. This professorship he resigned in 1871; but till his death in 1881, he was Lecturer on Church Polity. He died Dec. 24, 1881. Dr. Bacon rendered important service to hymnology both as writer and compiler. While a student at Andover, he edited an important and now rare tract, entitled Hymns and Sacred Songs for the Monthly Concert (or Prayer for Missions), Andover, Sept. 1823. This contained the three hymns following, which are his:

1. "Weep not for the shaft that ascends." Death of a Missionary.

2. "Land where the bones of our fathers are sleeping." Missions. This was brought into notice in G. Britain through its insertion in the Evangelical Magazine, March, 1824.

3. "Wake the song of jubilee." Missions.

Of these No. 1 is found in Lyr. Soc. Amer., p. 6, and No. 3 was adopted, with alterations, by Pratt in his J. and Hys. (Lond., Seeley & Co., 1829), from which it passed into Greene and Mason's Church Psalms, 1831, and the Church Psalms of the Evangelical Christians (N. Y.)
4. Though now the nations sit beneath. Missions. This is based on a hymn by Sarah Slates, "Arise in all Thy splendour, Lord" (q. v.), which Dr. Bacon had partly rewritten for his Andover Tract, above noted. In the Appendix to Dwight he substituted new verses for what remained of her's in the Tract, and then justly claimed the whole as his own.

5. Thou hast hast to redeem us from hell. In 1845 Dr. Bacon was joint compiler with Dr. E. T. Fitch, and several others, of Psalms & Hymns of Christian Use and Worship; pub. by the General Association of Connecticut.

To this collection he contributed the four hymns following:

7. Here, Lord of life and light, to Thee. Institution of a Minister. This was written March 9, 1825, for his installation as pastor of the First Church, New Haven, and first pub. as above, No. 559, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "Ordination in an ancient New England Church."

8. God, beneath Thy guiding hand. American Anniversary Hymns. This is a favourite American Anniversary hymn. It is abbreviated and altered from his hymn, "The Sabbath morn is bright and calm," which he wrote for the dedication of New Haven, 1833. In this revised form it was first pub. as above, No. 615, in 5 st. of 4 l., and appointed "For the twenty-second of December."

9. God of Abraham, ever sure. Prayer on behalf of the Young. This was written as a substitute for Mrs. Hyde's 'Dear Saviour, if these lambs should stray,' the use of which was refused by the owners of the copyright of Nettleton's Village Hymns (1824). In the Ps. & Hymn, 1845, it is No. 635, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "Prayer for the children of the Church."

10. Hail, tranquil hour of closing day. Evening. This popular hymn was written under the same circumstances as the preceding, and as a substitute for Mrs. Brown's Twilight hymn, "I love to steal awhile away." It is No. 706 of the Ps. & Hymn, 1845, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Evening Twilight."

11. How sweet, thro' long remembered years. Evening. In the Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882, No. 15, is composed of st. iii.-v. of No. 10.

[F. M. B.]

Bahnmaier, Jonathan Friedrich, s. of J. C. Bahnmaier, Town Preacher at Oberstenfeld, near Biettwar, Wurttemberg, was b. at Oberstenfeld, July 12, 1774. After completing his studies at Tubingen, his first appointment was, in 1798, as assistant to his father. He became Discous at Marbach on the Neckar in 1806, and at Ludwigsburg in 1810, where he was for a time the head of a young lad's school. In 1815 he was appointed Professor of Education and Domestic Life at Tubingen, but in the troubled times that followed he had to resign his post. He received in 1819 the appointment of Dean and Town Preacher at Kirchheim-on-the-Trek, where he continued as a faithful, unwearyed, and successful worker for 21 years. He was distinguished as a preacher, and greatly interested in the causes of education, of missions, and of liberal societies. He was also one of the principal members of the committee which compiled the Wurttemberg G. B. of 1812. He preached his last sermon at Kirchheim, on the 10th Sunday after Trinity, Aug. 15, 1841. Two days later he held a visitation on Owen. While inspecting the school at the adjacent village of Brucker, he was struck by paralysis, and being conveyed back to Owen, d. there, Aug. 18, 1841 (Koch, v. 81-84; Allg. Deutsche Biog., i. 766-767). Of his hymns two have been tr. into English:

1. Jesus, du wiederkehrtest. [Schools:] 1st pub. in his Christliche Blatter aus Wurttemberg, pts. 9-12 for 1819, p. 55, in 2 st. of 8 l., entitled "Prayer after School," as one of 7 metrical prayers for Children, and for the School and House. Included as No. 2947 in Knapp's Ex. L., 1847 (1867, No. 524), and No. 513 in the Wurttemberg G. B., 1812. The only tr. in C. U. is:

2. Walte, fuerst, nah und fern. [Misison.] According to Koch. vii. 84, 1st printed separately 1827. Included as No. 97 in the Kirchenlieder der deutschen Liederschatze, Nurnberg, 1828, and as No. 260, beginning, "Walte, walte, nah und fern," in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, in 7 st. of 4 l., and in the Wurttemberg G. B., 1842, and other recent collections. One of the best and most useful of hymns for Foreign Missions. The tr. in C. U. are:

1. Far and near. Almighty Word. A good and full tr. by Miss Cox in her Sacred H. from the German, 1841, p. 203, repeated, slightly altered, in her H. from the German, 1844, p. 223. Included in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, and in the Baptist Hymnal, 1879. In Hedge and Huntington's Hymn, Boston, U.S., 1853, and in Alford's Year of Praise, 1867, st. i. was omitted and the hymn thus began, "Word by God the Father sent."

2. Spread thy triumph far and nigh, by H. J. Buckoll. By omitting st. ii., iv. as No. 65 in the Rugby School H. Bk., 1859 (in the Rugby School H. Bk., 1870, No. 175, the tr. is complete). The tr. of st. iii., v.-vii. altered and beginning "Word of Him whose sovereignty will," were included in the Marybone Coll., 1851, and Burgess and Money's Ps. and Hymn., 1857. The Wellington College H. Bk., 1863, begins with the tr. of st. v., "Word of life, so pure and free."

BAILEY, EDWARD

Other tracts: —
1. “In his might, bearing God’s love光照,” by C. B. W.,
2. “Word of God, word of grace.”
3. “The right arm of the Heavenly Father.”
In H. & M., 1870, p. 169.

[J. M.]

Bailey, Edward, a Wesleyan local preacher, and a representative of a London firm, was b. at Brentford, Middlesex, Aug. 16, 1846. At 12 years of age, through the death of his father, he was compelled to work for his own livelihood, and to support his widowed mother, who was paralysed. His heavy labours were relieved by literary efforts, the first to appear in print being in 1869. Mr. Bailey is known chiefly as the author of 23 tracts in prose and verse, which have been published by the Wesleyan, the Tract, and other Societies, and of several hymns. Some of the latter were written for Anniversary Services at various Sunday Schools with which he was associated, and others in times of personal affliction. Of these hymns the following are in the Meth.

S. E. B., 1875, and other collections:
1. Gracious God! Almighty Father, Miserere.
2. Tread, steadfast, crowned with immortality.
3. When our hearts are glad and bright. For Guidance.

Bailey, Philip James, b. at Nottingham, April 22, 1816. His father, a man of great ability and local celebrity as a politician and author, was for some time proprietor and editor of the Nottingham Mercury, a weekly newspaper. In his 16th year P. J. Bailey became a student at Glasgow University. He did not graduate, but after a time went to London to study for the legal profession. In 1835 he was called to the bar by the Society of Lincoln’s Inn. In the years that followed, whilst ostensibly engaged in legal matters, he was really absorbed in the study of literature and philosophy, and in the conception and elaboration of the remarkable poem in connexion with which his name is chiefly known. This was pub. in 1833, under the title of Festus, or a Poem, by Philip James Bailey. The Angel-Worid (1830); The Mystic and the Spiritual Legend (1833); and The Universal Hymn (1832), may all be considered as episodes of his chief work, and are in fact in later editions in substance incorporated with it. Mr. Bailey in the author of two other works of a different class,—The Age, a Satire, 1838, and a Brief Political Treatise on the International Policy of the Great Powers.

From 1864 to 1876 Mr. Bailey lived at the most part in Jersey. Of late years he has resided at a seashore village in North Devon.

Posters have passed through 10 editions in England, and 30 in America. One of the lyrics comprised in this poem—‘Is Heaven a place where pearly streams’—is composed by Mr. Bailey, and is included in his latest tracts—All who love Thee, Lord, and Thee (ed. 1838, p. 103)—has been expanded into a Hymn by G. Rawson (Rep. Hymnal, No. 524). Both compositions are extremely beautiful, and make one wish that Mr. Bailey had given us more of the same kind.

Baker, A. A. [Jerusalem, my happy home.]

Baker, Sir Henry Williams, Bart., b. in London, May 27, 1821, and educated at Trinity Coll., Cambridge, where he graduated, B.A. 1844, M.A., 1847. Taking Holy Orders in 1844, he became, in 1851, Vicar of Monkland, Herefordshire. This benefice held to his death, on Monday, Feb. 12, 1877. He succeeded to the Baronetcy in 1851. Sir Henry’s name is intimately associated with hymnody. One of his earliest compositions was the very beautiful hymn, “Oh! what if we are Christ’s,” which he contributed to Murray’s Hymnal for the Use of the English Church, 1852. His hymns, including metrical litanies and translations, number in the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 33 in all. These were contributed at various times to Murray’s Hymnal; H. A. & M., and the London Mission H. Bk., 1876-7. The last contains his three latest hymns. These are not included in H. A. & M. Of his hymns four only are in the highest strains of jubilation, another four are bright and cheerful, and the remainder are very tender, but exceedingly plaintive, sometimes even to sadness. Even those which at first seem bright and cheerful have an undertone of plaintiveness, and leave a dreamy sadness upon the spirit of the singer. Poetical figures, far-fetched illustrations, and difficult compound words, he entirely eschews. In simplicity of language, smoothness of rhythm, and earnestness of utterance, he reminds one forcibly of the saintly Lyte. In common with Lyte also, if a subject presented itself to his mind with striking contrasts of light and darkness, he almost invariably sought shelter in the shadows. The last audible words which lingered on his dying lips were the third stanza of his exquisite rendering of the 23rd Psalm, “The King of Love, my Shepherd is”:

“Be patient and meek, often I strayed, But yet in love He sought me; And on Ever generous laid, And home rejoicing, brought me.”

This tender sadness, heightened by a soft calm peace, was an epitome of his poetical life.

Sir Henry’s labours as the Editor of H. A. & M. were very arduous. The trial copy was distributed amongst a few friends in 1859: 1st ed. pub. 1861, and the Appendix, in 1868; the trial copy of the revised ed. was issued in 1874, and the publication followed in 1875. In addition he edited Hymns for the Mission, 1874, and Hymns for Mission Services, n.d., c. 1876-7. He also pub. Daily Prayers for those who work hard; a Daily Text Book. In H. A. & M. there are also four (33, 211, 254, 472) the melodies of which are by Sir Henry, and the harmonies by Dr. Monk. [See Church of England Hymnody.] [J. J.]

Baker, Mary A. Miss Baker, who is a member of the Baptist denomination, and a resident in Chicago, Illinois, is an active worker in the temperance cause, and is also an author of various hymns and temperance songs. Her most popular hymn:—

Master, the tempest is raging. Peace, was written in 1874 at the request of Dr. H. D. Palmer, who desired of her several songs on the subjects of a series of Sunday School Lessons for that year. Its theme is "Christ stilling the tempest." During the same year it was set to music by Dr. Palmer, and pub. in his Songs of Love to the Bible School, 1874. It is found in other collections, including L. D. Sankey’s Sacred, and Solos, Lond., 1881. Its home popularity was increased by its republication and frequent use during the illness of Pres. Garfield. It was sung at several of the funeral services held in his honour throughout the States.

2. Why perish with cold and with hunger! In conclusion, this is another of her hymns set to music by L. D. Sankey, and included in his Sacred and Solos, Lond., 1881. [J. J.]

Bakewell, John, b. at Brailsford, Derbyshire, 1721. At about the age of eighteen his mind was turned towards religious truths by reading Boston’s Foursfold State. From that time he became an ardent evangelist, and in 1744 (the year of the first Methodist Conference) he began to preach. Removing to London some short time after, he became acquainted with the Wesleyan, J. Madan, A. M. Toplady, J. Fletcher, and other earnest evangelical men. After conducting for some years the Greenwich Royal Park Academy, he resigned in favour of his son-in-law, Dr. James Eggon, and employed much of his time in preaching at various places for the Wesleyans. He d. at Lewisham, near Greenwich, March 18, 1810, aged 83, and was buried in the Wesleyan burying ground connected with the City Road Chapel, London. Mr. Bakewell was the author of a few hymns, the best known being, “Hail Thou once despised Jesus,” the abbreviations of the same, “Paschal Lamb, by God appointed,” and “Jesus, hail, enthroned in glory.” A short memoir of him was pub. by Mr. Stelfox, Belfast, 1814. [J. J.]

Bald sich ich mit dem Sterbekleid. Anon. [Eternal Life.] Included as No. 3508 in Knapp’s Ev. L. S., 1837, in 2 st. of 4 4, with the note “Found in the hymn-book of my deceased wife.” The only tr. in C. U. is:—

“Soon in the grave my flesh shall rest.” By Dr. H. Mills, in full, with 2 original st. added in his Horae Greg., 1817 (1866, p. 121), and thence, as No. 982, in the Lutheran General Synod’s Hymns, &c., 1852.

Another tr. is, “Soon all my sorrows I shall lay,” by Dr. E. A. Tholuck’s Hours of Christian Devotion, Edin., 1870, p. 541. [J. M.]

Balde, Jacob. He was b. at Ensheim, in Alsace, in 1663, and d. in 1668, at the age of 65. In the year 1620 he entered the order of the Jesuits, but it is rather as a patriot, deeply mourning over the miseries caused by the “Thirty Years’ War,” than as a priest, that he comes before us in his works. His reputation amongst his compatriots as a writer of Latin poetry could hardly have been greater than it is. With an exaggeration which, however pardonable, can scarcely be allowed to pass altogether unchallenged, he is extolled by such writers as Herder, and even more markedly by A. W. von Schlegel, though he was unapproached by any other modern Latin poet. There is, however, no doubt that his acquaintance and sympathy with the misfortunes of his country result in a realism, and in times an earnestness, founded upon deep religious feeling, in what he wrote, which is too often sought in vain in the works of other writers of the same class. He takes high rank, if not the first place, amongst such.

He was a prolific writer. His Odes and Salutatium Podagricum (the best known of his works) scarcely fall within the scope of a Dictionary of Hymnology; but, especially as it has been admitted by Archbishop Trench into his Sacred Latin Poetry, references may be made here to his “Chorea Mortuus sit discussus et mortis in humanas res imperius,” a dirge upon the death of the Empress Leopoldina, wife of Ferdinand III. In her first childhood, in 1649, and chased in her funeral procession, and commencing “Quid homines sumus?” (Trench, See Lat. P., 2nd ed., 1864, pp. 175-177). It is a noble poem, in which the author allows himself, as he very rarely did, to forsake the classical metre in which he usually wrote. However difficult to translate, and Archbishop Trench says that it “almost defies translation,” there is one translation into English, in the original metre, in the Southern Magazine, U. S., Jan. 1774; and D. T. Morgan has another, but not in the original metre, in his Hymns & other Poetry of the Latin Church. The original poem is given at length in Trench, as quoted from Balde, Coloniae, 1668, vol. iv. p. 424.

The merits of Balde’s productions consist rather in the grandeur and solemnity of his utterances and the boldness of his imagery than in the perfection of his classical style. Success in the latter is hardly claimed for him by his most ardent admirers. [D. S. W.]

Baldwin, Thomas, p. b. at Beavah, or Norwich, Connecticut, 1753, was representative for some time of his native State in the Legislature. In 1783 he was ordained to the Baptist ministry, and from 1790 till his death, in 1825, he was Pastor of the Second Baptist Church, Boston. His best known hymns are:

1. Almighty Saviour, here we stand. Holy Baptism. This hymn “For Immersion” was contributed to a Coll. of Sacred and Devotional Hymns, Boston, 1808, from whence it has passed into later collections, including the Baptist Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, and others.

2. From whence does this union rise! Communion of Saints. First found in J. Asplund’s New Coll., Baltimore, 1793, beginning, “O whence does this union rise,” Formerly very popular, and still in use as in the Baptist Hymns, [.and Tune] Book, Phila., 1871, No. 638. In the Church Hymnary, Boston, 1864, No. 981, it is altered to “From whence doth this union arise!”

3. Ye happy saints, the Lamb adores. Holy Baptism. For Immersion, first appeared in a Coll. of Sacred and Devotional Hymns, Boston, 1808, from whence it passed into an altered form as—“Come, happy souls, adore the Lamb” in Winchell’s Hymns to Watts, 1812. It is found in Spurgeon’s O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and many modern American Baptist collections. [F. M. B.]

Balfern, William Poole, b. in 1818, at Haggerston; entered the Baptist Ministry in 1848, and has laboured chiefly in the suburbs of London, and in Brighton, where the author of Glimpses of Jesus and other prose works of similar character, has been a frequent contributor to Religious Periodicals, and has pub. the following vols. of poetry:—

(1) The Beauty of the Great King, and other Poems, 1871, Lond., Passmore and Alabaster. (2) Lyrics for the Heart, 1872. (Same pub.) (3) Hymns of the Pas-
Mr. Ballou's hymns have appeared in the Bap. Hymnal; A. Hym. for the Young; the Mel. S. S. Bk.; Songs of Gladness (S. S.
Union); Bk. of Hymns for S. School, Lond., Weeks & Co.; Treas. of Sacred Song,
Kirkwall, W. Penn; and in a few collections of the Church of England. They include:—

1. Come unto Me, the Saviour speaks [said]: Invitation.
4. O Lamb of God, most lovely [holy]. Hymns of Jesus.
5. O morning star, whose distant ray, Divine Guidance.
7. Shepherd of those sunlit mountains. The Good Shepherd.

All these hymns were contributed to the S. S. Union Hymns of Gladness, 1871, and from thence have passed in other collections.

9. From his work, The Beauty of the Great King, 1871, into the Bap. Hymnal, 1873.

Whilst these hymns do not take a high rank as poetry, they are characterized by simplicity of expression, and by devout and casual, often tender, Christian feeling.

Ball, Thomas Isaac, b. 16 August, 1838.
On taking Holy Orders in 1865, he successively became Curate of St. Salvador's, Dundee Mission; Incumbent of St. Mary's,
The Cove, by Aberdeen; Domestic Chaplain to the Earl of Kinnoull: Curate of All Saints, Bringham Street, Edinburgh: Curate of St.
Columba's, Edinburgh; Priest of St. Michael's Chapel, Edinburgh; and Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Argyll and the Isles. Mr. Ball is the author of The Orthodox Doctrine of the Church of England, 1877, and of numerous tracts; and the compiler of The English Catholic's Vade-mecum, 1880. In 1895 he contributed various trs. from the Latin to the Appendix to the H. Noted, for use in St. Alban's, Holborn, London, of which he was co-editor with the Rev. H. A. Walker. He was also the sole editor of the Supp. thereto, 1882.
These trs. are annotated under their respective original first lines.

Ball, William, a member of the Society of Friends, some time resident at Glen Roth-way, Byland, Westmoreland, author of: (1) The New Sarum, or Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs, Lond., 1825. (2) The Transcript and Other Poesies; (3) Hymns, or Lyrics, 1854; (4) Verses composed since 1870, &c., 1875; and other works. From the above the following hymns have come into C. U.:—

1. Praise to Jesus! Praise to God. Praise to Jesus. This is given in the Hymnary, 1871, as "Praise to Jesus, Loved and Lost," and in the American Hymn and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, as "Hallelujah! Praise to God." Orig. text in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 643.

2. There is a pure and tranquil wave. *Hope.
From Wagner's Verse, 1825, into Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1843; the Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 446; and the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883, &c.

Ballou, Hosea, a celebrated leader of the sect of Universalists, was b. at Richmond, New Hampshire, April 30, 1771. He was entirely self-educated, and began to preach when about 21. In 1807 he settled at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, passing to Salem, Mass., in 1815, and to Boston in 1817. He died in 1832. To the Universalist Hymns composed by different Authors, pub. in 1808, he contributed 199 hymns. A few of these are still used by the Universalists, but one only, and that probably his best, has passed beyond their ranks. It is:—

When God descendeth with men to dwell. The Second Advent. Ballou also edited with Turner a second collection in 1821, and a third in his own name, 1837. [See American Hymnody, § vi.]

Bampfield, George Frederick Lewis, M.A., b. at St. John's Wood in 1827, and was a pious member of Robert Westcott Bampfield, surgeon, in Covent Garden, London.
In 1845 he entered Trinity College, Oxford, whence he migrated to London College as a scholar, and graduated in Arts in 1849. After being curate successively of Shoreham, and of St. Thomas's, Oxford, he was received into the Roman Catholic Church by the Rev. F. W.
Faber, went through a noviciate of 18 months at the Osterley, was ordained priest in 1857 by Cardinal Wiseman in his private chapel, after which he visited Rome, and, returning to England, officiated as priest at Stratford and Waltham Cross, and took part in various missions. In 1868 the chief work of his life began. This was the opening of schools for children of the middle classes. He was assisted by priests and others who lived in community, under the title of "Institute of St.
Andrew." Ten years later it was confirmed by authority. His hymn to "The Five Wounds" was contributed to Mr. Orby Shirley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. It begins: "Ye

Bancroft, Charlie Lees, née Smith, dr. of the Rev.
Sydney Smith, b.b., Rector of Durnagh, County Tyrone, Ireland; was b. at Bloomfield, Merion, in the county of Philadelphia, June 21, 1841; and married, in 1869, to Arthur E. Bancroft. Her hymns have appeared in periodicals, Lyra Brit., Bishop Ryle's Spiritual Songs, and other collections, and also as leaflets. The following have come into C. U.:—

1. O for the [a] robes [robe] of whiteness. Hea-en Desired. This favourite children's hymn was 1st pub. as a leaflet in 1860. In 1867 it was included in Lyra Brit., and hence has passed into several collections in G. Britain and America.

2. The King of glory standeth. Christ the Saviour. Contributed in 7 st. of 8 l. to the Lyra Brit., 1867, and entitled "Mighty to save." In the Hymns of Praise, N. Y., 1874, No. 1196, it begins with st. iii., "He comes in bloodstained garments."

3. Before the throne of God above. The Advocate. Dated 1863, and given in Spurgeon's O. O.
H. Bk., 1866, London Domini, N. Y., 1884.

In 1867 Mrs. Bancroft's hymns were collected and pub. as Within the Veil, by C. L. S.

Bancroft, James Henry, b. at Boston, 1819, graduated at Amherst College, 1839, and Andover, 1842. Ill-health prevented his ordination as a Congregational minister. He d in Boston, Aug. 25, 1844. His hymn—

Brother, though from yonder sky [Burial], was written in 1842, for the funeral of Dudley Leavitt, a classmate at Andover, who died there suddenly Jan., 7, 1842. It was given in The Psalms and Hymns are to be sung by such only as God has fitted thereby to the help of His Spirit; that by congregational singing instruction is prevented, for “when all speak, one can hear” ; that singing other men's words “opens a gap for forms of prayer”; that “once permit the singing by art pleasant tunes, and you will bring music and even instruments back again into public worship, and then, farwell to all solemnity.” Twelve years later, in the General Baptist Assembly of 1859, the question of “promiscuous singing” was considered, when the persons holding the affirmative were desired to show “what Psalms they made use of for the matter, and what rules they did settle upon for the manner.” Thereupon was produced, not the version of Sternhold and Hopkins, but “a book of metres composed by one Mr. Barton, and the rules for singing these Psalms secundum artes, viz., as the musicians do sing according to their gamut, sol, fa, la, my, rag, de; all which appeared to strangely foreign the evangelical worship that was not conceived anywise safe for the churches to admit such carnal formalities.” And this opinion was endorsed with the general approval of the Assembly.

(2) In the Calvinistic, or Particular Baptis-tist, section of the denomination, congregational singing seems to have been regarded with more favour. In the records of the Breadmead Church, in Bristol, reference to this part of worship are frequent. Thus, in the year 1771, it was a complaint made against them by “old Mr. Wright, that had been Sheriff,” that he could hear them sing Psalms from their meeting-place at his hose in Hullier's Lane. There was a second Baptis-tist community in Bristol, known as “Mr.
Gifford's people,” who, though willing to sing Psalms with others besides the church, scrupled to “sing in metre,” and pleaded for permission to keep their hands off during this part of the service, or “to go first,” John Bunyan, who belonged to this section of the Baptists, not only in his famous Allegro frequently represents his pilgrimage as singing, but also in his Solomon's Temple Spiritualized (A.D. 1688) speaks of this part of worship as belonging by tie's appointment to the Church of the new covenant. But it is members of the church only—sion's sons”—that arc to sing. He says—

“To sing to God is the highest worship we are capable of performing in heaven, and it is much of sinner's on earth, without grace, should be capable of performing it according to His institution acceptably.
I pray God that it be done by all those that nowadays get into churches with spirit and with understanding.
Early English Hymnody, § xiii. 11, in his Tropes & Figours (1682) and his Tretise on Baptism (1689), had followed in the same train. But in 1690 one Isaac Marlow, an influental lay member of the church in Mile End Green, in a Discourse concerning Singing, entered the lists on the other side. Keach replied in his Breach Repaired, and presently others joined in the fray. As stated (l.c.), the General Assembly of Particular Baptists intervened in the interests of peace, and a truce followed; but the practice of congregational singing more and more prevailed.

These Baptists of the 17th century sang the Psalms in their ordinary worship. At length, however, the custom was introduced (by Keach, in 1673), in supposed imitation of the example of Christ and His Apostles, of singing a hymn at the close of the Lord's Supper. Next, hymns were sung on Thanksgiving Days, at Baptisms, and on other special occasions. These appear to have been composed either by the minister himself or some gifted friend. Thus, in connection with the controversy above named, it is stated that on one occasion, at Mr. Keach's place, when a brother minister was officiating, "a hymn was given up to him which he read and sang, and the people with him." For use at these times were prepared both the earlier hymns of Benjamin Keach, and the Sacramental Hymns of Joseph Stennett, a Presbyterian, and of Joseph Boyce, a minister in Dublin, who appears to have been a Baptist in principle, pub. eighteen Sacramental Hymns, to which he appended a hymn on Baptism, and another on the ministry (Dublin, and again London, 1693).

(For further details see Ivimey's History of the English Hoapists, vol. i. Sympathy in Baptist History, by J. Jackson, Quarterly Review, vol. 174, on "The Non-Conformists," by J. Spencer Curwen.)

II. The Eighteenth Century.

1. The first half of the 18th century was well known as that in which the General Baptists, for the most part, retained their non-conformist character. Thus, in 1738, a case was presented from Northamptonshire to the General Assembly of General Baptists complaining that some churches in that district had "fallen into the way of singing ... with humble notes, and a mixed multitude." It is, however, an indication of a change of feeling that the Assembly, unlike the one in 1689, while admitting the fact of the innovation, desired to leave the matter open for the middle of the century, partly as a result of the great Methodist movement, many new congregations of General Baptists sprang up in the midland counties and the West Riding of Yorkshire, and these all, like their Methodist neighbours, believed in Christian Song. In the year 1770, the New Caution of General Baptists was formed, and soon afterwards a Collection of Hymns prepared for their use. In 1785 Samuel Beeson (q.v.), of Barton, near Market Bosworth, in Leicestershire, pub. a volume of original hymns known as Barton Hymns. These hymns were homely in style, but full of genuine fervour. They had for a time considerable local popularity and reached a second edition in 1797. In 1791 the General Baptist Association sanctioned the preparation of a new Collection of Hymns, the former being very imperfect and nearly out of print. Accordingly in 1793 appeared a Selection edited by John Wesley, of Leicester, and another entitled Hymns and Spiritual Songs selected from various authors, the latter vol. being known by the name of John Wesley's Hymns. Nevertheless, in some of the older General Baptist churches the prejudice against congregational singing still survived, and, in 1797-8, a rather warm controversy was waged between Gilbert Boyce, a much-respected Lincolnshire minister, who in two pamphlets condemned the practice, and Daniel Taylor, then of London, who defended it. A gentleman now living (1886) tells how he has heard from his mother of the songs as worship of the General Baptists, at Moreton, in Rutland, and of the gladness expressed when one day, through the influence of his pastor part of the congregation, the old custom was broken through, and a hymn heinately sung. By the close of the 18th century, however, singing, as part of public worship, had become universal among the General Baptists.

2. Returning to the Particular Baptist section of the denomination, and going back to the beginning of the century, we recall the name of Joseph Stennett, the elder. He may be regarded as the connecting link in Baptist Hymnody between the 17th and 18th centuries. His Hymns for the Lord's Supper belong to the former period (1697), those on Believers' Baptism to the latter (1712). He deservedly holds a front place among Baptist hymn-writers, not only as being among the first in order of time, but also from the sterling quality of some of his compositions. One of these, "Another six days' work is done," is a favourite Sunday-morning hymn in many Non-conformist congregations to this day. After his death, in 1723, it was long before a worthy successor appeared. Indeed, until nearly the middle of the century, the only Baptist hymn-writer of whom we know anything is Anne Dutton (1734), wife of the Baptist minister at Great Gransden, Huntingdonshire. J. A. Jones, who, in 1833, republished her hymns, styled her "the justly celebrated." Mrs. Dutton's compositions, however, are now (except by antiquarians) wholly forgotten. In 1747 appeared Institutes, Hymns, and Other Poems, by Samuel Turner, M.A., of Abingdon; and in 1759, Evangelical Hymns and Songs, by Benjamin Wallin, pastor of Maze Pond. The hymns of neither of these writers possess any great merit, though of the two those of Turner have the more melody and true "poetic fire." To their names must be added that of John Neeld, author of the well-known harvest hymn, "To praise the ever-bounteous Lord." His Hymns Devotional & Moral were printed at Bristol in 1768. Here, too, may be mentioned Edmund Jones, pastor at Exeter, who died in 1766, at a comparatively early age, the author of a hymn very popular for many years, "Come, humble sinner, in whose breast." But by far the most gifted Baptist hymn-writer of this period was Anne Steele, the accomplished daughter of the Rev. Wm. Steele, Baptist minister, at Brightholm, in Hampshire. Adopting the signature T.-in full Theodoria—she wrote a large number of hymns which were not only introduced into the Bristol hymn-book of Ash & Evans in 1769, and Dr. Rippon's Sel. in 1787, but are in common use at the present time. We have indeed now entered upon the pulpy days of Baptist Hymnology, the thirty years or so which followed the first publication of Miss Steele's hymns. To this period belong Benjamin Beddome, a most prolific hymn-writer; the brothers Stennett (grandsons of the Joseph Stennett already named), who contributed largely to Rippon's Sel.; Benjamin Francis, a native of Wales, but pastor for many years of a Baptist church in Gloucestershire; Robert Robinson; and John Fawcett, D.D., who in (1772) on deciding to remain with his attached people at Walmsley in Yorkshire, wrote, "Bliss be the tie that binds," and in the course of the next few years composed several other hymns still in frequent use. Less known writers of this date are Wm. Tucker, of Chalk; a Baptist layman, who in 1772 began to publish in the Gospel Magazine hymns strongly Calvinistic in sentiment; and James Newton, Classical Tutor to the Bristol Education Society, who about the same time wrote a few useful hymns, especially one for baptismal occasions. A much greater name is that of Dr. John Ryland, of Northampton, who at the age of 20, in 1773, wrote the first of a series of 100 hymns, most of which were composed to be sung in connexion with his sermons. John Adams, originally one of Ryland's members, about this time printed in the Gospel Magazine a few hymns now almost forgotten. John Fellows, most of whose works date from Birmingham, pub. hymns in 1773 and 1776, the former collection relating chiefly to the subject of Baptism. Richard Burnham, minister of Grafton Street Chapel, Soho, put forth in 1783 New Hymns on divers subjects, a volume which passed through several editions. Samuel Medley, the popular and useful minister of Byram Street, Liverpool, began in 1786 to print hymns on broadsides as they were composed, and afterwards pub. them in two small volumes. In the following year (1787) John Dracup, of Spoff Lane, in Yorkshire, pub. his Hymns & Spiritual Songs, and, in 1789, Charles Cole, of Whitchurch, put forth his Threefold Alphabet of New Hymns. In 1792 Joseph Swan, a young minister whose short and bright career at Walworth closed in four years afterwards, printed a collection of original hymns, several of which have a place in the principal Baptist hymn-books of the present day; and Samuel Penrice, of Birmingham, whose ministerial course both in brevity and fair promise greatly resembled Swan's, wrote a few hymns which were published with his life by Andrew Fuller in 1800. These were introduced into the later editions of Rippon's Sel. The history of the century closes not unfavourably with the name of Job Hulton, minister at Claxton, in Norfolk, author of a fine hymn, beginning "Come ye saints and raise an anthem," altered by Dr. J. Mason Neale into a form more familiar to modern ears, "Come ye faithful, raise the anthem." In regard to the hymn-books used by the Particular Baptists during the 18th century, they were undoubtedly at first single collections for special occasions, such as those of Boyce and Joseph Stennett, and Wallis, and were used as supplementary to the Psalms in one or other of the metrical versions. But in 1769 a volume was brought out popularly known as the Bristol Hymn Book, compiled by the Rev. John Ash, LL.D., of Pershore, and the Rev. Caleb Evans, D.D., of Bristol. This contained 412 hymns by various writers. An 8th ed. of this collection, valuable for its prefacing and list of authors, was pub. by Isaac James, at Bristol, 1801; and a 10th ed. with a small supplement, Norwich, 1827.

In 1787 Dr J. Rippon, of Carter Lane, and afterwards at New Park Street, London, pub. a Selection of Hymns from the best authors, intended to be an Appendix to Dr. Watts's Psalms & Hymns. It soon became the popular Baptist Hymn-Book, was enlarged from time to time, and passed through more than 30 editions. It was intended, as indicated in the title, to be supplementary to Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns. Therefore the only hymns contained in it from Watts are from his Lyric Poems, Sermons and Miscellanies. All editions contain the names of most of the authors. Prominent among these are those of Steele, Beddome, S. Stennett, Doddridge, Fawcett, Newham and D. Turner. A few hymns are taken from J. Stennett, E. Francis, J. Ryland, Gubin and others. The 10th ed., 1800, and the 27th, 1827, were enlarged. No further change was made by Dr. Rippon, but on the expirations of the copyright of the 1st ed. in 1841 rival editions appeared with additions and alterations.

III. The Nineteenth Century.

But few hymn-writers of eminence appeared among the Baptists of either sect during the present century; though there were many who have written one or two hymns of merit. The first name that presents itself is that of John Burton, of Nottingham and Leicester, who wrote chiefly for Sunday Schools. Then comes the name of Mrs. Alice Flower, a member of the old General Baptist Church in Worship Street, London, and author of a well-known hymn on the seasons, pub. in 1811. John Mann, a bookseller, and rector of the G. B. Church in the Commercial Road, London, in 1828 published a volume of Hymns and Poems. The Rev. John Howard Hill, M.A.—a minister of great influence in his day—composed a large number of hymns on the subjects of his sermons, and in 1835 published a collection therefrom. The Rev. John Eustace Grieve, formerly of Leeds, several missionary hymns of great excellence on the subject of Baptist Missions, and Mrs. Sahy, wife of a Baptist minister at Salisbury, wrote many hymns for special occasions, and in 1834 published a work of Poems on Sacred Subjects. The John Harrington Evans, M.A., of John Street Chapel, Gray's Inn Lane, in 1818 proa selection of 179 hymns for use in his own place of worship and introduced therein a few of his own compositions. This collection reached the 5th ed. in 1838 with 451 hymns. The Hon. and Rev. Baptist W. Noel, m.a., about the same time pub. a selection of hymns which passed through several editions. Of these a few were originals. About the year 1834 Dr. Amos Sutton, a distinguished General Baptist missionary, on the occasion of a visit to England, composed a hymn which has ever since been popular at "farewell Services," "Hail, sweetest, dearest tie that binds." Miss Leslie, of Caleutta, the accomplished daughter of another Indian missionary, is the author of a volume of poems and of the beautiful hymn, "They are gathering homeward from every land." Edward Motte, a Baptist hymnian of the strongly Calvinistic school, published, in 1836, "Hymns of Praise." David Denham, in 1837, published a Selection, including many of his own compositions. Later hymn-writers include the Revs. Cornelius Elwen, Charles Haddon Spurgeon, F. W. Godby, m.a., Thomas Godby, b.a., Edward Hall Jackson, Dawson Burns, d.b., W. P. Balter, T. Virgine Tymms, J. T. Wigner, Walter J. Mathews, Charles Clark, J. W. Wigner, E. H. Parkes, B. Provis, and others.

It remains to mention the principal hymn-books in use in Baptist congregations from 1860 to the present time. Many have been prepared for the service of particular congregations. These, as being of little more than local and temporary interest, we pass over, confining ourselves to hymn-books which have been adopted by a large number of churches.

(1) Toward the end of the last century (1793) John Dunlop pub. a hymn-book for the use of General Baptist Churches, of which a large Appendix, the whole including 716 hymns, was pub. in 1804. At that date it is said to have been "principally in use in the General Baptist Connection." In 1890 this book, having been revised by a committee appointed by the General Association, was formally adopted as the General Baptist Hymn Book. In 1851, another book was substituted, entitled "The New Hymn Book." The compilers were two brothers, the before formal adoption, was revised by a committee. In course of time an Appendix was prepared containing about 80 modern hymns. But in 1875 it was deemed expedient by the compilers to include a large number of the best hymns of the present day. This book was pub. in 1875, under the title of "Baptist Hymn Book." The Rev. W. R. Stevenson, m.a., Baptist minister of Nottingham, was editor, nine other General Baptist ministers co-operating. It contained from the title, partly from the fact stated at the commencement of this article, that the word "General" was omitted from the title, partly from the fact stated at the commencement of this article, that the almost identical in Christian doctrine and practice of the Denomination are now in force, and partly from the expectation, that a certain number of congregations in what has been known as the Particular Baptist section would adopt this Hymnal. In 1886, by direction of the General Baptist Association, the School Hymnal, containing 343 hymns for the young, was prepared for the use of Sunday Schools and Families by the Rev. W. R. Stevenson, assisted by a committee.

(2) We have seen that at the close of the 18th century the hymn-books chiefly in use among the Particular Baptists were the Collections of Dr. Rippon and of Drs. Ash and Evans. In 1828 a book was prepared by Mr. John Haddon, jun., and revised by Doctors Murch, Price and Steane, with other ministers, to which was given the name of The New Selection. This was revised and enlarged in 1838 and again in 1871 by the addition of a Supplement, called Prize Waiteth, and in both forms it has had a considerable circulation. Originally prepared by Mr. John Haddon, jun., the collection entitled Psalms and Hymns, which has been extensively used by important churches for 26 years past, was first pub. in 1852. The principal compilers were Drs. S. G. Green and N. Haycroft and the Revs. W. F. Burell and J. T. Wigner. It contained, until 1880, just 1000 hymns; but in that year a Supplement was added, under the editorship of the Rev. J. T. Wigner, containing 271 additional hymns, chiefly modern. In 1882 a companion book was put forth under the same editorship, entitled Psalms and Hymns for the Young, intended chiefly for use in Sunday Schools.

In 1886, the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon published a collection of hymns prepared under his direction and entitled Our Own Hymn Book. It contains 1129 psalms and hymns, and is used not only at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, but also in many other congregations presided over by ministers who were once students under Mr. Spurgeon.

Three other collections of hymns, used exclusively by the more highly Calvinistic of the Particular Baptist churches, are: (1) Mr. J. M. Gadsby's Selection of Psalms and Hymns, pub. in 1814. A new ed. with a Supplement appeared in 1838. Successive alterations and additions have been made from time to time (most of J. Hart's hymns having been incorporated), until it now contains 1130 hymns. (2) The Selection, 1837, of David Denham, formerly of Unicorn Yard Chapel, Tooley Street, London, containing nearly 1200 hymns, and said to be used by upwards of 100 churches in Great Britain. (3) The Selection of John Stevens, formerly of Mend's Court Chapel, London Enlarged and re-arranged by J. S. Anderson, of New Cross Road, S.E., it now contains 970 hymns.

Barclay, John. [Scottish Hymnody, § VIII.]
The soldier keeps his watchful eye, composed to the German tune, "The Rhine Watch," are in W. R. Stevenson's School Hymnal, London, 1881. His hymns are spirited and popular.

Barnard, Edward William, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, third s. of H. B. Barnard, of Cavc, Castle, Yorkshire, was b. March 15, 1791. He was Vicar of South Cave, Yorkshire, from 1816 to his premature death in 1828. His pub. works include:

1) Prof. on Institution of the Chaste Style of Me-Me, 1814. (2) The Protestant Hymnman, Hvington, 1817. (3) Poems, 1827, as a series of short poems, original and translated. (4) Fifty Select Poems of Marc-Antonio Flaminius, published Chester, Fletcher, 1839. This posthumous vol. was pub. by his father-in-law, Archdeacon Warbham. This vol. contains some few of Mr. Barnard's lyrics, but by far the largest part of these compositions remain in his Misses Milford, in her work, My Literary Life, 1840 speaks of Mr. Barnard as a master, for scholarship, and of his poetry as "remarkable, not only for grace and beauty, but for the vigour of thought, a felicity, a holy vehemence in occasional verses." His Protestant Hymnman consists of a short account of each of the same whom the Church of England commemorates in her service, during the course of the ecclesiastical year, with original hymns for each Festival. These hymns number 22 in all, are marked with much sweetness and pleasing devotional feeling, and are worthy of attention.

Barth, Christian Gottlob, s. of C. F. Barth, house painter in Stuttgart, was b. Stuttgart, July 31, 1739. He studied at Tubingen, where he was the principal founder of the Missionary Society, and was only restrained by later restrictions from offering himself as a missionary. He became, in 1821, assistant at Neckarweiligen and Dornham, and in 1822, curate in charge of Effingen and Schoenbrunn, near Naugold. In 1824 he was appointed pastor of Mottingen, near Calv, but resigned his charge in 1830, and settled in Calv, receiving in the same year the degree of D.D. from the University of Gieussalad. He d. at Calv of apoplexy, Nov. 12, 1852. At Calv he devoted himself as a writer and preacher to children, as a preacher and writer in the cause of missions to the heathen and to the Jews, and as the founder and writer of the Tract Society of Calv. One of his books, the Bible History, reached its 10th edition in 1872, and had then been translated into 21 European, 18 Asiatic, 7 African, and 8 South Sea languages. He frequently attended the meetings of the Religious Tract Society of London, and was a member of the Evangelical Alliance (Kock, xxx, 199-210; Alle, Deutsche Bibl., ii, 91-93). Of his hymns there have been tr. into English:

Barth, Alfred, D.D., second s. of Sir C. H. Barry, b. Jan. 13, 1826, and educated at King's Coll., London, and Trinity College, Cambridge, graduating in classical and mathematical honours in 1848 and obtaining a Fellowship the same year. Taking Holy Orders in 1850, he has held many important appointments, including the Sub-Wardenship of Trinity College, Glenalmond, and the Headmastership of Leeds High Sch. In 1862 he passed from Leeds to Cheltenham as Principal of the College; thence in 1868 to King's College, London, as Principal; and in 1884 to Australia as the Bishop of Sydney and Metropolitan of Australia. In addition to these appointments, Dr. Barry was Boyle Lecturer 1875, Chaplain to the Bp. of Bath and Wells, and Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen. His pub. works include Introduction to the Old Testament, Notes on the Gospels, Notes on the Catholicism: Life of Sir C. Barry, The Teacher's Prayer Book, and various volumes of Sermons. Also a contributor to Smith's Dict. of the Bible. His hymns are few, and include that for Sunday, "As Thou dost rest, O Father," given in the Rugby School Hymn, 1876; and Thring's Coll., 1882, &c. [J. J.]

Barnard, John. (Scottish Hymnody, viii, 8.)

Barnes, Barnaby, forth s. of Dr. Barnes, Bishop of Durham, b. about 1569, in Yorkshire. At the age of seventeen he entered Brasenose Coll., Oxford, but never obtained his degree. In 1581 he is said to have joined a military expedition to Normandy, in which he remained until 1594. He wrote A Briefe List of Spiritual Hymns, which was printed in 1595. He was buried in the church of St. Mary-le-Bow, Durham, in December, 1609. He was the author of two plays, one pub. in 1607, and the other in 1608, and a volume of satirical poems, Parchephi, 1603, which was privately reprinted Barnard's other poems. It is also included in Mr. Amt's A Coll. of Best-Poems of Original English Poetry, 1604, with the latter poems.

Barrows, Elijah Porter, s.t.d., b. at Mansfield, Connecticut, Jan. 5, 1805, and graduated at Yale, 1826. Ordained in 1829, he was Pastor of First Free Presbyterian Church, N. Y., 1835-7; Professor of Sacred Literature in Western Reserve College, 1837-53; of Hebrew Language and Literature at Ohio, 1852-78; and of the same at Oberlin, 1852-72. His publications include Memoirs of R. M. Anderson, 1852; Companion to the Bible, &c. Hymnol., 1863, 1879: Balsam Geography and Antiquities, 1872, 1882: Balsam Geography and Antiquities, 1872.

Barthes, Christopher [Barth, Christopher], was written in Latin, [c. 500-528]. It was taken by N. Trowbridge, in M. de Sautelle, Missionary of the American languages, as one of the best of the Indian series. The first publication in English was in the 5th cent., in 1804 and 1815, and there tr. into two or three versions, including one of 1805, No. 279. In this text the author severely corrects the heresies and version of Barthes, and traces the text to come from C. T.
BARTHOLOMEW, WILLIAM

Magazine for that year. In his Christliche Gedichte, Stuttgart, 1856, p. 54, in s. w. The two are —
(1) "Haste watchman, to the night away," by Dr. G. Walker, 1669, p. 84. (2) "Watchman! Hast the night departed," in L. Helff's Church at Sea, 1665, p. 107.

Bartholomew, William, is favourably known through the English library of Mendelssohn's Elijah, Athalie, Antigone, Lauda Sion, &c.; and Costa's Eli, and Annibal. He was b. in London, Sept. 6, 1793. For some years he was engaged in writing English words for foreign music. In 1841 he attracted the attention of Mendelssohn, and from that day to Mendelssohn's death, in 1847, he was associated with him, adapting for him the words of the above-named oratorios. He subsequently assisted Sir M. Costa in like manner with Eli and Numa. He d. Aug. 18, 1887. His hymns are generally taken from the above works, the finest and best known being "Praise Jehovah, bow before Him" (q.v.).

Barton, Bernard, commonly known as the "Quaker Poet," was b. in London, Jan. 31, 1784, and educated at a Quaker school at Ipswich. In 1798 he was apprenticed to Mr. S. Jesup, a shopkeeper at Halstead, Essex, with whom he remained until 1806, when he removed to Woodbridge, Suffolk, and entered into business with his brother, as a coal and corn merchant. On the death of his wife at the end of the first year of their married life, he proceeded to Liverpool, where he acted as a private tutor for a short time. He returned to Woodbridge in 1810, where he secured an engagement in the local bank of the Misses Alexander. This appointment he held for 40 years. He d. at Woodbridge, Feb. 19, 1849. During the same year his daughter pub. his Poems and Letters, with a Memoir. His poetical works were numerous, including:—

From these works about 20 pieces have come into C. u. as hymns. They are found principally in the Scottish Evangelical Union Hymnal, on the one hand, and various American Unitarian collections on the other. The best known are, "Lamp of our feet, whereby we trace," and "Walk in the light, so shall thou know." From his Devotional Verses, &c., 1826, the following have passed into the Scottish Evangelical Union Hymnal, 1878:—

1. Fear not, Zion's sons and daughters. Gracious Promises. This is part of a poem on Isaiah xiii. 1, "Fear not, Jacob, tribulated."

2. Hast the invitation ended. Invitation.

3. See we not beyond the portal. Present vision perfect. This is part of the poem on 1 Cor. xiii. 12, "Bun and dark our present vision."

4. Thus we live in love shall know. Peace.

5. Would'st then share this benediction. Peace in Spirit.

In addition, there are also in various collections:—
(6) Around Bethesda's healing wave. Consolation. This is on pp. 182-185, in his Napoleonic, and other Poems, 1822, in 16 mo. of 6. L. A cento from them is given in a few American hymnals, including Mr. Beecher's Phig.

BATEMAN, C. H.

Bartram, Joseph P. Of this American author nothing certain is known, save that pub. The Psalms newly Paraphrased at Service of the Sanctuary, at Boston. U in 1833, and that he is supposed to have been a Unitarian from The Psalms, &c. The version of Ps. vi. 11: "O from these void dark and dread," is given in several Unitarian collections in G. Britain and America. The version of Ps. lxxxvi. 11: "And the第二节 of heaves," is given in Holland's Psalter of Britain, 1843, vol. ii. p. 339, together with a critical note on his work.

Bartram, Christian Henry, b. Aug. 9, 1813, at Wych Hall, after studying at the Moravian and exercising his ministry there, became, in 1843, minister of Ric.

Bateman, Stephen (sometimes given as Bateman), was b. at Bracton, Staffs., and d. in 1581. Beyond the fact that he was a professor of divinity and the author of several works, nothing has been ascertained concerning him. E. Farr, in his Select Poetry, &c., of the reign of Q. Elizabeth, 1843, has given eight stanzas on "Life" from his work, The transign'd Pilgrim, bringing news from all parts of the world, such as scarce heartily of before, Lond. 1569.

His works have often quaint titles. They include, in addition to the above—(1) Bateman upper Bartholomew his Booke, De Proprietatis Terrarum. Newly corrected, enlarged, and amended, Lond., East, fol. 1639 (a work of Shakespearean interest). (2) Christian's Glass of Christian Reformation, Lond., 1649. (3) Golden Booke of the Leder Goddes, Lond., 1617. (4) Doome warming all men to the Judgment, Lond., 1611, &c.

Batty, Christopher, b. at Newby Cote, near Selby, Yorkshire, 1715, d. April 13, 1797. He was a member of the "Inghamites," a religious denomination located principally in the northwestern parts of the counties of Lancashire and Yorkshire. He assisted James Allen (q.v.) in the production of the Kendal Hymn Book, 1757, to which he contributed 31 hymns. Very few of these are in C. U. at the present time. His "Captain of Thine enlist host" (Missions), from the Kendal H. Bk., 1757, is found in Kemble's Coll., 1853, No. 473, and in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., No. 968. He completed his brother's poem, Messiah's Kingdom, which was printed in 1792. [See Inghamite Hymnody.]

Batty, William, brother of the above, also an "Inghamite," and the contributor of 15 hymns to the Kendal H. Bk., 1757. Of these, "Content and glad I'll ever be" (Salvation by Grace) and, "From Salem's gate advancing slow" (Passion tide), are in C. U. outside of the Inghamite Society, and are given in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872. W. Batty died in 1788. [See Inghamite Hymnody.]

Baxter, Lydia, an American Baptist, was b. at Potsdam, N. York, Sept. 2, 1809, married to Mr. Baxter, and d. in N. Y. June 22, 1874. In addition to her Gems by the Wayside, 1855, Mrs. Baxter contributed many hymns to collections for Sunday Schools, and Evangelistic Services. Of these, the following are the best known:—

2. Go, work in my vineyard. Duty. Also given in the Royal Diadem, 1873, and Mr. Sankey's S. & Solos, No. 4.

4. I'm weary, I'm fainting, my day's work is done. Longing for rest. Royal Diadem, 1873.

5. In the fabled spring-time. Heavenly Resurrection. In the Royal Diadem, 1873, I. D. Sankey's S. & Solos, No. 235, and others. It was written for Mr. H. P. Main in 1872.

7. Take the name of Jesus with you. Name of Jesus. Written late in 1870, or early in 1871, for W. H. Doane, and pub. in Pure Gold, 1871. It is No. 148 of I. D. Sankey's S. & Solos.

8. The Master is coming. Invitation. In Songs of Salvation, 1870, No. 38.

9. There is a gate that stands ajar. Mercy. In New Hallowed Songs, and also the Gospel Songs of P. Bliss, 1874. It was written for S. J. Vail about 1872. It has attained to some popularity. It is given in Mr. Sankey's S. & Solos, No. 2.

[B. J.]
Bay Psalm. The. Printed by Stephen Daye, at Cambridge, in New England, in 1640, but there is neither place nor printer's name on the title of this exceedingly rare volume, the first published in North America. It contains the Psalms only, but to the 2nd ed., pub. in 1647, were added a few spiritual songs. The 3rd ed., revised and corrected by President Dunster, had a large addition of Scripture songs and hymns, written by Mr. Lyon. The translations were chiefly by the Rev. Richard Mather, the Rev. Mr. Weld, and the Rev. John Eliot. Francis Quarles, however, contributed several psalms. Originally known as the Bay Psalm Book, it afterwards was called The New England Version of the Psalms. (See Cotton's List of Editions of the Bible & Parts thence in English, p. 117.)

A copy is in the Bodleian, and two others have recently been acquired for America. [See Eliz. Psalms, § XI, and American Hymnody.] [W. T. B.]

Bayly, Charles. This writer is included by Dr. C. Rogers in his Lyra Britannica, 1857; but his hymns have not come into general use. In 1814 he edited The Selection from the Psalms, Lond. (Preface dated "Frome, Sept. 28, 1840") The contributors to this volume include John Sheppard, Francis Skuray, and James Joyce. Mr. Bayly's Descriptive and Critical Essay was pub. in 1869. Dr. Rogers gives "Jesus, to Thee I trembling fly," and "Jesus Christ enthroned on high," as specimens of his hymn-writing, and states that he was born at Frome-Selwood, Somersetshire, and was a member of the legal profession.

Bayne, Robert Hall, M.A., b. of the Rev. Joseph Baynes, b. at Wellington, Somerset, Mar. 16, 1831, and educated at St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, graduating B.A. 1856, and M.A. 1859. Ordained in 1855, he held successively the Curacy of Christ Church, Blackfriars, the P. Curacy of St. Paul's, Whitechapel; of Holy Trinity, Maidstone, and of St. Michael's, Coventry. In 1870 he was Bp. of Madagascar; but resigned in 1871. In 1873 he was appointed Hon. Canon of Worcester Cathedral, and in 1880 Vicar of Holy Trinity, Folkestone. Canon Baynes is more widely known as the compiler of some most successful books of sacred poetry than as an original hymn-writer, although some of his hymns are of considerable merit. Of these the best known are "Jesus, to Thee I trembling fly," and "Holy Spirit, Lord of glory." He was also one of the compilers of Lyra Anglica, 1862; English Hymns, 1863; The Canterbury Hymnal, 1861; and the Supplement, 1869 (all pub. Lond., Houseman & Wright). The Illustrated Book of the author of original looks, 1870; Autumn Memories and other Verses, Lond., Cassell & Co., and is the editor of The Autumn Memories, and in the Churchman's Magazine, of which he was sometime a contributor. His Home Songs for Quiet Hours, 1878, and Hymns for Home Mission, and to His Church, 1879, are widely used. [J. J.]

Bases, John. Little is known of this writer beyond the facts that he was a minister of Lady Huntingdon's Connection, and had a chapel in Cumberland Street, Shoreditch. For use primarily of that congregation he pub. in 1768, A Select Coll. of Psalms and Hymns, Extracted from Several Authors, and Published for the general use of the Church of Christ in her Militant State, containing 252 hymns. This was re-issued in 1770, with a Supplement of 29 hymns; and a 3rd ed. appeared in 1775, with an Appendix of 51 hymns. This last was under the editorship of the Rev. Lawrence Coughlan. Two years later, on Coughlan's leaving Shoreditch, an anonymous Collection appeared, and again, in 1782, under the pastorate of John Henry Meyer, a Selection containing 412 hymns. As Bases's name is omitted from the edition published by Coughlan, some little confusion has arisen with regard to their respective claims. [W. T. B.]

Be joyful in God, all ye Lands of the earth. J. Montgomery. [Ps. 98] Pub. in his Songs of Zion, 1822, in 4 st. of 4 l., and in his Poetical Works, 1826 and 1848; but omitted from his Original Hymns, 1853. It is not in C. U. in G. Britain, but in America, from its appearance in the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, to the present, it has been included in numerous hymnals throughout the States. Orig. text in the American Baptist Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, No. 235.

Be known to us in breaking bread. J. Montgomery. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in his Christian Psalmist, 1823, No. 529, in 2 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Family Table." It was subsequently republished in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 207, with the same title. Its use is limited in its original form, but as a part of the cento "Shepherd of souls, refresh and bless" (q.v.), it is widely known in America.

Be love, delightful theme. B. Beddome. [Preciousness of Christ.] From his posthumous Hymns, & c., 1817, No. 74, in 6 st. of 4 l., into a limited number of hymnals in Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861, it is attributed to J. Montgomery in error.

Be merciful, O God, to me. C. Wesley. [Psalm 119] Appeared in Ps. & Hymns, 1743, in 9 st. of 6 l. (P. Works, 1684-72, vii. 129.) The hymn "My heart is fixed, O God, my heart," in the Suppl. to the Wes. H. Bk. 1830, and the revised ed., 1873, is composed of st. vii., viii., ix.

Be Thou, O God, by night, by day. [Morning.] This anonymous hymn, which is given in many American collections, has not been traced beyond Cheever's American commonplace Book of Poetry, N. Y., 1821. It is in the Plymouth Coll., 1855; Longfellow and Johnson's Hys. of the Spirit, 1864; and others, in 3 st. of 4 l., but always as "Amen." [W. T. B.]

Be Thou our [my] Guardian and our [my] Guide. J. Williams. [Divine Guidance sought.] Appeared in his Hymns on the Catechism, 1842, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is based on the petition in the Lord's Prayer, "And lead us not into temptation." Its some collections it is changed from the plural to the singular throughout, as in H. A. & M., revised ed., 1875, No. 282, &c. It is given in several collections in G. Britain and America.

Be thou ready, fellow-mortal. [Readiness for Duty.] Appeared anonymously in the Unitarian Hymn Book for the Sanctuary, Boston, 1840, No. 609. These Hymns, &c., were edited by the Rev. C. A. Bartol and others, and are known as Bartol's Coll. This hymn passed from that Coll. into the Supplement to Hedge & Huntington’s Hymns of the Church of Christ, Boston, 1853, and again into other hymn-books.

Beaton, Hyde Wyndham, M.A., in 1812, educated at Eton and at St. John’s Coll., Cambridge, B.A., 1833, M.A., 1839. Taking Holy Orders in 1836, he became, in 1837, Vicar of Haseleybury, Bucknett, near Crewkerne, and in 1838, Vicar of Latton, Wilts. He is also Hon. Canon of Bristol, and Rural Dean. His hymns were pub. in The Parish Hymn Book, 1863 and 1875, of which he was co-editor with the Rev. G. Phillimore, and Bp. Woodford. To that collection, in 1863, he contributed the following hymns:—

1. Fierce was the storm of wind. Epiphany.
2. Glory to Thee, O Lord, Who by.” &c. Epiphany. This is usually given as, “All praise to Thee, O Lord, Who by,” &c., and is found in several hymnals.
3. O God, Thy soldiers’ crown. A tr. of “Deus tuiorum militum” (q.v.).
4. This is sometimes given as, “O Christ,” &c. The Son of Man shall come. Epiphany.
5. The peculiarity of these hymns is that they are all in s.m. Their use is somewhat limited, with the exception of Nos. 1 and 2.

Beale, Mary, née Craddock, dau. of Mr. Craddock, Minister of Walton-on-Thames, b. 1632, d. in Pall-Mall, 1697. She was distinguished in painting, and her house was the resort of men of letters and eminence in various professions. Her versions of Ps. iii., xli., xxx., and xxx., were included in Samuell Woodforde’s Paraphrase in English Verse, upon the Books of the Psalms, 1667. The Version of Ps. xxx. is given in Holland’s Psalms of Britain, 1843, vol. ii. p. 76.

Beata nobis gaudia Anni reduxit orbis. [Whitsuntide.] This hymn is sometimes ascribed to St. Hilary of Poitiers; but as in the case of others, upon insufficient evidence. [See Hilary]

The full text, in 6 st. of 4 l., is given in Daniel, i., No. 7, together with the Roman Breviary version, and a few references, and notes. Monk, No. 183, gives the text from nos. of the 13th and 14th centuries, supplies readings therefrom, and closes with a note. Daniel, iv., pp. 160-161, quotes Monk almost verbatim, and adds readings from a Rheims ms. of the 11th cent. The text is also found in two nos. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 33 b., Vesp. D. xii. f. 78): the Latin Hymn of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 98, where it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham; in The Hymn Book, London, 1851, pp. 113, 114; in Carl Newman’s Hymn Book, 1838 and 1863; in Simrock, 1868; and other collections.

As to the use of this hymn, we may remark that in the Macarabic Brev. It is the hymn at Lambs on Whitsunday, and daily to Trinity Sunday; in the Sarum for Second Vespers on Whitsunday, and daily at Vespers during the week; and in the use of St. Albans, but with the addition of two stanzas from the hymn at First Vespers on White Sunday.—“Hodie Christus venit.” In the Rom. Brev., it is the hymn at Lauds on White Sunday, and through the octave to Trinity Sunday inclusively. Other Brevisaries of less importance may retain in their use.

The Rom. Brev. text differs from the older form in the two instances: 28. 1. 4, “Efficit in disciplina” is changed to “Paratus est alius,” and 29. d. 2, “Sacer durnum numero” to “Sacer durnus est.” Daniel draws attention to a curious quip found with regard to the word, paralipomenon, or paralekton, in st. 1. 1, of this hymn. The last syllable but one, the penultimate, should have a long vowel. Here, however, it is short, as in Prudentius, Cath. V., v. 160. On this point Daniel refers to Caswall (Thee. S. H. tom. iii. p. 261), and to a treatise by Jean Baptiste Thiers (1646-1713).

This hymn must not be confounded with “Beata nobis gaudia dantis multum Confitesuris,” given in Monk, No. 796, of which there are no trs. into English.

Translations in C. U.:

1. Again the circling season tell. By W. J. Copleland, appeared in his Hymns for the Week, No. 1843, p. 192, in 7 st. of 4 l. In 1852 it was reprinted in Stretton’s Church Hymn, and, in a re-written form, as “Again the circling year brings round,” in the English Hymnal, 1852-1861, being a change from C.M. to L.M. in the arrangement Caswall’s tr. of 1849 was also used somewhat freely.

2. Hail the joyous day’s return. By R. Campbell was written for his St. Andrew’s Hymnal, pub. therein in 1850, in 3 st. of 8 l., and is found in the Scottish Episcopal Church, 1855, and with the simple change of the to st. i. 1 in Shipley’s Anns Sacra, 1884.

3. Best joys from mighty wonders wrought. J. M. Neale, appeared in the 1st ed. of Hymns, 1832, No. 33. It has failed to win a post in the more important collections.

4. Round roll the weeks our hearts to greet. W. J. Blee, written cir. 1850, first printed in Broadside, and then in his Hymns and Songs Book, 1st ed., 1854, 2nd, 1855, in 4 st. of 4 l. It was also included in the People’s H., 1865.

5. Joy! because the circling year. By J. Ellicott and F. A. Hort, made for and 1st pub. in Church Hymn Book, 1871. In 1875 it was also included in H. A. & M., No. 153, with the omission of last four lines. Mr. Ellicott in his notes on this hymn (Ch. Hymn, folio ed., p. xlii.) butes st. ii., “Like to quivering tongue flame,” to Bp. Mann’s Ancient Hymns, in error. Mann has no tr. of the hymn. Stanzas is from Campbell’s tr. as above.

Translations not in C. U.:

1. The rolling year pursues its way. Prime (possibly by J. Dryden). This is given in O. S. Annals Sacrae, 1874, p. 163.
2. The rolling year hath now brought back. J. Hope’s Hymns, &c., 1844.
3. Besst is our joy? The time hath come once more. J. W. Williams, Ancient Hymns, 1845.
4. Again the slowly circling year. K. Caswall.
5. Rest season! which with gladness fraught. Chambers, 1857.
7. Again amid the circling year. F. Trappes Lomax.

Beaumont, Sir John, elder bro. of Francis Beaumont, the dramatic writer 1582, and educated at Oxford. In 1602 he was created a baronet by King Charles 1628. His writings include, The C. Thorns, a poem in 8 books (not now to exist): Bowsworth Field and other poems on religious and BEAUMONT, JOSEPH

He is known to modern hymnals through one or two pieces only. His Poems have been reprinted by Dr. Grosart in his Fuller Worthies Library.

Beaumont, Joseph, eldest s. of Sir John Beaumont, was b. March 3, 1613, educated at Westminster, and at Peter House, Cambridge, and d. Sept. 3, 1652. His Original Poems in English and Latin were pub. posthumously in 1674. In this work there is a fine poem on "Homo" (p. 8). This has been condensed into a hymn, beginning "As earth's pageant passes by." (Consolation to God.) His Psyche (1st pub. 1647), together with selections from his Original Poems, &c., were reprinted in Dr. Grosart's Chertsey Worthies, 1877-80, in 2 vols.

Beck, Thomas. Concerning this writer and compiler we have failed in gathering anything beyond the information contained in the title-pages of his works, and that he contributed to the Gospel and Evangelical Magazines under the signature of "T. B." His works include:—

(1) Catechism for the Dumb (1719, 2nd ed.; 2nd ed. 1734, 5th ed. 1759.) (2) The Missionary, a Poem, 1798; (3) The Mission, a Poem, 1764; (4) Pastor Amicus (1717); (5) Letters to the Princess Charlotte (1817; (6) Hymns calculated for the Purposes of Public, Social, and Private Worship, collected, composed, and arranged under their proper heads by Thos. Beck, Minister of the Gospel at Greatmore. Printed for the Author by T. Fisher, Roches-

From the last work, the hymn, "Jesus, I will lift up my soul to Thee" (H. Balliwick), is taken. It is given in the H. Comp. new ed., 1877, but previously appeared in J. Becker's Welsh Psalms, 1834. [W. T. B.]

Becker, Cornelius, s. of Adrian Becker, merchant of Leipzig, was b. at Leipzig, Oct. 24, 1561. After studying at the University, where he graduated 1584, he kept a private school till his appointment, in the beginning of 1588, as one of the masters of the St. Thomas School, a post he vacated in Sept. 1588, on being appointed diaconus at Rochitz. In 1590 he became diaconus, and in 1594, pastor of the church of St. Nicholas, Leipzig; and subsequently Professor of Theology in the University, from which, in 1599, he received the degree of D.D. On account of false accusations he was deprived of his charge on June 5, 1601, but was vindicated and restored on Nov. 29, 1601. (Koch, ii. 219-223; Allg. Deutch.) He wrote a few hymns, but his principal work was his version of the Psalter, 1602. (See Psalters, German.) The only version tr. into English is:—

Der Gott ist mein getreuer Hirt, Dem ich mich
lauter vertraue (P. Reim.) Appeared in S. Calvinus and the in Becker's Der Psalter, Leipzig, 1681. The text in Wackernagel, p. 369, in 344. Allg. G., 1846, No. 2. It is tr. as "My Shepherd is the Saviour," by Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 19. [J. M.]

Becon, Thomas. [Old Version, § ix. 9.]

Bedeome, Benjamin, M.A. This prolific hymn-writer was b. at Henley-in-Arden, Warwickshire, Jan. 23, 1717, where his father, the Rev. John Bedeome, was at that time Baptist Minister. He was apprenticed to a surgeon in Bristol, but removing to London, he joined, in 1739, the Baptist church in Prescott St. At the call of this church he devoted himself to the work of the Christian ministry, and in 1740 began to preach at Bourton-on-the-Water, in Gloucestershire. Declining invitations to remove to London or elsewhere, he continued pastor at Bourton until his death. on Sep. 3, 1785, at the age of 78. Mr. Bedeome was for many years one of the most respected Baptist ministers in the West of England. He was a man of some literary culture. In 1735 he received the degree of M.A. from Providence College, Rhode Island. He was a founder of an Exposition of the Baptist Catechism, 1752, in great repute at the time, and reprinted by Dr. C. Evans in 1772. It was his practice to prepare a hymn every week to be sung after his Sunday morning sermon. Though not originally intended for publication, he allowed thirteen of these to appear in the Bristol Baptist Coll. of Ash & Evans (1769), and thirty-six in Dr. Rippon's Baptist Soc. (1787), wherein a number of them found their way into the General Baptist H. Bk. of 1833 and other collections. In 1817, a posthumous collection of his hymns was pub., containing 830 pieces, with an introduction by the Rev. Robert Hall, and entitled "Hymns adapted to Public Worship or Family Devotion, now first published from the Manuscripts of the late Rev. B. Bedeome, M.A."

Preface dated "Leicester, Nov. 18, 1817." Some of the early copies bear the same date on the title-page. Copies bearing both the 1817 and 1824 dates are in the Brit. Mus. The date usually given is 1818. Some hymns are also appended to his Sermons, seven of which were pub. 1806-1819, and over twenty are given in the Baptist Register of various dates.

Bedeome's hymns were commended by Montgomery as embodying one central idea, "always important, often striking and sometimes ingeniously brought out." Robert Hall's opinion is just, when in his "Recommending a Preface to the Hymns, &c., he says, p. vii:—

"The man of taste will be gratified by the beauty and original turns of thought which many of them exhibit, while the experimental Christian will often perceive the most secret movements of his soul strikingly delineated, and sentiments portrayed which will find their echo in every heart."

With the exception of a few composed for Baptists and other special occasions, their present use in t. Britain is limited, but in America somewhat extensive. One of the best is the Ordination Hymn, "Father of Mercies, bow Thiine ear." Another favourite is "My times of sorrow and of joy," composed, by a singular coincidence, to be sung on Sunday, Jan. 14, 1778, the day on which his son died, most unexpectedly, in Edinburgh. "Let party names no more," is very popular both in t. Brit. and America. "Father, I know thy precious gift," "Witness, ye men and angels now," and the hymn for Holy Baptism, "Buried beneath the yielding wave" are also found in many collections. Bedeome's popularity is, however, now mainly in America. [W. R. S.]

In addition to about 40 of Bedeome's hymns in C. U., which are annotated in the Dictionary under their respective first lines, there are also the following 68, all of which... are in C. U. either in G. Brit. or America, in the former to a limited extent, and in the latter somewhat extensively.

1. All glory be to Him Who sains. Holy Baptism. From his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 598, in 4 st. of 4 l. into late eds. of Rippon.

2. Almighty God, we cry to Thee. Prayer for guidance. No. 336 of his Hymns, &c., 1817, in 4 st. of 4 l.

3. And shall I [we] sit alone? Hope receiving. No. 186 of his Hymns, &c., 1817, in 4 st. of 4 l., and No. 508 in the Amer. Ger. Reformed Hgs. of the Church, N. Y., 1869. It is also in several other hymnals.

4. Arise, Thou Bright and Morning Star. Christ, the Morning Star. No. 196, in 3 st. of 4 l., in his Hymns, &c., 1817.

5. Awake, awake, my heart and tongue. Passiontide. This is No. 371, in his Hymns, &c., 1817, in 4 st. of 3 l. Stanzas ii.—iv. had, however, previously appeared in the 10th ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1800, as No. 383, pt. ii., beginning, "To Him, Who on the fatal tree."

6. Awake, awake Thou mighty arm. Missions. This was pub. in the 10th ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1800, No. 429, pt. iv., in 3 st. of 4 l., and again in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 498. In Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk. it is No. 993.

8. Behold the Eunuch, when baptized. Holy Baptism. Pub. in the 1st ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 471, in 7 st. of 4 l., as "The holy Eunuch, when baptized," but in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 625, it is given as "Behold the Eunuch," &c. It is known, however, to the hymnals as in Rippon's Sel., "The holy Eunuch, when baptized."

10. Can sinners hope for heaven? The Unbelievers. Pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 400, in 4 st. of 4 l., with the heading, "The Unbelievers excluded from heaven." It is in several American collections, including Lawes Donnii, N. Y., 1884, No. 558.

12. Come, Jesus, heavenly Teacher, come. Christ the Teacher. Given as No. 128 in his Hymns, &c., 1817, in 3 st. of 4 l., and from thence into the Amer. Presb. Ps. & Hgs., Richmond, 1867.

14. Come, ye humble, contrite souls. Holy Baptism. Adult Baptism is contemplated in this hymn, and "Candidates are encouraged therein to proceed to the Holy Rite. Pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 613, in 4 st. of 6 l. It is given in late editions of Rippon's Sel.

17. Doth Thou my profit seek? Chastisement. This short hymn in 3 st. of 4 l., entitled, "Submission under Affliction," was included in Rippon's Sel., 1st ed., 1787, No. 540, and signed, "Beddome." It is not found, however, in the form in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, but No. 293, "Does the Lord my profit seek?" in 2 st. of 8 l., is either the original of that in Rippon, or is based thereupon.

18. Each other we have owned. Parting. From his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 665, in 5 st. of 4 l., into a few collections.

19. Eternal Source of every good. Opening of a Place of Worship. Dr. Hattieband, in his Amer. Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, deter this hymn 1790. This may possibly arise from its appearance in a work with which we are unacquainted. It was included in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 732. It is in a few hymnals.

20. Fathre of Mercies, bow Thine ear, Attention to, &c. For Missions. Given in the 1st ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 426, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 708.

22. Fountain of blessing, ever blest. For Dr. Broad. 1st pub. in the Bristol Coll. of Ash Evans, 1769, No. 42, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 341, fit whence it has passed into later collections.

23. From Thy dear pierced side. Passions. Included in his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 94 3 st. of 6 l., on the "Fountain opened." It is found in several American collections, as Amer. Meth. Ps. Hgs., 1849, the Serv. Song for Bap. Churches, Boston, 1871, &c.

24. Go forth, ye saints, behold your King [I Missions or Second Advent]. Appeared in the 1st ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1800, No. 421, pt. iv., in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Saincts long time see their King with His many crowns." It is repeated in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 702. It is given in a limited number of collections; and in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk. it is 1818 in error.

25. Great God, 'tis from Thy sovereign Grace. This hymn on 1 Cor. xvi. 8., was in the 10th ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1800, in 4 st. of 4 l.; and in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, 2.

27. Great God of Providence, Thy ways. Kindness. Included in the 1st ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 35, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is found in a few of the earlier collections. It was repub. in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817.

28. Great God, my Maker and my King. Expectance of God. Also in the L-BEDDOME, BENJAMIN

Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 18, in 4 st. of 4 l., and in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 11.

32. How free and boundless is the grace. Freedom of the Gospel. In Rippon's Sel., 1st ed., 1787, No. 362, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 573, with an additional st. of "Come, without money, without price."

30. How great, how solemn is the work. Adult Baptism. 1st in Rippon's Sel., 1st ed., 1787, No. 453, in 6 st. of 4 l., and appointed for use on the "Morning before Baptism; or, at the waterside." It was repeated in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 619.

33. In all my ways, O God. Family Altar. From his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 568, in 3 st. of 4 l., in modern eds. of Rippon's Sel., No. 514.

34. In due and in suffering too. Christ, the Example. From his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 92, in 3 st. of 4 l., into the Amer. Unitarian Hy. [4 Tune] Bk., Boston, 1838, No. 409.

35. Jesus, delighting, charming Name. Name of Jesus. An imitation of Newton's "How sweet the Name of Jesus sounds," given in the Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 108, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is found in several American collections, including the Baptist Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, No. 459.

36. Jesus, my love, my chief delight. Christ, the Gift of God. This is No. 171 in the 1st ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1787, in 5 st. of 4 l., and No. 96 in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817.

37. Jesus, my Saviour, bind me fast. Union with Christ. From his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 557, in 4 st. of 4 l., into the Amer. Presb. Ps. & Hymn. Richmond, 1867, No. 243, and several other American collections.

38. Jesus, my Saviour, let me be. Conformity to Christ. Also from his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 195, in 4 st. of 4 l., into the same Ps. & Hymns, Richmond, 1867, No. 79.

40. Led into the wandering的心. Fear of sin in 3 st. of 6 l., into modern editions of Rippon's Sel., No. 232, pt. iii.

41. Led though bitter is the cup. Patience. This hymn in two forms. The first was given in no. 41, as "Dear Lord, though bitter is the cup," and the second, as No. 206 in Beddome's Hymns, it is in L.W., and in the Hymns, &c., in 77.

42. Lord, with a grieved and aching heart. Lent: the Passion. Given in the 1st ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 236, in 3 st. of 4 l., and in the Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 477. It is in C. U. in America, as in The Service of Song for Bapt. Churches, Boston, 1871.

43. Love is the fountain whence. Love to God. From his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 192, in 4 st. of 4 l., into the Amer. Bap. Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871.

44. My few revolving years. New Year. From his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 711, in 3 st. of 4 l., into the American Sabbath H. Bk., N. Y., 1858, No. 1160. It is also given as "Our few revolving years," in several American hymnals.

45. My rising soul with strong desires. Communion with God. 1st pub. in the Bristol Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1769, No. 295, in 3 st. of 4 l. From thence it passed into Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 97. It was also included in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 561.

47. O Lord, Thou art my Lord. Joining the Church. This hymn, for the use of the person about to be admitted into Church fellowship, is from Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 646, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is found in a few collections, both in G. Britain and America.

48. O Lord, Thy perfect word. Holy Scripture. In his Church Hymn Bk., N. Y., 1872, Dr. Hatfield dates this hymn 1769. This date may possibly be from a magazine. We trace the hymn only to Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 656, in 3 st. of 4 l.

49. On Britain, long a favoured isle. Prayer for National Peace. 1st pub. as No. 17 in the Supp., added to the 3rd ed. of the Bristol Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1778. It was repeated in Rippon's Sel., 1787, and other collections, and in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 747, in 5 st. of 4 l.

51. shout, for the blessed Jesus reigns. Mission. 1st pub. in the 1st ed. of the Bristol Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1769, No. 373, in 3 st. of 4 l., then in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 429, and others among the older collections, and then to modern hymnals. It is No. 706 of Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817.

52. So fair a face bedewed with tears. Compassion of Christ. This, at one time a favourite hymn, was given in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 484, in 4 st. of 4 l., and in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 70. It is still in C. U.

53. Sprinkled with reconciling blood. Access to God. No. 357, in 4 st. of 4 l., in Rippon's Sel., 1787; and No. 403, in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817.

54. Strait as the way to narrow. Lord Bredon. From the Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 348, in 4 st. of 6 l., into the 2nd ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1827, with the omission of st. iv.

55. The mighty God will not despise. The Prodigal. 1st pub. in the Bristol Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1769, No. 226, in 4 st. of 4 l., then in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 273, and again in Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 349.

56. The wandering star, the fleeting wind. Jn.
consistency. This last appeared in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 310, in 5 st. of 4 l., then in Bede's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 515, and is now in C. U. In America it is given in the Unitarian Hy. & Tune Bk., Boston, 1868, No. 543.

57. There is a world of perfect bliss. Heaven. From his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 822, in 7 st. of 4 l., into the Amer. Bap. Prize Bk., 1871, No. 1072, with the omission of st. iii., and vii.

58. This world's a dreary wilderness. Christ, the Refuge. Included in his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 109, in 5 st. of 4 L. In the Amer. Bap. Hy. [Hy. Tune] Bk., Phila., 1871, No. 515. st. i. and v., with the addition of another stanza as No. ii., are given as "This world would be a wilderness."

59. Wait, O my soul, thy Maker's will. Wisdom of God. Given in the 1st ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 11, in 4 st. of 4 l., and in Bede's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 18, and headed in each instance, "The Wisdom of God." In the American collections it is usually abbreviated by the omission of st. iv., as in the Bap. Prize Bk., 1871, No. 153, or in his Pulp., and slightly altered, as in Longfellow and Johnson's Hym. of the Spirit, Boston, 1864, No. 454.

60. When Adam sinned, through all his race. The Fall. From his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 260, in 6 st. of 4 l., into the American Church Pastorale, Boston, 1864, No. 759, with the omission of st. ii. and iv.

61. When by the tempter's wills betrayed. The Fall. No. 122 in Rippon's Sel., 1787, and No. 261 in Bede's Hymns, &c., 1817, in 5 st. of 4 l.

62. When Israel through the desert passed. Light shining in darkness. Contributed to the Bristol Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1769, No. 80, in 5 st. of 4 l. and headed, "The Excellency of the Divine Word." It was repeated in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 44, and in Bede's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 679.

63. When storms hang o'er the Christian's head. God our Refuge. Also in the Bristol Coll., 1769, No. 78, in 4 st. of 4 l., and in Bede's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 323. This hymn is sometimes given as "When storms hang o'er my head:" and as "When storms hang o'er the children's head:"

64. Where'er the blustering north-wind blows. Missions. Given in the 10th ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1800, No. 420, pt. ii., in 3 st. of 4 l., and in Bede's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 701. In Rippon's Sel., st. iii. is altered from Bede's ms.

65. Why, O my soul, why weepest thou? The Spiritual Mourner. Contributed to the Bristol Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1769, No. 221, in 3 st. of 4 l., and repeated in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 274, and in Bede's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 529.

67. Ye trembling souls, dismiss your fears. Trust. Pub. in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 248, in 4 st. of 4 l., and in Bede's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 549, with the omission of st. vi. The omission of that stanza would seem to indicate that it was added to the original hymn by Dr. Rippon. In Winkle's Coll., No. 443, Rippon's text is repeated, with the omission of st. ii.

68. Ye worlds of light that roll so near. Christ, the Morning Star. Contributed to the Bristol Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1769, No. 112, in 5 st. of 4 l., and in Rippon's sel., 1787, No. 109, in each case with st. iv. bracketed for omission. In Bede's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 107, the stanza especially adapted to the Ephphasia, is omitted.

69. Your work, ye saints, is not completed. Adult Holy Baptism. From his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 632, in 6 st. of 4 l. into the 25th ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1827, No. 470, pt. ii., and thence to later collections.

Bede is thus seen to be in C. U. to the extent of about 100 hymns. In this respect he exceeded every other Baptist hymn-writer.

Miss Steele ranking second.

The authorities for Bede's hymns are: (1) A Col. of Hymns adapted to Public Worship, Bristol, 1769, the Coll. of Ash & Evans; (2) Dr. Rippon's Sel. 1817, and later editions; (3) Sermons printed from the Manuscripts of the late Rev. Benjamin Bede, M.A., with brief Memoirs of the Author, Unstable & Land, 1816-1819; (4) Dr. Rippon's Baptist Epitaph, 1799, &c.; (5) The Bede Ps. in the Baptist College, Bristol; and Hymns adapted to Public Worship, or Family Hymns, now first published, from Manuscripts of the late Rev. Bede, A.M. With a Recommendatory Preface by the Rev. R. Hall, A.M. London, 1818.

Mr. Hall gives this account of the Bede works: "The present Editor was entrusted several years ago with the task, both in prose and verse, with permission from the late Messrs. S. & B. Bede (of Bede's ms.) to Author, to publish such parts of them as he might deem proper. He is also indebted to a descendant of the Rev. W. Christian, formerly pastor of the Baptist Church at Sheephead, Leicestershire, for some of the Author's valuable hymns, which had been carefully preserved in the family. From both these sources, as well as others of less consequence, the present interesting volume has been derived."

BEDE, VENERABLE

author upon almost every subject, and as an historian his contribution to English history in the shape of his Historia Ecclesiastica is invaluable. But it is with him as a hymnist that we have to do here.

I. In the list of his works, which Bede gives at the end of his Ecclesiastical History, he enumerates a Liber hymnorum, containing hymns in "several sorts of metre or rhyme." The extant editions of this work are:

1. Edited by Cassander, and published at Cologne, 1846. (2 in Wernsdorff's Poetiæ Lat. Min., vol. ii. pp. 239-244.)

2. The contributions to the stores of hymnology were not large, consisting principally of 72 hymns; his authorship of some of these even is questioned by many good authorities, such as Koch, vol. i., pp. 79. Daniel, however, in vol. i. pp. 204-203, claims that the following as having been written by Bede, on the authority of Cassander, Etilger, Thomasius, Rambach, and others.

1. "Hymnus canamus Gloriae" (Ascension). This fine hymn is found in the York Hymnal, and was therefore in use in the services of the Church. 2. "Adorans Christi vocibus" (Veneration of B. V. M.). 3. "Apostrophes gloriosæ" (St. Peter and Paul). 4. "Emitte Christi Spiritus" (Pentecost). 5. "Hymnus cathareta martyrum"; (The Holy Innocents). 6. "Ilustre alia sanctae" (St. Agnes). 7. "Nunc Andreas solum" (St. Andrew). 8. "Humilis et quiescens" (Benediction of St. John Baptist). 9. "Præcursas alio sanctorum" (St. John the Baptist). 10. "Primo Deus coeli globosum" (Hymn on the Creation), a long hymn of 16 stanzas. 11. "Salve, triumphans gloriae" (St. Andrew's Address to His Cross). To these there were, vol. i. p. 86, added, 12. "Are sacer Christi sanctus" (On the Baptism of the Children), as claimed for Bede, but it is not in Bede's claim, and assigns a very late date to it. Of these Nos. 1 to 12, are referred to in Daniel, 19th, 1, a. d. 918, in the Eroldium, and No. 11, with words of marked commendation. In Turck, int. ed. p. 219. Details of the 12 of Nos. 1, 5, 8, 10 are given under their respective first Latin lines.

While we cannot look for the refined and mellifluous beauty of the later Latin hymnists in the work of one who, like the Venerable Bede, lived in the infancy of ecclesiastical poetry; and while we must acknowledge the loss that such poetry sustains by the absence of rhyme from so many of the hymns, and the presence in some of what Dr. Neale calls such "frigid conceits," as the "epanalepsis" (as grammarists term it) where the first line of each is repeated at the last; still the hymns with which we are dealing are not without their peculiar attractions. They are full of Scripture, and Bede was very fond of introducing the actual words of Scripture as part of his own composition, and often with great effect.

Neale gives two instances:

1. "Hymnus canamus gloriae"—
   "qui seminat in lacrymis",
   "Lacto tentem in gaudio",
   "Exsultate, laetus in gaudio"

2. "Hymnus canamus gloriae"—
   "Mirata adhuc coelestium",
   "Regata aula clevium",
   "Vos, inquit, est Rex Gloriosae"

That Bede was not free from the superstition of his time is certain, not only from his gigantic "Hymnum on Virginity," written in praise of Queen Etheldreda, the wife of King Ethelred, and inserted in his Ecclesiastical History, bk. iv., cap. xx. (D. S. W.)

Beecher, Charles, s. of the well-known Dr. Lyman Beecher, whose autobiography he chiefly edited, and brother of Henry Ward Beecher, was born at Litchfield, Connecticut, 1815. Mr. Beecher was for some time a Congregational pastor at Georgetown, Mass. He has pub. "Review of Spiritual Manifestations," 1853; "Pen Pictures of the Bible," 1855, &c. His hymns were contributed to his brother Lyman Beecher's "Hymn Collection," 1855, and include:—

2. "Are we on our journey home." Heaven.

The latter is in the more extensive use, but both are unknown to the English collections.

[F. M. B.]

Boefeld du deine Wege. P. Gerhardt. [Trust in God.] This hymn, which Launemann in Koch, viii., calls the most charming of all the hymns that have resounded on Paulus Gerhardt's golden lyre, sweeter to many souls than honey and the honeycomb, appeared as No. 333 in the Frankfurt ed., 1656, of Grüber's Praxis pietatis melica. It is an acrostic on Luther's version of Ps. xxvii. 5. Befiedel dem Hervor deine Wege und hoffe auf ihn, auf wohltuend Lauden," formed by the initial words of the stanzas, those in Wackernagel's ed. being printed in blanketer type. This acrostic form has been preserved by Jahn and Stillingfass.

According to tradition it was written in a Saxon village to console his wife after being compelled to leave Berlin. But, as already stated, the hymn was pub. in 1654, and though Gerhardt had left his office in 1666, he did not leave Berlin till his appointment to Lübben in 1668, while his wife died in Berlin in 1666.

The hymn soon spread over Germany, found its way into all the hymn-books, and ranks as one of the finest hymns of its class. Launemann relates that it was sung when the foundation stone of the first Lutheran church at Philadelphia was laid, May 2, 1742, and again on Oct. 29, when the Father of the American Lutheran Church, Heinrich Melchior Muhlenberg, held the opening service. He also relates that Queen Louisa of Prussia, during the time when Germany was divided by Napoleon I., came to Orteilsburg in East Prussia, and there, on Dec. 3, 1806, wrote in the diary the verses of Goethe (Wilhelm Meister, 2b. ii., chap. xiii.), thus rendered by Thomas Carlyle:

Who never ate his bread in sorrow, Who never spent the darkest hour Weeping and watching for the morrow, He knows ye not, ye gloomy Towers To earth, this weary earth, ye bring us, To guilt ye let us hoodle we, Then leave repentance fierce to wring us: A moment's guilt, an age of we:

But drying her tears she went to the harpsichord, and from Goethe turned to Gerhardt, and played and sang this hymn. In his ode, extending from p. 392, vol. i. p. 405, Launemann gives many other instances of its consoling effects, and says of it, "Truly a hymn which, as Luther's 'Ein feste Burg,' is surrounded by a cloud of witnesses."

Translations in C. U. —

"Commit that to thy griefs." A noble but free tr., omitting st. v., ix-xl, by J. Wesley in H. and Sacred Poems, 1739 (F. Works, 1808-72, vol. i. p. 125), in 8 st. of 8 l. Though free, it has in far greater measure than any other caught the ring and spirit of Gerhardt. Included as No. 37 in the H. and Spir. Songs, 1753, and as No. 103-104 in the Pocket H. Bk., 1785, but not included in the W. H. Bk., till as Nos. 673, Begin, my tongue [soul], some heavenly theme. I. Watts. [Faithfulness of God.] 1st pub. in his Hymns and Songs, 1707 (2nd ed., 1709), II, No. 169, p. 32; re-pub. in 1770, p. 59; in the First English Hymn Book, 1770, p. 59. Also pub. in his Ps. and Hymns, No. 388, as "Begin, my soul, some heavenly theme." This form of the hymn has been repeated in many collections, sometimes with alterations, as in the Wes. H. Bk., 1830, and revised ed., 1875. Its use in America, usually abbreviated, is much more extensive than in Great Britain.

Behm, Martin, s. of Hans Behm [Behem, Bohem, Behemb, Behem, Bohem, or Bohemian], town-overser of Lauban in Silesia, was b. at Lauban, Sept. 16, 1827. In 1846 he abandoned the study of medicine and became a lay preacher in the mines of Olvenitz, in Silesia. In 2016 he was appointed as a preacher in the town of Olvenitz. In 2019 he was appointed as a preacher in the town of Olvenitz. In 2022 he was appointed as a preacher in the town of Olvenitz.

Four of his hymns have been tr. into English, three being in English C. U.:

1. O Heilige Dreifaltigkeit. [Morning.] 1st pub. in his Kirgriessam, Leipzig, 1593, in 3 st. of unequal length, repeated in 1608, as above, in 8 st. of 4 l. Both forms are in Wochenuagel, v. p. 98; and in Wieder, 1593, p. 53, and omitting st. vii., in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. It was entitled "The ancient Sancta Trinitas et adoranda Unitas in German;" but it is rather a version of the Prayer for Wednesday evening in Behold, a stranger at the door. J. Grigg. [Explication.] This is one of four hymns on Divine Subjects, &c. 1765, in 11 st. of 4 l, a second being the well-known "Jesus, and can it ever be?" (q.f.). It came into congregational use at an early date, but usually in an abbreviated form. Both in G. Britain, and in America, various arrangements of the text are given in collections in C. U. The full original text was reprinted in D. Sedgewick's ed. of Grigg's Hymns, &c. 1861. It is also found in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1882. and in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 254.

Behold! how glorious is your sky. [Eternal Life.] This hymn, in 2 st., is No. 749 in the N. Cong., 1859, and No. 61 in Dr. Allen's Cong. Psalter Hymn., 1886. It has evidently been written for or adapted to the fine German chorale, "Wie schon leuchet der Morgenstart" (see Nicolai, P.), but not one single line can be said to be either from the hymn of Nicolai, or from the recast of Nicolai's hymn made by J. A. Schlegel (q.v.), and it must rank as an anonymous English hymn.

Behold, how good a thing it is, and how, &c. [P. cx., &c.] From the Scottish Psalter, 1650, into Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 133. In the American Psalter, Phila., 1874. No. 593, it is altered to "Behold, how good and pleasant." In this form it is also in other American collections.

Behold my Servant! see Him rise. [Christ the Ambassador.] This Paraphrase, the author of which is unknown, first appeared in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, in 1745, as No. v., on 1s. xii. 1-18, in 13 st. of 4 l. The opening stanza is:
1. "Behold my servant! see him rise
   exalted in my Right;
   Him have I chosen, and in him
   I place supreme Delight.
2. "In rich Effusion, on his Soul,
   my Spirit's Powers shall flow;
   He'll to the Gentiles, and the Isles, my Truths and Judgments show.'

The paraphrase extended in the strain to 15 st., some of which are exceedingly good, but the whole is too extensive to quote.

ii. In 1781 John Logan published a volume of Poems, p. 106, No. 6, in which were several hymns and paraphrases, including one based upon the above, in 16 st., and opening thus:
"Behold! the Ambassador divine, Descending from above,
   To publish to mankind the law
   Of everlasting love!
"On Him in rich effusion pour'd
   The heavenly dew descends;
   And truth divine He shall reveal
   To earth's remotest ends."

We have given reasons elsewhere for holding that this rewritten version of the 1745 paraphrase is the work of M. Bruce (q.v.). The full text in Dr. Grosart's Works of Michael Bruce, 1865, pp. 140–144.

iii. During the same year that Logan published his Poems, i.e. 1781, the new and revised edition of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases was also published. Of this edition J. Logan was one of the revising and editing committee. In this work this hymn is included in a third form, in which we have 15 st. of 4. Of these 60 lines, 22 full lines and 7, partly so, are from the 1745 Trans. & Par.; 16 full lines, and 5 partly so, from Bruce of 1781, the rest being new. The hymn thus presents one of the most peculiar pieces of patchwork with which we are acquainted. As an illustration of the way in which a man can build up for himself a reputation out of the works of others, and live on that reputation, as J. Logan has done for nearly a century, we give this cento in full, printing the 1745 text in SMALL CAPITALS; Bruce's text of 1764, as printed in Logan's Poems, in Italic; and the new matter in ordinary Roman type.

iv. William Cameron (q.v.), a member of the Committee with Logan, in his list of authors and revisers of the 1781 Translations and Paraphrases, a copy of which has been preserved, gives to Logan the credit of compiling this cento. It has been in authorized use in the Church of Scotland for four years, but is rarely found elsewhere. It must be designated, "Scottish Tr. & Par. 1745: M. Bruce, 1764, printed in J. Logan's Poems, 1781: J. Logan, 1781._

v. A cento, partly from the Tr. & Par. text above of 1781, and partly from that of 1745, was given in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody in 1839, No. 23, and Miss Leeson's Par. and Hymns, 1835, No. 50, Pt. ii., beginning, "Sing to the Lord, in joyful strains," but has now gone almost altogether out of use. Another arrangement direct from the above 1781 text, st. ii.-xv.,"Sing to the Lord," &c., was given in Kemble's Psalms & Hymns, 1835, and has been repeated in several collections.

vi. Another arrangement is: "Behold my servant, saith the Lord." It is composed of st. i.-iv., with alterations by Miss J. E. Leesom, and was included in her Par. and Psalms, 1833, No. 50, Pt. i. Its use is limited.

vii. In American hymnals, in addition to a reprint of most of the foregoing arrangements, we have, "Thus saith the Lord, who built the heavens," in Belknap's Sacred Poetry; or, Ps. & Hymns, 1795, "O city of the Lord, begin," in the Presb. Church Psalms, &c., N. Y., 1847, and others.

[J. J.]

Behold the amazing sight. P. Doddridge. [Passional.] In the ms. this hymn is dated "May 8, 1737," and headed "The soul attached to a Crucified Saviour, from John xii. 32." In 1755, Job Orton included it in his ed. of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., No. 293, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839. It is in C. U. both in G. Brit. and America.

Behold the angel flies. J. Bull. [Missions.] This is given in P. Maurice's Choral H. Bk. i. 1861, as "J. B. C.—Christ. Guard." This we find, from a ms. memorandum by Dr. Maurice, to be the Rev. John Bull, curate of Chippenham, the hymn appeared in Bull's Devotional Hymns, London, 1827, and thence probably passed into the Christian Guardian.

Behold the glories of the Lamb. J. Watts. [Praise.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1707 (2nd ed., 1709, Bk. i., No. 1), in 8 st. of 4 l. and entitled, "A New Song to the Lamb that was slain." It is a paraphrase of a part of Rev. v. Watts's biographers state that this was his first hymn, and was written in 1696 in answer to a challenge that he could not produce better hymns than those by W. Barton (q.v.) which were sung in the Chapel in Southampton which he attended, and against which he had laid a complaint. In the Hymns, &c., st. iv. and v. are bracketed for omission if desired, and in the Bap. Ps. & Hymns, 1858, and others, this is done. In Darling's Hymns, 1886, it is given as "How great the glory of the Lamb." The use of the hymn is extensive, both in G. Brit. and America. [See Early English Hymnody, § vi. 2]

Behold the Lamb!

"Behold the Lamb:

Worthy is He alone,—

Upon the irs throne

Of God above!

A comparison of this text with that in any collection will show how far alterations may have been introduced. In addition to being altered, it is usually abbreviated as well. In some American collections, including Dr. Hatfield’s Church Hymn, 1872, No. 500, a hymn is given as—“Archangels! fold your wings,” and attributed to “Samuel Egerton Bridges, 1829,” which is really a portion of this hymn rewritten, beginning with line 2 of st. iii. as above.

Behold the Lamb of God, who bore thy burdens, &c. T. Havergal. [Passiontide.] From his Carmina Christo, &c., 1799. No. 5 in 4 st. of 4 l., and based on John i. 29. It is found in a few collections, and is worthy of more extended use. The text of H. Comp., although claiming to be corrected, is altered in st. i. and iv. and is from Bickersteth’s Christian Psalmody of 1833.

Behold the lofty sky. J. Watts. [Ps. xix.] 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, &c., 1710, being a paraphrase of the first part of Ps. xix., and headed “The Book of Nature and Scripture. For a Lord’s-Day Morning.” It is in 8 st. of 4 l.; and was given with the omission of st. v. in J. Wesley’s Ps. & Hymns, Clarkstown, South Carolina, 1736-7, p. 58. The paraphrase, “Behold the morning sun,” deals in 8 st. of 4 l. with another aspect of the same Psalm, and is given next above the Poems, &c., 1710. Both paraphrases, usually abbreviated, are in C. U., the latter specially in America. In Martineau’s Hymns, 1840 and 1873, the hymn “Behold the lofty sky,” No. 247, is a cento from these two paraphrases, st. i., ii., being from the first, and iii., iv. from the second.

Behold, the Master passeth by! [St. Matthew’s Day.] This is a cento by Bp. H. W. How, based upon Bp. Ken’s hymn for the same day, and first pub. in Church Hymns, 1871, No. 183, in 6 st. of 4 l. and Thrings’s Coll., 1882, No. 510. It is thus composed:

St. i.-iii. Original by Bp. How.
St. iv.-vi. By Bp. How from Bp. Ken, whose original stanzas are:

Ken. st. xii. “From worldly close, bless’d Matthew Kenne, Devoted all to sacred use.
 That, follow Me, his ear
 Seem’d every day to hear,
 His utmost zeal he strive to bend,
 Towards Jesus’ likeness, to discern.”

St. xx. “God sweetly calls us every day,
 Why should we then our blisses delay
 He calls to endless light.
 Why should we love the night?
 Should we one call but duly heed,
 It would to joys eternal lead.”

St. xxiv. “Praise, Lord, to Thee, for Matthew’s call,
 At which he left his wealthy all;
 At Thy next call may I
 Myself and world deny?
 Thou, Lord, even now art calling me,
 I’ll now leave all, and follow Thee.”

Bishop Ken’s hymn appeared in his Hymns for all the Festivals of the Year, 1721 (ten years after his death)—and again in the same work, repub. as Bishop Ken’s Christian Year, by Pickering, in 1838.
Behold the path that [which] mortals tread. — P. Doddridge. [Journey of Life.]

In the m. Ms., this hymn is No. 44, but is unlated. It was pub. as No. 27 in J. Orton's ed. of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1753, and again in J. D. Humphrey's ed. of the same, 1839. It is in 7 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Great Journey. Job xvi. 22." Its use is chiefly confined to America.

Behold the Prince of Peace. — J. Needham. [Meekness and Tenderness of Jesus.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1768, No. 57, in 7 st. of 4 l. The form, however, in which the hymn beginning with this first line is known is a cento, thus composed:—st. i.—iii. as above; st. iv., v., "Jesus! Thou light of men," &c., from Needham's "Long had the nations sat," st. v., vi. In this form it is found in Sir Josiah Mason's Orphanage H. Bk. Birmingham, 1892, and others.

Behold the Redeemer of man. — Passion tide.] This hymn, in 5 st. of 4 l., is in Rowland Hill's Coll. of Hys. for Children, &c., London, 1808. It is not in the previous editions of 1790 or 1794, and may possibly be by R. Hill. As, however, no authors' names are given in the collection, and no further evidence is forthcoming, its authorship cannot be determined. It is found in several modern hymnals for Sunday Schools, as in the Leeds S. S. H. Bk., 1839, to 1876, No. 49, and others. [W. T. B.]

Behold the Saviour of mankind. — Samuel Wesley, son. [Good Friday.] Written previous to the fire at his Rectory of Epworth, which was burnt down in 1709. At this fire John Wesley was saved from death by being rescued through the bed-room window by some of the parishioners. During the fire the ms. of this hymn was blown into the Rectory garden, where it was subsequently found. It was 1st pub. in J. Wesley's Ps. & Hys., Charleston, South Carolina, 1736-7, p. 46; also in the Wesley's Hymn and Sacred Poems, 1739, in 4 st. of 4 l.; and again in the Wes. H. Bk., 1790, revised ed., 1875, No. 22. From that collection it has passed into various hymnals both in G. Britain and America. The original contains 6 st. of 4 l. St. ii. and v. are usually omitted.

Behold the Saviour on the cross. — Cento, 1781. [Passion tide.] 1st appeared as No. 44 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, as a version of John xix. 30, in 6 st. of c. m. It is thus made up:—st. i. is altered from st. i. and iv., and st. ii. is exactly st. v. of Joseph Stanton's "Behold the Saviour of the world" in his H. on the Lord's Supper, 1705 (ed. 1709, p. 57). Another hymn in that collection (ed. 1709, p. 66), "Tis finished, the Redeemer cries," furnishes, in its st. i., the ground of st. iii., in its st. iii. of st. v., and in its st. v. of st. vi. The remaining st. (st. iv.) is a cento from Charles Wesley's "Tis finished, the Messiah dies" (q.v.). Thus, though the hymn has generally been ascribed to Blair (see Blair, Hugh), as in the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (q. v.), he cannot be regarded as having done more than make the cento and rewrite the whole to c. m. In the public worship ed. of that year issued by the Church of Scotland and still in use, it is unaltered. From the 1781 it has passed into a few modern hymnals, as in England, in Morrell and How's Coll., 1854, and the Irvingite Coll., 1864; and in America in the Evangel. Luth. H. Bk., 1834, Presbyterian Ps. and Hys., 1843, and Adams and Chapin's Coll., 1846. In Miss Leeson's Paraphrases and Hymns for Cong. Singing, 1853, No. 74, omitting st. v., vi. In the English Presb. Ps. and Hys., 1867, No. 484, and Church Praise, 1888, No. 80, st. iii.—vi. beginning "Tis finished — his latest voice" were selected; and the second line of the fourth st., beginning "Tis finished — the Messiah died," in the Free Church H. Bk., 1875, No. 46. [J. M.]

Behold the servant of the Lord. — C. Wesley. [Submission.] 1st pub. by J. Wesley in Pt. i. of his Further Appeal to Men of Reason and Religion, Dec. 22, 1744, and subsequently, by C. Wesley, in his Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, where it is entitled "An Act of Devotion" (vol. i. p. 120). It was embodied in the Wes. H. Bk., 1790, No. 417, and thence it has passed into various hymnals in G. Britain and America. Orig. text, P. Works, 1858-72, vol. v. p. 10.

Behold the sun that seemed but now. — G. With. [Afternoon.] 1st printed in his Hallelujah, or Britain's Secoli Remembrancer, Londer, 1641, where it is No. 14 of its first part "Hymns Occasional." It is headed "At Sunsetting," and prefaced by the following note. "The singing or meditating to such purposes as are intended in this Hymn, when we see the sun declining may perhaps expel unprofitable musings, and arm against the terrors of approaching darkness.

It is in 3 st. of 4 l., and its use is by no means equal to its merits. It was included in Farr's reprint of the Hallelujah, 1837; and thence, passing through Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862, was given in Thring's Coll., No. 20, with two slight alterations. Thring reading st. i., l. 4, "The" for "This"; and in st. ii., l. 5, "our" for "those." It is also in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883. [Early English Hys., § viii.] [W. T. B.]

Behold the throne of grace. — J. Newton. [The Throne of Grace.] Appeared in the Olden Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 33, in 8 st. of 4 l., and based on 1 Kings iii. 5. Although extensively used both in G. Britain and America, it is generally in an abridged, and sometimes altered form. In 1781 J. Wesley published the last four stanzas of the original as a hymn in the Arminian Magazine, p. 285, beginning "Since 'tis the Lord's command," but it failed to attract attention, and in that form is unknown to modern hymn-books.

Behold the wretch whose lusts and wine. — J. Watts. [The Prodigal.] This paraphrase of St. Luke xv. 13, &c., was 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1769, Bk. i., No. 123, in 7 st. of 4 l. The peculiarity of its opening line has made against its adoption in its original form in modern hymnals. In the draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, it was given unaltered as No. xxv., save st. vi., which was rewritten thus:

"Bring forth the fairest robe for him, the joyful Father said;
To him each Mark of Grace be shown, and every honour paid."
BEHOLD WHAT WONDROUS GRACE

1745, this text was given as "Adoption." In J. Wesley's Ps. & Hgs., Charleston, South Carolina, 1736-7, p. 19, it was given with alterations and the omission of st. ii. Its modern use is limited in G. Britain, but extensive in America.

In the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, this text was given as No. xxx., in 5 st., in a recast form. As this text, and not that of Watts, has been followed in the authorized issue of the Translations, &c., of 1781, and as the Translations, &c., of 1745 are difficult to consult, we subjoin the original of Watts, and the text of 1745.

Watts.

Watts.

Behold what wondrous grace

The Father hath bestowed

On us, the sinful Sons of Men;

To call us Sons of God!

The no surprising thing,

That we should be unknown;

The Jewish world knew not their King,

God's Everlasting Son.

Nor doth it yet appear

How great we must be made;

But when we see our Saviour here,

We shall be like our Head.

A hope so much divine

May trials well endure,

May purge our souls from sense and sin

As Christ the Lord is pure.

If in my Father's love

I share a filial part,

Send down Thy Spirit like a dove,

To rest upon my heart.

We would no longer lie

Like slaves beneath the throne;

My faith shall be as a father cry;

And then the kindred own.

A comparison of this text with that authorized in the Translations, &c., of 1781, &c., and which may be found in any modern copy of the Scottish Psalms, &c., will shew at once how much the latter is indebted to the former: and how far both differ from Watts. By whom the 1745 recast was made is not known, but that of 1781, which has been in use in the Ch. of Scotland for 100 years, is claimed by W. Cameron (q.v.) as his. [J. M.]

Translations, &c., 1745.

Behold the amazing Height of Love

The Father hath bestowed

On us, the sinful Sons of Men;

To call us Sons of God!

Conceаль'd as yet the

Hieron Eye

by this dark World unknown;

So the World knew not when he came.

God's everlasting Son,

High is this Character we bear;

but higher we shall rise

Thus what we'll be in future worlds is hid from mortal Eyes.

But this we know, our Souls shall then have God and Saviour see;

Unveil'd behold him, and transcend'd unite his Likeness be.

A Hope so great, and we may Trials well endure;

Before the Soul from Sense and Sin,

as Christ himself is pure.

Watts.
BEHOLD WHERE BREATHING

Behold where breathing love divine.
Anna L. Barbauld, née Aikin. [Charity.] Contributed to Dr. W. Enfield's Hymns for Public Worship, &c., Warrington, 1772, No. 117, in 8 st. of 4 l. In the following year it was reprinted in Mrs. Barbauld's (then Miss Aikin) Poems, London, 1773, pp. 121-123. In this form it is not in extensive use, although included in Dr. Collyer's Collection, 1812, and repeated in Dr. Martineau's Hymns, 1840 & 1873. A cento from this hymn is given in the Church S. S. H. Bk., 1868, No. 361, and other collections, beginning, "Blest is the man whose softening heart." It is composed of st. iii., iv., vii., viii., somewhat altered, and appeared in the 9th ed. of Cowper's Select. 1820, No. 123. From thence it passed into various collections both in G. Britain and America. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 126, it begins, "Blest is the man whose tender heart." The full original text is given in Lyra Brit., 1867, pp. 32-33.

Behold, where in a mortal form [the Friend of Man]. W. Enfield. [Christ our Example.] Appeared in the 3rd ed. of his Hymns for Public Worship, &c., 1797, in 8 st. of 4 l. It passed from thence into Bickersteth's Christian Psalms, 1833, Rodd's Hymns Book, 1842, and others. In the Bapt. New Selection, 1828, No. 120, it was given as, "Behold, where in the Friend of Man," with the omission of st. iv., and in this form it is found in the Bap. P. & Hymns, 1835. The hymn is also in C. U. in America. The first form, abbreviated, is in Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865, and the second is in Hymns & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, and others.

Behold with pleasing ecstasy.—
P. Doddridge. [Missions.] This hymn is No. 48 in the Ps. and &c., and dated "Oct. 30, 1737." It was pub. in Job Orton's ed. of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, 1755, No. 121, in 7 st. of 4 l., in a slightly different form, and entitled "A Nation born in a day; or the rapid progress of the Gospel desired." Is lxxvi. 8, and again in J. D. Humphrey's ed. of the same, 1839. In its original form it has not come into common use: but st. iv. and v., beginning, "Awake, all conquering arm, awake," were slightly altered, were given in the American Bap. Psalms, 1841, No. 857. Also in Spuruge's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 962.

Behold ye new-born Infant griefed.
J. Merrick. [Ignorance of Man.] 1st pub. in his Poems on Sacred Subjects, Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1813, pp. 25-27, in 8 st. of 4 l. It was also included in full by Montgomery in his Christian Psalms, 1825, No. 333. In its full form it has not come into C. U.: but centos therefrom are given in numerous collections both in G. Britain and America. These are:

1. "Author of good, to thee I turn (come)." This cento is composed of st. v.-viii., somewhat altered in Bickersteth's Christian Psalms, 1833, No. 127, and from thence has passed into several modern collections. In Dr. Kennedy's Hymns, Christ., 1843, No. 116, these stanzas are repeated as, "Author of good, to Thee I turn," and the two 8 lines have been added, probably by Dr. Kennedy.

2. "Author of good, we rest on Thee." This is a slightly altered form of the former cento, which is found in several American Unitarian collections.

BEIM FRÜHEN

3. "Eternal God, we look to Thee." This is an altered form of st. v., vii., and viii. It was included in the Leeds H. Bk., 1842, No. 868, and is repeated in the N. Cong., 1849, and other collections.

Taken in its various forms, very few of Merrick's compositions have attained to an equal position in popular favour. [J. J.]

Bei dir Jesu, will ich bleiben.
C. J. Spitta. [Confirmation.] Founded on Ps. lxx. 23, and 1st pub. in the 1st Series of his Evangel und Harfe, 1833, p. 58, in 6 st. of 8 l. entitled, "I remain continually with Thee!" In the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 533, Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 1709 (1863, No. 890). The tras. in C. U. are—

1. In thy service will I ever. A full and good tr. by R. Massie in his Lyra Dom., 1860, p. 59, and thence in Schaff's Christ in Song, ed. 1879, p. 452. Altered and transposed as Nos. 542, 543 in Adams's American C. Pastoralis, 1864. No. 543 begins with st. v., "Let Thy light on me be shining," and incorporates, as st. vii., a cento from st. i., ii. of Massie's tr. of Spitta's "Meine Stunde ist noch nicht kommen" (q. v.). In Horder's Cong. Hymn., 1884, No. 267, st. iv., ll. 5-8, and v., ll. 5-8, are omitted.

2. By Thee, Jesus, will I stay. A tr. of st. i., v., vi. as No. 35 in Snapp's S. of G. and G., 1876, marked as by "J. B. Walter, 1868." Other tras. are:

(1) "So will I abide for ever," by J. D. Burns in his Memorial & Remains, 1869, p. 236. (2) "Jesus, with Thee I would abide," by Lady Durand, 1872, p. 48.

Beim frühren Morgenlicht. [Morning.] We have found this hymn in two forms, each differing somewhat from the other, and both differing from the text Osawell seems to have used for his translation. The earlier is in the Katholisches G. B., Würzburg, 1828 [University Library, Würzburg], ed. by Canon S. Pörner, for use in the Diocese of Würzburg; where it occurs as No. 88, at p. 183, in 14 st. of 4 l., and double refrain, entitled "The Christian Greeting." No author's name is given, but it is probably of Franconian origin, and does not seem older than the present century. The second is in P. W. von Diirth's Französische Volkslieder, Leipzig, 1855, pt. i., p. 12, in 13 st. of 4 l., with double refrain, entitled "Gelobt sei Jesus Christus." Eight stanzas of the first form are in the Kath. Gesangbuchlein, 7th ed., Aschaffenburg, 1860, and the second form is given in full in the Evangelische Kinder G. B., Basel, 1867, No. 59. The last four stanzas of the Würzburg G. B., 1828, are here quoted for comparison.

xi. Die Finsterniss wird Licht.
Wenn fromm die Zunge spricht:
Gelobt sei Jesus Christus
Die Macht der Hölle wird
Vor diesem alten Lied:
Gelobt sei Jesus Christus

xii. Im Himmel selbst erschallt, Mit heiligem Gewalt: Gelobt, &c.
Der Himmel erweckt bei uns:
Erthun und essen, Gelobt, &c.

xiii. Ihr Menschenkind, Ihr All
Singt laut im Jubelchor: Gelobt, &c.
Rings um den Ehrenrath:
Ehre Gott zum Preis: Gelobt, &c.

xiv. Singet Himmel, Erd' und Meer.
Und alle Engel Heer:
Gelobt, &c.
Es schalle weit und breit, in Zeit und Ewigkeit: Gelobt, &c.
BEING OF BEINGS

The only tr. in C. U. is—

_When morning gilds the skies_—by E. Caswall.

_Beman, N.S.S._

1872. In 1869 he was also appointed Hon. Canon of Carlisle Cathedral. Dr. Bell's works include _Night Scenes from the Bible_, 1861; _Hills that bring Peace_, 1872; _The_Saintly Calling_, 1873; _Voices from the Lakes_, 1876; _Songs in the Twilight_, 1881; _Hymns for the Church and the Chamber_, 1882; _Songs in Many Keys_, 1884; and _for the Religions Trust Society, Angelic Beings, and their Nature and Ministry_.

He has also edited an Appendix to Dr. Walker's _Cheltenham Psalms and Hymns_, in 1873 (3rd ed. 1878). To this Appendix were contributed:

1. Another Sabbath close. _Sunday Evening_.
2. Be near us, Trine God, we pray. _Matronym_.
3. Be with us, gracious Lord, to-day. _Conversation of a Church_.
4. Christ ascends with songs exultant. _Ascension_.
5. Christ has risen! let the tides. _Easter_.
6. Come, gracious Saviour, manifest thy glory. _Advent_.
7. From the four winds. O living breath. _Mission_.
8. Good Lord, the valley's laugh and sing. _Evening_.
9. Lord, at Thy merry-seat we low. _Foundation Stone of Church_.
10. O fill me with Thy Spirit, gracious Lord. _Advent_.

These hymns being of recent date are not found, save in one or two instances, in any other collection than Dr. Bell's _Appendix_ to Dr. Walker's _Psalms and Hymns_, and his _Appendix_ to the _Hymns_, noted below. With the exception of Nos. 14 and 16, the above were republished in Dr. Bell's _Hymns for Church and Chamber_, 1882. This work also contains other hymns of merit, and should be consulted in preparing a Collection for congregational or private use. In 1884, Dr. Bell added an _Appendix to the Use of Cheltenham Churches to the Hymn_, in which he embodied the hymns given in his former _Appendix_, and added thereunto the following hymns from his _Hymns for the Church and Chamber_:

11. Great God, Thy people's dwelling-place. _New Year_.
12. He gives all believers sleep. _Safety during Sleep_.
13. O Lamb of God, Who died our souls to save. _Peace with God desired_.
14. O Saviour Christ, enthroned at God's right hand. _Christ the Accredited One_.
15. Rest in the Lord. Oh, words of love. _Kxhortation to trust in God_.

In addition to these there were also given:

16. For Erin plead we, God of love. _Hymn for Ireland_.
17. Jesu, our bright & Morning Star. _Epiphany_.

_Bell, Jane Cross_ (Simpson, J. C.)

Beman, Nathan Sidney Smith, 1819, was b. at Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y., Nov. 27, 1815; and graduated at Middleburg College, Vermont, 1807. He was a Congregational Pastor at Portland, Maine, 1816-18; Minister in Georgia, 1812-22; and Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Troy, N. Y., 1824-63. He d. at Carbondale, Illinois, Jan. 8, 1871. He edited _Sacred Lyrics_, Troy, 1832, and an enlarged collection under the same title, 1841. The latter was adopted by the New School Presbyterian General Assembly as the Christian Psalmist, 1847. Dr. Beman is known in hymnody mainly through his three hymns which are in common use:—

1. Jesus, we bow before Thy throne. Missions. This appeared in Dr. Hastings' Spiritual Songs, 1831, No. 174, in 4 st. 4 l.

2. Jesus, I come to Thee. Submission to Christ. The last two were first pub. in his Sacred Lyrics, 1832, and all are given in Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872. Dr. Beman's hymns are unknown to English collections. [F. M. B.]

Benedictce

This canticle is given in the Septuagint version of Holy Scriptures, and is therein a part [verse 35 to middle of v. 65] of the prayer of Azarias in the furnace, which occurs between vv. 23 and 21 of Dan. iii. It is not in the Hebrew version of the Holy Scriptures, and on this ground, amongst others, it is omitted from the Authorised Version. Its use in the Church, as a Canticle, dates from a very early period. It is in the Greek, Ambrosian, Mozarabic, Roman, Sarum, and other Officiums, usually at Lauds on Saturdays and Festivals, but varying in form and length, full details of which are given in Dr. Smith's Dict. of Christian Antiquities, Art. Benedictce. In addition to the renderings into Latin for the use of the Western Church, the following are versions in English, the first of which, after that in Latin as noted above, is the version in the Bk. of Common Prayer:—

1. O all ye works of the Lord. By whom this rendering from the Latin was made is not known.

4. Angelus holy, high and lowly. By J. S. Blackie. This rendering of the Benedictce appeared in Dr. Beman's Bible H. Bk., 1845, No. 96, in 12 st. of 6 l., and again in Dr. Blackie's Laws and Legends of Ancient Greece, 1857, p. 163, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed "Benedictce." Professor Blackie, in a note thereto, says:—

"This hymn was composed by me for the very beautiful Hinschen melody, Alles Scherz, the music and words of which will be found in the collection Hinschen Melodies, published by me in Taizé Magazine for 1846, vol. vii. p. 259. Many of these melodies, though used on convivial occasions, have a solemnity about them, in virtue of which they are well fitted for the service of the Sanctuary" (p. 359). This rendering of the Benedictce is gaining in popular favour, and is found in several hymnals.

5. O all ye works of God most high. This paraphrase was given in various numbers of The Sunday at Home, in 1885. It is by the Rev. Richard Wilton.

Strictly speaking, Nos. 2, 3, and 5 are not in C. U. In addition to the above renderings there are also:—

(1) Song of the Three Children Paraphrased, Dr. By Lady Audley. London, 1703. This is reprinted in her Poems, 1709.

(2) Song of the Three Children in English Verse, By M. L. Plu. London, Printed by J. Morphew. [Cf. 1720.] This was edited by S. Wesley, jun. [J. J.]
Bernstein, Christian Andreas, was b. at Domnitz, near Halle, where his father, Daniel Bernstein, was pastor. After completing his studies at Halle, he was appointed, in 1695, by A. H. Francke, a tutor in the Pädagogium there; was then ordained as assistant to his father (probably at the end of 1696); and d. at Domnitz, Oct. 18, 1699 (Koch, iv. 365, Ally. Deutsche Biog. ii. 484).

From extracts from the Kirchenbuch of Domnitz, kindly sent by Pastor Tauer, it appears that Bernstein was baptized there, July 12, 1672, and thus was probably b. July 9. He signed the book as assistant to his father on March 5, 1697. The funeral sermon, Oct. 29, 1699, was preached at his request by Francke, from Isaiah xl. The statement by his father (who survived till Feb. 27, 1712), that Christian d. at the age of 27 years, 3 months, and 2 days, and in the 3rd month and 2nd day of his age, 3rd year, 14th week of his ministry, seems hardly reconcilable with the other facts.

In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1701-5, six of his hymns were included, four of which have been tr. into English:

1. Ihr Kinders das Römchen! wie steht's um die Liebe. [Brotherly Love.] 1704, as above, No. 306, in 9 st. Previously in J. M. Arnold's Gotische Ephemeris, Leipzig, 1700, pt. ii. p. 309, as No. 1, of the "Some hitherto unknown hymns." 7r. as V. We in one covenant are joined," of st. v. by J. Swertner, as No. 331 in the "Moravian H. Bk., 1704.

2. Mein Vater, seuge mich, dein Kind, nach deinem Bild. [Name and Office of Christ.] 1704, as above, No. 62, in 14 st. The tr. are:
(1) "My Father: form Thy Child according to This Image," by J. C. Jacoti, 1732, p. 122 (1732, p. 12) (2) "Father, make me Thy child," by No. 546 in pt. 1 of the "Moravian H. Bk., 1704.

4. Zuletzt gehts wohl dem der gerecht auf Erden. [Cross and Confutation.] 1701, as above, No. 440, in 7 st. The tr. are:
(1) "At last he's well, who thro' the Blood of Jesus," No. 693, in pt. 1 of the "Moravian H. Bk., 1704. Altered 1726, and changed in metre, 1861, beginning "At last he's rest" (2) "At last all shall be well with those. His own," by Miss Borthwick, in M. L. L., 1854 (1862, p. 225; 1864, p. 172).

Benson, Edward White, d.d., Archbishop of Canterbury, s. of Edward White Benson, of York, was born at Birmingham, 14th July, 1829, and educated at King Edward's School in that town, and Trinity Coll. Cambridge. At Birmingham his contemporaries under the head mastership of Dr. Prinsep Lee, subsequently first Bishop of Manchester, included Dr. Westcott, and Dr. Lightfoot, Bishop of Durham. At Cambridge he took the high position of Sen. Opt. and 1st cl. Classical Tripos, winning also the distinction of Senior Chancellor's Classical Medalist. He subsequently became a Fellow of his College. In 1852 he passed from Cambridge to Rugby as assistant master; in 1859 from Rugby to Wellington College, of which he was Head Master for fourteen years; in 1872 from Wellington College to Lincoln, as Chancellor of the Cathedral; in 1877 from Lincoln to Truro, as the first Bishop of that Diocese; in 1883 from Truro to Canterbury, as the Primate of All England. In addition to these appointments he was also Prebendary of Lincoln and Chaplain to the Queen. The sterling value of Dr. Benson's work at Wellington College, at Lincoln, and at Truro, is strongly emphasized by his appointment to Canterbury. His literary labours have not been very extensive; but as a contributor to the Dictionary of Christian Biography, and the author of Work, Friendship, Worship (University Sermons at Cambridge) 1871; Boy Life; Sundays in Wellington College, 1874, and Singleheart, 1877, he is well and favourably known. His hymnological work embraces the co-editorship of the 1856 edition of the Hymn Book; the editorship of the Wellington College Chapel Hymn Book, 1860, 1863, 1876, the translation of various Latin and Greek hymns, including Angulare Fundamentum; Tristes erant Apostoli; Dies Irae Qui mortalis; Te lucis ante terminum; Duromina; and a limited number of original hymns. Of the latter the best is the Breviation Hymn, "O throned, O crowned with all renown" (q. v.); and "Praise to God Who reigns above," were contributed to H. A. & M., 1861.

Bernard of Clairvaux, saint, abbot, and doctor, fills one of the most conspicuous positions in the history of the middle ages. His father, Theobald, or Tesselin, a knight of great bravery, was the friend and vassal of the Duke of Burgundy. Bernard was born at his father's castle on the confines of France and Germany, near Dijon, in Burgundy, in 1091. In his youth he was educated at Caen, where he was distinguished for his studious and meditative habits. The world, it would be thought, would have had overpowering attractions for a youth who, like Bernard, had all the advantages that high birth, great personal beauty, graceful manners, and irresistible influence could give, but, strengthened in the resolve by night visions of his mother (who had died in 1102), he chose a life of asceticism, and became a monk. In company with an uncle and two of his brothers, who had been won over by his entreaties, he entered the monastery of Citeaux, the first Cistercian foundation, in 1113.

Two years later he was sent forth, at the head of twelve monks, from the rapidly increasing and overcrowded abbey, to found a daughter institution, which in spite of difficulties and privations which would have daunted less determined men, they succeeded in doing, in the Valley of Worwood, about four miles from the Abbey of La Ferté—itself an earlier swarm from the same parent hive—on the Aube. On the death of Pope Honorius II., in 1130, the Sacred College was rent by factions, one of which elected Gregory of St. Angelo, who took the title of Innocent II., while another elected Peter Leonis, under that of Anacletus II. Innocent fled to France, and the question as to whom the allegiance of the King, Louis VI., and the French bishops was due was left to them for Bernard to decide. At a council held at Etampes, Bernard gave judgment in favour of Innocent. Throwing himself into the question with all the ardour of a vehement partisan, he won over both Henry I., the English king, and Lothair, the German emperor, to support the same cause, and then, in 1133, accompanied Innocent II., who was supported by Lothair and his army, to Italy and to Rome. When Lothair withdrew, Innocent returned to Paris, and Bernard for awhile to his abbey of Clairvaux. It was not until after the death of Anacletus, the antipope, in January, 1138, and the resignation of his successor, the cardinal-priest Gregory, Victor II., that Innocent II., who had returned to Rome with Bernard, was universally acknowledged Pope, a result to which no one had so greatly contributed as the Abbot of Clairvaux. The influence of the latter now became paramount in the Church, as was proved, when the Council of 1139, the largest council ever collected together, where the decrees in every line displayed the work of his master-hand. After having devoted four years to the service of the Pope, Bernard, early in 1135, returned to Clairvaux. In 1137 he was again at Rome, impetuous and determined as ever, denouncing the election of a Cluniac instead of a Clairvaux monk to the see of Langres in France, and in high contradiction in consequence with Peter, the gentle Abbot of Cluny, and the Archbishop of Lyons. The question was settled by the deposition by the Pope of the Cluniac and the elevation of a Clairvaux monk (Godfrey, a kinsman of St. Bernard) into his place. In 1143, Bernard raised an almost similar question as to the election of St. William to the see of York, which was settled much after the same fashion, the deposition, after a time, if only for a time, of William, and the elevation of another Clairvaux monk, Henry Murdac, or Murtho, into the archiepiscopal see. Meanwhile between these two dates—in 1140—the condemnation of Peter Abbad and his tenants, in which matter Bernard appeared personally as prosecutor, took place at a council held at Sens. Abbad, condemned at Sens, appealed to Rome, and, resting awhile on his way thither, at Cluny, where Peter still prevailed as Abbot, died there in 1142. St. Bernard was next called upon to exercise his unrivalled powers of persuasion in a very different cause. Controversy over, he preached a crusade. The summer of 1146 was spent by him in traversing France to rouse the people to engage in the second crusade; the autumn with a like object in Germany. In both countries the effect of his appearance and eloquence was marvellous, almost miraculous. The population seemed to rise en masse, and take up the cross. In 1147 the expedition started, a vast horde, of which probably not a tenth ever reached Palestine. It proved a complete failure, and a miserable remnant shared the flight of their leaders, the Emwas the only satirist that ever did so—some of the most widely known and admired hymns to the Church of to-day. His poem De Contemptu Mundi remains as an imperishable monument of an author of whom we know little besides except his name, and that a name overshadowed in his own day and in ours by his more illustrous contemporary and namesake, the saintly Abbot of Clairvaux.

The poem itself consists of about 3000 lines in a metre which is technically known as Leonnin Cristati Pristis Juxti, or more familiarly—to use Dr. Neale's description in his Medieval Hymn, p. 99—"it is upon this hexameter, divided into three parts, between which a casura is inadmissible. The hexameter has a tailed rhyme, and feminine or feminine rhyme between the two first clauses, thus:

"Tune nova gloria, pectora solita, clarificant:
Solvit etiam, tenebrae sabbata, continuat.
Patris luxantis, lucea turbant, insecuta
Cive repugnatur, amplissima Loredilla."

The difficulty of writing at all, much more of writing a poem of such length in a metre of this description, will be apparent to all readers of it, as it was to the writer himself, who attributes his successful accomplishment of his task entirely to the direct inspiration of the Spirit of God. "Non ego arrogaber, sed omne humiliti, et ob id asperus affirmaverim, quasi multis spiritus mortuus et intellectus multo affusus, tamen mirum metrum tam longum opus continere non ausus sum."

As to the character of the metre, on the other hand, opinions have widely differed, for while Dr. Neale, in his Medieval Hymn, speaks of its "majestic sweetness," and in its preface to the Rhythm of Bernard de Morlaix on the Celto-Norman, says that it seems to him "one of the handsomest of mediæval measures," Archbishop Trench in his Spec. Lat. Poetry, 1873, p. 311, says: "it must be confessed that these dactylic hexameters... present as unattractive a garb for poetry as can well be imagined;" and, a few lines further on, notes the awkwardness and repulsiveness of the metre.

The truth perhaps lies between these two very opposite criticisms. Without seeking to claim for the metre all that Dr. Neale is willing to attribute to it, it may be fairly said to be admirably adapted for the purpose to which it has been applied by Bernard, whose preconceived self-abasement as a contemplative in the spirit of the publican, "that would not so much as lift up his eyes unto heaven," the joys and the glory of the celestial country, or sorrowfully reviews the vices of his age, or solemnly denounces God's judgments and the righteous execution thereof. So much is true in the case that the prevailing sentiment of the poem, that, viz., of an awful appreciation of the joys of heaven, the enormity of sin, and the terrors of hell, seems almost wholly lost in such translation as that of Dr. Neale. Beautiful as they are as hymns, "brief life is here our portion," "Jerusalem the Golden, and their companion extracts from this great work, are far too jubilant to give any idea of the prevailing tone of the original." (See Hera Novissima.)

In the original poem of Bernard it should be noted that the same fault has been remarked by Archbishop Trench, Dean Stanley, and Dr. Neale, which may be given in the Archbishop's words as excusing at the same time both the want, which still exists, of a very close translation of any part, and of a complete and continuous rendering of the whole poem. "The poem," observes Archbishop Trench, "instead of advancing, eddies round and round his object, recurring again and again to that which he seemed thoroughly to have discussed and dismissed, Son. Lat. Poetry, 1873, p. 311. On other grounds also, more especially the character of the vices which the author lasheth, it is alike impossible to expect, and undesirable to obtain, a literal translation of the whole. We may well be content with what we already owe it as additions to our stores of church-hymns.

Berridge, John, b. at Kingston, Nottingam, March 1, 1716, and educated at Clare Hall, Cambridge. In 1749 he was ordained as curate to the parish of Stapleford, near Cambridge, and in 1755 he was preferred to the Vicarage of Everton, where he d. Jan. 22, 1793. His epitaph, written by himself for his own tombstone (with date of death filled in), is an epitome of his life. It reads—

"Here lies the remains of John Berridge, late Vicar of Everton, and an itinerate servant of Jesus Christ, who loved his Master and His work; and after running on His errands for many years, was caught up out of this world. Reader, art thou born again? (No salvation without a new birth.) I was born in Sin, February 1716, remained ignorant of my fallen state till 1730; lived piously on faith and works for salvation till 1754; was admitted to Everton Vicarage, 1755; fled to Jesus for refuge, 1755; fell asleep in Jesus, January 22, 1793."

The first collection of Berridge's hymns was published as A Collection of Divine Songs, 1769. This was subsequently suppressed. In 1783 his Sion's Songs; or, Hymns composed for the use of them that love and follow the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity were published. The work contains 312 hymns, some of which had previously appeared in the Gospel Magazine (from 1775 to 1777, 20 in all), under the signature of "Old Everton" and others were adapted from C. Wesley. The most popular of these in modern collections are, "Jesus, cast a look on me," "O happy saints who dwell in light;" and "Since Jesus truly did appear." Concerning his hymn book in 1783, he says in his Preface—

"Twelve years ago those hymns were composed in a six months' illness, and have since laid aside neglected by me, often threatened with the fire, but have escaped that martyrdom."

Bertram, Robert Aitken, s. of Rev. J. M. Bertram, b. at Hanley, 1836, and educated at Owen's College, Manchester, and as a Congregational minister has laboured in St. Helena, Manchester, Barlavington, Nottingham and Llanelli. Mr Bertram is author of several works, including A Dictionary of Medical Illustrations, 1877; A Homiletic Encyclopaedia of Illustrations in Theology and Morals, 1880; and was also one of the editors of The Cavendish Hymnal, prepared in 1864 for the use of the congregation of Rev. Joseph Parker, b.d., at that time minister of Cavendish Chapel, Manchester. To that collection he contributed, under the initials "R. A. B.," the following hymns, several of which have passed into other hymn-books:

1. As kings and priests we hope to shine. Cross and Crown
2. Behold Thy servant, Lord. Induction of a Ministry
3. Father of Jesus, Lord of Love. Love to God desired
4. Jesus, hail! Thou Lord of glory. Ascension
5. Look down, O Lord, in love on these. Reception into Church Membership
6. Lord of glory, throne on high. Children's Hymn for New Year
7. Met to remember Thee, O Lord. Holy Communion
8. O Christ, with all Thy members one. One Meat with Christ
9. Our hearts still joy in Thee. Sunday
10. Saviour, still the same Thou art. Holy Baptism
11. Seeking, Lord, Thy word to heed. S. S. Teacher's Hymn
12. Sing loud for joy, ye saints of God. Reception into Church Membership
13. Spirits of life, and powers of light. Whitstable
14. Sweetly fly, our changeful days. Sunday

Bemthune, George Washington, B.B. A very eminent divine of the Reformed Dutch body, born in New York, 1805, graduated at Dickinson Coll., Carlisle, Phila., 1821, and studied theology at Princeton. In 1827 he was appointed Pastor of the Reformed Dutch Church, Rinebeck, New York. In 1830 passed to Utica, in 1834 to Philadelphia, and in 1850 to the Brooklyn Heights, New York. In 1861 he visited Florence, Italy, for his health, and died in that city, almost certainly, after preaching, April 27, 1862. His Life and Letters were edited by A. R. Van Neste, 1887. He was offered the Chancellorship of the University of New York, and the Provostship of the University of Pennsylvania, both of which he declined. His works include The Fruits of the Spirit, 1839; Sermons, 1847; Leaves of Love & Faith, 1847; The British Female Poets, 1848, and others. Of his hymns, some of which have attained to some repute, we have:

1. Teased upon life's raging billow. Savior's Hymn. Appeared in the Christian Lyce, 1830; in the Seaman's Devotional Assistant the same year, and in Dr. Bethune's Lays, 1847, p. 168, in 3 st. of 8 l. It is said to have been the Author's first and favourite hymn, having been written when he was on a voyage to the West Indies, for the benefit of his health, in the year 1823. (Lyc. Soc. Amer. p. 239.) It is a "Sailor's Hymn," a work which was published in Lyra Sac. Amer., and hence passed into 'The Hymnary, 1872, and other English collections.

3. It is a death to die. This translation of the Greek hymn for Pindar (q.v.) appears in his Lyra, &c., 1847, p. 141, in 5 st. of 4 l. As stated above, Dr. Bethune died at Florence. His remains were taken to New York, and buried in Greenwood Cemetery. This hymn, in compliance with a request made by him before his death, was sung at his funeral. It is found in several English hymnals.

4. Light of the Immortal Father's glory. Evening, v. 5 of the Greek hymn for Pindar (q.v.). It appeared in his Lyra, &c., 1847, p. 373, in 4 st. of 8 l., and is in C. U. and in England.

5. Farewell, dear brother. Parting. The departing Missionary, pub. in his Lyra, &c., 1847, p. 170, in 6 st. of 4 l., and included in Lyra Sac. Amer. 1868, and thence into English collections. It is in C. U. in America.

6. O Jesus, when I think of Thee, Easter. This is said to have been the date of 1847. It was 1st pub. in his Lyra, &c., 1847. Included in Lyra Sac. Amer. (there it is stated to have been from the Lyra into English collections.) It is in C. U. in America:

7. Come, let us sing of Jesus. S. Schools. Pub. in 1850, suitably to Sunday schools, and is found in Song's S. of G. & G. and others.

9. There is no name so sweet on earth. Name of Jesus. Sal by Mr. H. P. Main to be by Dr. Bethune. It has been wrongly ascribed to E. Roberts, a Hussian.

10. When the spirit of the author's pen is and was written on Saturday, April 25th, 1862, the day before his death at the Lyra Soc. Amer., 1868, and thence passed into one or two English hymnals.

In his Lyra, &c., 1847, Dr. Bethune included the following "Christmas Carols for Sunday School Children":

1. The Almighty Spirit to a poor, &c.
2. Joy and gladness, joy and gladness.
3. Full many a year has passed, &c.
4. We come, we come, with loud acclaims.

In the same work there are also metrical renderings of Psalms i. xix. xxiii. xxxvi. xxvi. in the Lyra Sacra Americana, 14 pieces by Dr. Bethune are given, including many of the above.

BEETLE, Henry John, was b. 1825, at Great Yarmouth, where his father was a Baptist minister. He entered the Baptist ministry in 1847, and laboured successively in London, Edinburgh, Bradford (Yorks.), Manchester, Darlington, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Mr. Betts has pub. a small volume of hymns and poetical translations, entitled 'Early Blossoms, 1842: two vols. of sermons on Scriptural Localities and their Associations,' 1858; 'Lectures on Elijah, 1856; and at different times single sermons and lectures. For some years he was editor of the Primitive Church Magazine. His 'Children's Hymnbook' appeared in 1861. From it the following hymns are in C. U.—

1. Beautiful Star, whose heavenly light, Christ the Star.
2. Jesus, Thou art meek and lowly, Jesus desired.
4. There is a lamp whose steady light, Holy Scripture.

These are found in Major's Bk. of Praise, and some other collections. [W. R. S.]

BEVAN, Emma Frances, née Shuttleworth, dau. of the Rev. Philip Nicholas Shuttleworth, Warden of New Coll., Oxford, afterwards Bp. of Chichester, was b. at Oxford, Sept. 25, 1827, and was married to Mr. H. C. Le Bevan, of the Lombard Street banking firm, in 1836.

Mrs. Bevan pub. in 1858 a series of tracts from the Devonian as Songs of Nativity Life (Lond., Hamilton, Adams, & Co.), in a volume which, from its unusual size and co-operative costliness, has received less attention than it deserves, for the tracts are decidedly above the average in merit. A number have come into C. U., but almost always without its name, the best known being those under "O Isis, O chest, O Licht des Lebens," and "Gesels Paar will etwas ben." Most of these are annotated throughout this Dictionary under their authors' names, or Greek first lines. That at p. 690, "O Isis an der Is, O Licht des Lebens," and "Gesels Paar will etwas ben." Most of these are annotated throughout this Dictionary as far as possible.

Beyond, beyond the [that] boundless sea. J. Conder. [Omnipresence of the H. Spirit.] Appeared in his Star in the East with Other Poems, 1824, pp. 74, 75, in 5 st. of 6 l., headed, "A Thought on the Sea, 'Though He be not far from every one of us,' Acts xvi. 27;" and dated, "Happisburgh, June, 1822." In 1856 it was repeated in his Hymns of Praise, Prayer, &c., p. 53, with slight changes in st. iv. and v. The congregational use of this hymn began with Curtiss's Union Coll., 1827, No. 21, and extended to Conder's Cong. H. Bk., 1838: the Leeds H. Bk., 1853: the Bap. Psalms & Hymns, 1868: the New Cong. 1839, and others. Its use is fairly extensive, both in G. Britain and in America. In Martineau's Hymn, 1840, and Hymns of Praise and Prayer, 1873, it reads—"O God, beyond that boundless sea," and st. iii. is also omitted.
Beyond the smiling and the weeping.

H. Bonar [Heaven anticipated.]

Pub. in his Hymns of Faith and Hope, 1st ser. 1857. In 6 st., of 8 l., the last three lines being a refrain. In G. Britain it is found in one or two collections only, but in America its use is somewhat extensive, but usually with abbrevi-first pastor of the Neustadt Erlangen, and in 1860 dean of Erlangen. He died at Erlangen, June 2, 1882, aged 77 years, 309-310; MS., &c., from his widow).

He took an interest in the preparation of the Bavarian G. S. 1854, and strove for the retention of hymns in their original forms. His hymns (which are mostly translations from the Latin) appeared principally in his Gesang- und Psalmversuch Erlangen, 1860. One has been tr. into English, viz.:

Mijn Hers, vergis meen achter.[s] [Supplication].

1st pub. in Knapp's Christologete, 1844, p. 185, to pub. in Oct. 1854, repeated in 1750 as above. Included in No. 1775 in Knapp's Rev. L. S., 1850 (1896, No. 1724). As —

"My God, forget me not," by Miss Jane Bathurst in H. L., 1862, [J. M.]

Bickersteth, Edward Henry, B.D., b. of Henry Bickersteth, surgeon, of Kirkby-Lonsdale, Westmorland, and brother of John Bickersteth, b. at Kirkby-Lonsdale, Mar. 19, 1766. In 1801, he received an appointment in the General Post Office, but relinquished it in 1806 for the study of law. Subsequently, in 1813, he took Holy Orders, and proceeded to visit the stations of the Church Miss. Society in West Africa. On his return he became the resident Secretary of the Society till 1830, when he was preferred to the Rectory of Watton, Herts, where he d. Feb. 28, 1850. His works, which are numerous, were pub., in 16 vols., in 1853. His Christian Prayer-book, pub. 1833, enlarged ed. 1841, has had a most powerful and lasting influence upon the hymnody of the Church of England. Of the hymns contained therein a large proportion are still in C. U., and in many instances in the form in which they were given in that collection in 1833 and 1841. His hymns, contributed to the 1st ed. of his collection, are:

1. Light of the world, shine on our souls. H. Scriptures.
2. Lord of the harvest, hear us now. During ministerial vacancy.
3. Lord, shed Thy grace on every heart. Social meeting.
4. O for a single heart for God. Single heart desired.
5. O if we know the joyful sound. Round Societies.
6. Our Saviour Christ will quickly come. Adoration.
7. The day of birth, my soul, improve. Birthday.
8. Walk with thy God — A sinner walk. Be still and walk with God.

Bickersteth, Edward Henry, B.D., b. of the above, b. at Islington, Jan. 1825, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge (B.A. with honours, 1847; M.A., 1850). On taking Holy Orders in 1818, he became curate of Beningham, Norfolk, and then of Christ Church, Tunbridge Wells. His preference to the Rectory of Hinton-Martell, in 1832, was followed by that of the Vicarage of Christ Church, Hampstead, 1853. In 1885 he became Dean of Gloucester, and the same year Bishop of Exeter. Bishop Bickersteth's works, chiefly poetical, are:

(1) Fosses, 1849; (2) Water from the Well-springs, 1852; (3) The Book of Days, 1854; (4) Commentary on the New Testament, 1854; (5) Yesterday, To-day, and For Ever, 1861; (6) The Spirit of Life, 1862; (7) The Two Brothers and other Poems, 1871; (8) The Water Home Call, 1872; (9) The Shadowed Home and the Light Beyond, 1874; (10) The Beef and other Parables, 1875; (11) Songs in the House of Pilgrimage, N.B.; (12) From Tear to Tear, 1882.

As an editor of hymnals, Bp. Bickersteth has also been most successful. His collections are:

(1) Psalms & Hymns, 1843, b. on his father's Christian Psalmody, which passed through several editions.
(2) The Hymnal Companion, 1870; (3) The Hymnal Com-

Bianco da Siena, b. at Ancilina, in the Val d'Arno, date unknown. In 1667 he entered the Order of Jesuines, consisting of unordained men who followed the rule of St. Augustine. This order was instituted in that year by one John Colombinus of Sienna, and suppressed by Pope Clement IX. in 1668. Little is known of Bianco beyond the fact that he is said to have lived in Venice for some years, and d. there in 1434. His hymns were pub. at Lucca, in 1851, and edited by T. Bini, under the title, Laudis spirituali del Bianco da Siena. This work contains 92 pieces. Of these the following have been translated into English, and have come into C. U.:—

1. Disceilt Amor santo. The Holy Spirit desired. This is No. 35 in the above work and is in 9 st. of these, Dr. Littlefield gave 4 in the People's, H., 1867, No. 473, as, "Come down, O Love Divine.

2. O Gesu Cristo amoroso. Missions. This is in English by Dr. Littlefield, and was pub. in Christ, the living.

V. M. This is also from the foregoing work, the People's, H., 1867, No. 226, is in 7 st. of 4 lb. Lamb.

3. Vergine santa, sposa dell'Agape. St. Lucy. No. 74, in 15 st. of 3 lb. Dr. Littlefield's tr. is, in 22 st. of 6 lb.

4. Amor e spòso dileto. Love for Jesus. 1855. Dr. Littlefield contributed a cento thereon. This was tr. to Brooke's Churchman's Monthly, 1852. It begins, "Love, Jesus, Who hath sought thee so.

Although the trs. Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4 have not gone any worthy of more extended notice. [J. J.]

Biarowsky, Wilhelm Eduard Immanuel von, of F. M. F. von Biarowsky, a Munich 08, 1814, and after studying at Munich, became in 1840, German minister at Koln, on the Lake of Geneva, and He became, in 1845, pastor at Wittenbach, Lower Franconia, but resigned in 1857, and after a year spent in Munich, was appointed when on the death of the Duke, in 1572, the Elector August, of saxony, assumed the Regency, the Calvinistic court party gained the ascendancy, and succeeded in displacing Bienemann and other Lutheran pastors in the Duchy. Finally, in 1578, he was appointed pastor and General Superintendent at Altenburg, and d. there Sept. 12, 1591 (Koch, ii.
248-252; Allg. Deutsche Biog., ii. 629). One of his hymns has passed into English.

Herr wie du willt, so schickst mich. [Resignation.] Written in 1574, while he was tutor to the children of Duke Johann Wilhelm of Sachsen Weimar, in expectation of a coming residience. He taught it as a prayer to the Princess Maria, then three years old, the initial letters of the three stanzas (H. Z. S) forming an acrostic on her title, Herzogin zu Sachsen. The Princess afterwards adopted as her motto the words "Herr wie du willt," and this motto forms the refrain of "Jesus, Jesus, nichts als Jesus," the best known hymn of the Countess Ludmilla Elizabeth of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt (q.v.), (see Koch, vili. 570-571).
This hymn "Herr wie," was first pub. in R. Helböcklein, Leipzig, 1582, in 3 at. of 7 l., marked as
C. Melis D. 1574, with the title, "Motto and daily prayer of the illustrious and noble Princess and Lady, Lady Maria, by birth, Duchess of Saxony, Landgrave of Thuringia and Margrave of Meissen." Thence in Wackerneupel, tr.
p. 714. Included in the Greifswald G. B. 1597, and others, and in the Unv. L. S., 1581, No. 578.
The 5 stanzas in C. U. are:

1. Lord, as Thou wilt, whilst Thou my heart, good and full, by A. T. Russell, as No. 185 in his Ps. & Hys., 1854.

2. Lord, as Thou wilt, deal Thou with me. in full, by E. Cronenwett, as No. 406 in the Ohio Luth.
Hymnal, 1880. Another tr. is —

"Lord, as Thou wilt, so do with me," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 53.

and Translations, 1867. (2) Suppl. Hymns for use with H. A. & M.; (3) English Hymnody (a reprint of articles from the Monthly Packet), 1872; Songs of Other Churches (pub. in the Monthly Packet, 1871-3); and one or two smaller hymnological works. A few of the renderings of English hymns into Latin given in his Annotated H. A. & M. are by him.

Bilby, Thomas, s. of John Bilby, b. at Southampton, April 18, 1791. In 1806 he joined the army, remaining eight years. Subsequently he studied the Infant School System under Buchanan, whose school at Brewer's Green, Westminster, is said to have been the first Infants' School opened in England. In 1825 he obtained the charge of a Training School at Chelsea, where some 500 teachers were instructed in his system. In 1832 he proceeded to the West Indies, where he introduced his system of teaching. On returning home to England, he became the parish clerk of St. Mary's, Illington. He d. Sept. 24, 1872.

He was one of the founders of "The Home and Colonial Infant School Society." Jointly with Mr. B. B. Ridgway he published The Nurse's Book, The Infant Teacher's Assistant, 1831-32, and the Book of Quadrupeds, 1836. His hymns appeared in The Infant Teacher's Assistant, the best known of which is, "Here we suffer grief and pain."

Binney, Thomas, B.D., b. at Newcastle-on-Tyne, 1798, and educated at Wymondley College, Hertfordshire. Entering the ministry, he was successively pastor of a congregation at Bedford, an Independent Chapel at Newpoit, Isle of Wight, and of the king's Weight House Chapel, London, 1829. The University of Aberdeen conferred upon him the M.A. degree. He d. Feb. 23, 1874. His works, exceeding 50 in number, include Life of the Rev. Stephen Morell, 1825; Money, 1864; St. Paul, His Life and Ministry, &c. He wrote a few hymns, including "Eternal Light! Eternal Light," and "Holy Father, Whom we praise." (Close of Service.)

Bird, Frederic Mayer, b. at Philadelphia, U.S., June 28, 1838, and graduated at the University of Pennsylvania, 1857. In 1860 he became Lutheran pastor at Rhinebeck, N.Y., in 1865 at Valatie, N.Y., where he remained until 1868. In 1868 he joined the American Protestant Episcopal Church (decan), and became Rector at Spofford, New Jersey, 1870-74, and elsewhere, when he became Chaplain and Professor of Psychology, Christian Evidences, and Rhetoric in the Lehigh University, South Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

(3) Charles Wesley's Hymns and last the department of "Hymn Notes," in the New York B. W., works is the largest in the United States.

Birk, Sigismund von, s. of Daniel Birk, pastor at Wildstein, near Eger, in Bohemia, was b. at Wildstein, May 3, 1626. In 1629 his father, along with other evangelical pastors, was forced to flee from Bohemia, and went to Nürnberg. After passing through the Egidien-Gymnasium at Nürnberg Sigismund entered the University of Jena, 1643, and there studied both Law and Theology, the latter at his father's dying request. Returned to Nürnberg, in 1645, and on account of the Pogutz Shepherd and Flower Order, At the close of 1645 he was appointed tutor at Wolfenbüttel to the Princes of Brunswick, was crowned as a poet, and after a year (during which he resigned the post), he resigned this post. After a tour, during which he was admitted to the German Society (or Patriotic Union), he returned to Nürnberg in 1648, and employed himself as a private tutor. In 1654 he was ennobled on account of his poetic gifts by the Emperor Ferdinand III. was admitted in 1658 as a member of the Fruitbearing Society, and on the death of Harsdörffer, in 1662, became Chief Shepherd of the Pegzitz Order, to which from that time he imparted a distinctly religious cast. He d. at Nürnberg, June 12, 1681. (Koch, ii. 478-485; Allg. Deutsche Biog., ii. 660; Bode, pp. 44-46; first dating his death, July, and the last dating his birth, April 25). In his 52 hymns he was not able to shake off the artificial influences of the time, and not many of them have retained a place in German C. U. Three have been tr. into English:

1. Auf, auf, mein Herz und du mein ganes Sinn, Wirt alles heut. [Sunday.] 1st pub. (not in 1661, but) in Saubert's G. B., Nürnberg, 1676, No. 329, in 10 st. Tr. as:—

(1) "Awake thee up! My Heart, my Thought, my Mind," by H. J. Bucknell, 1842, p. 16. (2) "Awake! to holy thought aspire," by Dr. H. Wells, 1866.

"Jesus, on thy suffering love," by W. Reid, in the British Psalmist, March, 1665, p. 46, repeated in his Psalms, 1872, No. 433.

3. Lasset uns mit Jesu ziehen. [Passiontide.] 1st pub. in J. M. Dilherr's Heilige Korreoschen, Nürnberg, 1653, p. 412, in 4 st. of 8 l. Included as No. 250 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1893. The only tr. in C. U. is:

"Let us hance, on high ascending," Good and full, by A. T. Russell, as No. 184 in his Ps. & Hym., 1851. His frs. of st. iii., iv., were adopted and altered to "Let us now with Christ be dying," as No. 635 in Kennedy, 1883.

Birks, Edward Bickersteth, M.A., s. of Professor T. R. Birks, b. at Kelshall, Herts, in 1849, and educated at Cholmeley School, Highgate, and Trinity College, Cambridge (M.A. 1870, M.A. 1873, and also a Fellowship, 1878). On taking Holy Orders, he became, in 1878, Curate of St. Mary's, Nottingham, and, after six months at Greenwich, in 1880, Vicar of Trimingham in 1881, and Vicar of St. Michael's, Cambridge, in 1884. Mr. Birks is the author of the metrical Litany, "Light that from the dark abyss," in the H. Comp., No. 649. It first appeared in Evening Hours in 1871 (having been composed in 1869 or 1870). Others of his pieces are to be found in Leaves from the Christian Rememberer.

Birks, Thomas Rawson, M.A., b. Sept. 1810, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge (B.A. 1834, M.A. 1837), of which he subsequently became a Fellow. Having taken Holy Orders in 1837, he became, in 1878, Curate of St. Mary's, Nottingham, and, after six months at Greenwich, in 1880, Vicar of Trimingham in 1881, and Vicar of St. Michael's, Cambridge, in 1884. Mr. Birks is the author of the metrical Litany, "Light that from the dark abyss," in the H. Comp., No. 549. It first appeared in Evening Hours in 1871 (having been composed in 1869 or 1870). of the Psalms. In his Companions Psalter, 1874. They number upwards of 100. [Eng. Psalters, § xx.] Very few are in C. U. In G. Britain, but in America their use is extending. They include:—

1. Except the Lord do build the house. Ps. cxvii.
2. 0 come, let us sing to the Lord. Ps. xcv.
3. O King of Mercy, from Thy throne on high. Ps. lxxx.
4. O taste and see that He is good. Ps. xxxiv.
5. O when from all the ends of earth. Ps. xiv.
6. The heavens declare Thy glory. Ps. xiv.
7. The Lord Himself my joy is. Ps. xxxi.
8. The mighty God, the Lord hath spoken. Ps. 1.
9. Thou art gone up on high, 0 Christ, &c. Ps. xvi.
10. Whom have I [we] Lord in heaven, but Thee. Ps. xiii.

Of these versions of the Psalms, all of which date from 1874, the most popular is No. 3. Mr. Hirka's compositions are of greater worth than they have hitherto received.

Bis ternas horas explicationes. [For the Sixth Hour.] This hymn is in Daniel, No. 16, with a further note at iv. p. 13. Daniel, on the authority of Castriolus's commentary on Ps. cxv. 164, gives its as by St. Ambrose. Daniel's text is in 32 lines, of which he says, ll. 23-28, beginning "Ora brasile Domini", are given by the Benedictine editors as a complete hymn of St. Ambrose. He cites it as in the Hymnary of Thomasius, and as in an 8th cent. ms. in the Vatican. Tr. as "Now twice three hours the sun hath told," by W. J. Copeland, in his Hymn. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 148.

Blackall, Christopher Ruby, M.D., b. in New York State, 1830, and educated for the medical profession. For 15 years he followed his profession, including service in the army during the civil war. Subsequently he managed, for 14 years, a branch of the Baptist Publication Society, taking at the same time great interest in S. School work. He edited the American Bible Lesson Quarterly, for 3 years, and also Our Little Ones.

1. The prince is set before us. Heaven anticipated. This is one of Dr. Blackall's most popular hymns for children. It was written in 1874 for the Sunday School of 2nd Baptist Church, Chicago, Illinois, and set to music by H. R. Palmer. It 1st appeared in Palmer's Songs of Love for the Bible School, 1874, from whence it has passed into numerous collections, including J. D. Sankey's S. S. and School, Lond., 1881.

2. Follow the paths of Jesus. Following Jesus. This is included in the Bap. Hy. [§ Tune] Bk., Phila., 1874, No. 701.

Blackie, John Stuart, L.L.D., b. at Glasgow, July, 1809, and educated at Marischal College, Aberdeen, and at the University of Edinburgh. After a residence on the Continent for educational purposes, he was called to the Bar in 1834. In 1841, he was appointed Professor of Latin in Marischal College, Aberdeen, and in 1850 Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh. On the death of Dr. Guthrie he was for some time the Editor of the Sunday Magazine. His published works include:—A Metrical Translation of Aeschylus, 1850; Pronunciation of Greek, 1852; Lyrical Poems, 1860; Homer and the Iliad, 4 vols., 1869, &c.; Laymen and Legends of Ancient Greece, &c., 1875, and Songs of Religion and Life, 1876. To the hymnological student he is known by his rendering of a portion of the Benedicere (q.v.). "Angels, holy, high and lowly," which is found in several hymnals.

Blacklock, Thomas, D.D., b. at Annapolis, Dunbarshire, November 10, 1721. He studied at the University of Edinburgh, and was, in 1759, licensed to preach. In 1762 he was ordained parish minister of Kirkenbright, but, on account of his blindness, had to resign and retire on an annuity. He went to Edinburgh and there received as boarders University students and boys attending school. In 1767 he received the degree of D.D. from the University of Aberdeen (Marischal College). He was one of the earliest and most helpful literary friends of Robert Burns. He d. at Edinburgh, July 7, 1791. His Poems were often printed—in 1756 at London, with a Memoir by the Rev. Joseph Spence, Professor of Poetry at Oxford; in 1783, at Edinburgh, with a Memoir by Henry MacKenzie, &c. They include 2 Psalm Versions, and 4 Hymns. "Hal, source of pleasures ever new," is altered from the Hymn to Benevolence, and "Father of all, omnipotent mind," is from his version of Psalm 239. No. 16 in the Tears, and Pard, of 1784. "In life's gay morn," &c., is also ascribed to him.

Blackmore, Sir Richard, was appointed a Physician in Ordinary to William of Orange in 1667, receiving knighthood at the same time in recognition of his services at the Revolution. His works embraced theology, medicine, and poetry, and a Version of the Book of Psalms. [Eng. Psalters, § XV.] Whilst Dryden and Popesuper excelled at his poetical works, Addison (Spectator, 338), and Johnson (Lives of the Poets) gave them a good word, and specially his poem on the Creation. He d. October 9, 1729.

His version of the Psalms was last issued in England with royal license for use in churches; but notwithstanding this it never obtained any circulation, and except as in a few psalms in Colyer's Sic., 1812, and one or two others, and various Uniate collections in the early part of this century, it has remained utterly neglected by editors of all schools of thought.

Blair, Hugh, D.D., eldest s. of John Blair, merchant, Edinburgh, b. at Edinburgh, April 7, 1718. In 1730 he entered the University of Edinburgh, where he graduated M.A. in 1739. In 1742 he was ordained parish minister of Collessie, in Fifeshire, in 1743, second minister of the Canongate, in Edinburgh, in 1754 minister of Lady Yester's, and in 1758 joint minister of the High Church (now styled St. Giles's Cathedral). In 1762, while still retaining his pastoral charge, he was appointed the first Professor of Rhetoric in the University of Edinburgh—a chair founded for him. He received the degree of D.D. from the University of St. Andrews, in 1757. He d. in Edinburgh, Dec. 27, 1800.

In 1744 Dr. Blair was appointed a member of the Committee of Assembly which compiled the Tar and Port of 1745, and in 1747 of that which revised and enlarged them. To him are ascribed the Rev. W. Thomson and the Rev. Dr. Hen Scott (Scottish Hymnody, Appendix) Nos. 4, 33, 34, 44, of the 1741 collection. He is also credited with the alterations made on Par-

Blair, Robert. [Blair, Hugh.] Blair, William, b. at Clunie, Kinglassie, Fife, Jan. 13, 1830, and educated at Patshall School and St. Andrew's University, where he graduated M.A. in 1856, B.D. in 1879. In 1856 he was ordained at Dunblane, as the United Presbyterian Minister in that town. Dr. Blair has published several prose works, including Chronological Collections of Aberthorm, and Selections from the Memoirs and Notes of Mr. Leighton with Memoirs and Notes on the life and times of Mr. Leighton. His hymn, "O! Saviour, Shepherd bring us home," and the accompanying tune, "Eton," were contributed to the Scottish Presbyterian Hymnal for the Young, 1882. He is also the author of several New Year's hymns.

BLETSFORD, Ambrose Nichols, b. at Plymouth, 1842, and educated for the Unitarian Ministry at Manchester New College, London. He also graduated at the London University as B.A. In 1866, he became junior colleague to the late Rev. William James, Minister of Lewin's Mead Meeting, Bristol, and on the death of Mr. James, in 1870, the sole pastor. Mr. Bletsford's hymns were written for the 8th Annual Meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, on the dates and melodies. They were first printed as fly-leaf phrases and in the Practic, 1876, 1877.

BLESS GOD, MY SOUL

1534, he received his help and countenance till 1538, when the growing opposition of the Lutheran party led him to withdraw from Wurttemberg. He returned to Constantz, where he remained till 1548, when he was called to Giessenberg, in Thuringia, and in the end of 1549, to Winterthur. He became pastor at Biel, in the Jura, 1531, but returned to Winterthur, 1539, and there, Dec. 6, 1544 (Koch, ii. 62-75; Altes Deutsche Bibl., ii. 691-693). Koch characterizes him as the most important of the hymn-writers of the Reformed Church at the time of the Reformation. Some thirty in all of his hymns are preserved in ms. at Zürich and Winterthur. The only one translated into English is:

Wie's Gott gefällt, so günstig mir auch. [Tract in God: Wacker and Wacker, ill. p. 26, quotes it in its actual context from the 14th century. It is probably the best of all German hymns.]

BLEAK WINTER IS SUBDUE AT LENGTH.

J. N. E. [Spring.] 1st pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 89, in 9 st. of 4 l. In its full form it is not in C. U., but an altered version of st. ii. v. and ix. is given as:

Bleibt bei dem, der eure Willen.

C. J. P. Spitta. [Following Christ.] Founded on 1 John, ii., 28, and 1st pub. in the 1st Series, 1833, of his Psalter and Hymn, p. 113, in 4 st. of 8 l., entitled "Abide in Jesus." In the Wurttemberg, 1842, No. 382, and other collections. The tr. in C. U. are:

1. O abide, abide in Jesus. A full and good tr. by R. Massie in his Lyra Dom. 1890, p. 108, and there in the Psalter, 1904; Adam's American Church, 1896, No. 991, and Schofield's Christ in Song, ed. 1879, p. 495. Omitting st. ii. in the Meth. H. Bk., 1883, and J. L. Porter's Colls., 1876, St. ii. v., beginning, "All are dying! hearts are breaking," are included in Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1864, H. and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874; Bap. Psnl. Bk., 1871, and others.

2. O abide in Him, Who for us. A full tr. by J. D. Burns, in his Memoir and Remains, 1869, p. 259; and repeated as No. 747 in Dale's English H. Bk., 1879. Other trs. are:

Bless God, my soul: Thou, Lord.
Bless,_o_My_Soul

Bless, o my soul, the living God. I. Watts. [Ps. ciii.] This version of Ps. ciii. is found in Tate’s Miscellaneous Sacra, 1836, and in the same year in the New Version. Its appearance in the former work determines its authorship as distinct from Brady. [See Eng. Psalms, § xiii. 3.] From its ornate character some have concluded that most, if not all, the renderings in the New Version which partake of that character, are by him. This conclusion is plausible and possible, but by no means certain. It was introduced into use in America early in the present century, and is still given in a few collections.

Blessed, Blessed, Blest. The arbitrary, and, in many instances, unreasonable, way in which the writers of hymnals, both old and new, have changed about these words, without any regard to the form originally used by the author, has rendered it necessary to follow the author’s reading in every instance. When, therefore, a hymn cannot be found in one form, it must be sought for in the other.

Bless’d are the humble souls that see. I. Watts. [The Beatitudes.] This metrical paraphrase of the Beatitudes (St. Matt. v. 3–12) appeared in the enlarged ed. of his Hymns & S. Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 102, in 8 st. of 4 l. It held a prominent position in the older collections, but of late it has fallen very much out of favour. As “Bless’d are,” “Bless’d are,” or “Blest are,” it is still found in a few collections both in G. Britain and America.

Blest are the pure in heart. J. Keble. [Purification.] This poem, in 17 st. of 4 l., is dated “Oct. 10, 1819.” It was 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827. As a whole it is not in C. U. The following centre, some of which are found in numerous collections, have been compiled therefrom:—

1. In J. Bickersteth’s Ps. & Hymns, 1832, No. 449, we have st. 1. and xvi. It was repeated in Ellicott’s Ps. & Hymns, 1835, No. 228, as “Blest are the pure,” &c. Although it has fallen out of use in G. Britain, it is still given in a few American collections, as the Amer. Meth. Episc. Hymns, 1849: The Revang. Hymnal, N. Y., 1866.

2. In his Mitre Hymn, Bk. 1836, W. J. Hall pub. a centre, as No. 240, which was composed of two stanzas from this poem, but few that were new. By whom this centre was arranged, by Hall, or his collaborator, E. Osler, is not known, as the n. was simply J. “Keble.” As this is the most usual r centre, and its whole contents are usually attributed to Keble, we give the full text, with the alterations and additions in the Mitre in Italics:—

1. Blest are the pure in heart, For they shall see their God: The secret of the Lord is theirs: Their soul is Christ’s abode.

The Lord, who left the sky, Our life and peace to bring. And dwelt in lowliness with men. Their pattern, and their King.

2. Still to the lowly soul He doth Himself impart. And for His dwelling, and His throne, Choosest the pure in heart.

Lord, etc., the rest as above.

Bless’d Morning! whose young, dawning rays. I. Watts. [Sunday—Easter.] Appeared in his Hymns, Bk. 1707 (1709, Bk. ii., No. 72), in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled, “The Lord’s Day: or, The Resurrection of Christ.” The arrangements of this hymn in C. U. are:—

1. The original. Very limited.

2. “Blessed morning,” &c., as in Dr. Hatfield’s Amer. Church Hymn Bk., N. Y., 1872, with the alteration in st. 1, 1, 4, of “last abode,” to “dark abode.”

3. “Blest morning,” &c. This opening, sometimes followed by two or three slight alterations and the omission of st. v., is the most popular form of the text both in G. Britain and America.
BLESSED WITH THE

No. 12. This is a very considerable addition.

In addition to these, in 1781, this hymn was added with alterations, as "Hymn IV.

to the Scottish Trans. & Paraphrase. It opens

"Blest morning! Who's first dawning rays."

The author of this recess is unknown.

Bless'd with the presence of their God. T. Cotterill. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in the Uttoxeter vol. 1035, No. 31, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "For the Sacrament."

It was repeated in Cotterill's vol. 1810, No. 43, and continued in subsequent editions till the 9th, 1829, when it was omitted. St. iv.

"The vine, the lost, He calls to them." is st. iii. of W. Cowper's hymn: "This is the feast of heavenly wine," from the Hymn of the 1779. Bk. ii. No. 55. The use of this hymn is not extensive, although found in a few modern collections. It is curious that Cotterill gives it as "Bless'd with," &c., in his index, but as "Bless'd within," &c., in the body of the book.

A common beginning, "In memory of the Saviour's love," appeared in R. Whittingham's Coll. 1st ed., Poets, 1835; from thence it passed into Lord Selborne's Bk. of Prayer, 1832.

Stevenson's Hymns for Ch. & Home, 1875, and others. It is composed of st. iii., vi., and vi. of the above very slightly altered.

Blessed are the sons of God. J. Humphreys. [Christian Privileges.] This is the first of six hymns added by J. Cennick to Pt. ii. of his Sacred Hymns for the Use of Religious Societies, Bristol, F. Parley, 1743, No. 72, p. 55. It is in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The Privilidges of God's Children."

Concerning these six hymns J. Cennick says, "These were done by Mr. J. Joseph Humphreys." In Whitefield's Coll. 1733, it was given as "Hymns for Society, and Persons meeting in Christian Fellowship." As shortly after this date it fell out of use in its original form, and the text is somewhat difficult to find, we give the same in full:

"Blessed are the Sons of God.

They are taught with Christ's own Blood,
They are separated from the world,
Life eternal they shall have.

God did love them in his Son,
Long before the World began;
The Son of God the Saviour
When as Jesus they believe.

They are justified by Grace,
They enjoy a solid Peace:
All their sins are washed away,
They shall stand in God's great Day.

They produce the Fruits of Grace,
In the Works of Righteousness;
They are humble, meek, and mild.
Holy, harmless, undefiled.

The Rev. R. Conyers pub. in his Coll.

BLESSED SAVIOUR, WHO

of Ps. & Hymns. 1st ed., 1767, as No. 84.

the above hymn in a new form. Dealing with the hymn as an unbroken poem of 32 lines, we took the first 6 lines, added thereto the last lines of the hymn as altered by Whitefield

("With them," &c.) as a refrain, and constituted them as st. i.; the next 6 lines, with the same refrain as st. ii., and so on to the end, thus producing a hymn of 5 st. of 8 l. Topnady, in his Ps. & Hymns, 1776, No. 116, adopted

Coven's idea of using the last two lines of the hymn as a refrain, by adding them to Humphrey's st. i.-iv., vi., and v., in the order named, and thereby producing a hymn of 6 st. of 6 l. It is to this arrangement of the text that most modern editors both in Great Britain and America are indebted for their centers.

Portions of the hymn in centers of varying lengths, are in extensive use.

[J. B.]

Blessed are they whose hearts are pure. H. Alford. [St. Bartholomew.] In Alford's Poems, 1842, this hymn is dated 1844.

It is not in his Ps. & Hymns of that year. It is found in T. M. Fallow's Sel., 1847. In 1852, it was repeated in The English Hymnal, in 1867 in Alford's Year of Praise, and again in other collections. In the Cooke and Denton

Hymnal, 1853, it appears in the Index as

"Blessed," &c.; but in the body of the book,

No. 175, it begins, "How blessed are they," &c.

In some hymnals, both in Great Britain and America, it is attributed to "J. Conder."

[W. T. B.]

Blessed be Thy Name. J. Montgomery.

[Journeying.] In the "m. mes," this hymn is dated "January 13th, 1836," and is there stated to have been sent in ms. to several persons at different dates. In 1836 it was given as "Hymns for Society, and Persons meeting in Christian Fellowship." As shortly after this date it fell out of use in its original form, and the text is somewhat difficult to find, we give the same in full:

"Blessed be Thy Name.

H. Bonar. [Christmas.] Pub. in his Hymns of Faith & Hope, 1st series, 1857, in 34 st. of 3 l., and headed, "The Shepherds's Plain." In the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, two stanzas are given from this poem, (1) "Bless'd night, when first that plain," and (2) "Mighty King of Righteousness." When Mrs. Brock's Children's Hymns, 1854, No. 72, a stanza is given as "Bless'd night, when Bethlehem's plain," with "Alleluia" as a refrain. No. 73, in the same Coll., and in the same metre, "Hark, what music fills the sky," is attributed to Dr. Bonar in error. It forms a good companion hymn to "Bless'd night, when first that plain."

Blessed Redeemer, how divine. J. Watts. [Divine Equity.] A hymn on his sermon on 8 Matt. vii. 12. It was pub. in an ed. after 1723, of his Sermons on Various Subjects, &c., 1721-3, in 6 st. of 3 l., and headed, "The Universal law of Equity." In the older collections it is frequently found, especially in the American, but in modern hymn-books it is seldom given, and then in an altered and abridged form.

Blessed Saviour, who hast taught us. J. M. Neale. [Confirmation.] Appeared in his Hymns for the Young, 1842 (new ed. 1864), in 8 st. of 8 l. In this form it is BLEST IS THE MAN

Blest day of God, most calm, most bright. J. Mason. [Sunday.] 1st pub. in his Songs of Praise, 1833, as the second of two hymns entitled "A Song of Praise for the Lord's Day," in 6 st. of 8 l. Early in the present century centes from this "Song" of various lengths began to be introduced into the hymn-books of the Church of England, and later, into Nonconformists' hymnals also; but in scarcely a single instance do we find the same arrangement in any three collections. In modern hymn-books both in G. Britain and America, the same diversity prevails, no editor having yet succeeded in compiling a cento which others could approve and adopt. No collection can be trusted either for text or original sequence of lines. The full orig. text, however, is easily attainable in Sedgwick's reprint of the S. of Praise, 1859. The opening line sometimes reads:—"Blest day of God, how calm, how bright," as in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, No. 40, but the use of this form of the text is limited. Taking the centos together, their use is extensive. [J. J.]

Blest hour when mortal man retires. T. Raffles. [Hour of Prayer.] Printed in the Anamlet for 1829, pp. 304-5, in 6 st. of 4 l. One of the first to adapt it to congregational use was the Rev. J. Bickersteth, who included 4 stanzas in his Ps. and Hys., 1832, as No. 242. Its modern use in any form in G. Britain is almost unknown, but in America it is one of the most popular of Dr. Raffles's hymns, and is given in many of the leading collections. The full text is No. 883 in Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872. Dr. Hatfield dates the hymn 1828, probably because contributions to the Anamlet of 1829 would be sent to the editor in 1828.

Blest is the faith, divine and strong. F. W. Faber. [The Christian Life.] Appeared in his Oratory Hymns, 1854, in 6 st. of 4 l., and the chorus, "O Son's songs are sweet to sing." In the 1855 ed. of the Cooke & Denton Hymnal, it was given with alterations to adapt it for use in the Church of England. In this form it is in a limited number of collections, the original being retained in the Roman Catholic hymnals.

Blest is the man, for ever blessed. J. Watts. [Ps. xxxii.] His l. m. rendering of Ps. xxxii., pub. in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, in 4 st. of 4 l. Dr. Watts's note there-Blest is the man, supremely blest.
C. Wesley. [Ps. xcv.] 1st pub. in the Westley Psalms & Hymns, 1743, as a version of Ps. xxiv. in 9 st. of 4 l. In 1875 it was rearranged and included in the revised ed. of the West. Bk. as hymn 561 in two parts, Pt. ii. being, "Thou art my hiding place, In Blest is the man who feels. W. H. Bathurst. [Ps. cxxvii.] Appears in his Ps. and Hymns, 1831, in 4 st. of 4 l., and begins with the 12th verse of the Psalm. By whom the effort was made to add thereto the former part of the Psalm, we cannot say; but the result is the following paraphrase:—"O Lord, with vengeance, &c." found in the West. Bk., 1875, No. 602, in which st. i. is almost entirely new, and the rest is from this hymn.

Blest is the man whose bowels move. J. Watts. [Ps. zt.] This L. M. version of Ps. xliii., st. 1-3, which was pub. in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, in 4 st. of 4 l., appears in some collections as "Blest is the man whose bowels move;" and in others, the object being to get rid of the, complaint of objectionable expression in the first line.
These changes are adopted both in G. Britain and in America.

Blest is the man whose heart expands. J. Strahan. [For Sunday School.]
6 st. of 4 l. The form in which it usually appears in Stanzas was included by Cotterill to be sung "At a Sermon for Charity Schools.
A centre from this Hymn, "Blest work, the wise, the, and in," is composed of st. v., found in this form in A. 1831, No. 21, and has been repeated in later collections. A st. iii., as "Blest is the work in wisdom's varying form," has also come into use. In these extensive circulation.

Blest Jesus, Source of grace divine.
P. Doddridge. [The Water of Life.] This hymn is No. 88 in the p. ms., where it is un-humorous Hymns, 1758, No. 221, is given from the same. It is also in J. D. Hymns, the popular form is that given to it early in the century in some American Unitarian collections:—"Blest Spirit, Source of grace divine." In this form it is in the Unitarian Hymn, (and T.) Bk., Boston, 1868, and other hymnals.

Blest Saviour, when the fearfull storms. (Lent.) This appeared under the signature of "M. H. W.," in Emma Parris' Thohts of Peace, Lond., 1839, in 3 st. of 8 l. In 1868 it was included in Kennedy, as No. 427, in the slightly altered form of "O Saviour, when the fearfull storms."

Blest season when our risen Lord.
[Whitsunday.] This hymn is No. 93 of J. H.
Stewart's Sel. of Ps. & Hys, for the Use of Percy Chapel, Lond., 1818, in 5 st. of 4 l., where it is appointed for Monday in Whitsun week.
In common with all the hymns in the collection it is unsigned. In 1829 Josiah Pratt included
st. i, ii, and iv., with slight alterations, in his Ps. and Hys, No. 66. This was repeated in some American collections, and is known in modern hymnals as "Blest day when our ascended Lord," as in the Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865, No. 412. [W. T. B.]

Blest truth, my soul and Christ are one. J. Irons. [Final Perseverance.] 1st pub. in the 3rd ed. of his Zion's Hymns, 1825,
p. 173, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the later editions of that work he altered the opening line to:—
"Blest truth, the Church and Christ are one." In this form, with slight alterations, it is given in Snapp's S. of G. & G., 1872, No.
419, and one or two collections besides.

Blest voice of love! O Word Divine.
W. J. Irons. [Confirmation.] Written at Brompton on the occasion of the confirmation of one of the writer's children, and pub. in Hymns for the Christian Seasons, Gainsburgh, 1st ed., 1854, No. 184, in 4 st. of 4 l. In 1861 it was also given in Dr. Irons's App.
to the Brompton Metrical Psalter; his Hymns, 1866; and in a revised form in his Ps. & Hys.
1873. In Thing's Coll., 1882, the revised text of 1873 is adopted.

Blew, William John, m.a., of William Blew, b. April 13, 1808, and educated at Ealing School, and Wadham Coll., Oxford, where he graduated B.A. in 1830, and M.A.
1832. On taking Holy Orders, Mr.
Blew was Curate of Nuthurst and Cogging, and St. Anne's, Westminster, and for a time Incumbent of St. John's next Gravesend.
Besides trs. from Homer (Hymn. libs. i., ii., A.) and Aschylus (Agamemnon the King), and works on the Book of Common Prayer, inccluding a paraphrase on a tr. of the same in Latin, he edited the Breviarium Anglicanum, 1854; and pub. a pamphlet on Hymns and Hymn Books, 1858; and (with Dr. H. G. Grantley) The Church Hymn and Tune Book, 1852, 2nd ed., 1855. The hymns in this last work are chiefly translations by Mr. Blew of Latin hymns. They were written from 1843 to 1852, and printed on fly-sheets for the use of his congregation. Many of these trs. have come into C. U. The following original hymns were also contributed by him to the same work:—
2. God's ark is in the field. Evening. The second stanza of this hymn is from By Comin's Hours, as the Coll. of Private Devotions, 1827.
3. Hark, through the dewy morning. Morning.
5. O Lord, Thy wing outspread Whitsunside.
Ye crowned kings, approach ye. Epiphany. This is written to the tune, "Adventus Dei," and might easily be mistaken as a free tr. of the "Advent." Mr. Blew has also translated The Altar Service of the Church of England, in the year 1548, into English. His trs. are terse, vigorous, musical, and of great merit. They have been strangely overlooked by the compilers of recent hymn-books.

Blick aus diesem Erdenthale. Albert Knapp. [Ascension.] Written 1851, and included in his Hymnblüthen, Stuttgart, 1859, p. 132, in 8 st. of 8 l., repeated in his Ev. L. S., 1865, No. 657. It has been tr. as:

Bless, Philip, b. at Clearfield County, Pennsylvania, July 9, 1838. In 1864 he went to Chicago in the employ of Dr. George F. Root, the musician, where he was engaged in conducting musical institutes, and in composing Sunday School melodies. Originally a Methodist, he became, about 1871, a chairman of the First Congregational Church, Chicago, and the Superintendent of its Sunday Schools. In 1874 he joined Major Bliss in evangelical work. To this cause he gave (although a poor man) the royalty of his Gospel Songs, which was worth some thirty thousand dollars. His death was sudden. It occurred in the railway disaster at Ashtabula, Ohio, Dec. 30, 1876. He had escaped from the car, but lost his life in trying to save his wife. His hymns are numerous. Some of his verses have obtained wide popularity in most English-speaking countries. The more widely known, and specially those which are found in collections in use in G. Britain, are in the following American works:

i. The Prize, 1870.
1. I should like to die. Death anticipated. This is one of his earliest compositions, and is unworthy of the position it holds.
2. Through the valley of the shadow I must go. Death anticipated.
3. Whosever heareth, about, about the sound. Jesus the Way. Written during the winter of 1869-70 after hearing Mr. H. Moorbew (from England) preach on St. John iii. 16.

ii. The Charm, 1871.
4. Almost persuaded now to believe. Preconization. This was suggested by the following passage in a sermon by the Rev. Mr. Brantago. Bliss being present at its delivery — "He who is almost persuaded is almost saved, but to be almost saved is to be entirely lost."
5. He! my comrades! see the signal. Praise and Faith.
7. On what Foundation do (or) you build? Christ the Foundation.

iii. The Song Tree, 1872.
8. Light in the darkness, sailor, day is at hand. Safety. This hymn, "The Life-Boat," has attained to great popularity. The incident upon which it is based, that of the rescue of a ship's crew by a life-boat, is given in detail by Mr. Sankey in his Sacred Songs, &c., No. 29 (large ed.). It is sometimes known by its refrain, "Pull for the shore," &c.

iv. The Joy, 1873.
9. In me ye may have peace. Peace.
10. To die is gain. Death anticipated.

BYISS, PHILIP

v. Sunshine, 1873.
12. More holiness give me. For Holiness.
15. This loving Saviour stands patiently. Invitation.

vi. Gospel Songs, 1874.
17. Brightly beam our Father's mercy. Mercy.
18. Come, brethren, as we march along. Praise.
20. Have you on the Lord believed! Fulness of Grace. This hymn arose out of the following circumstances. "A vast fortune was left in the hands of a minor for one of his poor parishioners. Fearing that it might be squandered if suddenly bestowed upon him, the wise minor sent him a little at a time, with a note saying, 'This is thine; use it wisely; there is more to follow.' Hence also the refrain 'More to follow,' by which the hymn is known."
23. See the gentle Shepherd standing. The Good Shepherd.
24. Though the way be sometimes dreary. Divine Leading.
25. Will you meet me at the fountain? Fountain of Living Water. The incident out of which this hymn arose is thus stated in The Christian, No. 365. "At the Industrial Exposition at Chicago it was an everyday appointment to meet at the Central Fountain. Mr. F. Bliss, whose mind seemed always set on things above, caught up the words, and wrote this hymn, 'Meet me at the Fountain.'"

26. One offer of salvation. The Name of Jesus.
27. Wandering afar from the dwellings of men. The Leper.

viii. The International Lessons Monthly, 1875.
29. The whole world was lost in the darkness of Sin. Light of the world.

ix. Gospel Hymns, No. 2, 1876.
32. At the feet of Jesus. The Good Shepherd.
34. Cut it down, cut it down. Justice and Mercy.
35. Do you see the Hebrew captive? Prayer.
36. Hallelujah, He is risen. Easter. Written in the spring of 1870 and first sung by Bliss on Easter afternoon, 1870, in the Court House square, Augusta, Georgia, to 5000 people.
37. In Zion's rock abiding. Safety.
38. Repeat the story o'er and o'er. Grace and Peace.

x. Gospel Hymns, No. 3, 1878.
40. Hear ye the glad good news from heaven. Faith and Salvation.
41. I will sing of my Redeemer. Praise.

xi. Gospel Hymns, No. 4, 1881.
42. 'Tis known on earth and heaven too. More about Jesus.

xii. Various.
43. Sing over again to me. Words of Life. This appeared in a paper entitled Words of Life, 1874. The following are updated:
44. March to the battlefield. Glory and Victory
45. There is sin in the camp. Hindrances.
46. 'Tis the promise of God. Praise.

BLOMFIELD, C. J.

Burth

47. While the silvery moon-beams fall. New

48. God is always near me. (Improvisation.)

Two hymns, "I am so glad that our Father in heaven," and "Now the seed by the daylight (dawnlight) fair," are given as "Now the seed by the morning songs, Cincinnati, 1874," however, he has claimed the music only. Mr. Sankey was attached to this last to "E. A. Bliss."

With the exception of No. 44, these hymns are usually attributed to Mr. Bliss. In his songs, Cincinnati, 1874, however, he has claimed the music only. Many anecdotes concerning hymns of this class are given in American Evangelists, an Account of Their Work in England and America, by W. E. Hanley, Boston, Mass., 1871.

Mr. Bliss is usually known as "P. P. Bliss." This is found on the title-pages of his collections. On his own authority, however, we are enabled to say that his name originally stood thus: "Philiipp Bliss." Early in life he separated the initial P from his Christian name, and in 1860, he produced "P. P. Bliss." (For this article we are mainly indebted to Professor F. M. Bird, and Mr. H. P. Main.)

BLOMFIELD, Charles James, D.D., was born on Bury St. Edmunds, 1836, and graduated at Trinity College, Cambridge. On taking his B.A. degree in 1851, he held positions of importance in the Church, including the Rector of St. Hilary, B�ckgate, London; the Rev. Mr. Bate, B.A. 1828; and the Bishop of London, 1828. He died in 1857. It was under his patronage that Hall pub. his Mitre H. Bk., in 1836, and in it he contributed two hymns for school anniversarys:

1. In hymns of joy, your voices raise;
2. O Thou, who from the infant's tongue.

These hymns are unknown to modern collections. [P.M.S.]

Blow ye the trumpet, blow. C. Wesley. [Year of Jubilee, or the New Year.]

This is No. III. of his seven Hymns for New Year's Day, 1750, in 6 st. of 6. It is based on Ps. 52:12.

In 1772, and again in 1774, his Coll. This arrangement, however, gave rise to a controversy between Mr. A. M. Toplady, who wrote the Psalms, and Mr. J. B. Colton. Toplady wrote the Psalms, and Colton added the hymns. The alteration was introduced in st. 9.

Excelsior, the Lamb of God.

This was changed to:

The sin-a-toning Lamb.

The heated controversy between the Wesleyans and Toplady on the questions of Arminianism and Calvinism gave rise to this change. From Toplady's Psalms, the text and arrangement of hymns acquired universal reputation as his composition, and other compilers until the hymn was altered in 1839. In 1850, it was associated with the Collected Hymns, and the error of authorship was rectified. In the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1873, two of the alterations are repeated: st. iv., 1, 3, & st. 5, "Receivew and for "Shall have it," etc. In varying stanzas, sometimes, as in Toplady, then as in the Wes. H. Bk., and again in some other shape, this hymn is in very extensive use in all English-speaking countries.Orig. text in P. Works, 1806-12, vol.vi.p.12. [J.J.]

Blunt, Abel Gerald Wilson, M.A., some time Travelling Fellow of Cambridge University, was born at 1827, and graduated at Pembroke College, Cambridge, b. 1850.

Taking Holy Orders in 1851, he was from 1856 to 1860 vicar of Great Green, Cheshire. In 1860 he was preferred to the Rectory of St. Luke's, Chelsea. Mr. Blunt's hymns, written for festival occasions at St. Luke's, are:-

1. Evening comes, may we, O Lord, be singing;
2. From meadows bright with blossoms. Flower Services. This is dated June, 1852.
3. Here, Lord, we offer Thee all that is fairest. Flower Services. This is the best known and most popular of Mr. Blunt's hymns. From its composition in 1779, when it was first sung at the Flower Service at St. Luke's, it has attracted attention until it is deemed essential to the completeness of most of the Flower Services of importance.
4. Here, on this our festival day. St. Luke's. Written in 1852 for St. Luke's, Chelsea. All these hymns are printed in a small supplement in use at St. Luke's.

BOARDMAN, Sarah B. [Judea, S. A.]

Bode, John Ernest, M.A., b. of Mr. William Boich, late of the General Post Office, b. 1816, and educated at Eton, the Charter House, and at Christ Church, Oxford, graduating B.A. 1837, and M.A. in due course. Taking Holy Orders in 1841, he became Vicar of Westwell, Buckinghamshire, 1847; and then of Castle Camps, Buckinghamshire, 1860. He was also a time Tutor of his College, and Classical Examiner. His Hampton Lectures were delivered in 1855. He d. at Castle Camps, Oct. 6, 1874. In addition to his Hampton Lectures, and Ballads from Herodias, he pub. Hymns from the Gospel of the Day for Sunday and Festivals of our Lord, 1860; and Short Occasional Poems, Lond., Longmans, 1858. In addition to his best-known hymn, "0 Jesus, I have promised," the following from his Hymns from the Gospel are also in C. U.:-

Boden, James, was b. April 13, 1757, at the house at Chester long occupied by Matthew Henry, and educated for the Congregational Ministry at Homerton College. In 1784 he became the pastor of the Independent Chapel, Hanley; and in 1792, of the Queen's Street Chapel, Sheffield. This last charge he held for nearly 43 years. He died at Chesterfield, June 4, 1811. In 1801 he assisted Dr. Williams, of the Masborough Theological College, near Sheffield, in compiling A Coll. of above Six Hundred Hymns designed for a New Supp. to Dr. Watts's Ps. & Hymns, &c., Dighton, 1801. This collection is known as Williams and Boden, and to it is traced the anonymous modern version of "Jerusalem, my happy home" (q.v.). To this collection Boden contributed, under the signature "Boden," the following hymns:-

2. Come, all ye saints of God. Missions.
3. Come, death, released from dread death.
4. Our great High Priest we sing:
   O Christ the R. Priest.
5. Shall sin, that cruel foe?
   Or Lord.
6. Triumphant sung ye favoured (fascinated) saints Jesus, all in all.
7. We come, dear Jesus, to Thy throne. Prayer Meeting.

Of these hymns, No. 1 appeared in the Evangelical Mag. Aug., 1788. Most of them are still in C. U., but chiefly in America. They are of no special merit.

In the Gospel Mag., 1774, there are a few hymns under the signature "J—s B—n, Chester." Of these, one only (c), "Ye dying sons of men" (transcription), was given in the Williams and Boden Bull., and then, not with the full signature of "Boden," but as by "B—n." On this evidence mainly the hymn has been ascribed to James Boden. It appeared in the Gospel Mag. again in 1774, in Feb. and Aug. It may be by our author, but seeing that it is one of the eight hymns already noted to be signed "B—n," and was given in the Gospel Mag. in 1774, and that the rest are signed "Boden," and did not appear in the Gospel Mag. in 1774 or in any other year, we regard the evidence as somewhat inconclusive. It has been suggested that possibly the "J—s B—n, Chester," was his father. The signatures appended to the hymn in the 1st ed. of Williams and Boden, 1861, were omitted from the 2nd ed., 1864, and portions of the Preface were rewritten. [J. J.]

On taking Holy Orders he was successively Curate of St. James's, Wimbledon, 1863-5; Sedgley, 1865-67; Curate in charge of Christ Church, Woolverhampton, 1867-70; Rector of Kirkby-Misperton, 1879-81; and Canon of Durham, and Missioner of the Diocese, 1883. He was also Proctor for the Archdeaconry of the North, 1880-83; and received an Hon. D.D. from Durham University in 1885. His publications include Life of Justification; Life of Temptation, &c. In 1874 he revised and added a Preface to the Rev. E. Husband's Mission Hymnal; and in 1885 he did the same for The Durham Mission H. Bk. In these Hymnals appeared his:

2. Jesus, speak to me in love. Prayer for Peace.

Bodogzky, Carl Heinrich von. He was b. Sept. 7, 1848, on his father's estate of Jankowa, near Miilisch, in Silesia. His father, J. A. X. Bodogzky, was descended from a noble Hungarian family, and entering the Austrian service attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. Bodogzky's early education was picked up at various places as family arrangements permitted. He was for some time at the Dural Court of Weissenfeltz. From Weissenfeltz he removed him to Breslau, to prepare for entering the army. During a long illness at Breslau he became convinced that God had either work for him to do. Receiving an offer of assistance from Count Heinrich Xxiv., of Reuse-Koztriz, towards the expenses of an University course, he entered the University of Jena in 1719; but removed at Easter, 1719, to the University of Halle, still as a student of law. Before Christmas he received notice that his mother had died in Silesia, and that he must return. During the week that elapsed before setting out, while attending divine service, he received a divine vocation that he regarded as his first true views of Justification by Faith. Instructed by his father for objecting to enter the army, he returned from Silesia to Halle and enrolled himself, at Easter, 1719, as a student of theology. At Halle he began for his own edification his best known work, The Golden Treasury, 1st pub. at Breslau in 1718. During 1718 his health failed, and his voice became so seriously affected that he was unable to take on clerical charge. From thenceforth he devoted himself to religious authorship, and speaking in private gatherings. He left Silesia in 1746.

For five years resided at Saulfeld, where he wrote many works, including that on True Conversion, 1741. In 1746 he removed to Halle, where G. A. Francke gave him a free room in the orphanage. The rest of his life was spent mainly in that town. The most important of his publications at this time was his Meditations and Prayers on the New Testament, 7 vols., 1755-61. He d. at Halle, June 15, 1774. (Koeh, iv. 468-478; Alte, Deutsche Bisog., int. 37-39; Autobiography tr. by Samuel Jackson, Lond., 1856—the second dating his death, possibly through a misprint, as at Glauchau, near Halle, 1751).

Bodogzky seems to have begun hymn-writing about 1718, and in all composed 411 hymns, some of which appeared in part, in his devotional works. In the German Lieder, 1735-36, 6 in the Wurtemberger G. B., 1738, and in a collected form at Halle, 1740, as Das Leben der Gotteslosigkeit in allerley Geistlichen Liedern, with 362 hymns (2nd ed. Halle, 1755, with 364; 3rd ed., 1771, with 411, reprinted unaltered at Berlin, 1844). With this the Dowager Queen of Denmark was so much pleased that, as the 1st ed. was in very small type, she offered to contribute to a larger type, and that was issued in 1746 (with 376 hymns), bought 300 copies, all of which she distributed.

His hymns have little poetic fire or glow of imagination; but in his better productions there is a highating zeal, warmth of religious feeling, and simplicity of religious faith, linking him rather with the earlier Halle school, than with the spiritual sensationalism of some of his fellow-contributors to the Ostmark Lieder.

(I) The hymns by him in English C. U. are:
1. Wauch auf den Geist der ersten Zeugen. [Mission.] 1st pub. 1759, as above, No. 133, in 14 st. of 6 l., entitled, "For faithful labourers in the Harvest of the Lord, for the blessed spread of the Word to all the world." Included in the Berlin G. L. K., ed. 1863, No. 1383. Tr. as — ordained the three originally chosen (Matthias, Thomas, and Elias) to the priesthood, and then consecrated them bishops. Shortly after, he laid down, not only his episcopal but also his Roman priesthood, and was never again ordained to the priesthood by one of the three new bishops whom he himself had consecrated. In this particular manner, so far as we can trace the history of the church, the first consecration of bishops among the Brethren was effected.

4. The first tendency of the Brethren was plainly antagonistic to the cause of this word. Their refusal to leave the church, and to join the military service; their contempt of learning, their refusal to permit their members to hold any office in the State; and other peculiarities, were detested from Peter Chelicky, who thought to renew the world and human society by a strict observance of Christ's command to love one another, and manifestly to attempt to get rid of all other commands and ordinances in the political and social life of men would cease spontaneously if that one command were but followed by all.

5. When, however, the members who joined the Unit without any acquaintance with Peter's first principles began to increase, when the Brethren perceived the need of learning to defend their conviction, they were less subject to the old strict antagonism to the world displayed by Peter, rapidly augmented, and at the end of about twenty years there was a considerable number who might have been named the "Liberal" of the Unit. The principal leaders of this party were Lucas (naming "Progressor") and Lawrence Krasinsky his friend, two men as learned as Plato. The old strict party resisted all the proposed changes, and for a time prevailed, but at the synod of 1494 the liberal party obtained the victory; and the "small party" or Amosites (after their leader Amos) were now being disposed to submit, separated themselves from the Unit. Some efforts made to put an end to this schism failed, and the Amosites lingered on as a small sect for about fifty or sixty years.

6. If the Amosites claimed to be the true Unit, they were right so far as they retained the ideas of Peter Chelicky. The new Unit, under Lucas, in the synod of 1495, resolved that the writings of Chelicky, Gregor, and other founders of the Unit should be received only so far as they were found to agree with the Bible, thus warranting the possibility of progress in doctrine and practice.

The first period of the Brethren's history is clearly distinguished from the second. The Unit under Lucas, by opinions, decisions, and even by terms and expressions, Lucas has every right to be named the "second founder" of the Unit. Their liberal ideas of fundamental admission to the Unit its numbers increased to such a degree that about the year 1500 it consisted of three to four hundred congregations, and there was hardly a town or village in Bohemia or Moravia where some of its members were not to be found.

2. From 1447 (II 3) to 1500 there had been three bishops, and one of these, Matthias, had held the most commanding position, but without responsibility. On the death of Matthias in 1500, the highest position was given to a Select Council, the members of which were chosen by the synod, for life, and the four new bishops who supervised them were chosen in accordance with the decrees of the Lord's Supper. Lucas published the first hymn-book of the Brethren (I 1); he made a catechism or "interrogations" for teaching the children; and a volume of simple instructions for the priests. He also reorganised the Church services, varying and enriching them. The Unit flourished under Lucas, and gained the summit of its independence. But in the beginning of the sixteenth century, the Brethren suffered, not only from the aggression of Dominican preachers, but also from cruel and bloody persecutions, which they inherited from the synod of 1493, when King Vladislav issued a mandate strictly forbidding any Brethren's services to be held in Bohemia.

3. Lucas was already beginning to fear for the internal independence and continued existence of the Unit, when Luther appeared in Germany. Lucas soon obtained friends and followers amongst the members of the Unit, but Lucas was not one of those. Recognising Luther's doctrine of Free Grace and of Christian Liberty, he reproached Luther with want of moral strictness, and with accommodation to many Roman Catholic dogmas. In the year 1523 he published an answer to Luther's Von Anbetung des Sakraments des heiligen Leibesmaus Jesu Christi. In this he gave Luther clearly to understand that he did not wish to make any previous relations with him, on the ground that he himself held the Brethren to be nearer the truth. But many of the Unit were, and those the best and most important, dissatisfied from the policy of Lucas; and these gained and exerted a great influence upon the whole Unity after his death.

4. Third Period of the Unity. — 1. After the death of Lucas, in 1528, we see the beginning of a third period in the Brethren's history, in which the Unit sometimes gives itself up to strange influences, sometimes resists and refuses them, but more and more of its doctrines and existence. About the same time, a heavy blow was struck at the external existence of the Unit.

2. At first, until 1544, the new tendency prevailed in the Unit, which (represented by John Horn, and, more especially, by John Austiga, the most important new members of the Select Council), aimed at giving publicity to the Brethren, and at forming alliances with the German Reformers. The connection with the Luther, which had been broken off by Lucas, was renewed; and new connections were formed with Calvin and the Reformers of Strassburg. At the same time several Bohemian lords and noblemen (who until then had been the only Brethren who resided on their estates, but had never hoped of joining the Unit) applied for admission, after having seen that German Electors and Princes were not unwilling to take Luther's part. In short, the despised and persecuted "sect of shoemakers and weavers" was now esteemed an interesting ancient Evangelical Church, and a body of sufficient political weight to accomplish the attention of all its adversaries.

3. All this was mainly due to John Austiga, in whom a serious and inflexible character was united with far-reaching designs, and an insuperable love of power. But on the other hand, the consequence of this emergency of the Brethren from their religious enemies was such that they became involved in the Bohemian insurrection of 1547; or that it could not be absolutely proved, at any rate their adversaries used this turn of affairs in order to attack the destruction of the Unity. The more, more as, before in 1563, the Brethren were forbidden to conduct any divine service; and the Unit was compelled to dissolve itself. This time the action was more strictly carried out than formerly, because the estates on which the Brethren had their principal settlements (where they lived under the protection of lords who were themselves members of the Unit) were confiscated to the Crown. Austiga himself, after having been incontinent, in the most stormy hour of affairs, went to Austria, on a voyage to England, or to Sweden, where he was treated with favor. During this year the Unit was again split into various branches of the Unit: the Bohemian, which, after the death of Ferdinand I, flourished anew; the Moravian, [see Moravian Church, which since became the principal branch of the Unit; and the Polish.] The remarks which follow deal exclusively with the first three branches of the Unit.

4. While Austiga was kept in his long imprisonment, John Blahoslav stood at the head of the Unit, a master spirit, developed by a many-sided, liberal, and classical education. The splendid large hymn-book published by him, or at his instigation (II 6), and his theoretical works on music, testify to his musical attainments. Through his large collection of documents on the history of the ancient Brethren, and by his own writings on that subject, he became the founder of the Brethren's history, and he wrote a classical prose style, the theory of which he gave in his Bohemian grammar. He proved himself also to have been a strong diplomatic in his negotiations with the Emperors. In their doctrine, the Brethren, under Horn and Austiga, inclined to Luther until about 1546; under Blahoslav, who himself was not an original theologian, they tried to return to Lucas, but in fact they approached to Calvin. In ecclesiastical politics, also, Blahoslav had an object in view different from that of Austiga. Blahoslav, who wished to preserve the independence of the Unit, and doing so of the Grace of Jesus Christ, or Lutherans, in Bohemia:

"This Cancional was printed and finished by Alexander of Ayrred [or of Pilsen], at Samter [Poland], at the castle of his grace Lusac, Count ofickets, Waywode of Lanec, Starost of Bus."

Later editions, differing very little as to the contents, appeared in folio at Eibenschütz, 1561, and Krakitz, 1576 and 1581; and in 4to, at Krakitz in 1585, 1594, 1598.

7. Among the later hymn-books may be mentioned (1) a folio pub. at Krakitz (Moravia) in 1615, which contains 644 hymns besides a metrical psalter, and was probably ed. by the four Seniors whose crests are found on p. 529. Copies of this ed. and of the quartoro reprint of 1618 are to be found in the University Library, Prague. (2) A 12mo, pub. at Amsterdam in 1639, and ed. by J. A. Comenius. This contains, besides a metrical psalter, 480 hymns with an appendix of 25; and is to be found in the Archives at Hermniir.

8. The principal contributors to the hymn-books of 1501 and 1616 are the following:—

(1) Matthäus Konvalinsky [b. 1442 at Kunwald, near Lütz; Bp. of the Unk; d. Jan. 22, 1500, at Letnisko], contributed 6 to the H. Bk. of 1501, and 5 others to the ed. of 1616.

(2) John Taborvsky; or John Vilimek [a Roman Catholic priest; afterwards member of the Select Council; d. May 24, 1505, at Letnisko], contributed 6 (Nos. 6, 7, 1, 16, 26, 45, 51) to the H. Bk. of 1501.

(3) Lucas Pagenius (q.v.) contributed 11 (Nos. 1, 12, 14, 29, 42, 46, 47, 81, 82, 86, 92) to the H. Bk. of 1501; and 15 others to that of 1616. Included are 11 (Nos. 1, 29) from the Latin, and 4 revisions of older Bohemian hymns.

(4) Adam Sturm [from Moravia; ordained priest 1555; d. Oct. 5, 1565] has 26 in the H. Bk. of 1616.

(5) Martin Miclae [b. 1504 at Letnisko; Bp. 1537; d. Jan. 24, 1547, at Poznan] has 31 in the H. Bk. of 1616.

(7) John Faustenik [ord. priest 1529; d. 1543, at Jung Bunzian] has 10 in the 1616 H. Bk.

(8) George Styrsa [of Wildenschwert; manager of the Brethren's printing office at Jung Bunzian, 1520-31] has 9 in the 1616 H. Bk.

(9) Among the other authors whose names appear in the 1616, may be mentioned Wenzel Slik (5 hymns); Nicholas of Tarman (4); Matthäus Kremin (q.v.) (5); George Ocklofsky (3); John Jilecky (q.v.) (3); John Hru (q.v.) (2); Bedegren (1); and John Horn (q.v.) (1) Urban (1). Of the 193 hymns whose authorship is unknown many appear in the Utraquism hymn-books of 1527, 1531, and 1559.

§ ii. The Bohemian Brethren's German Hymnbooks. These are the following:—

1. Ein Neue Gesangbuch maxxxi, et. [Nürnberg]. At the end is, "Printed at Jung Bunzian, in Bohemia, by George Wymwischer in the year 1531. Fini-bet on the 12th day of March." The book is in small quarto; and the printer is George Styrsa of Wildenschwert (see above). The precede, addressed to the German congregations at Landkrone and Pltnk, in Bohemia, is signed "Michael Weise, Ewer Diener." All the hymns (155 in number) according to the precede seem to have been composed or translated by M. Weise himself, and this was evidently the opinion of the editors of the 1639 (see below). Two are indeed in the Anabaptist Aussland of 1634, ascribed to Anabaptists; but on what grounds is not known. Of the 155 hymns, as it will be seen from the table given below, we have only been able to find 12 which are translated from the Bohemian or the Latin. Almost all came more or less into use in the German Lutheran hymn-books of the time.

In the same year, 1531, an edition of this hymn-book is said to have appeared at Ulm, under the title of Picarttscsis Gesang Buch (Picartt or Picardtinn, i.e. an Observation name for the Brethren used by their friends, then by their friends, but never by themselves). Wackernagel, in his Bibliographie, 1555, Nos. 329, 316, 376, 377, 435, quotes reprints at Strassburg, 1534, and at Ulm in 1538, 1539, and 1541.

2. Ein Gesangbuch der Brüder im Bekennd und Werberrn, die man ausz der und geblyt, Pickharden, Widenan, &c. nemmet, etc. (Wernigerode). At the end is, "Printed at Nürnberg by John Horn, 1540." Copies of this ed. and of the quartoro reprint of 1618 are to be found in the University Library, Prague. (2) A 12mo pub. at Amsterdam in 1639, and ed. by J. A. Comenius. This contains, besides a metrical psalter, 480 hymns with an appendix of 25; and is to be found in the Archives at Hermniir.

III. A comparison of the German Hymn-books with the Bohemian.

have been able to find corresponding Bohemian hymns, which having been published in 1531 may have been the originals of Weisse’s hymns. But many of them are adapted from older Latin hymns (usually in such cases being headed by the first lines of the Latin); so it is very difficult, almost impossible, to decide whether Weisse translated from the Latin directly or through the Bohemian; more especially as his trs. are very free.

Böhm, David [Bahme].

Böhm, Martin [Báhme].

Böhm, Just Henning, s. of Valentin Böhm, advocate of Hannover, b. at Hannover, Jan. 29, 1674. After studying Law at the Universities at Jena, Bimbel, and Halle, he graduated at Halle in 1698, and began to lecture in 1699. In 1701 he was appointed Professor extraordinary, in 1702 Doctor, and in 1711 ordinary Professor of Law, at Halle. He subsequently received many honours, being appointed in 1731 Director of the University of Halle, in 1743 Chancellor of the Duchy of Magdeburg, &c., and was reckoned a very high authority especially in ecclesiastical law. While lecturing to his students, Aug. 8, 1749, he suddenly became ill, and after a stroke of illness, d. Aug. 23, 1749. (Koch, iv. 373–375; Allg. Deutsche Biog., iii. 79–81, the latter dating his death Aug. 29.) Of his 21 hymns, 3 appeared in Freylinghausen’s Geistreiches G. B. 1701–5. Two have been tr. into English, viz.:

i. Brich durch mein angefochten Herz. [Passione.] 1st pub. 1704, as above, No. 494, in 14 st. of 5 l., repeated as No. 216 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:

ii. O auferstandener Biegenfürst. [Easter.] 1704, as above, No. 530, in 14 st. of 8 l., included as No. 314 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:

Böhmer, Maria Magdalena, sister of J. H. Böhm (see above), was born at Han- nover, where she died, unmarried, in 1743 or 1744 (Koch, iv. 373; Bode, p. 47). She contributed two hymns (Nos. 655, 660) to Frey- linghausen’s G. B., 1704; while one (No. 430) in his Neues Geistreiches G. B., 1714, and four (Nos. 188, 193, 194, 158) in the Neues Sammlung, Wernigerode, 1752, are also ascribed to her. The only hymn by her tr. into English is—

Ein Christen Herz. [Longing for Heaven.] 1st pub. as No. 655 in Freylinghausen’s G. B., 1704, in 6 st. of 6 l., repeated as No. 701 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. It is tr. as:

Regardless now of things below. A very free tr. by J. Wesley in H. & Sacred Poems, 1740 (P. Works, 1868–72, vol. i., p. 222). Included as No. 6, in the Wesley H. & Spiritual Songs, 1753; in the Supp. of 1830 to the Wes. G. B.; and in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. [J. M.]
In G. Britain and America nearly 100 of Dr. Bonar's hymns are in C. U. They are found in almost all modern hymnals from four in H. A. & M. to more than twenty in the American Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865-72. The most widely known are, "A few more years shall roll;" "Come, Lord, and tarry not;" "Here, O my Lord, I see Thee face to face;" "I heard the Voice of Jesus say;" "The Church has waited long;" and "Thy way, not mine, O Lord."

In addition to these and others which are annotated under their respective first lines, the following are also in C. U.:

i. From Songs for the Wilderness, No. 1, 1843.
1. For Thee we long and pray. Sunday Morning.
3. I thought upon my sins and I was sad. Christ our Prince.
4. Peace to the world, our Lord is come. A Millennial Song.

22. Jesus, while this rough desert soil. Strength by the Way.
27. Rest for the toiling hand. Burial. From 'Lie down, frail body, here.'
28. Shall this life of mine be wasted? Exhortation to Duty.
29. These are the crowns that we shall wear. Heaven.
30. They works, not mine, O Christ [Lord]. The Sinner.
31. Where the faded flower shall freshen. Heaven.

From Hymns of Faith and Hope, 2nd series, 1864.
33. Christ has done the mighty work. Good Friday.
35. Deep as the grave beneath the resting surge. Burial at Sea.
36. Fear not the foe, thou flock of God [thou little flock]. Battle Song of the Church.
37. For lack of love I languish. Lament.
38. From this bleak hill of storms. Eternal Rest desired.
40. Here shall death's triumph end: the rock-barred door. Rest. From "The tomb is empty: wouldst thou have it fall?"
BONAVENTURA

Bonaventura, Saint and Cardinal, commonly called “Doctor Seraphicus,” was born in Pavia, and was a pupil of the famous Maestri, and a fellow-student of St. Francis. He was ordained a priest in the year 1221, and was appointed to the office of Master of the Order of St. Francis, and was canonized by Pope Urban IV. in 1261. He was a great scholar, and was the author of many works, including the “Contra Gentiles,” “Contra Aristotelis,” and “Contra Gentiles.” He was also the author of the “Sentences of Peter Lombard,” and was the first to systematize the philosophy of St. Thomas Aquinas. He was appointed to the See of Bologna in 1254, and was consecrated Bishop of Bologna in 1255. He was a great preacher, and was much loved by his people. He died in Bologna on the 17th of November, 1274, and was buried in the Church of St. Stephen, Bologna.
BONN, ALESSIE

Bond, Alessie. [Fausett, A.]

BONN, Hermann Gude, Counsellor a.p. Quakenbrück, 1494; died at Wittenberg in 1528, and was for some years Rector of the newly founded St. Mary’s School, in Lübeck; and in 1548 he was appointed Rector of the newly founded St. Mary’s School, Lübeck. In 1548 he proceeded thither, and in the course of that year he was sent to the Reformer, D. at Lübeck, Feb. 12, 1548 (Koch, i. 428-436; Allg. Deutsche Biog., iii. 133).

As a hymn-writer his alt works consisted mainly of verse hymns, and in 1503 he published a collection of 200 tunes. Of these, 145 are in High German, and 55 are in Low German. His hymn appeared as Ein liebes gebot. The only one of these works translated into English is:

0 wie wendt besser (Faith & Redemption). First published in 1624, and included in the English version of the German Hymnals. It is included in the Magdeburg. 6th ed. 1642. The

BOSCHENSTEIN, JOHANN 163

Bornschürer, Johannes, b. Nov. 3, 1625, at Schmalkalden. After studying at the Universities of Marburg, Jena, Erfurt, and Straßburg he became, in 1650, pastor at Brotterode in Hesse Cassel, 1657 at Steinbach-Hallenberg, 1661 diaconus at Schmalkalden, and in 1670 decan in the town of Tann, where he d. Dec. 5, 1677 (Koch, iii. 430; Allg. Deutsche Biog., iii. 176). To the hymn-book which he edited for the town of Tann, purely as Gräfliche Lieder zu Umgang christlicher Geselligkeit, at Meiningen, 1676, he contributed five hymns, one of which is:

Gott Vater, biete unsrer Bitt (Holy Baptism). This prayer to the Holy Trinity for a blessing on the child, appeared as No. 6 of the Baptismal Hymnals, as above, p. 328, in the first ed. of 1626, No. 260. The only tr. in C. U. is "O God the Father, hear our prayer," a good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, 1826, in his Ps. & Hymns, 1824, No. 153 beginning "O Thou most Holy Trinity," being a tr. of tr. iv.

Borthwick, Jane, daughter of James Borthwick, manager of the North British Insurance Office, Edinburgh, was b. April 9, 1818, at Edinburgh, where she still resides. Along with her sister Sarah (b. Nov. 26, 1823; wife of the Rev. Eric John Findlater, of Lordermuir, Perthshire, who d. May 2, 1886) she translated from the German Hymns from the Land of Luther, 1st Series, 1851; 2nd, 1855; 3rd, 1858; 4th, 1862. A complete tr. of the 15th ed. of 1862, by W. P. Kennedy, Edinburgh, of which a reprint was issued by Nelson & Sons, 1884.

These translations, which represent relatively a larger proportion of hymns for the Christian Life, and for the Christian Year than one finds in Miss Winkworth, have attained a success as translations and as an edition in hymnals only second to Miss Winkworth’s. Since Kennedy’s Hymns Christ., 1843, in England, and the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1854, in America, made several selections therefrom, hardly a hymn in England or America has appeared without containing some of these translations. Miss Borthwick has kindly enabled us throughout this Dictionary to distinguish between the 61 translations by herself and the 50 by her sister. Among the most popular is the title of Miss Borthwick’s may be named "Jesus still lead on," and "How blessed to the crown of sin;" and of Mrs. Findlater’s "God calling yet;" "Rejoice, all ye believers;"

Under the signature of H. L. L. Miss Borthwick has also written various prose works, and has contributed many translations and original poems to the Family Treasury, and several translations from the Alphabetic Hymnals. The first of which were collected and pub. in 1875, as Thoughts for Thoughtful Hours (3rd ed., enlarged, 1887). She also contributed several tr. to Dr. Pagenschele’s Coll., 1864, five of which are included in the new ed. of the H. L. L., 1884, pp. 256-264. Of her original hymns the best known are "Come, labour on," and "Rest, weary soul." In 1875 she pub. a selection of poems translated from the German by Heuser-Schweizer, under the title of Alpinc Lyries, which were incorp. in the 1884 ed. of the H. L. L.

Borthwick, Robert Brown. [Brown-Borthwick, R.]

Borthwick, Sarah. [Borthwick, J.]

Böschenslein, Johann, s. of Heinrich Böschenslein, a native of Stein on the Rhine, was b. at Espling, Württemberg, 1642. After taking Holy Orders as a priest he became in 1655, tutor of Hebrew at Ingolstadt. Leaving this in 1714 he went to Augsburg. M 2 where, in the same year, he pub. a Hebrew Grammar, and in 1518, by the rec-ommendation of Reuchlin, was invited as tutor of Greek and Hebrew to Wittenberg, where he had Melanelethon as a pupil. In 1530 he went to Nürnberg; 1531 to Heidelberg; and in 1522 to Antwerp. After a short stay in Zürich, where he taught Hebrew to Zwingli, he settled, in 1523, at Augsburg, where he became by royal license teacher of Hebrew, and where he d. 1539. (Koch, i. 219-221, ii. 469-471; Alig. Deutsche Blog., ii. 184-186, the latter stating that he resided at Nürnberg in 1525, and then went to Nördlingen, and d. there in great poverty 1540.) Koch quotes 4 of his hymns, the best being:—

Da Jesus an dem Kreuze stund. [Passiontide.] Wackernagel, li. p. 1691, gives two forms, the first in 9 st. of 3 La. ("Da Jesus an dem Kreuze stund"), from an undated leaflet, c. 1515, the second from M. Vela's G. H. 1537. It has been, but Wackernagel thinks erroneously, called a fr. from the Latin of Peter Balbanus ("Stabat ad lignum crucis"). Kehrlein, in his Kirchen- und religions Lieder, Fuerthborn, 1853, p. 195, quotes it from a paper m., which he dates 14th cent. The first form is in No. 73 in Perrot's G. H., ed. 1855. The later version of the Seventh Words on the Cross, "Da Jesus an den Kreuzen Stamm", q.v., has superseded it in most modern hymn-books. For "When Jesus on the Cross was found", No. 384 in pt. ii. of the Commorant
H. Bk., 1744. In 1789 it was rewritten as, "When Jesus hung upon the Cross." [J. M.]

Boswell, Robert, b. 1746, in Ayrshire.
He received a classical education, and was an excellent Hebrew scholar. For some time he was a writer to the Siznot in Edinburgh.
He joined the followers of John Gla, a dissenting minister from the Church of Scotland, and was chosen to be leading elder of the Glasiate congregation at Edinburgh. Whilst highly appreciating the Scottish Version of the Psalms, he thought it to be susceptible of improvement, and pub. a revised version in 1784 as The Psalms in Metre from the Original. In 1786 he suddenly whilst preaching in London,
Sunday, April 1st, 1804.

Boswell, Robert Bruce, was grandson of the Robert Boswell above named. He was a clergyman of the Church of England, and was for some years incumbent of St. James's Church, Calcutta. He was compiler and eeditor of a book of Psalms & Hymns, pub.
anonymously, in 1838, and printed at the Church Mission Press, Calcutta. In this work he published 30 Psalm Versions of his own composition. These have fallen out of use.

Hotham, Mary. [Hewitt, M.]

Bottome, F., s.t.d., was b. in Derbyshire, England, May 26, 1823. In 1850, having removed to America, he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church; and in 1872 he received the degree of s.t.d. from Dickinson's College, Carlisle, Penn. In addition to assisting in the composition of R. P.
Smith's Gospel Hymn, London, 1872: Centenary Singer, 1869; Round Lake, 1872, he has written:—

3. Come, Holy Ghost, all sacred are. [Rev. of the Holy Spirit.] Appeared in B. P. Smith's Gospel Hymn, 1872. It is in several collections, including the Ohio H. Bk. of the Evangelical Association, 1861, No. 364.

4. Full salvation, full salvation. Joy of full Sal-tation. Written in 1871, and pub. in a collection by Dr. Cullis of Boston, 1872. Also in the Ohio H. Bk., 1881, No. 364.

3. Love of Jesus, all divine. Love of Jesus, all divine. Written in 1873, and pub. in his Round Lake, 1872.

4. O bliss of the purified, bliss of the Sanctification. Written in 1869, and pub. in the Evangelist, and numerous hymn-books in America, including the Ohio H. Bk. as above, 1881, No. 477, &c.

His hymns, "Sweet rest in Jesus"; and "Oneness in Jesus," are also found in several collections for evangelistic services. [J. J.]

Bound upon the accursed tree. H.
H. Milman. [Good Friday.] This popular hymn appeared in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 62, as the first of three hymns for Good Friday, in 4 st. of 10 m., but omitted, curiously enough, from Dr. Milman's own Ps. & Hym., 1837. One of the first, if not the first, to bring it into regular congregational use was Elliott, who gave it in his Ps.
& Hym., 1835. From that date it gradually grew in popular favour until its use has become extensive, both in G. Britain and in America. In the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, it is in 3 st. of 8 l. This was a special revision for that collection. Orig. text in Lyra Brit., 1867,
p. 401; and Schaff's Christ in Song, 1870, p. 163.

Bourdillon, Mary, née Cotterill, doughter of the Rev. Joseph Cotterill, some time Rector of Blakely, Norfolk, b. at Ampton, Suffolk, Aug. 30, 1819, married to E. D.
Bourdillon, and d. at Dresden, Feb. 19, 1870.
Her principal poetical work was A Mother's Hymns for her Children, 1849, 2nd ed. 1852, containing 21 pieces. Of these the following are in C. U.:

1. Above the clear blue sky, Beyond, &c. [Prom.
3. Gracious Saviour, from on high, Holy Evangel.
4. Jesus, we thank Thee for Thy day. Saturday.
5. Lamb of God, who came from heaven. Christ the

6. There was a lovely Garden once. Eden.

These hymns are characterized by great simplicity and directness of aim, and are most suitable for children.

Bourignon, Antoinette, was b. at Lisle in 1616. From a very early period she was under the influence of religion, which took, in course of time, a mystical turn. Undertaking the work of a religious reformer, she visited France, Holland, England, and Scotland; and published several works dealing with The Testimony of Truth; The Renovation of the Gospel Spirit, &c. Her enthusiasm, peculiarity of views, and disregard of all sects raised on the one hand zealous persecutors, and on the other warm adherents. At her death at Franeker, in Friesland, Oct. 30, 1680, she left a large number of followers, especially in Scotland and France. Her works were pub.
in 19 vols. at Amsterdam, 1866. She is known to hymnology through her hymn, "Venec Jesus, mon salutaire" (q.v.).

Bourne, George Hugh, d.c.l., son of Rev. R. B. Bourne, born at St. Paul's Cray, Kent, 8th Nov. 1819, and educated at Eton, and C. C. C., Oxford, graduating B.A., 1863;
b.c.l., 1866; and d.c.l. 1871. Taking Holy Orders in 1863, he became Curate of Sandford-Othames, 1863. He was afterwards Head
Master of Chardstock Coll., and is now (1886) Warden of the same school, which has been transferred to St. Edmund's, Sandbury. Dr.
Bourne has written the following hymn:—
Bourne, Hugh, the principal founder of the Primitive Methodist Society, and the editor of their first hymn-book, was b. at Fordhams, Stoke-on-Trent, April 3, 1772. His father, Joseph Bourne, a person in humble circumstances, was a member of the Church of England, while his mother belonged to the Wesleyan Society. His education, for his circumstances, was fairly good; and by earnest application to study he acquired some knowledge of Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. His mind was of a strongly devotional cast, and the Methodist movement of those days had such attractions for him that he joined himself thereto in 1793. The following year he went to London, where he had an engagement to act as a man of kindred spirit, which culminated in the formation of a system of Prayer Meetings after the American model, upon the Mow Cop Colliery, near Stoke-on-Trent. There, with two or three members of the society, he carried on this work, which culminated in the formation of the Wesleyan Society, and he was excommunicated for it in 1798, when, without notice or trial, by the Quarterly Meeting held at Burden, on June 27, 1808, and was required to resign his connection with the society. Subsequently he was again received into the church, and continued his evangelical work, in connection with the Primitive Methodist Connexion, in 1810. From that time, to the 8th of November, 1822, he laboured in the work of extending and building up the Wesleyan society of which he was practically the founder. He was the first editor of its magazine, and the first to compile a hymnal for its use.

Bourne's first effort in hymnology was the pub- lication of the very small General Collection of Hymns and Spiritual Songs, 1805. In 1812, he published a larger collection, which was improved in 1819, 1820, 1821, 1822, and again in 1823. To these, a second collection was added in 1829, which he contributed another 20 hymns. In 1839, a third collection was added, which he contributed another 20 hymns. This was published as The Large Hymn Book, 1846, and was in use until 1860, when it was replaced by The Hymnal and Sacred Hymns, 1860, and again in 1875, when it was replaced by The Hymn Book, 1875. These hymns have been greatly modified and are now known as The Primitive Methodist Hymnal, 1875, and are in use to this day.

Bourne, William St. Hill, b. in 1846, and educated at Merchant Taylers' School, and the London College of Divinity. Taking holy orders in 1869 he became successively Vicar of Holy Trinity, Derby; Harrow-on-the-Hill; St. Paul's, St. Leonard's-on-sea; Ashford, Kent; in 1875, Vicar of Pinner, Middlesex; and in 1880, Vicar of All Saints, Haggerstone. Author of Poems in various periodicals: Church Work and the Working Classes, pub. in Church Bells, 1875, &c. In 1879 he became editor of The Mission Field, for the S. P. G. As a hymn-writer he is known through the following hymns—

3. Enter with thanksgiving. Processional for Dedication Service. Written in 1868 for the reopening of the Parish Church of Pinner, and pub. with music, by Skelfington & Son.

4. For the freshness of the morning. Praise for all things. Written in 1868, first printed on a broadsheet, and again included in The Universal H. Bk., 1868.

5. In the Name of God the Father, In Whose Image we are made. Purity. Written in 1868 for the Church Purity Society, printed in The Evangelist, Oct. 1868, and in The Universal H. Bk., 1868.

7. The Sower went forth sowing. Harriet or Burial. Written in 1874 for Harvest Festival at Christ Church.
Bowring, John, b. in London, Feb. 4, 1783, and educated at the Sevenoaks Grammar School, and Winchester. In 1807 he was called to the Bar, but ill-health necessitated his residence abroad for a short time. On his return he resumed the duties of his profession. His weakness, however, increased, and gradually sinking, he d. Feb. 1, 1815. He was a person of more than usual parts, and gained the friendship of Macaulay, Wilberforce, and other men of eminence. In 1816 his Select Pieces in Verse and Prose, were pub. by his father with a brief Memoir, Lond., G. Davidson. The two vols. contain essays, reviews, poetical pieces, versions of 4 Psalms, and 6 hymns. Of his hymns and Psalm versions nearly all are in C. U. The best of these are, "As panting in the sultry beam;" "Children of God, who pacing slow;" and "Lord, before Thy throne we bend." The rest include:

1. Beyond the dark and stormy bound. Hymn 3, "When God from dust created man," 10 st. of 6 l., and dated 1812.

2. Children of God, who pacing (faint and slow). Encouragement.

3. Lord, before Thy throne we bend. Ps. cxv. 3.

4. O God, my heart within me faints. Ps. xlii.

6. To heaven I lift mine eyes. Ps. cxvi.

Bowed with the guilt of sin, O God.

H. Alford. [Lent.] Contributed to His Year of Praise, 1867, in 5 st. of 4 l., and appointed for the 7th Sun. after Trinity. It is more suitable to Lent. In the Musical ed. of the Year of Praise it is dated 1866.

Bowles, Caroline Ann. [Southey, C. A.]

Bowly, Mary. [Foster, M.]

Bowring, Sir John, 1st Bt., a distinguished man of letters, was b. at Exeter, Oct. 17, 1792. His studies extended to philology, poetry, politics, and other branches of learning, whilst as editor of the Westminster Review for some years (he received the appointment in 1825) he did considerable work as a reviewer. He held several official appointments under the Government as Commissioner to France on commercial matters (1834–5); British Consul at Hong-Kong (1840); and Governor of Hong-Kong (1841). He was twice a Member of Parliament, and was knighted in 1854. He d. Nov. 23d, 1872. His published works are very numerous, and display an astonishing acquaintance with various languages. Those specially bearing on poetry include:

(1) Russian Anthology, with Biographical and Critical notices of the Poets of Russia, 1821; (2) Specimens of the Russian Poets, 1823; (3) Ancient Poetry and Romance of Spain, 1824; (4) Lutheran Anthology, or Specimens of Dutch Poets, 1824; (5) serenata Popolare

Of his hymns a very large percentage have come into C. U. A few have been adopted by almost all denominations, as, "God is love, His mercy brightens;" "How sweetly flow'd the zephyr's sound;" "In the Cross of Christ I glory;" "Watchman, tell us of the night;" and others, but the greater portion are confined to the Unitarian collections of C. Brit. and America, of which denomination he was a member. In addition to the more important, which are annotated under their first lines, there are also the following in C. U. —

4. Earth's transitory things decay. The Memory of the Just. From his Hymns, 1825, into Beard, 1837; the American Plymouth Coll., 1855; and the Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1863, &c.

5. Father, glorify Thy name. The Father glorified. Also from Hymns, 1825, into Beard, 1837; the Hymn of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1864, &c.

7. Father of Spirits, humbly bent before Thee. Also in Hymns, 1825, and Dr. Martineau's H. of P; & Prayer, 1873. In Longfellow and Johnson's Hymn of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1864, it is given as, "Father of Spirits, gathered now before Thee."

13. How shall we praise Thee, Lord of Light! Evening. A cento from the same poem as No. 7 above. It is given in the Hymn of the Spirit, 1864, and other American collections.

17. O, sweet it is to feel and know. Monday Morning. A gem in 16 st. of 4 l., given in his Matins, &c., 1823, p. 60. In 1837 st. i.–iii. entitled "God near in sorrow." In the 3rd ed. of the Matins, &c., 1841, this cento was re-stated (p. 245), with the same title, notwithstanding the full poem was in the same book.

18. On the dust I'm doomed to sleep. Resurrection. Appears in his Matins, &c., 1st ed., 1823, p. 232, in 2 st. of 8 l. In the 2nd ed., 1824, this was altered to "In the dust," &c. It reads:--

19. The heavenly appearance. This "Hymn to the Deity" appeared in 4 st. of 4 double lines, ed. 1841; the Boston Hymn of the Spirit, 1864, and other American collections.

20. When before Thy throne we kneel. Divine Worship. From his Coll., 1837, No. 93, into Beard's Hymns, 1888, No. 21, and other collections.

21. Where is thy sting from the Hymn, 1825, into the same collection as No. 20 above.

It will be noted that the frequently named above that Beard's Coll., 1837, is that hymn in a Collection of Hymns compiled by R. K. Boyd, London, 1857.

The Rev. John Relly Boyd was a Unitarian Minister in Manchester, and the collection of which he was the Manchester Meeting of Ministers. He was associated with a large number of original hymns composing 82 of which 33 were published therein for the first time. Some of these hymns are of great merit, and most of them are characterized by great earnestness and depth of devotion. [J. J. Boyce.]

Boycy. Twenty-one hymns appeared under this signature in Williams and Boden's Coll. of above Six Hundred Hymns, &c., 1801. [Boycs, J.] The writer is sometimes described as "Samuel Boyce"; but nothing definite is known as to concerning him. Of these hymns the following are in C.U.,--

1. All hail, redeeming Lord, Christ the Day-Spring.

2. Grace, how melodious is the sound. Psalm of Grace.

4. O the transcendent love. Christ the Saviour.

Boyd, Robert, M.A. [Bodius, Robertus], eldest s. of James Boyd, of Trochrig, Ayrshire, and Archbishop of Glasgow, was b. at Glasgow in 1578. He studied at the University of Edinburgh, graduating M.A. in 1595. In 1597 he went to France, and lived principally at Tours till 1599, when he became Professor of Philosophy at Montauban. In 1604 he became Pastor at Vertueil. In 1606 he went to Saumur as pastor, and in 1608, became Professor of Theology there. Leaving Saumur in 1614, in 1615 he became Principal and Professor of Theology in the University of Glasgow, but resigned his appointments in 1621, and retired to his estate at Trochrig. In 1622 he was elected Principal of the University of Glasgow, but had to resign at once by the King's command. In 1626 he was for a few weeks minister of Paisley, but had again to resign. He d. at Edinburgh Jan. 5, 1627. He was more celebrated as a theologian than as a poet. His principal poem is in Latin, and entitled Hezcatombe Christiana. [See Christi sancturum.] [J. M. Boyd.]

Boyd, Zachary, M.A., was b. near Kilmar-
Boyden, Henry, R.A., is the author of Songs for the Household, Sacred and Secular (Birmingham, E. Child, 1866), and many excellent hymns, printed on fly-sheets, for the use of his congregation on anniversary occasions at St. David's, Birmingham, some of which have been set to music by Dr. Belchere, Lond., Novello & Co. Mr. Boyden was b. at Birmingham in 1832, and is a graduate of Trinity Coll., Dublin, R.A. 1867. Taking Holy Orders in 1856, he has been successively Curate of St. Mary’s, Honley; St. Mary’s St. George’s, and St. Luke’s, Birmingham; and since 1896 Vicar of St. David’s, Birmingham.

Boye, Nicolaus, was b. at Wesslensburi, or Wealingburen, in Holstein, where he became an Evangelical Preacher, and where he d. 1542. (Koek. i. 418; vii. 478; Allg. Deutsche Biog., iii. 85.) The only hymn known as his is:

> O Gott, wir danken deiner Güte. [Grace after Meal.] 1st pub. in Low German in the Gepflichtte leder zu Psalmen, Magdeburg, 1641, and in High German in Der Barm B. R., 1564. Both are in Wackenburgh, HI. p. 952, in 3 M. of 7. It was translated as "We thank the God of the gods," in the Edge and Edge Bullate (ed. 1657-66, folio 11), ed. 1667, p. 18. [J. M.]

Boyse, Joseph, was b. at Lees in 1699, received a good education, and in 1688 became a Presbyterian minister in Dublin, a position he maintained with honour and usefulness until his death in 1728. His prose works, chiefly sermons and controversial treatises, were collected and published by himself in two large folios, London, 1728. He was the author of two collections of hymns. The first, printed in Dublin, in 1693 (small 8vo) with another title-page (London, 1693, Thomas Parkhurst, Cheapside), is entitled as follows:

> "Sacramental Hymns collected chiefly out of such passages of the New Testament as contain the most suitable matter of Divine Praises in the celebration of the Lord's Supper. To which is added one hymn relating to Baptism and another to the Ministry. By J. Boyse, with some by other hands."

Those by "other hands" are 3 in number, viz. one by G. Herbert, and two by Patrick. Of the remaining 21 by Boyse himself, 18 are for use at the Lord's Supper. From the fact that in the hymn on Baptism immersion is the only mode recognized, it is proper certain that the author was Baptist in sentiment, though Presbyterian in ecclesiastical position. The other collection by Boyse was printed at Dublin in 1691. It contains 76 hymns, in three parts, with music, and is entitled:

> Family Hymns for Morning and Evening Worship, with some for the Lord's days... All taken out of the Psalms of David. A copy is in the Antrim Presbytery Library at Queen's College, Belfast.

Boyse's hymns are interesting from their early date, but have no merit as poetry. The hymn "Come pay the worship God requires" (Divine Worship), in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, No. 42, is by this author. [W. R. S.]

Brackenbury, Robert Carr, of an old Linen-shire family, was b. at Panton House, in that county, in 1722. He entered into residence at St. Catherine's Hall, Cambridge, but joining the Wesleys, he left without taking a degree, and became a minister of the Methodist denomination. In that capacity he visited Guernsey, Jersey and Holland. He retired from active work in 1789, and d. at his residence, Raithby Hall, near Spilsby, Aug. 11, 1818.

His works include:— (1) Sacred Poems, in 3 parts, Lond., 1797; (2) Select Hymns, in 2 parts, Lond., 1795; (3) Sacred Poetry; or Hymns on the Principal Histories of the Old and New Testaments and on all the Parables, Lond., 1800, and some prose publications. He also edited and altered William Crudel's Divine Hymns, and the hymn, "Come, children, 'tis Jesus' command," was given in J. Benson's Hymn for Children, 1806. It does not appear in any of Brackenbury's works. Mrs. Smith, daughter of Dr. Adam Clarke, has included several incidents in her life in her Raithby Hall.

Bradbury, David, a Congregational minister, b. at Reeth, Richmond, Yorkshire, Nov. 12, 1735. At 23 he entered the M. E. Academy as a student for the Congregational Ministry, and subsequently became pastor of a congregation at Alnwick (1762); Wellingborough (1764); Ramsgate (1767); Manchester (1787); and Kennington, London (1797). He d. Jan. 13, 1809.

In 1794 he pub. Pilgrim's Progress, a poem on the Judgment; and also contributed to A Supplement to the Version of the Psalms and Hymns of Dr. Watts, partly collected, altered, or transformed, in proper, peculiar, or broken metre, Manchester, C. T., 1797. (Preface dated, Feb. 27, 1797.) Of the 42 hymns in this Suppl., 11 are by Braddbury He is best known by his hymn for children, "Now let each heart (our hearts) compose to raise" (Sunday Schools) in the Wes. Reformed H. Bk., No. 172, and others. It is the third of four hymns for children at the end of the Supp. 1797. In 4, altered form of "Now let each heart compose to raise," was given in Rippin's Sel., 1797, No. 522.

Bradford, John, R.A., b. 1750, and educated at Wadham College, Oxford. He was for some time "Minister of the Gospel in Birmingham." He removed to Grub Street Chapel, London, in 1797, where he continued to preach till his death on July 16, 1805.

In 1792 he pub. A Collection of Hymns, Lond., Mathews, and others. It contained 290 hymns, some of which were his own. This collection was avidly anticipated. Very few of these hymns are in C. U.

Brady, Nicholas. [Psalters, English, § xiii. 4.]

Brainard, John Gardiner Calkins, b. at New London, Connecticut, 1793, and d. at Hartford, in 1828. He was educated at Yale College, and for some time practised law at Middleton, Connecticut. He also edited a paper at Hartford. His Poems appeared in 1825, 1822, and 1842. The hymn by which he is best known:— "To Thee, O God, the Shepherd Kings," was pub. in the Congregational Ps. and Hys. of Christian Use and Worship, prepared, dec., by the General Association of Connecticut, 1845, No. 645, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "An agricultural hymn." [F. M. B.]

Brammall, John Holland, nephew of John Holland, the biographer of Montgomery and author of the British Psalmists, was b. at Sheffield, Dec. 21, 1831, and educated at the Collegiate School of that town. Although engaged in banking, he has found time for both hymn-writing and music. Most of his hymns and some of his tunes were written for the Sheffield Wesleyan Sunday School Union. Of the former, "Onward, children, onward, leave the paths of sin," is best known. It was written for the Wes. S. S. Union of Sheffield in 1870, and 1st printed on their Whit-sunday fly-sheets of that year. It has been frequently used at similar gatherings of children. In 1879 it was given anonymously in the Meth.
S. S. H. Bk., No. 283.

Brandenburg-Culmbach, Margrave of. [Aldrechert.]

Brandenburg. Electress of. [Louise Henriette.]

Brawn, Mary Ann, dau. of the Rev. Samuel Brawn, for 51 years pastor of the Baptist Church, Loughton, Essex, was b. at the Meads, Loughton, Aug. 15, 1826. She was descended on the mother's side from the martyr Thomas Hawkes, who was burned at the stake in 1555, at Coggeshall, Essex. From 1848 to 1875 Miss Brawn was engaged in educational work. Her poetical pieces are few in number and chiefly on devotional subjects. They were first printed on fly-sheets for use in her father's chapel and elsewhere.
They include—:

2. Thy praise are very nigh. (Children's Prayer. Meth. S. S. B. K. 1879, 6, and several other collections for children.

3. O Thee who art in every place. Lent.

4. Our life's unceasing mark. Divine guidance. These, Nos. 3-4, were given in The Domestic War.

Bread of heaven, on Thee I [we] feed. J. Cowper. [Holy Communion. This hymn takes rank as the author's productions. It widely used, and the most popular and appeared in his Star of the East, &c., 1824, p. 57, in the following form:

"For the Eucharist.
"I am the living bread
Whose body is broken in To许可 eternal life....
I am the true vine."—John vi.

Bread of heaven, on Thee I [we] feed.
For Thy flesh is meat indeed.
Ever may my soul be fed
With this true and living bread.
Day by day with strength supplied,
Through the life of Him who died.
This text was used in Condor's Cong. &c., 1856, p. 86. It is in several Nonconformist hymnals, but appears in the Ps. & Hys. Bap., 1858, No. 275, with the title "This is the blest cup," in st. li., l. 2.
In Pratt's Ps. & Hys., 1829, No. 69, it was broken up into 3 st. of 4 l., and given as "Bread of heaven, on Thee we feed"; and this was repeated in some later collections. The most popular and widely used form of the hymn is the following, which was given in the Coke and Denton Church Hymnals, 1853, No. 28, as follows:

"Bread of heaven, on Thee we feed.
For Thy flesh is meat indeed.
Ever may our souls be fed
With this true and living bread.
Day by day with strength supplied,
Through the life of Him who died.

"Vine of heaven! Thy blood supplies
This blest cup of sacrifice;
Lord, by Thy wounds our healing give:
To Thy cross we look and live.
"Jesu: may we ever be Grafted, rooted, built on Thee. Amen."

Great popularity was given to this text by its adoption by H. A. and M. in 1861, and subsequently by other important Church of England collections. In Whitt's Coll., 1882, there is a slight return to the original. It will be noted that in the revised text there is no change of doctrine involved. Both in it, and in the original, the same truth is set forth; but the revised text is the more congregational and musical of the two. The American hymnals, in common with those of G. Britain, have adopted both texts, the revised being mainly found in the Protestant Episcopal collections. A Latin rendering of the H. A. and M. text by the Rev. C. B.
Pearson as: "Pace nos, Divine Paix," was given in Biggs' Annotated H. A. and M., 1867.

Bread of the world in mercy broken.
By R. Heber. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 143, in 2 st. of 4 l., and headed "Before the Sacmament." Its use has become most extensive in all English-speaking countries. Orig. text in Whitt's Coll., No. 520. In the Mitre H. Bk., 1836, the opening line was altered to "Bread of our life in mercy broken," but this reading has fallen out of use.

Bresy, John George, b. in 1736, and
d. Dec. 5, 1839. Ordained Deacon in 1819 and Priest in 1820, he became Vicar of Halden-ham, 1827, and of Christ Church, Bermuda-ham, 1832. He was also Prebendary of Lie-field. His Sel. of Ps. & Hymns was pub. at Birmingham, 1836. To it he contributed the following hymns:

3. Almighty Saviour, bow Thine ear. Charity Schools.
5. O God, the feeble stumper's friend. Confirmation.
6. Saviour, bless Thy word to all. After Sermon.
7. There is beyond this world of night. Charity Schools.

The best known of these is No. 4. His Memoir was pub. in 1841. [W. T. B.]

Breithaupt, Joachim Justus, s. of Christian Breithaupt, Superintendent of the district of Hohenstadt or Honstedt, Hannover, was b. at Nordheim, in Hannover, Feb. 16, 1658. After a theological course at Helsheidt he became, in 1680, Conrector of the Gymnasium at Wolfenbüttel, but left in 1681 and, after being Professor of Homiletics in Kiel, was appointed, in 1685, Court praelector and member of the Consistorium at Meiningen. In 1687 he became Pastor and Professor of Theology at Erfurt, receiving in the same year the degree of D.D. from the University of Kiel. Driven from Kiel by the Pietistic Controversy, he was appointed in 1691 pastor of the Cathedral Church, and dean of the Theological Faculty, at Halle; and in 1703, in addition, General Superintendent of the Duchy of Magdeburg. In 1709 he became Abt of Kloster-Bergen and Inspector of the Saalkreis. He d. at Kloster-Bergen, March 16, 1732 (Koeh, iv. 331-342; AlgL. Deut. Biog., iii. 201-222; Bode, p. 49).

Of his 4 (5?) hymns one has passed into English:

Jesus Christus. Gottes Lamm. [Passiontide.]

Founded on Romans viii. 9-11. 1st in the Gestreichere G. B. Hallé, 1697, p. 549, in 4th. The trz. are — (1) "Christ, th' eternal Lamb of God," by J. O. Jacobii, 1726, p. 52 (1732, p. 60); repeated as No. 951 in pt. 1. of the Moravians H. RK. 1754. (2) "Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God," in G. Moultis's H. and Lyr. and M. 1667, p. 61.

Brennende Lieb du süsse Flamn. [Thanksgiving.] Included in Wackernagel, iv. p. 1072, in 5th. of 81., from a xvi. cent. Ms. at Munich, in which it bears the Brinminded lieb, du süsser Flam. In the Umv. L. S., 1851, it is No. 554. It is tr. as Thou burning Love, thou holy Flame," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 157.

Brethren, let us join to bless.* J. Cennich.*[Praise.] This is one of this writer's most popular hymns. It appeared in his Sacred Hymn for the Children of God, &c.; 1742, in 6th. of 41. One of the first to use it as a congregational hymn was Whitefield. He included it in his Coll., 1753, but with alterations. It was repeated by M. Madan, in his *Ps. and Hymns, *1760, No. 109, and others. Gradually its use extended until it became known in all English-speaking countries sometimes as in Whitefield, and again in its original form. Whitefield's text can be distinguished by st. 11. which opens — "Savior, see to Thee we bow," whilst the original reads, "Son of God, to Thee we bow." Orig. text in H. Comp., No. 512.

Breton, Nicholas, second s. of William Breton, of Red Cross Street, Cripplegate, London, probably born about 1532-3. His father's will, proved 1559, shows that at his death, his eldest son was still a boy, and that in the event of his death, Nicholas was not to inherit until he was 24. It appears that he resided for some time at Oriel College, Oxford. From 1577 to 1626 he issued pamphlets after pamphlet in prose and verse. In 1576 these were collected as far as possible by the Rev. A. B. Grosart, and printed in two vols. in his Chertsey Worthies Library. He d. probably in 1626, being then about 83 years of age. As a sacred poet he is distinguished by melody and grace, and it has been only the want of a cheap edition of his works that has prevented his taking higher rank in public esteem. [See Early Eng. Hymnody, § viii.]

Brettell, Jacob, s. of an Unitarian Minister, b. at Gainsborough, April 16, 1733. In 1814 he entered upon the pastorate of an Unitarian congregation at Cockey Moor (now Ainsworth), Bolton, Lancashire; and in 1816 upon that of Rotherham, Yorkshire. The latter charge he held until 1850, when he retired from active work. He d. at Rotherham, Jan. 12, 1862. In addition to minor pieces contributed to various newspapers, &c, he pub. —

In 1837 Mr. Brettell contributed 16 hymns to Beard's Coll. With one or two exceptions, these have fallen out of use. The best known, but by no means the best hymn, is "The last full wain is on the road," Harriet, given in Dr. Martineau's *Hymns, 1873. Another is, "He lived, as noise but He has lived." (Life of Jesus.) In compiling a volume of sacred poems these hymns, from their poetic character, might be consulted with advantage. [J. J.]

Breviaries. 1. The name Breviary is that by which the Office Book which contains the services of the Canonical Hours is known in the Western Church. A large number of such books have been in use from time to time, each differing from the other in various particulars, but all known by the same name. This Office Book is probably called a Breviary either from being a compendium of separate volumes which in early days contained its various parts, or from the services in their present shape and length having been somewhat abbreviated from their form in primitive times.

2. Prior to the compilation of Breviaries, various books were in use in the daily offices, and from these the Roman and other Breviaries have been compiled. They are divided (1) the Psalms; (2) the Scriptures; (3) the Sermologus and the Homilies, used respectively at the third and second nocturns on Sundays and certain other days; (4) the Passionary or Passional; (5) the Antiphonary; (6) the Hymnals; (7) the Collectanea, or Orationale; and (8) the Martyrology.

3. From these materials an enormous variety of Breviaries have been built up; some of them generically different from the Roman, such as the Hilaryan or Breviary of the Eastern Church; the Ambrosian Breviary of the Church; and the Monastic Breviary of the Church of Milan; and the Monastic Breviary of the Church of Spain; others being merely variations or offshoots of the Roman Breviary. The religious orders had their separate Uses, following the Benedictine or Monastic arrangement of the Psalms, as distinct from the Gregorian or secular arrangement. Separate Provinces, and single Dioceses, had their own Uses; so that the Medieval Breviaries of England, France, Germany, and other countries may be counted up by hundreds.

4. As this work is hymnological and not liturgical and as the liturgical contents of various Breviaries, especially that of Rome, have been treated fully in another place [see Dict. of Christian Antiquities, arts. Breviary; Divine Office; Psalmody, &c.,] it will only be necessary to name a few leading Breviaries, especially those which have had the greatest influence on the hymnody of modern times. These are:—

(1) The Monastic Breviary. This Breviary is known in four forms, (1) in ms.; (2) as arranged and printed by Cardinal Ximenes; (3) Archbishop Lorraine's revised edition of No. 21, and (4) Migeon's Patrologia Lat. tom. xxxvi. Each of these has a special hymnological interest, and, combined, they shed great light upon the question as to what hymns are and what are not truly Monastic.

(1) Of the ancient Ms. Breviary there are copies in the British Museum the press marks of which are "Addl. 294, nos. 475-349.*

(2) Cardinal Ximenes' edition of this Breviary is known to us through an edition published at Toledo, 1592, that is, fifteen years before the work was begun. It is entitled, Breviariun secundum regulam beat. hydropnius. Imperatoris in regalis civitate Toledo editum. In this edition there are about 248 hymns. Of these 110 were from the Mozarabic MSS, as noted below, and the rest were taken by Ximenes from the Ambrosian, the old Roman, and other sources. (3) The copy of Archbishop Lorenzo's revised edition of the Breviary, which we have been able to consult, is Breviarium Fastiologico sacramentorum regiam Novatianae, latine textus, traducto Anglicis, Typis Typographiae Aureliae, Anno Domini M.DCC.LXXV, and this constitutes the Breviary proper, a reprint of Cardinal Ximenes' edition of 1602. The Aurora hymns, and those for all the saints of the year, and for Vespers and Matins, are also the same in both. In this 1775 edition of the Breviary there is added what is known as the Mozarabic Hymnarium. This is a body of Mozarabic hymns compiled from ancient Mozarabic MSS, and printed with the readings and prayers of the text. This was compiled after the publication of the Toledo edition, 1602, but it was added to the Breviary before this edition of 1775. The Mozarabic Hymnarium (the collected hymns are read incipit Yriae delecta circulus annu) contains 36 hymns printed in full, and 34 first lines of others which are given in full in their proper places in the Office. These 175 hymns are the Old Mozarabic hymns, and of these 156 were in the Ximenes ed., 1602. (4) In Migne's Patrologia, tom. 86, Lorenzo's ed. is reprinted in full.

We may note that the Mozarabic Breviary (the ancient use of the Spanish Church) which, apart from legendary accounts of an Apostolic origin, may be referred to st. Isidore, Archbishop of Seville (543) and his brother Leander, is the first print of the Mozarabic Breviary, by Gregory VII. (1073-85), but in defence to strong national feeling its continued use was allowed in seven churches of Toledo.

The Ambrosian. The original construction of this Breviary is attributed to St. Ambrose, Bishop of Milan (397). The oldest copy of this Breviary which we have been able to consult is: Breviarium Ambrosianum, cum decretis Cathedrae Ambrosiani, uti primum institutum etiam ex verbis factum, recens cum additis, editionis, anno 1744. Apud Hieronymum Soccat, 1639. The hymns which are bound in this edition are given in the following table as st. This Breviary was largely revised by St. Charles Borromeo (+1584). The copy of this which we have collated is: Breviarium Ambrosianum Saroli d. R. E. Cardinalis uti. S. Praeventi Archimarchi corrigiatis, ad curiam Sedis Apostolicae, apud Pontium et Sacrorum Fidei, M. D. LXIII. The hymns added to this edition are marked in the following table as &. In later editions several hymns have been added, but as these hymns are in no sense Ambrosian, they do not appear as such in the table. This Breviary is in use in the diocese of Milan. We may add that in the following table the hymns contained in both editions of the Ambrosian Breviary are marked a.

The Roman. This Breviary was the fruit of the efforts of St. Jerome (ob. 419), Cassian (ob. 423), Leo I. (540-61), and others, having been named as its compilers and correctors. It was a work, however, of gradual formation, and cannot be assigned to any single person. The complete work as now known is the Roman Breviary assumed its present shape, roughly speaking, under Gregory VII. (1073-1085). It has undergone four principal revisions. In so saying we exclude the reforming Breviary of Cardinal Quignon, the use of which was permitted for over thirty years in the sixteenth century, from the pontificate of Pius III. to that of Pius V. 1568-68. The first of these four revisions took place about 1325, being mainly conducted by Zacharias Ferrier, under Clement VII.; the second, under Clement VIII. in 1592; the third, under Clement VIII. in 1602; the fourth in 1632, under Urban VIII. Since then fresh offices, with new hymns, have been added to the Breviary by the decrees of the Congregation of Rites, and the incorporation of this new hymns into the Breviary is a process which will continue to go on. At present there are about forty hymns in the Roman Breviary, of which about sixty have been added since the days of Urban VIII. The large majority are taken from ancient sources, and some have been translated into English, and are in common use outside the Church of Rome.

The Roman Breviaries of the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries have been selected for use in drawing up the following list of first lines of hymns, marked r, t, s, respectively. The first of them is anterior to any of the above-mentioned reforms; the last includes all the recent additions to the Breviary. The 1515 edition is a Uomo toton, rubricated, with many woodcuts, and according to colophon on the last page, printed, "Venetiis. Per Jacobum pentium de Lachcu." Then follows an Appendix from which four of the hymns marked (s) are taken. In it, for the visitation of the B. V. M., one for St. Joseph. Besides these two offices, an Appendix contains further offices, without special hymns for the Conception of the B. V. M.; Paul the first Hermit; the Holy Trinity. The opening rubric of the Appendix runs thus, "Incipit officium in misa coronatione virginis mariae editionem per episcopum Paulum Michaeles apostolicum tertium ac sacre. doctrinam famosissimam." (4) The Sarum. This Breviary was in general use in England before the Reformation. It was not, like the York and Hereford Breviaries, confined to the Diocese from which it took its name, but It won its way into so nearly general acceptance, that it may be regarded as a national use rather than a diocesan use. It was not only accepted, with the above-named and a few local exceptions, throughout England and Wales, but its use seems to have prevailed, probably with modifications, throughout Ireland, from the twelfth century onwards. In the same century it was introduced into Scotland, the Diocese of Glasgow receiving it in 1146, and other Dioceses following suit in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. The Aberdeen Breviary (s. v.) represents an attempt made just before the Reformation to supersede the Sarum Breviary, and Walter Chappell, the owner of the manuscript, printed press in Scotland, complained to the Privy Council that his craft was injured by the continued importation of Sarum Office Books, and obtained from the Privy Council forbidding their introduction into Scotland for the future, 1509-10.

The Sarum Breviary does not belong to a distinct family of Office Books from the Roman, but must be classified as an offshoot of the Roman stock. There are a large number of textual and variorum variations. The particular Antiphons, Benedictions, Lectures, Responsories, Hymns, Chapters, Frecce, Versicles, suffer to a great extent especially at certain particular seasons. No two pages of the Roman and Sarum Breviaries are probably in these respects exactly alike. However, and beyond these variations, there is a lesser but still a considerable number of structural and therefore more important differences. We shall discuss these differences in detail as follows. The Sarum Absolutions which are prefixed to the Lessons in the different Nocturns in the Roman, are absent from the Sarum Breviary. The Roman Breviary introduces this form of Absolution, while there are in no fewer than twenty-two varieties of Absolution in the Sarum Books for the different seasons of the ecclesiastical year. The Sarum Rule was to say the Athanasian Creed daily at Prime, the Roman rule is to say it at Prime on Sundays only. By the Sarum rule the fifty-first Psalm was said at all the Hours on weekdays, except on Eastertide, and excepting Nocturns. By the Roman rule it is said only at Lauds and Vespers in Lent and Advent, and on very few other days. In this case, as in some other instances, the Sarum rubric, which have been remarkd unexcelled since the sixteenth century, represent the older and unreformed Roman arrangement. In the same way sameness of the hymns which in the following list are marked as a and e, are to be accounted for. They were recast, partly rewritten, in 1629, under Urban VIII., and such an entry as, "Ad regias agni domini," represents the revised first line of a hymn which previously commenced with these words, "Ad coenam Agni providi" (st. x). The Paris ed. 1533 has been reprinted by Cambridge University Press, pt. i. June 1, 1672; pt. ii. 1683; pt. iii. in the press.

The York. This is another pre-Reformation variation of the Roman Breviary, the use of which was completely superseded by the Sarum Breviary, yet yields a limited number not to be found in any of the previously named books. A Venice ed. of this Breviary dated 1492, has been reprinted by the Surtees Society, vol. i. 1860; vol. ii. 1865.

The Aberdeen. This Breviary is one of the very few surviving Service Books of the pre-Reformation period of the Church in Scotland. It is substantially a Sarum Breviary, with the necessary change of wording, with a considerable amount of independent variation of text, and with the addition of a large number of commemorations of local saints. The Lectures, Hymns, &c., for these series form a most important con-

Other Canticles are occasionally used in the French Breviaries. The Mozarabic Breviary is the most varied in its use of Canticles, containing no less than seventy-seven. (Migne, Patrol. Lat., tom. lxxix. pp. 496-506.)

9. The Hymns in all the Breviaries are found in the various services. In some cases they are derived from a common source, in others they are associated with one Breviary only, this being specially so in the case of the ancient Ambrosian and Mozarabic Breviaries, and of the Paris Breviary of 1736. The following list of hymns from the most prominent Breviaries does not include Proper and Sequences. The history of many of the hymns named, together with such ffs., as have been made into English, will be found in this work under their original first lines.

10. List of Hymns. This list has been compiled from the Ambrosian, Mozarabic, Roman, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and Paris Breviaries. The editions used are:
b. Revised Ambrosian Breviary, Milan, 1852, but not in the 1539 edition.
c. Hymns common to both.
d. Mozarabic Hymns [see § 4 (1) of this article] given in the Mozarabic printed with Luscanius's ed.
e. Of the Mozarabic Breviary, but not found elsewhere in the Breviary.
f. Old Mozarabic Hymns given in the Mozar, and also found in Xulena's ed. of the Mozarabic Breviary, 1502.
g. Hymns introduced into the Mozarabic Breviary, 1502, from Ambrosian, Old Roman, and other sources.

[With few exceptions these hymns are in Migne's Patrologia, Paris, 1862, tom. lxxxi.]

x. All the hymns which are found in all the above editions of the Roman Breviary are marked x.

12. Monastic Breviaries. — We append a further list of first lines of hymns drawn from Monastic Breviaries. We have omitted the first lines of all hymns common to both the secular and monastic Service Books, except in the case of a few rare hymns the wider use of which is not important to record. It will be observed that the following hymns are drawn almost exclusively from the Proprium Sanctorum, Benedictine, Cistercian, Dominican, Franciscan, and Augustinian Breviaries, which have been collated. The following editions have been made use of:—

(a) Breviarium Monasticum secundum ritum Monachorum Ordinis S. Benedicti de observanti Congregations Casmensis, alias S. Iustinae de Padua. Venediæ Vincn. 4to.
(b) Breviarium santi Ordinis Cisterciensis. Parisii §ecv.
(c) Breviarium secundum ordinem S. Dominici. Nurnbergi §ecv. LXXV.
(d) Officia Propria sanctorum Ordinis Minorum. Antverpiæ §ecv.
(e) Breviarium Cartularii Ordinis. Lugduni §ecv.
(f) Breviarium Augustinianum, ad usum Fraumin et monialium Ordinis Eremitarum Sancti Augustini. Venediæ §ecv. LXXXIX.

In four specified cases the hymns are drawn from a Ms. source in the British Museum.

13. In the above list several hymns already given in the former list are repeated, as indicated above; and Prose and Sequences are omitted, together with many hymns peculiar to local Breviaries or found in works of another kind, and those specially associated with the ancients Hymnaries, and with Minuets. For these lists see Hymnarium, Miusals, and Sequences, and the Cross-Reference Index. We may note that some of the hymns in the Mozarabic Breviary are of great length. That for St. Eulalia's Day (Dec. 10) consists of forty-five stanzas of five lines, and that for St. Vincent's Day (Jan. 22) of seventy-three stanzas of four lines each.

14. The great bulk of the above hymns are unknown in English dress, or in the vernacular of the various countries where they are now or have been once in use. But in recent years English readers have become acquainted with many translations from the Mozarabic, Ambrosian, and York Breviaries, by various hands: the Roman by Bp. Mant, W. J. Copeland, and E. Caswall, the Sarum by J. M. Neale and J. D. Chambers, and the Paris by I. Williams,
J. Chandler, and J. D. Chambers. These translators, however, have not in every instance restricted themselves to Brethren's only. In common with W. J. Blew, R. Campbell, K. F. Littledale, J. Ellerton, J. W. Hewett, A. M. Morgan, H. M. Maegill, and others, they have gathered their treasures from various and widely scattered sources. [F. E. W.]

Brewer, Jehoiada, the "Sylvestris of the Gospel Magazine, 1776, &c., was b. at Newport, Monmouthshire, in 1732. He was educated for commercial pursuits, but subsequently became a Congregational Minister, and as such was pastor at Rothborough, Gloucestershire; at Sheffield, to which he went in 1782; at Curr's Lane Chapel, Birmingham (1799); and at the Livery Street Chapel, in the same town, He d. Aug. 21, 1817. A Memoir of him appeared in the Evangelical Register, 1835, p. 396. His best-known hymn is: "Hail, Sovereign Love, that first began" (q. v.).

Bride of the Lamb, awake, awake, Sir E. Denny. [Advent.] 1st appeared in Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, 1837, No. 128, in 7 st. of 4 l. again in his Sel. of Hymns, 1833, No. 332; and again in his Hymns and Poems, 1848, p. 36. In the last work it is entitled, "The Church cheered with the hope of her Lord's return." In 1833 it was included in Dr. Walker's Cheltenham Coll., No. 389, and in 1872 in Snepp's S. of G. and G. In Kennedy, 1863, it is given in 3 st. of 8 l. It is also found in a few American collections.

Bride of the Lamb, rejoice, rejoice, Sir E. Denny. [Advent.] This companion hymn to the foregoing, "Bride of the Lamb, awake, awake," was given in his Hymns and Poems, 1848, p. 38-9, in 6 st. of 4 l. From thence it passed into Dr. Walker's Cheltenham Coll., 1855, and into Snepp's S. of G. and G., 1872.

Bridgman, Isaac. In the year 1823, at which time he was Curate of Trinity Church, Forest of Dean, a pamphlet controversy arose as to his dismissed from the curacy. Subsequently he joined the Congregationalists, and became the Minister of St. John's Chapel, Walworth. For that congregation he pub.:

"Six Hundred Hymns; Sacred Canticles, selected and compiled by Isaac Bridgman, Lond., 1836."

This collection contains 600 hymns. His "dying experience" was pub. in 1817, and a volume of Miscellaneous in 1818. He was b. 1790, and d. July 5, 1846. In Snepp's S. of G. and G., his hymn, "Behold the Saints of God," is dated 1830. It is No. 44 in the Coll. of 1836. [W. T. B.]

Bright, as the sun's meridian blaze. W. Shrubsole, jun. [Miscellaneous.] Written for the first meeting of the London Missionary Society, and dated Aug. 10, 1795 (Fathers and Founders of the L. M. Soc., 1841). It subsequently appeared in the Evangelical Magazine, Sept., 1795, in 6 st. of 4 l., entitled, "On the intended Mission," "O send out Thy light and Thy truth," Ps. xli. 3, and signed "Junior." Although thus printed anonymously, it was duly acknowledged by Mr. Shrubsole in his lifetime, and the original ms., with numerous corrections, is in the possession of his family, in his own autograph." (Singers and Songs, p. 326.) It was included in some of the older in use in G. Britain, as, "Behold the Lamb;"

"My God, accept my heart this day;" and others, the following, all of which were pub.
in 1848, are found in several American collections, to which they were introduced mainly through the Rev. H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855:

1. Bright were the mornings first impartial. At the
2. Head of the hosts in glory. All Saints. From this
3. To, He comes with clouds descending (q. v.).
5. So soft thy plumeage, gentle dove. Morning.

Of late years Mr. Bridges has resided in the Province of Quebec, Canada. [J. J.]

Brigg, Julius, b. at Leeds, 1840, is the youngest son of John Newsom Brigg, woolen merchant, of that town, and an earnest worker in Sunday Schools, in connection with which he wrote numerous hymns and poems. Mr. Julius Brigg entered the Wesleyan Ministry in 1864, since which time he has been engaged in full circuit work. His contributions to hymnody include the following hymns:

1. Father, from thy throne in glory. Sunday School.
4. The many are not always right. For Bands of
5. If every little sunbeam. Temperance.
6. Again we meet in gladness. S. S. Anniversary.

Outside of hymnody Mr. Brigg has written somewhat extensively for the Wesleyan Magazines.

Bright and joyful is the morn. J. Montgomery. [Christmas.] This popular hymn was contributed to the 8th ed. of Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 213, in 4 st. of 4 l., and repeated in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 498, and his Orig. Hymns, 1853, No. 17. Its use is somewhat extensive, both in G. Britain and America. The original text is usually given; but sometimes st. ii., l. 2, reads, "Christ, th' Incarnate Deity," for "The Incarnate Deity." It is sometimes dated 1825, in error.

Bright Queen of heaven. H. Vaughan. [R. V. Marx.] A poem in 4 st. of 4 l., entitled "The Knob," which appeared in Pt. ii. of his Siles Seantillanu, or Sacred Poems, &c., 2nd ed., 1655, and again in the Rev. H. F. Lyte's reprint of the same, Lond., Pickering 1847 and 1883. In its original form it is not in common use; but as "Bright Queen of saints" it is found in the People's H., 1837, No. 193. Orig. text in the Aldine ed. of Vaughan, 1883.

Bright shadows of true rest. H. Vaughan. [Sundays.] From the 1st part of his Siles Seantillanu, 1650, where it is headed "Suns-Days." It is in 3 st. of 8 l., and has been reprinted in the modern editions of Vaughan's work, as also in various selections of sacred poetry. In Dr. Martineau's Hys. of P. and Prayrng, 1873, it is No. 785. Orig. text, Aldine ed. of Vaughan, London, 1883, p. 97.

Bright the vision that delighted. Bp. R. Mant. [Holy Trinity.] This original hymn, one of several, was given in his Ancient Hymns, &c., 1857, No. 100, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed "Hymn commemorative of the 'Thrice Holy'" (see C. T., 1871, p. 219). It is rarely given in its full form, st. iii. being usually omitted, as in the H. Comp., No. 31. The most striking arrangement of the hymn is that beginning with the second half of the first stanza, "Round the Lord in glory seated," with the first half of the second stanza as a refrain. This is given in Thring's Coll., No 413, and is a most beautiful cento. Another form, beginning with the same line, is in the Irish Church Hymnal, No. 221. It is composed of st. i., 5–8, ii., in i. 5–8, and iv. T. Darling, in his Hymns for the Church of England, 1874, No. 110, has a cento in 4 st. of 4 l., as "Near the Lord in glory seated." In the ed. 1886, No. 160, another cento is substituted, beginning with st. i. [J. J.]

Bright was the guiding star that led. Harriet Auber. [Epiphany.] 1st pub. in her Spirit of the Psalms, 1829, p. 142, in 4 st. of 4 l. In America it has attained to a much greater popularity than in G. Britain, being found in many collections, sometimes attributed to the Rev. H. F. Lyte, and again to Miss C. L. Isitt. Orig. text in Lindsey Selborne's Bk. of Prays, 1862-7, p. 46, and Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872, No. 363.

Bright, William, d. d., b. at Doncaster, Dec. 14, 1824, and educated at University College, Oxford, where he graduated b. a. (first class in Lit. Hum.) in 1846, M.A. in 1849. In 1847, he was Johnson's Theological Scholar; and in 1848 he also obtained the Ellerton Theological Essay prize. He was elected Fellow in 1847, and subsequently became Tutor of his College. Taking Holy Orders in 1848, he was for some time Tutor at Trinity College, Glenalmond; but in 1859 he returned to Oxford, and in 1868 became Regius Professor of Ecclesiastical History and Canon of Christ Church. His publications include:—

1. Ancient Collects, selected from various Rituals, 1853, 2nd ed., 1861; (2) *History of the Church from the Ecclesial of Milan to the Council of Chalcedon*, 1846; (3) Sermons of St. Leo, the Great on the Incarnation, translated, with notes, 1842; (4) Faith and Life, 1841-6; (5) Chapters of Early English Church History, 1847; (6) Private Prayers for a Week; (7) Family Prayers for a Week; (8) Notes on the Cures of the First Four Councils. He has also edited (9) Eusebius's Ecclesiastical History, 1872; (10) Athanasius's Creations against the Arians, 1873; (11) the Ecclesiastical History, &c., with the Rev. J. G. Medd, Latin Version of the Prayer Book*, 1865-69. His poetical works are, (12) Athanasius and Other Poems, by a Bishop of a Caldean, 1854, and (13) Hymns and Other Poems, 1866; revised and enlarged, 1874.

The last two works contain original hymns and translations. To the hymn-books he is known through his original compositions, seven of which are given in the revised ed. of H. A. and M., and some are found elsewhere. In addition to "And now the wants are told," and "At Thy feet, O Christ, we lay," there are:—

4. Once only once, and once for all. Holy Communion. Written in 1865, and pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1864, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was given in the revised ed. of H. A. and M., 1874; the new ed., 1875, and several other collections.

5. We know Thee, Whom Thou art. Prayer after Pardon. Written in 1865, and pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1864, in 5 st. of 4 l. It was included in the Appendix to H. A. and M., 1865, &c.

Canon Bright's hymns merit greater attention than they have received at the hands of compilers. [J. J.]

Bright with all His crowns of glory. Sir E. Denny, Bart. [Christ in Glory.] Pub. in the Hys. for the Poor of the Flock, 1838, No. 143, and his Sel. of Hys., 1839, No. 338, and again in his Hys. and Poems, 1848, p. 53, in 4 st. of 6 l., and entitled "The King on His throne." It is a spirited hymn and worthy of more extended use than is accorded to it. In 1867 it was re-written in 3 st. for the People's H.

Brightest and best of the sons of the morning. Bp. R. Heber. [Epiphany.] 1st pub. in the Christian Observer, Nov. 1811, p. 697, in 5 st. of 4 l. (the last being the first repeated); and again in his Posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 25. Few known hymnists have troubled compilers more than this. Some have held that its use involved the worshipping of a star, whilst others have been offended with its metre as being too suggestive of a solemn dance. Cotterill gave it in the 8th ed., 1819, of his Sel., and omitted it from the 9th, 1829, and Elliott, following the example in detail, had it in his 1st ed. Ps. and Hys., 1835, and dropped it from the 2nd, whilst others have done much the same. It has, however, survived these changes, and has become one of the most widely used of the Bishop's hymns. In the American Presbyterian Ps. & Hys. for the Worship of God, Richmond, 1867, No. 69, it is given in an altered form as "Hail the blest morn! see the Great Mediator," and attributed in the Index to Tate and Brady. The Rev. R. Bingham has given a Latin rendering in his Hymns. Christ. Lat., 1871: "Stella, mirae coeli nitido magis omnibus umbra."

[Brightly did the light divine. H. Aford. [St. Barnabas.] In Dean Aford's Poetical Works, 1868, this hymn is dated 1814, although it is not found in his Ps. and Hys. of that year. In the musical ed. of his Year of Praise, it is given us 1845; but in the ed. of words only it is undated. In the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875, it is in an unaltered form.

Brightly gleams our banner. T. J. Potter. [Procesional.] This hymn, which has attained to great popularity, is found in various forms, the most widely used of which are:

1. The original, which appeared, with music, in The Holy Family Hymns, 1860, No. 5, in st. of 8 l. and a chorus of 4 l. This is distinctly Roman in every way, as will be gathered from st. iii. and v., which read,—

(iii) Mary, Mother, Ave!

Israel's tiny child!

Israel's little child!

(ii) Jesus! Mary! Joseph!

Sweet and holy Three!

Jesus! Mary! Joseph!

(v) May we sing your glory

On our bended knee.

Whither shall we flee,

Sweet and holy Three!

Save, 0 stainless Virgin.

On our bended knee.

Mother, unto thee! By the bonds of love.

This text is repeated in numerous Roman Catholic hymnals for schools and missions, and may be consulted without any difficulty.

2. The text as in the People's H., 1847, No. 1, was given in Walker's App. to the Hymnal, 1863. This is the nearest approach to the original, but is not in extensive use.

3. The third and most popular text is that which appeared in the 1867 App. to Sorrell and How, and was repeated in the App. to H. A. & M., 1875. In this the only portions of the original which are retained are st. 1. and st. 2. (with considerable alterations) and the chorus, which is simply the opening lines repeated.

4. In the App. to the U. S. P. C. Ps. and H., 1899, No. 211, this text is distinguished by the third stanza, "Pattern of our childhood," etc. It was repeated in the Church Hymnary, 1873, Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, Thring's Psalt., 1882, and many others. It has less of the original than any other arrangement of the hymn, and ranks next in extensiveness of use to that in H. A. and a Mr. Elerton's note to this hymn in the folio ed. of Church Hymnary is in error by transposing the stanzas which he quotes.

5. The American use of this hymn in any form is very limited. In Richards's Songs of Christian Praise, N. Y., 1880, No. 664, we have st. ii., iii. and iv., and in Stryker and Main's Church Praise Hk., N. Y., 1897, No. 106, st. iv., st. i., st. ii., st. iii. and v. from No. 4 as above.

Although in some hymnals slight changes of these varying texts may be found, yet they are the generally accepted forms of the hymn. Taken together, it is used very extensively; the revised versions, however, far outnumbering the original in use.

[1.] Bring the glossy branch, unfading.

T. Dyas. [Christmas.] Pub. in his Devotional Verse for a Month, 1853, in 5 st. of 8 l. and entitled "Christmas Day." In 1877 it was republished in his Annus Natales, but omitted from his Hymns, Old and New, 1884. It has been set to music by W. H. Havergal. In 1870 Neppe gave, in his Songs of G. and G., No. 198, st. ii., st. iii. and v., slightly altered, as:—

"Jesus, from the skies descending.

Brontë, Anne, sister of Charlotte, and daughter of the Rev. Patrick Brontë, M.A., Vicar of Haworth, Yorkshire, b at Thornton, near Bradford, 1819; d. May 29, 1849. Anne Brontë was joint author with her sisters of a small volume of Poems, 1846, and personally of Agnes Grey, 1847; and The Tenant of Wildfell Hall, 1847, her own de plume being Acton Bell. In 1851 a new edition of Wuthering Heights, by Ellis [Emily] Bell; and Agnes Grey, by Acton [Anne] Bell, was edited, with biographical notes, and from selections from their papers by their sister, Charlotte Brontë. These selections consisted of poems and hymns by the two sisters. From those of Anne the following have come into C. U.:—

1. I hoped the brave and strong. Time of Sorrow. A hymn of much plaintive beauty, wrung from the writer by disappointment and affliction. It is in several collections, as Hoder's Cong. Hymnary, 1894, &c.

2. My God, let me call Thee mine. Lent. Also very plaintive, but not so extensively in use. It is No. 291 in the Bap. Hymnal, 1879.

3. Oppressed with sin and woe. Confidence. The most popular, although not the best of her hymns. It is in many collections, both in U. Britain and America.

4. Spirit of truth, be Thou my Guide. Spirit of Truth. In a few hymnals, including Dr. Martineau's Hymns of P. & Prayer, 1873. [J. J.]

Brooke, Stopford Augustus, M.A., was b. at Letterkenny, Donegal, Nov. 14. 1832, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, graduating B.A. 1856; M.A. 1858. He carried off the Dowson prize and the Vice-Chancellor's prize for English verse. On taking Holy Orders he was successively Curate of St. Matthew's, Marylebone, 1857-59; of Kennington, 1860-63; Chaplain to the British Embassy at Berlin, 1863-65; Minister of St. James's Chapel, York Street, London, 1865-75; and of Bedford Chapel, 1876. He was also appointed Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen, in 1872. In 1865 he published The Life and Letters of the late W. F. Robertson; in 1874, Theology in the English Poets; in 1876, Primer of English Literature, &c. On seceding from the Church of England in 1881, he pub. for the use of his congregation, Christian Hymns, a collection of 260 pieces. Of these he is the author of:

1. Immortal Love, within Whose Righteous willow. Resignation and Prayer for Guidance. No. 145, in 4 st. of 8 l. It has a strong likeness to Cap Newman's "lead, kindly light," is in the same metre, and might well be called a companion hymn thereto. It was repeated in Hoder's Cong. Hymnary, 1894.

2. It fell upon a summer day. Christ blessing little children. No. 256, in 10 st. of 4 l.

3. It is finished, all the pain. Good Friday. No. 90, in 4 st. of 4 l.

4. Let the whole creation cry. Invitation to Praise God. An imitation of Ps. 148. It is No. 47, in 16 st. of 4 l., and is of special merit. In st. iv., ll. 2, 4 are from another source.

5. Mysterious Spirit, unto Whom. Rest and Joy in God. Based on a tr. by D. J. Whittier from Lamentations. It is No. 139, in 3 st. of 8 l. It was repeated in Hoder's Cong. Hymnary, 1894.

6. Now that day its wings has spread. Evening. No. 3, in 4 st. of 4 l.

7. O God, whose love is near. Divine protection desired. No. 103, in 7 st. of 4 l. This is Toplady's "Your harps, ye trembling Saints" re-written, only st. 1. and iv. being absolutely by Mr. Brooke.

8. O that Thou wouldst at the heavens rend and comfort, &c. Peace desired. No. 149, in 4 st. of 4 l. The first line is from C. Wesley; also st. i., l. 4, but the rest of the hymn is original.

9. O Who is this that on a tree. Good Friday. No. 79, in 4 st. of 4 l.

10. Oft as we run the weary way. Heavenly Witnesses of the struggles of Men. No. 188, in 6 st. of 6 l.

11. Still the night, holy the night. Christmas Carol. No. 55, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is a tr. from the German, and is noticed under Mohr, Joseph.

12. Through the starry midnight dim. Christmas. No. 53, in 6 st. of 3 l., and the refrain "Hallelujah!"

13. When the Lord of Love was here. Life of Christ. No. 66, in 6 st. of 4 l. It has passed into The Newfield Hymnal; and with the omission of st. vi. and the transposition of st. iv. and v. into Hoder's Cong. Hymnary, 1894. This is his finest hymn.
In addition, Mr. Brooke has made extensive alterations in the text of the hymns which he has adopted from other writers, and has also inserted in many instances additional stanzas into well-known lyrics, and thereby brought them, to some extent, into harmony with his theological views. His own compositions are marked by great freshness of thought and tenderness of expression. [W. G. H.]

Brooke, William Thomas, b. Jan. 9, 1848, and educated at the City of London School. After entering commercial life he felt a warm interest in hymnology, and from his intimate acquaintance with Daniel Sedgwick he gradually learnt all that Sedgwick had to teach. His hymns and translations were contributed to religious newspapers and periodicals. Many are still unpublished, but hymns of his will be found in The Monthly Packet, 1872; the Methodist S. S. Hymnal, 1880; the Methodist Hymn for Missions, 1882; his own Churchman's Manual of Praise and Fam. Devotion, 1882; and in the Alter Hymnal, 1884. Following in Sedgwick's steps, he has authenticated the texts and authorship for several compilations (e.g.) Methodist S. S. H. Bk., 1880; the Cong. Bk. of Praise for Children, 1881, and others. Originally a Baptist, he became in 1867 a member of the Church of England.

Brooks, Charles Timothy. An American Unitarian Minister, b. at Salem, Mass., June 20, 1813, and graduated at Harvard, 1832, and the Divinity School, Cambridge, U.S., 1835. In that year he began his ministry at Nahant, subsequently preaching at Bangor and Augusta (Maine), Windsor (Vermont). In 1837 he became pastor of Newport, Rhode Island, and retained the same charge until 1871, when he resigned through ill-health. For details concerning his hymn, "God bless our native land," see God save the King. [F. M. B.]

Brother, now thy toils are o'er. G. Moultrie. [Burial.] Written during the singing of a requiem in the Church of St. Nicholas, Derby, in the summer of 1863, and first pub. in the Church Times, Sept. 3rd, 1864, and in his ed. of the Primer, 1864. In 1867 it was embodied in the author's Hymns and Lyrics, pp. 413-15, in 11 st. of 4 l., with the refrain: and, in an abridged form, in the People's H., 1867, No. 380. Upon this last the Rev. John Ellerton's hymn, "Now the labourer's task is o'er" (q.v.), is based, and st. i. v., and vii., are specially therein as st. i. i.,. and vii. Mr. Moultrie's hymn was originally intended, "To be sung as the body leaves the church," and is a free paraphrase of detached portions of the Roman Office for the Dead. Orig. text as above. Authorized arrangement in People's H.

Brother, thou art gone before us. H. H. Milman. [Burial.] This hymn is introduced by Dean Milman in his Martyr of Antioch, a Dramatic Poem, 1822, pp. 33-5, as being sung at "The Place of Burial of the Christians." At the close of a funeral at night, Fabius, Bishop of Antioch, is represented as saying:—

"So by the side of martyr'd Babylas, Brother, thou slumberest; silent as yon stars, And silent as the falling dew around thee. We leave thy verdant grave. But oh! shall we, When we put off the load of mortal life, Depart like thee as in a deeper sleep, With the sweet smile of life on the closed lips, or in an agony of mortal pain, By the pitch'd stake, or den of raging lions?"

One of the first to extract it from the dramatic poem, and constitute it as a hymn for C. U. was Elliott, who included it in his Ps. and Hym., 1835. It soon became popular, and is given in a great number of hymnals in Great Britain and America. Orig. text in H. Comp., with "fear" changed to "fears" in st. ii. 1, 5.

Brought to the Font with holy care. E. Oster, [Holy Baptism—General.] 1st pub. in Hull's Misc. H. Bk., 1836, No. 229, in ist of 4 l., and entitled "For a Blessing on our Christian Privileges:" and again, with alterations, in the July number of the author's Church and King, for 1837. No. 238 in Kennedy, 1863, is the original Mitre text. Although not strictly speaking a hymn for Holy Baptism, yet it is suitable to be sung during a service when that Sacrament has been administered.

Brown, Abner William, M.A., b. at Mount Tabor, Jamaica, Sept. 30, 1800, but was removed from Jamaica to Scotland in 1802. His early education was at the Edinburgh Grammar School, High School, and University, from whence he passed to Lincoln's Inn to read for the Bar. Ill-health caused him to suspend all studies for some time. Ultimately he entered the University of Cambridge, and took his degree in 1830. Ordained in 1831 to the rectory of Pythchley, Northamptonshire, in 1832 he became the Vicar of the same parish, from whence he removed to Gresford, in the same county, in 1851. He d. there Sept. 15, 1872. He was an Hon. Canon of Peterborough Cathedral from about 1851. Canon Brown's hymnological productions are:—

(1) Iterints and Collect Hymns, 1849; (2) Pytchley School Hymn-Book, 1844; (3) Home Lyrics (privately printed, and containing hymns by a Scotch writer), 1851; (4) A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for Public Worship, Lond., Hamilton, Adams, and Co., 1865.

To each of these works Canon Brown contributed original hymns. Beyond his own Sel., very few of these hymns are in C. U. The most popular is "O God for ever near." [J. J.]

Brown, James Baldwin, b. at the Inner Temple, Aug. 13, 1820. He received his education at University College, London, graduating B.A. in 1838. For a short time he studied for the Bar, but soon passed from the Inner Temple to Highbury College to prepare for the Congregational Ministry. In 1843 he became pastor of the London Road Congregational Chapel, Derby; and in 1846 of the Claylands Independent Chapel, Claylands Road, London. In 1870 his congregation removed to their new chapel at Brixton. In 1878 he was Chairman of the Congregational Union. He d. at Brixton, 1884. His prose writings were numerous. He is known to hymnology chiefly through his popular hymn, "For increase of Faith"—"Thou Who our faithless hearts canst read."
Brown, John Newton, D.D., was b. at New London, Connecticut, June 29, 1803, and graduated at Madison University, 1823. From 1836 to 1845 he was Professor of Theology at New Hampshioe, New Hampshire; and from 1845-1849 pastor at Lexington, Virginia. He d. in 1869. Dr. Brown was some time editor of the Baptist Publication Society, the Christian Chronicle, and the National Baptist. His works include Encyclopaedia of Religious Knowledge, 1831; Memorials of Baptist Ministers, 1834; Poems, 1840. His hymn:—

Go, spirit of the sainted dead, appeared in The Parnassian (Rev. B. Stow and S. F. Smith), 1843, No. 1100, and thence has passed into other Baptist collections.

[F. M. B.]

Brown, Phoebe, née Hinckle. A member of the Congregational body, b. at Canaan, Columbia County, New York, May 1, 1743, she was left an orphan when two years old. At time she fell into the hands of a relative who kept her a county gool. These, says her son, "were years of intense and cruel suffering. The tale of her early life which she has left her children is a narrative of such deprivations, cruel treatment, and toil, as breaks my heart to read. Escaping from this bondage at 18, she was bought by kind people, and sent for three months to a common school at Claverack, N.Y., where she learned to write, and made profession of faith in Christ. In 1805 she was married to Timothy H. Brown, a painter, and subsequently lived at East Windsor and Ellington, Connecticut, Monroe, Mass., and at Marshall, Henry County, Illinois. She d. at the last-named place, Oct. 10, 1831. Most of her hymns were written at Monroe, Mass. Through a life of poverty and trial she was "a most devoted mother, wife, and Christian." Her son, the Rev. S. R. Brown, D.D., became the first American Missionary to Japan, and two of her grandchildren are now in the same mission. In addition to her hymns, two or more volumes of prose by her have been published. Her Autobiography and Poems were prepared for publication, when the editor died, and they are yet to appear. Despite all her disadvantages, Mrs. Brown's talents and work are superior to those of any other early female hymnist of America. It is hoped that her manuscripts may some day be competently examined, and selected portions from them be published. Four of her hymns appeared in Nettleton's Village Hymn. 1824, with the signature "B."

1. As once the Saviour took His seat. Penitence.
2. Go, messenger of love, and bear. Missions.
3. I love to steal awhile away. Retirement.

Of these No. 2 is a Missionary hymn, written in 1817, but first pub. in the Village Hymn, 1824; No. 3 was written in 1818, and few hymns have a more pathetic history. It is this:—

Mrs. Brown was living at Ellington with "four little children, in a small unfinished house, a sick sister in the only finished room, and not a place above or below where I could retire for devotion." Not far off stood the finest house in the neighborhood, with a large garden. Towards this the poor woman used to bend her steps at dusk, loving, as she writes, "to smell the fragrance of fruits and flowers, though I could not see them," and commune with Nature and God. This she did, never dreaming that she was intruding, her habits watched, or her motives misconstrued, till one day the lady of the mansion turned rudely upon her with "Mrs. Brown, why do you come up at evening so near our house, and then go back without coming in? If you want anything why don't you come in and ask for it?" Mrs. B. adds, "There was something in her manner more than her words, that grieved me. I went home, and that evening was left alone. After my children were all in bed, except my baby, I sat down in the kitchen with my child in my arms, when the grief of my heart burst forth in a flood of tears. I took pen and paper, and gave vent to my oppressed heart."

The poem then written is headed "An Apology for my Twilight Rambles, addressed to a Lady, Aug. 9, 1818." The original has nine stanzas, the second beginning, "I love to steal awhile away." Years after, when Nettleton was seeking original matter for his Village Hymns (1824), this piece was abridged and altered into the present familiar form, either by Mrs. Brown herself, her pastor (Mr. Hyde), or Nettleton. Its popularity was great from the first. In 1824 it was included in the Leech's H. Bk. and thus became known to English collections. It is found in Lyra Sac. Amer., p. 29.

In 1819 Mrs. Brown wrote two hymns which were strangely overlooked by Nettleton, and did not appear till 1831 in Hastings' Spiritual Songs. These are:—

5. How sweet the melting ray. Morning.
6. 0 Lord, Thy work revive. For a Revival.

Both are found in Lyra Sac. Amer., pp. 28-33, No. 6 was altered by the author for Norton's "Cony.'s H. Bk., 1857. This, according to Norton, is her authorized text. It is widely used in America, and is also found in a few English collections, including Reed's H. Bk. and the N. Cony. and sometimes is attributed in error to Hastings. Her later hymns are:—

7. Great God, we would to Thee make known. This appeared in the Mother's H. Bk., 1834.

8. We come, 0 Lord, before Thy throne. For Sailors.
9. Grant the abundance of the sea. For Sailors.

Two hymns for sailors, which appeared in Linsley and Davis' Select Hymns, 1836.

10. Assembled at [round] Thine altar, Lord. Holy Communion. This also appeared in the Select Hymns, 1836, and was altered for Norton's "Cony. H. Bk., 1857. It is a good hymn, and deserves wider adoption.

In addition to the foregoing there are four hymns by her in Parish Hymns (Phila.), 1843, to which they were contributed; and there may be many others in various collections which are uncredited.

[F. M. B.]

Brown, William, author of the hymn "Welcome, sacred day of rest" (Sunday), which appeared in A Collection of Hymns designed as an Appendix to Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns, by T. Russell, 1811, 17th ed., 1829, No. 560, in 2 st. of 8 l., is known only as the writer of this hymn, and of a poetical work, pub. in 1822. The hymn is in somewhat extensive use in G. Brit. and America. Orig. text in the S. P. C. K. Ps. and Hymns, No. 185; and Dr. Hatfield's (Amer.) Church H. Bk., 1872, No. 39; in each case with the orig. line, etc., l. 2, changed from "Time of leaving worldly care," to "Sweet repose from worldly care."

Brown-Borthwick, Robert, b. at Aberdeen, May 18, 1840, and educated at St. Mary Hall, Oxford. Taking Holy Orders in 1865, he has been Curate of Sudeley (and Chaplain of the Brotherhood, Union), Gloucestershire, 1865—6, and Evesham, 1866—8; Assistant Minister of Quebec Chapel, London, 1868—9; and Incumbent of Holy Trinity, Grange, near Keswick, 1869. He is now (1886) Vicar of All Saints, Scarborough. His publications, in addition to his prose works, are:—Supplemental Hymn and Tune Book, 1867 (4th ed., 1871); Eighteen Hymns for Church and Home, 1870; Select Hymns for Church and Home, 1871; and various Kyries, Hymn Tunes, Church music, &c. In addition he has rendered good service as one of the four Editors of the S. P. C. K. Church Hymn. In this last work three of his best hymns are found: "Come, O Jesus, to Thy Table;" "O Holy Jesus, Prince of Peace;" "Let us raise our grateful voices." Canon Westcott in his Paragraph Preface acknowledges Mr. Brown-Borthwick's assistance in preparing that work for the press as of great value therefrom.

Of Mr. Brown-Borthwick's hymns the following appeared in his Sixteen Hymns, etc., 1870:—

1. Come, O Jesus, to Thy Table. Holy Communion.
2. Lord, in the watches of the night. Midnight.

The author notes of this hymn, "This is not a congregational hymn, but a meditation, to be read by non-communists at retiring, or to be sung by the choir alone, antiphonally, kneeling."

These hymns were repeated in his Select Hymns, etc., 1871—85. The following is also in that collection:—

4. Let us raise our grateful (gracious) voices. Flower Services, or Thanksgiving. Written in Borrowdale, on a summer morning in 1870, and pub. in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, etc., 1871. [J. J.]

Brown, Felicia Dorothea. [Hannah, F. B.]

Brown, Charlotte Elizabeth. [Tenn., C. E.]

Brown, Jane Euphemia. [Saxby, J. E.]

Brown, Mary Ann. [Gray, M. A.]

Brown, Moses, was b. in humble circumstances in 1763, and was distinguished as a poet and miscellaneous writer. He was Vicar of Olney, Bucks, and for some time Chaplain of Morden College, Blackheath, Kent, where he d. Sept. 13, 1787. His poetical works were:—

(1) Poems, 1791; (2) The Works, and Rest of the Creation, in two parts. Pt. 1, An Essay on the Finiverse; Pt. II, Sun and Moon, etc., 1794 (5th ed., 1805). His hymns are contained in Pt. IV. of the Sunday Thoughts, together with versions of Ps. 130 and 139. He is known chiefly through his hymn "When with a mind devoutly pressed" (Pentecost), which is "Night Song, No. viii.," in 5 st. of 4, 1, of the Sunday Thoughts, having originally appeared in his Poems, 1791, p. 557. He complains in a note of editors of hymn-books printing this hymn "from an imperfect copy." It has been ascribed from time to time to various authors. (3) He also pub. in 1772, a tr. of J. L. Zimmerman's "Excellency of the Knowledge of Jesus Christ," 1772, from which the hymn,

"Tis not too hard, too high an aim," is taken. It is ann. stated under "Es ist nicht schwert."

Brown, Simon. A contemporary of Dr. Watts, b. at Shepton Mallet, Somersetshire, cir. 1690, and d. in 1752. After studying for the Independent Ministry under the late John Moore, of Bridgewater, he became pastor of an Independent charge in Portsmouth, and then, in 1716, of the Independent Chapel in Old Jewry, London. His later years were clouded by a peculiar melancholy, under the influence of which "he imagined that God had in a gradual manner annihilated in him the thinking substance, and utterly divorced him of consciousness."

"It is supposed that the death of a highwayman at his hands during a violent struggle, followed by that of his wife and son a short time after, had much to do in producing this sad result. Whilst thus contending that he had no power to think, he produced a work in defence of Christianity, another in defence of the Trinity, a third, as an Exposition of the 1st Ep. to the Corinthians, and a fourth, in the form of a Dictionary. His publications number over 20. Of these works, he is known to hymnology through his:—

Hymns and Spiritual Songs, in Three Books, designed as a Supplement to Dr. Watts, &c., 1720, 2nd ed. 1741, 3rd ed. 1769. It contains 166 hymns, 7 doxologies, and a Preface of some historical interest."

In the old collections Simon Brown's hymns (all of which are from the above collection) held a prominent position, but in modern hymnals they are fast passing out of use. The best known and most widely used are "Come, Holy [gracious] Spirit, Heavenly Dove," "O God, on Thee we all depend," and "Lord, at Thy feet we sinners lie." In addition the following are also in C. U.:—

2. Eternal God, of beings First. God all in all.
3. Frequent the day of God returns. Sunday.
4. Great First of beings, Mighty Lord. Creation.
5. Great God, my joyful thanks to Thee. Thanksgiving.
8. Great Ruler of the earth and sky. Providence.
10. Hall, happy day, the [thou] day of holy rest. Sunday.
11. I cannot shun the stroke of death. Death.
12. Lord, Thou art good; all nature shows. Divine Goodness.
13. Lord, what a feeble frame is ours. Fraility of Life.
14. O God, on Thee we all depend. Confidence in God. [J. J.]

Brown, Sir Thomas. b. in St. Michael's, Cheapside, London, Oct. 19, 1605, and educated at Winchester, and at the Hall now known as Penbrooke College, Oxford, graduating B.A. in 1626. He practised as a physician in Oxfordshire, Shipden Hall, near Halifax, Yorkshire, and at Norwich. In 1671 he was knighted by Charles II. at Norwich, and died there, Oct. 10, 1682. He wrote numerous scientific, antiquarian, and other works, including Religio Medici, 1612, and others, republished in Holin's Library. The Religio Medici has been edited in the Golden Treasury series, Macmillan, 1882, with great fulness of detail. He is known principally to hymnology through his fine hymn, "The night is come; like to the day."

too, was the author of The Oxford Divines not Members of the Church of England, 1839; Thoughts of the Times, 1838; and the National Bankruptcy and other Poems, London, Pickering, 1814. From this last work a version of the 18th Ps. has come into somewhat extensive use in English-speaking countries. It is the well-known "Praise the Lord of heaven, praise Him in the height." Orig. text in Lord Sillone's Bk. of Praise, 1862, p. 25.

Browning, Elizabeth, née Barrett, daughter of Mr. Barrett, an English country gentleman, and wife of Robert Browning, the poet, was b. in London 1809, and d. at Florence in 1861. As a poetess she stands at the head of English female writers, and her secular works are well known. Sacred pieces from her work are in C. U. in America. They include:
1. God save Love, whose fount Thou art.
3. On all the thoughts of God, that are. Death.
4. What would we give to our beloved? Ps. ii., ii. of No. 3.
5. When Jesus' friend had ceased to be. Friendship.

These hymns are in Brecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855. Hege and Huntington's Hym. for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, U.S., 1853, &c.

Bruce, Charles, b. Oct. 25, 1837, at Brantree, Essex. Mr. Bruce has been engaged in literary work, and chiefly as an amanuensis. He has written about 25 books, mostly for the young, and also contributed to various magazines. Of the few hymns which he has composed the following are in C. U.:
1. Father, O hear me. Prayer.
2. When little hearts believe and love. Trust.

[Dr. G. H.]

Bruce, Michael, son of a Scottish weaver, was born at Kinnesswood, Perthshire, Scotland, March 27, 1746, and educated at the village school, Edinburgh University (where he first became acquainted with John Logan, and the Theological Hall of the Associate Synod, held at Kinross, under the Rev. John Swanton, intending ultimately to enter the ministry, a hope which was frustrated by his untimely death. To assist in procuring University fees and maintenance he for some time conducted a school, during the recess, at Gairney Bridge, and subsequently at Forrest Mill, near Tillicoultry. Whilst yet a student he died at Kinnesswood, July 5th, 1767.

Logan, John, son of a farmer, was born at Bal. Midlothian, 1748, and educated at Edinburgh University, in due course entering the ministry of the Church of Scotland and becoming the minister of South Leith in 1770. During the time he held this charge he delivered a course of lectures on philosophy with much success. While he was thus engaged, the chair of Universal History in the University became vacant; but as a candidate he was unsuccessful. A tragedy, entitled Runnalsme, followed. He offered it to the manager of Covent Garden Theatre, but it was interdicted by the Lord Chamberlain "upon suspicion of having a seditions tendency." It was subsequently acted in Edinburgh. In 1775 he formed one of the Committee by whom the Translations and Paraphrases of the Church of Scotland was prepared. In 1782 he was compelled to resign his charge at Leith in order to prevent deposition, and finally, having passed on to London, he supported himself partly by his pen, and died there, Dec. 28, 1788. The names of Bruce and Logan are brought together because of the painful controversy which has long prevailed concerning the authorship of certain Hymns and Paraphrases of Holy Scripture which are in extensive use in the Christian Church both at home and abroad. During the latter years of Bruce's short life, he wrote various Poems, and also Hymns for a singing class at Kinnesswood, which were well known to his family and neighbours, and were eventually copied out by Bruce himself in a quarto ms. book, with the hope that some day he might see them in print. Immediately upon his death, in 1767, Logan called upon his father and requested the loan of this book that he might publish the contents for the benefit of the family. This was granted. Not till three years afterwards did a certain work, containing seventeen poems, and entitled Poems on Several Occasions, by Michael Bruce, 1770, appear, with a Preface in which it was stated that some of the Poems were by others than Bruce. Bruce's father immediately pointed out the absence from the volume of certain hymns which he called his son's "Gospel Sonnets," and members of the singing class at Kinnesswood also noted the absence of hymns with which they were familiar. Letters of remonstrance and demands for the return of the quarto ms. book of Bruce by the father remaining unanswered, led him eventually to see Logan in person. No book was forthcoming, a few scraps of ms. only were returned, and Logan accounted for the absence of the book by saying he feared "that the servants had sung fouls with it." For a time the matter rested here, only to be revived with renewed interest by the publication, in 1781 (14 years after the death of Bruce, and 11 after the Poems, &c., were issued), of Poems. By the Rev. Mr. Logan, One of the Ministers of Leith. In this volume, an "Ode to the Cuckoo," a poem of exquisite beauty, and other poetical pieces which appeared in the Poems on Several Occasions, by Michael Bruce, were repeated, and claimed as his own by Logan. In addition, certain Hymns and Paraphrases were included, most of which were of sterling merit, and poetical excellence. It has been shown, we think, most conclusively by Dr. Mackelvie in his Life of Bruce prefixed to the Poems, 1837, and by Dr. Grosart in his Works of M. Bruce, 1863, that the "Ode to the Cuckoo," "Lochleven," and other poetical pieces were taken from the ms. book of M. Bruce. The Hymns and Paraphrases, most of which were included in the Translations and Paraphrases during the same year, were also claimed for Bruce. With these we have to deal, and as the question has been of more than usual interest we give the respective claims made on behalf of Bruce and Logan in parallel columns as follows:

BRUCE. LOGAN.
1. Bruce known to have written hymns for a singing class in Kinnesswood as early as 1744.
1. Logan then 16 years of age, and not known to have written anything to that date.
4. Bruce died in 1787, and his father handed his use to Logan, at Logan’s request, for publication.

5. Immediately upon the publication of Logan’s Poems the three hymns following were identified by educated personal friends of Bruce as his, such identification being by actual quotations of stanzas:

1. F. Few are thy days and full of woe.
2. O happy is the man who hears.
3. Behold the mountain of the Lord.

6. In addition, these claims were corroborated by the members of the singing class at Kinnesswood, his family, and his neighbours, to whom they were familiar, before seen in print.

These three hymns we therefore assign without reservation to M. Bruce.

II. A second series of hymns which are claimed, on the one hand for M. Bruce and on the other for J. Logan, have caused, from the somewhat indefinite character of the evidence brought forward on both sides, some anxiety on the part of editors and controversialists.

The sum of the argument is this:

1. Bruce is known to have written hymns, other than the three given above, for the singing class at Kinnesswood.
2. These, in common with all his Poetical Pieces, were written in the same way as the three above, and with them were handed to J. Logan for publication by Bruce’s father.
3. In common with the three hymns they were omitted from the volume of Bruce’s Poetical Works, but included with them by Logan in his Poems, 1781, as his own.
4. These on their publication were claimed by Bruce’s brother James as hymns known to him for years as the lost hymns of his brother Michael, and this was supported by the common consent of the members of the Kinnesswood singing class, and many of his intimate friends of M. Bruce.
5. Accordingly, but for Logan it must be pointed out that from the beginning of the controversy none of these witnesses are brought forward as giving one single line of any one of these hymns (as was done with the three before noted) as evidence that they had known the hymns before they were in print. The statements are thus general, and not particular, and consist more of personal impressions than of definite and positive statements of facts.

6. Notwithstanding this indefiniteness, there is no positive evidence on the other side save that the hymns were printed in a volume of poetry which Logan claimed as his own.

7. Failing to find any other evidence than this, the claim of Logan, is quite well established.

8. The following are the three hymns ascribed to the Committee of the 1781 Translation and Paraphrases, and are not found in Logan’s Poems of the same year. These, in common with the other Tr. and Para., were given anonymously.

9. While the claim of Logan to the authorship of anything outside of Logan’s Poems is thus disposed of, we are not so disposed of at the time by friend or enemy. The claim upon these hymns as the work of Bruce is only made when it is found that Logan had given them to the Committee of the 1781 Translation and Paraphrases, and this apparently on the ground that a man who had confessedly stolen much must necessarily have stolen all. This we cannot allow. On the evidence, therefore, that no claim was made by Bruce’s family and friends to the Bruce authorship of anything outside of Logan’s Poems; that the following were first published in the Tr. & Paraph. of 1781; and that at first their authorship was unknown to the general public and unclaimed by anyone; and that it was only when Logan’s claim to the authorship was made known that the counter-claim for Bruce was set up — we hold that, until clearer evidence is brought forward on behalf of Bruce, the hymns, or paraphrases, following must be ascribed to J. Logan:

10. Who can resist the Almighty arm.
11. In streets and openings of the gates.
12. Thus speaks the heathen: How shall man.
13. Take comfort, Christians, when your friends.
14. The hour of my departure’s come.

15. We feel some reluctance in giving the last of these hymns to Logan, but with the evidence before us we cannot do otherwise. Internal evidence is in favour of Bruce, and the sentiments are natural to one who knew he was about to die. Beyond this, for Bruce, there is no evidence; and to Logan, as the defendant, we must give the benefit of the doubt.

16. The following, which are found only in the Tr. & Paraph. of 1781, were never so seriously disputed by the friends of Bruce, the second being original, the first a revision from the Tr. & Paraph. of 1745; and the third a revision of Doddridge and Dr. Hugh Blair:

17. Let Christian faith and hope dispel.
18. Thus speaks the high and holy One.
19. What though no flowers the fir-tree clothe.

In addition, we see no cause to deny to Logan the few changes, and few stanzas, which are found in Dodridge:

20. O field of Bethel, by Whose hand.

V. Of the above hymns 5 are recasts of hymns in the Scottish Tr. and Para. of 1745. Those are: ‘Behold the mountain of the Lord’ (see “In happier days the mount of God”); ‘When Jesus by the Virgin brought’ (see “Now let Thy servant die in peace”); ‘Behold the ambassador divine’ (see “Behold my servant, see Him rise”); ‘Let Christian faith and hope dispel’ (see “Now let our souls ascend above”); and “What though no flowers the fir-tree clothe” (see “So firm the saints’ foundation stands”).

The whole of these Bruce-Logan hymns and recasts are annotated in full under their respective first lines (q.v.) in the body of this work. As one outcome of these annotations it is curious to note that every hymn which we have ascribed to M. Bruce has come into more or less extensive use outside of the Translations and Paraphrases, and that not one which we have ascribed to Logan, except "Let Christian faith and hope dispel," and "To Thee, O Comforter, Christians," etc., is found beyond that mark, unless we give to Logan the plaintive "The hour of my departure come," (which Dr. Grosart claims for Bruce), and the recast "O God of Bethel, by Whose hand, whose success is due to Doddridge. This is the verdiy of 100 years use of those hymns, and shows conclusively the poetic strength of Bruce and the weakness of Logan.

Bruce, William, D.D., eldest s. of the Rev. William Bruce, United Secession minister at South Shields (who after 1818, conducted the Ardsley Academy, Cardross, Dumfriesshire), was b. at South Shields, April 7, 1812. He studied at the University of Glasgow, which, in 1838, conferred on him the degree of D.D., and became, in 1838, minister of Infirmary Street U. Church, Edinburgh (then Cowgate). He was Moderator of Synod in 1868. In 1870 he was appointed a member of the Hymn Committee of the U. P. Church, and contributed 2 hymns to their Presbyterian Hymnal, 1876. These he included, with 9 others, in his Hebrew Odes and other Poems, 1874 (Edinb.: D. S. Stewart). He also pubd., in 1878, Memories: a Table and other Poems. He d. at Bridge of Allan, Nov. 15, 1882. The two hymns contributed to the Presbyterian Hymnal are:

1. Holy Father, Thou hast given, Holy Scripture.
2. The seed we bury in the earth, Resurrection.

Brunn alles Heils, dich ehren wir, G. Tersteegen. [Trinity Sunday.] Based on the blessing of Isracl, Numb. vii. 24-27, and 1st pub. in the 4th ed., 1745, of Tersteegen's Griesches Blumengärntein (Hl. No. 75), in 5 st. of 4 l., entitled, "A prayer of faith at morning, at evening, at table, after sermon, and at all times." In the Unv. L. S., 1851, it is No. 214.

1. The Resurrection is complete, there is no more death.
2. The Resurrection is complete, there is no more death.
3. The Resurrection is complete, there is no more death.
4. The Resurrection is complete, there is no more death.
5. When he who from the scourge of wrong, Hope of the Resurrection. This is seldom found in modern hymnals. Text in Lyra Sac. Amer., 1869.

The above hymns (1-5) appeared in the 1st ed. of Dr. H. D. Seymour's (Unitarian) Ps. & Psalms for Social and Private Worship, 1829, and were printed at the instance of Mr. Wedgwood. Following as near as possible the chronological order of the hymns we have next:

6. O Thou, Whose own vast temple stands. Opening of a Place of Worship. Written in 1835 for the Dedication of a Chapel in Prince Street, N. Y. This is the most widely known of this author's hymns. It was introduced into G. Britain as early as 1837, when it was included in Beard's Col. No. 405. It is in 4 st. of 4 l. Orig. text in Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1845, No. 107, and Martineau, 1873, No. 727. Another form of the hymn is "Thou, Whose unmeasured temple stands." This is No. 569 in the Amer.
All that in this wide world we see. Omnipresence.

This is dated 1836. In his Coll., in 1837, No. 17, Beard gives it as an original contributed thereto, thus fixing its first publication.

Thee unrelenting past. The Past. Dates from 1839. Also in Martinus, 1873, No. 508.

Not in the solitude. God in the City. Dates from 1836, and is No. 26 in Martinus, 1873.

This is included with Nos. 8 and 9, is more a poem than hymn. It is addressed "To a Water-fowl," and dates from 1836. In Martinus, 1873.

Dear ties of mutual succour bind. Charity Sermons. No. 905 in the Amer. Methodist Episcopal Hymnal, 1878. It dates from about 1836.

O Thou whose love can never forget. Ordination.

Given (but not as an original contributed thereto) in Beard's Coll. (Eng.), 1837.

Mighty One, before Whose face. Ordination. This is dated 1840 (but is probably earlier), and is given in several collections, including Mr. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1853, and others.

Look from Thy sphere of endless day. Home Missions. This hymn has also attained to considerable use both in G. Britain and America. It dates from 1840. It is in the S. for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1835; Horder's Cong. Hymn., 1884, &c.

Lord, who ordainest for mankind. Thanks for a Mother's love. Written at Dr. Osgood's suggestion, and printed in his Christian Worship, 1802. It is repeated in Martinus, 1873.

All praise to Him of Nazareth. Holy Communion. Dr. Hattfield in his Church H. B., 1874, No. 736, gives this in 3 st. of 4 lines, in the Songs for the Sanctuary it is in its full form of 5 st. It dates from 1864.

As shadows cast by cloud and sun. Epiphany. In the Methodist Episcopal Hymnal, N. Y., 1878, It was contributed to that Hymnal, 1877, but was composed for the Semi-Centennial Celebration of the Church of the Messiah, Boston, March 19, 1875.

When doomed to death the Apostles lay. On behalf of Dravvords. Also in the Methodist Episcopal Hymnal, 1878.

In addition to the above the following hymns by Bryant are in limited use:

19. All things that are on earth. Love of God. In Beard's Coll., 1837.

21. How shall I know thee in the sphere which keeps? The Future Life. In the Suppl. to the Boston Hymn. for the Church of Christ, 1853.

24. When the blind suppliant in the way. Opening the eyes of the blind. In the Methodist Episcopal Hymnal, 1878, N. Y., No. 201. It dates from 1874.

25. Wild was the day, the wintry sea. The Pilgrim Father. In Hymns of the Spirit, by Longfellow and Johnson. Boston, 1864.

In 1869, Hymns by W. C. Bryant, 12mo, were privately printed. In this work the texts of many of the older hymns are altered. The dates of his hymns are difficult to determine, and many of those given above are approximate only. Bryant's genius was cool, meditative, and not distinguished by lyric fire.

Buchanan, George, b. at Killeen, Stirlingshire, 1506. He was an eminent writer, and for some time was tutor to the Earl of Moray, the natural son of James V. Having embraced the doctrines of the Reformation he attacked the Franciscans in a satirical poem written by the command of James V. His life being in danger he fled to England, then to France and Portugal. In Portugal he was confined in a monastery on account of his free expression of opinions. During that confinement he rendered the Book of Psalms into Latin Verse, and subsequently pub. it in Paris, 1542. In 1551 he obtained his liberty, and some time after returned to Scotland and became tutor to James VI. He d. at Edinburgh in 1582. His version of the Psalms was rendered into English in 1754 by the Rev. T. Cradock. A few years later James Fain paraphrased several individual Psalms. James Merrick also adapted the 122nd.
Buchfelder, Ernst Wilhelm, b. June 5, 1843, at Berneburg, E. Friesland, Hanover. At first he studied law, but was so much impressed by a sermon he heard at Cassel, in 1872, from Theodor Under-Eyck, that he forthwith began to study theology at the University of Utrecht, and at the close of his studies, attended for two years on the staff of Under-Eyck, the pastor of St. Martin's Church, Bremen. In 1878 he became pastor at Glückstadt in Holstein; 1879, rector of the classical school at Emden, in East Friesland; in 1884 preacher and inspector at Bilingen, in Wetterenia; in 1887 preacher at Mühlenberg on the Ruhr; and finally preacher at Emden, where he d. March 8, 1711 (Koch, vi. 14–15. Allgemeine Deutsche Biog., iii. 478, the latter saying he d. May 8). Koch says:—

"Only one hymn by him has appeared in print, but one of such importance that it may be reckoned a jewel of the Reformed hymnody. It bears the true impress of his inner life and was probably written in that year, 1672, so memorable in his history." It is:—

Erlesenh Herrn, mein Licht. [True and False Christianity.] Included in the Geschichtliche G. B. Halle, 1697, p. 53, and repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 245, in 16 st. of 7 l. Also in the Univ. L. S. 1851, No. 303. It is true:—

O Lord! afford a sinner light. A recast of the 1756 Moravian tr. (see below) in 8 st. of C. M., viii, being by T. Bird, 1826—as No. 280 in the Moravian H. H. Bk., 1826, repeated, abridge, in J. A. Luftsch's Coll., 1852, No. 316. Other tr. are:—

Bucken, Henry James, M.A., B. of the Rev. James Buckeck, Rector of Siddington, near Cirencester, Gloucester; b. at Siddington, Sept. 9, 1803. He was educated at Rugby and Queen's College, Oxford, graduating B.A. in 1826, and became Assistant Master at Rugby the same year. He took Holy Orders in 1827, and d. at Rugby June 6, 1871. He was probably the editor of the first ed. of the Rugby School Collection. In 1839 he edited a Collection of Hymns for the Rugby Parish Church, and in 1850 compiled, with Dr. Gough, a new ed. of the Collection for the Rugby School Chapel. That collection contains 14 of his hymns, a few of which were from the Latin and German. His Hymns translated from the German were pub. 1842. It contained 67 translations from Bunsen's Versfabeln, 1833, most of which are in the original metres, and are annotated in this work. Buckeck's hymns with the exception of the work of the Public Schools.

Buckworth, John, b. at Colsterworth, Lincolnshire, Jan. 16, 1770, and d. April 2, 1853. On taking Holy Orders he became Curate of Dewsbury, and subsequently Vicar of the same place. He pub. Hymns for Sunday Schools (3rd ed. 1814, 10th ed. 1830). This collection of 100 hymns contained a few originals by buckworth. Of these hymns, most of which are from the 3rd ed. 1814, the following are still in C. U.:

1. Assembled in our school to-day. Opening of a S. School. This hymn has long been regarded, both in G. Britain and America, as anonymous.

2. Children of God, 0 blessed name. Adoption. In several collections, including the lovers S. B. Bk., 1833 to 1853; Common Prayer, 1879, and others.

4. Christ is (was) merciful and mild. For Infants. In W. R. Stevenson's School Hymnal, 1860, No. 9.

7. Lord, look upon a little child. Seeking Jesus. This is the most popular and widely used of Buckworth's hymns. It is worthy of greater attention than it has hitherto received.

Not 6 and 7 were added to Pt. II, of the Hymns for S. S. between 1827 and 1836. As however this ed. of the Hymns, etc., was not pub. by Buckworth, there is some uncertainty as to the authorship of these hymns.

[J. J.]

Budden, William, contributed a few hymns to the Evangelical Magazine in 1763, etc., under the signature of "W. B." Some of these hymns were reprinted by John Dobell, in his New Selection, 1806. One of these is still in C. U.:

Come, let our voices join. Sunday School Anniversary. 1st printed in the Evangelical Mag., Dec., 1755. In 6 st. of 11, signed "W. B." and headed, "A Hymn composed for the use of the Congregation and Sunday School Children belonging to the Rev. Mr. Ashburner's Meeting, Poole, Dorset." In 1806 it was included in Dobell's New Sec., in 1819, in R. Hill's coll. of Hymns for S. Schools, and others. It is generally known as modern hymn-books as, "Come, let our voices ascend."

This altered form was given by T. Potter in his 6th ed. of his Sec., 1815.

[W. T. B.]

Bulfinch, Stephen Greenleaf, D.D. This Unitarian minister was b. at Boston, June 18, 1809, and removed to Washington in 1818, his father being the architect of the Capitol. He graduated at Columbia College and the Cambridge Theological School. In 1831 he was ordained at Charleston, S.C., as assistant and Dr. Gilman. Subsequently he was pastor at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Washington, 1838; Nashua, New Hampshire, 1843; Dorchest, Mass., 1852; and East Cambridge, Mass., 1865. He d. at the last place Oct. 12, 1870. His works include:

1. Contemplations of the Sacred; A Series of Extracts from the Gospel History, with Reflections and Original and Selected Hymns. Boston, Carter and Hendee, 1832. This has been reprinted in England.

2. Poems, Charleston, S.C., 1834. (3) Lay of the Gospel, 1845. In addition to these works, which contain his original hymns, he also pub. (4) The Harp and Cross, a selection of hymns, in 1857.

These of his hymns which have attained to the greatest popularity are:

1. Hail to the Sabbath day. Sunday. In the Contemplations, &c., p. 45. It is appended to Sect. xii. on the "Walk through the cornfields," and is in 5 st. of 4 l. It is in extensive use both in G. Britain and America, and is the best known of this author's hymns. In many collections it begins with st. ii., "Lord, in Thy [this] sacred hour."

2. Hast not thy heart within thee burned? Presence of Christ. In the Contemplations, &c., p. 148, as the accompanying hymn to the Reflections on Jesus appearing to His disciples on their way to Emmaus. It is in 5 st. of 4 l. and is given in the Collections of Beard, Martin, and others, in G. British.

The hymn in 4 st. of 4 lines, appended to Sect. xxxv. on "Peter's confession of Christ," in the Contemplations, &c., p. 109. It ranks next in popularity to "Hail to the Sabbath day."

In addition to these hymns which best represent Dr. Bulfinch's powers as a sacred poet, the following are also in limited use:—

6. Holy glories is the hour. The New Life.
7. It is finished! Glorious word. Good Friday.
8. There is a strife we all must wage. Life's Duty.

These are from his Poems, 1834. The next—

9. What power unseen by mortal eye. Cure of Noldelein's Son. From the Contemplations, &c., p. 36.
10. In the Savior's hour of death. Good Friday. Also from the Contemplations, p. 142.

Dr. Bulfinch's hymns were made known to English readers through Beard's Coll., 1837, in which 19 were given. His hymns throughout are noted for solid and tranquil piety, and deserve a wider circulation than has been accorded to them. They embrace some good hymns on the miracles of Christ. [F. M. B.]

Bullock, William, D.D., a Missionary of the S. P. G. for 32 years, and sometime Dean of Halifax, Nova Scotia, and d. March 16, 1874. He is known to hymnody principally through his popular hymn (in its revised form) by Sir F. W. Baker, "We love the place, O God!" (q. v.). This appeared with other hymns of merit in his:

Songs of the Church, Halifax, printed for the Author, 1854. Other hymns from the same work are in C. U. All his hymns were "written amidst the various scenes of missionary life, and are intended for the private and domestic use of Christians in new countries deprived of public worship," and are worthy of renewed attention. Isaac Bulmer also pub. Practical Lectures upon the History of Joseph and his Brothers, 1826.

Bulmer, Agnes, née Collinson, third daughter of Edward Collinson, b. in Lombard Street, London, Aug. 31, 1775, and married in 1793 to Mr. Joseph Bulmer. Her husband's death took place in 1828, and hers on the 30th Aug., 1837. She pub. in 1856, Memoirs of Mrs. Mortimer; in 1833, Messiahs Kingdom, a poem in 12 books; in addition to articles contributed to the Youth's Instructor, &c. Her American Hymnaries appeared posthumously in 1857—8, and her Select Letters were pub. in 1812, with an introduction and notes, by the Rev. W. M. Bunting; and her Memoir in 1817 by her sister. Mrs. Bulmer was a member of the Wesleyan Society. Her best known hymn, "Thou who laidst in Zion," was written for the laying of the foundation stone of the Oxford Road Wesleyan Chapel, Manchester, July 11, 1825, and included in the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk., 1830, No. 737.

Bulmer, John, b. in Yorkshire in 1784, educated for the Congregational Ministry at the Chesterham (Mauborough) Independent College, and successively pastor at Hersham, Rugeley, Bristol, Newbury, and Langrove, near Ross. He d. in 1837. He composed a few hymns, and compiled:

(1) Hymns, Original and Select, 1834; (2) Hymns and Evangelical Songs for the use of Sunday Schools; (3) Original Hymns intended to be sung at the Public Meetings and other Services of Temperance Societies, 1838; and (4) Beauties of the Year of Anniversaries: Logit from the Weighman's Candle; being tr. from the Welsh Poems by Rees Pritchard (died 1844). (2nd ed., 1830). See Welsh Hymnody.

From his Coll. of 1834 the following are still in C. U.:
1. Lord of the vast creation. Lent.
2. To Thee in ages past. Public Worship.

These hymns are in the N. Cond. H. Bk. and others.

Bunsen, Christian Carl Josias, Baron, Prussian Minister at Rome, 1823-1838; at Berne, 1839-1841; Ambassador to England, 1841-1854; was b. at Corbach in Waldeck, 25th August, 1791; d. at Bonn, November 28th, 1860. Having gained high honours in the Universities of Marburg and Göttingen, he began life as an assistant master in the Gymnasium of Göttingen, but soon quit the post to prosecute the inquiries which he felt to be the true aim of his life, and for which he had already, at the age of 24, conceived the idea of a comprehensive plan of philological and historical research, culminating in a synthesis of philology, history and philosophy, with the application of that synthesis to religious and civil legislation. To the accomplishment of this youthful scheme he may truly be said that his whole life was dedicated; for though employed in the diplomatic service of his country for 37 years he unremittingly carried on his labours as a scholar, and always regarded public questions under the aspect of their bearing on the moral and religious welfare of man, governing his publications by his convictions on these points. In the pursuit of the aims thus indicated, he studied successively the languages and antiquities of the Germanic, Indo-Persic, Semitic, and Egyptian peoples, the fruit of his investigations being embodied in his:

(1) "Description of Rome," 1819; (2) "Egypt's Place in the World's History," 1848; (3) "Hippocrates and his Age," 1852; (4) "Outlines of a Philosophy of Universal History," 1854; (5) "Signs of the Times," 1855; (6) "God on History," 1857-59; and lastly his (7) "Bibel-Werk," or Critical Text of the Bible, with commentaries, which he did not live to complete.

The titles of these writings will indicate the fact that the studies and employments which ever came nearest to his heart lay in the direction of theology, believing as he did that the revivification of practical Christianity was the "essential condition of universal well-being"—of "the salvation of Church and State."

"It is my conviction," he says (1821, sect. 29), "that all communion essentially consists in a common belief in the facts of the redemption of the human race through Christ; but when . . . a congregation is to be thereby formed, three points must be considered: first, agreement by means of a theological expression of the points of faith; secondly, congregational discipline; thirdly, a common form of worship."

It was for the third of these that Bunsen felt himself especially called to labour; writing in 1821:

"When I thought myself in my late illness on the brink of eternity . . . I enquired what I ought to make my calling if God should prolong my life . . . and upon my theological labours I rested as the quarter in which my calling was to be wrought. My thoughts were bent principally on my liturgical enquiries."

In 1822 he composed the Liturgy still in use at the German Chapel on the Capitol, followed in 1833 by his Versuch eines allgemeinen evangelischen Gesang- und Gebetbuches, containing 534 Hymns and 350 prayers. In Germany the tendency of the centuries that had elapsed since the great age of hymn-writers had been to adapt their language and modify their thoughts in accordance with modern taste till, as Bunsen says, "Almost everywhere do we find the admirable ancient hymns driven out of use by modern ones which are feeble and spiritless." Luther's popularities of diction and metre had to be softened down, in order to fit them to be sung in an age rejecting nearly all but iambic or trochaic verses, and moreover each government, sect, or school of opinion, thought themselves justified in remodelling the older National Hymnody according to their own ideas, till at length little remained of their primitive rugged glory, they were defaced past recognition.

Bunsen's object in his Versuch was to provide materials for a national hymn-book for the whole of Protestant Germany, irrespective of territorial, ecclesiastical or sectarian divisions. To this end he sought out the finest German hymns, and his selection included a large proportion of the best hymns in the language with no limitations of party. The success of Bunsen's work in Germany at large was attested by the rapid sale of an enormous edition, but when a reprint was called for he published instead a smaller ed. of 440 hymns. The motive was his patriotic ambition to produce a handy volume like the English Book of Common Prayer, and he fondly hoped that when the work was printed at the Kaupe Haus in 1846, it would speedily supplant the locally introduced Gesangbuch of the 18th and 19th centuries.

This hymn-book has in fact been adopted for public worship by some individual congregations in Germany, and by many scattered throughout Australia, New Zealand, &c., but it never became a National Hymn-book. Bunsen was among the first to go back to the authors and their original texts, and the abridgments and alterations he made were done with tact and circumspection. Perhaps nothing, however, can better prove the high estimation in which Bunsen's first "epoch-making" work is held than the fact that his work of 1853 has been republished as —

BÜRDE, SAMUEL G

(British) is a household book wherever English is spoken, and few, if any, collections of hymns that have appeared in England or America since its publication have been compiled without some hymns taken from the Lyra.

But no sketch of Bunsen would be complete without mentioning that he himself had no mean talent as a writer of sacred poems. Some of these pieces are given in his Biography, and one is noted under "O lux beata Trinitas." Perhaps the whole scope of Bunsen's life-work can scarcely be summed up better than in his own words written in 1817 (act. 26).

"To study and then to set forth the consciousness of God in the mind of man, and that which, in and through that consciousness, he has accomplished, especially in language and religion."

Bunting, William Maclardie, s. of Dr. Jabez Bunting, a well-known Wesleyan minister, was b. at Manchester, Nov. 23, 1803, and educated at the Wesleyan Schools at Woodhouse Grove, and Kingswood, and at St. Saviour's Grammar School, Southwark. In 1824 he entered the Wesleyan Ministry, and continued in active circuit work for twenty-five years. Failing health then compelled him to retire upon the Supernumerary list, when he took up his residence in London, and d. there on Nov. 13, 1866. In addition to editing the Select Letters of Agnes Bulmer, &c., 1842, and engaging in other literary labours, he contributed hymns to the Methodist Magazine (under the nom de plume of Alec) from time to time, and specially 43 to Dr. Leifchild's Original Hymns, 1842. Of these Dr. Leifchild rejected 8, and abbreviated 2. In 1842 these 10 hymns were pub. as An Instrument of Ten Strings, strung in aid of the Wesleyan Missions, By Alec. Other hymns by him were included in his Memorials, &c., pub. by the Rev. G. S. Rowe in 1870. Although a few of these hymns have come into C. U., they have failed as a whole to command public attention. Those in C. U. are:

1. Blessed are the pure in heart, They have, &c. Parity.
3. Dear is the day which God hath made. Sunday.
4. Father, our child we place. Holy Baptism.
8. O God, how often hath Thine ear. Devotions in the Covenant. Written in 1824, and given in the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk., 1830. This is the best known of his hymns.
9. Thou dost all things well. God all in all.

Most of these hymns are in the revised Wes. H. Bk., 1873; Nos. 1–4 and 6 were in Dr. Leifchild's Original Hymns, 1842, and all are in the Memorials, 1870. [J. J.]

Bunyan, John. This great allegorist cannot be included amongst hymn writers, except on the ground that the piece, "He that is down needs fear no fall," from pt. ii. of his Pilgrim's Progress, 1674, is given in a limited number of hymnals. The son of a mechanic, he was b. at Elstow, 1628; was a Baptist minister at Bedford; and d. in London, Aug. 1688.

Bürde, Samuel Gottlieb, was b. Dec. 7, 1753, at Breslau, where his father was keeper of St. Barbara's Church. After studying law at the University of Halle, he was (1776–78) tutor and superintendent of a charity school and some time editor of the Evangelical Magazine. He d. May 29, 1832. His works include Village Sermons, 1784; Sea Sermons, 1821; Cottage Sermons, 1826, and others. He is known to hynology by his Collection of Hymns from various Authors, intended as a Supp. to Dr. Watts’s, etc., 1784. [Preface dated Nov. 20, 1784]. It had attained to the 25th ed. in 1827. To this collection he contributed 4 hymns, the best known being, “Sweet the time, exceeding sweet” (q.v.), sometimes altered to “Great joy when Christians meet.” The remaining three, all from the 1st ed. 1784, are:
BURGER, GEORGE

2. Come ye that know and fear the Lord. Love of God. In Dr. Hatfield’s Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1874, 5 st. out of 6 are given as No. 236.

Burder’s Coll. is of importance in the history of Congregational hynology. The 1st ed. 1784, contained 187 hymns; 2nd ed., 1784, 211; 9th ed., 1803, 257 hymns; 15th ed., 1829, 277; and the last, the 25th ed., 1827, 294. His son, Henry Foster Burder, compiled a Coll. of Ps. & Hgys., 1826; and another son, the Rev. John Burder, also compiled a Coll. pub. without date. To the 18th ed., 1829, of G. Burder’s Coll., the wife of his son H. F. Burder contributed “And will the God who reigns on high” (Sunday Schools), under the signature “S. M. Burder” [Sophia Maria]. [J. J.]

BURGESS, Daniel, s. of a clergyman, b. at Collingbourne-Ducis, Wiltshire, 1645 (some accounts say 1617), was educated at Oxford, where he became a Fellow. Eventually he married, and losing his Fellowship, was introduced to the Earl of Cork, who appointed him his chaplain and gave him an incumbency in Ireland. Owing to his undoubted talent and agreeable manner he appears to have met with much success, until, through entertaining some new and startling wild notions, he lost both the favour of the Earl of Cork and the living. He returned to London, and being well received by certain Dissenting ministers, joined their communion, and made known his succession from the Church. However, the change in his conduct was more marked than ever, and ultimately he ceased to be a credit to himself or his profession; d. 1713. In the year following appeared his Psalms and Hymns and Spiritual Songs, by the late REV. Mr. Daniel Burgess, Minister of the Gospel. This work was edited by John Billingsley, and for a time attracted some attention. [J. T. B.]

BURGESS, George, d. Bishop Burgess was b. at Providence, Rhode Island, Oct. 31, 1809, and graduated at Brown University, 1826, where he was for some time a tutor. After studying for two years in Germany, he took Holy Orders, and in 1834 became Reector of Christ Church, Hartford. In 1847 he was consecrated Bishop of Maine, and also entered upon the Rectory of Christ Church, Gardiner. He d. in Haiti, April 3, 1869. His Life was pub. by his brother in 1869. His works include The Book of Psalms translated into English Verse, 1839; The American Metrical Psalter, N. Y., 1864; and Poems, Hartford, 1868. His Psalms and Hymns in use are:

2. Come ye that know and fear the Lord. Love of God. In Dr. Hatfield’s Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1874, 5 st. out of 6 are given as No. 236.

Burder’s Coll. is of importance in the history of Congregational hynology. His son, Henry Foster Burder, compiled a Coll. of Ps. & Hgys., 1826; and another son, the Rev. John Burder, also compiled a Coll. pub. without date. To the 18th ed., 1829, of G. Burder’s Coll., the wife of his son H. F. Burder contributed “And will the God who reigns on high” (Sunday Schools), under the signature “S. M. Burder” [Sophia Maria]. [J. J.]
Burgess, Henry

1. Lord, in Thy Name we spread the sail. Sailor's Hymn. This hymn is included in his Poems, 1868, p. 268, but is of unknown date and origin. The hymn, "While o'er the deep Thy servants sail," is an altered form of this hymn to be sung on behalf of sailors. It was apparently rewritten for the Connecticut Psalms and Hymns, 1845.

2. The harvest dawn is near. Ps. cxvii. From his version of Ps. cxvii., Book of Psalms, &c., 1839, beginning with st. v. Also in his Amer. Met. Psalter, p. 234. It is widely used.

3. The floods, O Lord, lift up their voice. From Ps. xciv. In his Book of Psalms, 1839, st. iii., found in his Amer. Met. Psalter, p. 179.

4. When earth from Egypt's trembling strand. Ps. cxvi. From his Book of Psalms, 1839, and Psalter, 1864. It has been included in Spurgeon's and others' collections.

Of these hymns Nos. 1 and 2 are found in almost every recent American collection but that of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Burgess, Henry, LL.D., was b. Jan. 30, 1808, and educated at a Dissenting College at Stepney. After laboring as a Nonconformist Minister for several years, he was ordained in 1830, by the Bp. of Manchester, and officiated for some time in that diocese. In 1835 he was transferred to Whalley Vicarage, Cambridgeshire, where he d. Feb. 10, 1886. He was LL.D. of the University of Glasgow, and R.D. of the University of Göttingen. Of his numerous works that which is associated with hymnology is:

These, although unsuited for congregational use, because of the rugged blank verse form given them by Dr. Burgess, may yet be adapted, and with success, for C. U.

Buried beneath the yielding wave. B. Beddome. [Holy Baptism.] Pub. from Beddome's misc. in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 603, in 5 st. of 4 l., from whence it has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America. Orig. text in Spurgeon's O. H. Bk., No. 923. In some American collections it is dated 1787 in error.

Buried in baptism with our Lord. [Holy Baptism.] Two cantos beginning with this first line are in C. U. They are:

1. Hymn No. 943 in the Moravian Liturgy and Hymns, 1849. In 1st of 4 L. of which st. i. is from J. Harr's Hymn, &c., 1762, No. 76, st. 1, and st. ii. is from the Burgess H. Bk., 1799, No. 544.

2. In the American Service of Song for Baptism, Boston, 1871, No. 821 in thus composed: st. i., ii. from Harr's hymn as above; st. iii., the second stanza of the Moravian cento, slightly altered.

Buried in shadows of the night. J. Watts. [Christ our Wisdom.] 1st pub. in his Hymns & S. Songs, 1709, Bk. I, No. 97, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Christ our Wisdom, Righteousness," &c., I Cor. i. 30. In J. Wesley's Ps. & Hymns, Charlestown, South Carolina, 1789, No. 36, it was given with the omission of st. iii. This form was repeated with alterations in Toplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1776, No. 306, and others. It is found in several modern collections both in G. Britain and America.

Burleigh, William Henry, an active reformer and member of the Unitarian body, was b. at Woodstock, Connecticut, Feb. 12, 1812, and brought up on a farm at Stainfield in the same state. In 1837 he went to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where, having been previously apprenticed to the printing trade, he pub. the Christian Witness and Temperance Banner. In 1843 he undertook the duties of editor of the Christian Freeman, at Hartford. From 1849 to 1855 he was agent of the New York State Temperance Society; and from 1855 to 1870 Harbour Master at New York. Died at Brooklyn, March 18, 1871. His political pieces and hymns were contributed to various periodicals and journals. Many of these were collected and published as Poems, Philadelphia, 1844. This volume was enlarged by additional pieces, and republished by his widow, in 1871. The dates of these hymns and poems are most difficult to determine. Where possible they are given in detail. It is somewhat curious that Burleigh's hymns are generally more extensively used in England than at home. The introduction of some of his best compositions into the English collections is due to the Lyra Sac. Amer., where they were mostly taken by the compilers. Those in use in G. Britain and America are:

1. Fades from the west the farewell light. Night. This poem, entitled "A Psalm of Night," is given in his Poems, N. Y., 1871, pp. 275-6. Although not in the 1st ed. of his Poems, 1841, it was in C. U. as early as 1844. It is in 5 st. of 8 l.

- "Day unto day uttereth speech" This is composed of st. iii.-v., and was given in the Christian Hymn of the Cheshire Pastoral Association (Amer. Unitarian), 1844, as an "Evening Hymn."

- "O Holy Father, loud the calm." This cento is in Longfellow and Johnson's Book of Hymns, 1840, and their Hymn. of the Spirit, 1864, &c., is composed of st. iv.-v.

- "Not only doth the voiceful day," No. 324 in Longfellow and Johnson's Hymns of the Spirit, 1864, is composed of st. ii.-iii. Another arrangement beginning with the same stanza is in the Lyra Sac. Amer., p. 41.

- "The brightening dawn and voiceful day." In the Hymnary (London), 1872, is altered from the Lyra Sac. Amer. as above, with the addition of a doxology.

In and through these various forms, the use of this hymn is very extensive.

3. For the dear love that kept us through the night. Morning. From Poems, 1871, in Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884.

4. From profoundest depths of tribulation. Lament. This appeared in the Supp. to Hedge and Huntington's Hymns, &c. (Unitarian), 1854, No. 843.

5. Lead us, O Father, in the paths of peace. Divine Guidance. No. 32 of the Lyra Sac. Amer., in 4 st. of 4 l., being "A Prayer for Guidance." With English compilers this hymn ranks amongst Burleigh's productions next in popularity to No. 8, and is found in most of the collections there named.

6. Not in vain I poured my supplication. Lament. This is a continuation of the same thought as No. 4 preceding, and follows it in the same Supp.
7. O deem not that earth's crowning bliss.
Mourning. This passed from the Lyra Sacra Horder's Comp. Hymn., 1884, and others. It is in his Poems, 1871, p. 258. The hymn, "From lips divine, like healing balm," in the Methodist Episcopal Hymnal, N. Y., 1878, is a cento from this hymn.

8. Still will we trust though earth seems dark and gray. Trinity. Appears in the Lyra Sac.
Amer., 1868, pp. 43-44, in 5 st. of 4 l. This is the most widely adopted of this author's hymns by the English compilers. It is given in some of the best collections, as the N. Cong., Tring, Horder, the Bap. Hymnal, Allon, &c.

9. There is a beautiful land by the spoiler untrod.
Heaven. Dr. Cleveland (Lyra Sac. Amer., 1868, p. 298) says, "This piece was first published in the Independent, Jan. 18, 1866."

10. They who have kept their spirit's virgin white-
11. Thou Who look'at with pitying eyes. Lent.
In Lyra Sac. Amer., 1868, p. 47.
12. Through the changes of the day. Evening.
From his Poems, 1841. It is given in the Lyra
Sac. Amer., p. 50, the S. P. C. K. Ps. and Hymns, 1852, Tring's Coll., and others.
13. We ask not that our path be always bright.
Trust in God. From the Lyra Sac. Amer., 1868, into Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884.
14. When gladness gilds our prosperous day.
Good in all. Also from Lyra Sac. Amer. into Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884.

It has been already noted that Burleigh's hymns have a more extended use in G. Britlish than in his own country. The foregoing notes will also show that his productions are more widely known and used outside of his own denomination than by his own people. Concerning the hymns included in the Lyra Sac.
Amer., Dr. Cleveland, the editor, says, "Most of these beautiful hymns of Mr. Burleigh's were given to me by the author; but he does not indicate what was new and what was old."

Burmeister, Franz Joseph, was a native of Lüneburg. He was ordained at Celle, May 4, 1670, and instituted as deacon of St. Michael's Church, Lüneburg, July 10, 1670. This post he held till his death at Lüneburg, April 21, 1672. He was a friend of Hast, who crowned him as a poet in 1659, and in 1660 received him into his order of Elbe Swans. (Koch, ii. 448-450; Allg. Deut-ische Hymnol. i. 328; ms. from Permanick.)
His hymns were mostly contributed to the musical works of J. R. Ahle of Mühlhausen, 14 being set to music and
pub. by Ahle in 1692, at Mühlhausen, as Neue geistliche auff die hohen Festtage durchs ganze Jahr gereichte Ausdachten. Those tr. into English are:

1. Du kranse Scle du. [Visitation to Elizabeth.] 1st pub. 1662 as above, No. 13 in 6 st. of 6 l., entitled on the "Festival of Mary's Visitation. On her visitation journey." As the hymn is very rare, the first and last st. are here quoted from a copy kindly sent from Mühlhausen:

2. Der Weiler Licht und Sonne,
Und deine Joseph's Wonne
Gehst nach Elisabethen zu.

Burns, Dawson, D.D., was born in Southwark, London, on the 1st of Dr. Jabez Burns.
He entered the ministry among the General Baptists in 1851, and for a number of years was his father's colleague at Church Street Chapel, Edgeware Road. He is now without pastoral charge, and devotes himself chiefly to literary and public work in connection with the Temperance Reformation. It is the author of several important works on the Temperance question, and of numerous contributions to periodicals and public congresses. In 1884 he published Rays of Sacred Song for the Church and Home. Besides Scripture Studies and other poems, it contains 39 hymns for Public Worship. One of these, "Gladome we hail this day's return" (Revis'), appeared in 1789 in the Bap. Hymnal, and has been very frequently used on various occasions. Others are of sufficient merit to secure their adoption as they become known. In 1892 Dr. Burns received the honorary degree of D.D. from Bates College, Maine, U.S.

Burns, James Drummond, M.A., was b. at Edinburgh, February 18, 1823. He studied and graduated at the University of Edinburgh. In 1845 he became Free Church minister of Dunblane, but resigned through failing health, in 1848, and took charge of the Presbyterian Church at Finedale, Madeira. In 1853 he became minister of Hampstead Presbyterian Church, London. Died at Mentone, Nov. 27, 1864, and was buried in Highgate Cemetery, London. His hymns appeared in:

(1) The Vision of Prophecy; and other Poems (Edin., Edinburgh and Douglas). This was originally published in 1854, and enlarged in 1855. The Poems are distinguished by vivid colouring and poetical imagination, along with directness, delicacy of execution, pungency, sweetness, and tenderness. They have never however become widely popular. Included are 29 "Hymns and Meditation", some of which rank among the very best of our modern hymns for beauty, simplicity of diction, and depth of religious feeling. (2) The Evening Hymn (Coll., T. Nelson & Sons), 1856. This consists of an original hymn and an original prayer for every evening in the month. Some of the Hymns and Prayers alike are characterised by reverence, beauty, simplicity, and pathos. Some of the hymns in this volume are now well known; e.g. "Still with Thee, O my God." "Hushed was the evening hymn," "As helpless as a child who clings." (3) Memoir and Remains of the late Rev. James D. Burns, M.A., of Hampstead. By the late Rev. James Hamilton, D.D. (Coll., J. Nisbet & Co.), 1869. Besides 13 Sermons and the Memoir, this work includes 40 "Hymns and Miscellaneous Pieces." A number of these had appeared in periodicals. Some of them are very good though not equal to those previously published. Also 29 Translations of German Hymns, which appeared in the Family Treasury, are rendered exactly in the metres of the originals and many had not previously been translated. The translations are generally very good. (4) Burns also wrote the article Hymns in the 4th ed. of the Ency. Brit.

Burns, Robert. This poet's life had little in common with hymnology, although some of his pieces, in common with a few of Byron's, have come into use in G. Britain and America. His life, from his birth in the parish of Alloway, near Ayr, Jan. 25, 1759, to his death, at Dumfries, July 21, 1796, was one of varying lights and shadows, and has been told elsewhere, frequently and eloquently. It remains for us only to notice his hymnical pieces, their origin, and their use. Those in C. U. are:

1. O Thou great Being! What Thou art. Lent. Burns' account of this piece as entered in his Commonplace Book, under the date of March 17^4, is: "There was a certain period of my life that my spirits were broken by repeated losses and disasters, which charmed and indeed effected, the utter ruin of my fortune. My body, too, was attacked by a very dangerous disease, a hypochondria, or confirmed melancholy. In this wretched state, the recollection of which makes me shudder, I hung my harp on the willow-wood, except in some low intervals, in one of which I composed the following. "Oh, Thou great Being! what

2. Thou Power Supreme, Whose mighty scheme, Trust in God, is taken. The second piece was pub. in his Poems, Kilmarnock, 1785, and the first in Poems, Edinburgh, 1787. Orig. text in Chambers's Life, vol. 1. pp. 51-54. The title of the first is "A Prayer, written under the pressure of violent anguish." 3. O Thou unknown. Almighty Cause. Death anticipated. This was written at the age of 26, during an illness in the summer of 1754. In his Commonplace Book he calls it, "A Prayer when fainting fits and other alarming symptoms of a pleurisy, or some other dangerous disorder which still threaten me, first put nature on the alarm." Under the title "A Prayer in the prospect of death," it was included in his Poems, Kilmarnock, 1785.

5. O Thou, the first, the greatest Friend. Pt. xix.

These hymns were all included in Dr. Martin's Hymns, &c., 1840, and are also found in other and later collections both in G. Brit. and America.

Burton, John, b. 1773, in Nottingham, where he resided until 1813, when he removed to Leicester, at whose town he died in 1822. He was a Baptist, a very earnest S. School teacher, and one of the compilers of the Nottingham S. S. H. Bk., 1812. This book reached the 20th ed. in 1861. The 1st ed. contains 45 hymns which have his signature. He is known almost exclusively by one hymn, "Holy Bible, book divine" (q.v.). He was also author of The Youth's Monitor in Verse, a series of Little Tales, Emblems, Poems and Songs (1803); of the Young Plantation, in verse; The Shrabury, and other similar productions for the young. Robert Hall wrote a recommendatory preface to one of his works.

Burton, John, jun., a popular hymn-writer for children, was b. July 23, 1803, at Stratford in Essex, in which place he carried on business as a cooper for about 50 years. He d. in 1877. Mr. Burton was a member of the Congregational body, and a Deacon of the Chapel where he attended. His contributions to hymnody began in 1822, when he sent his first production to the Evangelical Magazine. He continued to contribute to that and other periodicals for many years, his signature in the former being "Essex, J. B.," and in the Child's Companion "J. B. Essex." His publications are:

(1) One Hundred Original Hymns for the Young, 1840; (2) Hymns for Little Children, 1851; (3) The Child's Life of David; (4) The Book of Psalms in English Verse, 1871; (5) Scripture Characters in Verse, 1877.

His Hymns for Little Children containing 54 pieces, has been reprinted in Philadelphia, U.S.A., as My Own Hymn Book. He also contributed to the Union H. Bk. for Scholars, 1840. Some of his hymns have attained a measure of popularity, including "O Thou that hearest prayer," "Come, let us sing our Maker's praise," and many others. In addition, the following are also in C. U.:

1. Children who are gone to glory. Saints' day.
2. Children, you have gone astray. Invitation. Pub. in the Child's Companion, April, 1834, and his one Hundred Hymns, 1860, &c.
3. Come, let us sing our Maker's praise. For Orphans. In his One Hundred Hymns, 1856, No. 96, in 6 st. of 4.
4. Father of mercies, hear; On us, &c. Divine Butcher, Edmund, b. at Colchester, Essex, in 1757, and brought up as a linen-draper. After undergoing a preliminary training for the Unitarian Ministry, he was appointed to the charge of Leather Lane Chapel, Holborn, in 1789. From thence he removed to Salisbury Vale, Smithfield, in 1798. Died April 14, 1822. Memoir in the Christian Moderator, 1827. His works include Pictures of Smithfield: Tour through various parts of England; Sermons, to which are added suitable Hymns, 1778: and the Substance of the Holy Scriptures Methodized, 1801. His hymns were given in the two latter works, in the Protestant Dissenter's Magazine (of which he was sometime editor); in Kippis's Collection, 1735; the Christian Guardian, 1802-1808; Aspland's Sel., 1810; and from his ms. in Howse's Selection of Hymns and Psalms, 1837. They number 118 in all; but few, however, have attained to any position in modern hymnals. These include the following:

BY CHRIST REDEEMED

2. Father of all, where shall we find? D. Worship. In Dr. Martineau's Hymns, 1847.

3. Great God, as seasons disappear. Harvest. This is the most popular of his hymns. It is annotated under its first line.

4. Hosanna! let us join to sing. Revelation. Contributed to Aspland's Sel., 1849, No. 299; and repeated in Dr. Martineau's Hymns, 1849, &c.

5. With deepest reverence at Thy throne. God's Unsearchableness. This is in American C. U. as in Landes Domini, 1884, No. 258. It was contributed to Aspland's Sel., 1849, No. 140.

Buddos χάραγματος. St. Joseph of the Studium. This is a portion from the Triodion of the Canon at Lauds for the Sunday of the Prodigal Son, answering to Septuagesima of the Anglican Church, and now in use in the Greek Church. The Canon was written about the middle of the ninth century. Dr. Neale's tr. of Odes vii. and viii., Tr. 2, 3, in his Hymnus of the E. C. is thus introduced:

"The Sunday before Septuagesima, and Septuagesima itself, are, respectively, in the Greek Church, the Sunday of the Phitarce and Publican, and the Sunday of the Prodigal Son, these parables forming the gospel for the day, and serving for the keynote to the Office."

Dr. Neale's translation, "The abyss of many a former sin," is in 5 st. of 6 1. The foregoing note shows the appropriateness of the Odes to the Sunday, especially Dr. Neale's st. iv. (H. E. C., 1872, p. 128). In 1872 this tr. was given in the Hymnary, No. 217, as, "The deep of many a former sin." [J. J.]

Butterworth, Joseph Henry, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford, graduated B.A. in 1836. On taking Holy Orders he was successively Curate and Vicar of Stapleton, near Bristol, 1846-69, and Incumbent of St. Paul's, Canveys, 1870. Mr. Butterworth's hymns were contributed to the 1st ed. of Chope's Hymnald, 1857. They include a few tr. and the following original hymns:

By Christ redeemed, in Christ restored. G. Rowson. [Holy Communion. Written in 1857 for, and 1st pub. in, the Bap. Ps. and Hymns, 1858, No. 741, in 6 st. of 4 1, and appointed for "The Lord's Supper." It is a hymn of more than usual excellence, and has attained to a greater position in modern hymnals than any other of the author's numerous compositions. The text was revised by the author for his Hymns, 1876, No. xxxiv. Original, Bap. Ps. and Hymns, 1858. In Thriving's Coll., 1882, st. iv., l. 3, is changed from "By one best remnant of loving rite," to "The shame! the glory! by this Rite." The greatest alterations, however, were found in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 295, where in addition to minor alterations, including the opening line to:- "By Christ redeemed, in Christ restored," we have the following lines:

"His holy broken in our need.\nIs here, in this memorial bread; \nAnd so our feeble love fed, \nUntil He came;"

"His fearful drops of agony, \nHis life-blood shed for us we see; \nThe who shall tell the mystery, \nUntil He come;"

transmuted into the weak stanza:
His Sermons were published at various dates from 1729 to 1771, and his Poems in 1727, 1736, and 1744. Of the Appendix to Tate and Brady, pub. by S. Kuckland in 1760, he edited hymns 77 to 100 inclusive, of which hymns 78, 79, and 80 seem to be his own. Part of No. 78, beginning with st. vii., “When wild confusion wrecks the air,” is a Judgment hymn, and has been included in Belknap’s Selection, 1785, and later in the Plymouth Coll., 1855, No. 111, the Rev. Bap. Prize Book, 1871, and others. His hymns are unknown to English collections. [F. M. B.]

Byron, John, M.A., F.R.S., b. at Manchester, Feb. 22, 1804, baptized the same day, and educated at Merchant Taylor’s School, and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. 1711: M.A. 1715. He was elected a fellow of his College in 1714. After studying medicine for a time at Montpellier, he returned to London, and earned his livelihood by teaching shorthand. Elected F.R.S. in 1724, and succeeded to the family estates about the same time. He d. Sept. 28, 1763. His Poems were first pub. in 1773, in two vols. In 1814 a more complete edition was issued by Nichols, of Leeds. From these Poems less than half a dozen hymns have come into common use. One of these, however, has a reputation which has extended to all English-speaking countries. We refer to his “Christmas awake!” (q.v.). His hymn, “My spirit longs for Thee,” is also worthy of attention. [J. J.]

Byron, George Gordon Noel, Lord, b. in London, Jan. 22, 1788, d. at Missolonghi, April 19, 1824. Lord Byron’s name is associated with hymnody through a few pieces from his Hebrew Melodies, 1815, being in use in a limited number of hymnals, and these mainly in America. These include:—

1. The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold.
2. The king was on his throne.
3. The wild gazelle o’er Judah’s hills.

Lord Byron’s Works with Life and Letters, by T. Moore, in 17 vols., was published by J. Murray, London, 1832. [J. J.]

Cabot, Eliza Lee. [Follen, E. L.]

Caddell, Cecilia Mary. This writer has published:

1. "Flower and Fruit; or, the Tree of Years," 1861.
2. "Blind Agnes; or, the Little Sister of the Blessed Sacrament," 1865.

Her hymns include:

1. "Behold the lilies of the field. Providence. In The Dominican Bk., 1881, and others.
2. It is finished. It hath seen [wrote], Good Friday. In the People's H., 1887, and others. From Mr. Newton's, 2nd ed., 1885.

Call all who love Thee, Lord, to Thee. [The Second Advent.] This cento is composed thus:—the first four lines and the last line of the hymn are from J. F. Bailey's poem, Festus, 1839, and the rest are by G. Rawson. It was 1st pub. in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 181, in 8 st. of 8 l., and is repeated in Mr. Rawson's Hymns, &c., 1876, p. 120. It is in several modern collections, including the Baptist Hymn., 1879; Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884, and others.

Call Jehovah thy salvation. J. Montgomery. [Ps. xxi.] The ms. of this version of Ps. xxi. is not preserved with the mss. The paraphrase 1st appeared in Montgomery's Songs of Zion, 1822, in 5 st. and l., and again in his Original Hymns, 1833, No. 145. As a hymn for congregational use it is generally given in an abbreviated form, both in the older and newer collections, as in Kennedy, 1843, and the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, and others. Ours, as above. [See English Psalters, § xvii.] In America it has attained to a good position, and is sometimes found as, "Call the Lord, thy salvation." From this st. also, the hymn, "God shall charge His angel legions," is taken. It is composed of st. iv. and v., and was given in the American Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, and later hymn-books.

Callaway, William Fleetwood. A successful writer of hymns for children, and a Congregational Minister at Birmingham, was the father of the Rev. John Callaway, for some time a Wesleyan Missionary in Ceylon. Mr. Callaway was b. at Stafford, March 17, 1834. On the death of his father in 1841, he was removed to Cornwall. From thence he passed, in 1853, to York, where, influenced by the preaching of the Rev. James Parsons, he took a decided religious course, and joined the Congregationalists. Following up his commercial pursuits he went from York to Wrexham, Shropshire; and from thence to Birmingham. Having been engaged for some time as a lay preacher, when the pastorate of the Highgate Chapel, Birmingham, fell vacant in 1861, he received an invitation to preach. This led to his settlement as the pastor of that congregation. He d. May 22, 1886. Mr. Callaway's hymn-writing began with compositions for Sunday School Anniversary. He proceeded to compose words for German tunes for men's voices only, and ultimately assisted the late J. Curwen, with hymns and songs, in his Tonic-sol-fa movement. Of his hymns the following have come into C. U.:

1. A far, while Jesus passed by. Healing the Expert.
3. To Jacob's well the woman went. Water of Life.
4. Vanity over the weary oar. Stilling the Tempest.
5. These descriptive hymns were written for Curwen's New Child's H. Bk. during 1873-4, and were 1st pub. therein 1874. In addition there are:
7. Of Saviour, most gracious and loving. S. S. Anniversary.

These were written for his own School, and 1st pub. in Curwen's New Child's H. Bk. in 1874.

Calm me, my God, and keep me calm. H. Bonar. [Peace.] Appeared in his Hymns of Faith and Hope, 1st series, 1856, in 8 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "The Inner Calm." Its use in G. Brit. is fair, but in America it ranks in popularity with the finest of Dr. Bonar's hymns. Itone or two hymnals the opening line is altered to "Calm me, blest Spirit, keep me calm," as in Nicholson's Appendix Hymnal, 1866, but this is not popular.

Calverley, Charles Stewart, M.A., &c. of the Rev. Henry Biayda, some time Vicar of South Stoke, near Bath (who took the name of Calverley in 1822), was b. at Marlow, Wiltshire, Dec. 22, 1831. He entered Harrow in 1846, from whence he passed to Oxford, but coming under the censure of the authorities, he migrated to Cambridge in 1852, where, after gaining some of the best classical prizes of that University, he graduated first class in Classical honours. In due course he was called to the Bar and followed the Northern circuit. He died at Folkestone, Feb. 7, 1884. He is known to hymnologists by his translation of two hymns from the Latin, which he made for the Hymnary in 1871, and were pub. therein in 1872.

Camerarius, Joachim. [Esker, F. iv.]

Cameron, William, M.A., seems to have been b. in 1751, at or near Pananich, a hamlet near Ballater, Aberdeenshire, his father, a son of Cameron of Glen Near, being formerly a farmer in the parish of Glenmuek. He studied at the University of Aberdeen (Marischal College), where he graduated M.A. in 1770, was ordained parochial minister of Kirknewton, Midlothian, in 1786, and d. at Kirknewton, Nov. 17, 1811. Though not a member of the Committee appointed by the General Assembly of 1775, to revise the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases of 1745-51, yet the burden of revision seems to have fallen upon him (probably through the influence of Dr. Hugh Blair), as to him are ascribed the changes made in 1775-1781 in no less than 36 of that collection, which in the 1781 are numbered thus:—No. 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, 22, 24, 26, 32, 34, 35, 39-43, 45-47, 49-52, 54-57, 59-61, 63, 65-67. He is also said to be the author of Nos. 14 and...
Campus, Johann, was b. on June 24, c. 1565, at Wodinian in Bohemia. At the University of Prag (Prague), he graduated b.a. 1592, m.a. 1596. In 1592 he became master at Iglau, thereafter at Teplitz, and then professor at Königsgratz. He was in 1594 appointed Rector of the St. Heinrich school in the Neustadt, Prag, and in 1600 Rector at Kutenberg. Ultimately he became Professor of Greek and Latin and of Bohemian History in the University of Prag, where he resided a time Dean of the Philosophical Faculty, and in 1612 Rector of the University. He died at Prag, Dec. 13, 1622.

Brought up at Wodinian as a Hussite, he became a Lutheran; then a Calvinist; was in 1619 answer of the Uniat Consistory of the Teufikirche in the Altstadt, Prag; and on Nov. 16, 1622, formally became a Roman Catholic. His Latin Version of the Poetae, pub. at Prag, 1611, and his Latin Odes, pub. 1612, were introduced for the senior scholars to sing in church and school. A complete ed. of his sacred poems appeared as Sacrorum (Glorum Liber Posterior Libri Psalmorum Jansenianorum Tractatus, Poetarum Dominique et Jeremiae conditus. Accersus Auctu Canonicorum in Odismus, ut in omnia Notationes pro omniis Poetae, edito, et Canonicorum, quibus notis, et Foede. Authoritas. Frankfurt-am Main, 1611. (Wernigerode.) A full list of his works is given in his Biographia, by G. J. Dalvez, 1819.

Two of his poems have passed into English:

Foretque, frigus pellet, estum mittat.

It appears in a full and good German tr. in Johann Franck's Geistliche Sion, 1674, No. 2, (ed. 1846, p. 2), beginning:

"Ihr Himmel tröpfelt Than in Eil."

Franck's version was included in the 1688 (No. 317) and later eds. of Cramer's Praxis pietae melica, in Bunsen's Verzeichniss, 1834, No. 4, and his Allg. G. B. 1846, No. 29. Bunsen, 1835, p. 876, calls it "One of the most profound hymns of that believing yearning, which recognises in the Incarnation of Christ the pledge of the union of God with the soul." The only tr. in C. U. from Franck is:

Ye heavens, oh haste your dews to shed, in full
In the 2nd Series, 1838, of Miss Winkworth's Lyra Ger., p. 3. Thence as No. 20 in her C. B. for England, 1863, and as No. 15 in Bowsworth's Coll., 1865. St. ii-v, beginning, "O living Sun, with joy break forth," are included as No. 121 in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866.

Another tr. is "Descend, ye heavens, in gentle dews," by Dr. G. Wulker, 1846, p. 26.

"Ave, tunam cessit virginis Quantum potest vis Namis."

Two stanzas may be compared with the Ambrosian, viz.:

1. Veni Redemptor gentium, Pulchrums renii illum, Spendorque fulgentis lumen;
Hic partus est dignus Deo!"

2. Praesepem faveum matris, Lumenque notis eminat, Quod nullus lux interpreter.
Ut lucat quisquam solo.

A full and good German tr. by Johann Franeck, beginning "Komm, Heiden-Heiland, Lüsej Geldi-, appears in C. P. Peter's Geistliche Arten, Guben, 1657, No. 1, repeated in his own Geistliches Sion, 1674, p. 1 (ed. 1846, p. 1); and included in many subsequent collections as the Berlin L. X., ed. 1863, No. 1396. The form tr. into English is that in Bunsen's Verzeichniss, 1833, No. 74 (1811, No. 11). Bunsen, doubtless not knowing that it was a direct tr. from Campus, calls it at p. 876 "the only successful version from the Ambrosian hymn [Veni Redemptor] more profound and delightful than the Latin." Bunsen omits st. ii, iii, and alters st. i, iv. The tr. in C. U. are:

1. Redeemer of the nations, come. By Miss Winkworth in full from Bunsen in the 1st series of her Lyra Ger., 1855, p. 186, repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 23, and in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866.

2. Come, Ransome of our captive race. From Bunsen, omitting his st. ii. as No. 3 in Dr. Pagetsercher's Coll., 1864, signed "F. C. C."

3. O glory of thy chosen race. In full from Bunsen by Dr. F. J. A. Hert for Church Hymn, 1871, No. 70, with an added doxology. [J. M.]

Campbell, Etta, sometime a teacher in Morristown, New Jersey, is the author of:

1. Come, ye children, sweetly sing, Jesus the Children's Friend. Appeared in F. R. Hammond's Praise of Jesus, 1864; his New Praise of Jesus, 1869; and in other collections, including several in G. Petrim.

2. What means this eager anxious throng. Jesus passed by. Written during a religious revival in Newark.
Campbell, Jane Montgomery, daughter of the Rev. A. Montgomery Campbell, b. in London, 1817, d. at Bovey Tracey, Nov. 13, 1878. Miss Campbell contributed in 1861, a number of trs. from the German to the Rev. C. S. Bow’s Garland of Songs; or, an English Liederkranz, 1862; and also to his Children’s Choral Book, 1869. The best known and most widely used of these trs. is a portion of “Im Anfang war’s auf Erden,” as the harvest hymn, “We plough the fields and scatter” [see Claudius]. Miss Campbell also pub. A Handbook for Singers, Lond., S. P. C. K. n.d. This small work contains the musical exercises which she taught in her father’s parish school.

Campbell, Margaret, Lady Cockburn, née Malcolm, eldest daughter of Sir John Malcolm, G.C.B., married, June 20, 1827, to Sir Alexander Thomas Cockburn-Campbell, Bart. (one of the founders of the Plymouth Brethren in England); and d. at Alphington, near Exeter, Feb. 6, 1841. Her hymns were printed in lithograph from her ms. for private circulation. In the Plymouth Brethren Pts. & Hgs., Lond., Walther, 1844, some of these hymns were given, and thus came into C. U. The best known is “Praise ye Jehovah, praise the Lord most holy.” [J. J.]

Campbell, Robert, Advocate, of Sherrington, Scotland, was b. at Troedraig, Ayrshire, Dec. 19, 1814. When quite a boy he attended the University of Glasgow. Though showing from his earliest years a strong predilection for Theological studies, eventually he fixed upon the Scottish law as a profession. To this end he entered the Law Classes of the University of Edinburgh, and in due course ended up as the duces of an advocate. Originally a Presbyterian, at an early age he joined the Episcopal Church of Scotland. He became a zealous and devoted Churchman, directing his special attention to the education of the children of the poor. His classical attainments were good, and his general reading extensive. In 1848 he began a series of translations of Latin hymns. These he submitted to Dr. Neale, Dr. Mills of Ely, and other competent judges. In 1850, a selection therefrom, together with a few of his original hymns, and a limited number from other writers, was pub. as Hymns and Anthems for Use in the Holy Services of the Church within the United Diocese of St. Andrews, Inverness, and Dunblane. Edinburgh, R. Lundrum & Co.

This collection, known as the St. Andrews Hymnal, received the special sanction of H. Tory, and was used throughout the Dioceses for some years. Two years after its publication he joined the Roman Catholic Church. During the next sixteen years he devoted much time to the young and poor. He d. at Edinburgh, Dec. 29, 1868.

From his collection of 1856, four trs. were given in R. A & M, 1861, “At the Lamb’s high feast we sing;” “Come, pure hearts, in sweetest measures;” “Ye Choys of New Jerusalem;” “Ye servants of a mighty God” (altered). Attention was thereby directed to his trs. They are simple, musical, and well sustained. A large number, not included in his 1856 collection, were left by him in ms. From these Mr. O. Shipley has printed several in his Annual ,1884. (J. J.)

the consciousness that his life was hid with Christ in God, that the things seen, how beautiful soever, are nothing to the things which are not seen (p. 61).

Of the tr. Dr. Arnold says, ‘For the greatest part I am indebted to the kindness of a friend,’ which means that portions (viz. st. ii, 1–3, and one or two expressions) are taken from the anonymous version of 1836 (see below). In 1842 Buckoll included it in his "From the German," p. 35, altering st. iii, l. 3, xii, 1–3, and xiii.

It is the text in Dr. Arnold’s sermons which has passed into C. U. in the following forms, the references being to the tr. of the German source (see below).

(1) St. i, v, vii, ix-xi., American Episc. H. for Ch. and Home, 1861, altered.

(3) St. i, vii, vii-xi, xii, considerably altered and with an added doxology in Sarum, 1849. This text in full, or abridged, is found in Church Hymns, 1871; Hymnary, 1872; Stevenson’s H. for Ch. and Home, 1873; Rep. Hymnal, 1879, and others: and in America in the Episcopal Hymnal, 1871; Lawes’s Domini, 1884.

(4) St. i, vi, vii, ix-xi, xiv, in Barrow School H. Bk., 1856; Marlborough College, 1869, &c.

(5) St. i, vi, vii, xii, with an added st. in Bk. of Common Praise, 1863; and in G. S. Jettschel’s C. B. for England, 1865.

Another tr. is:—

"Come, my soul! thou must be waking," in the British Magazine, July, 1838, p. 21. From this, st. i, ii, 1–3, and one or two expressions were adopted by Buckoll (see above).

Canon. [Kanων.] [Greek Hymnody, § xvi. 11.]

Cantemus cuncti melodum nunc, Alleluia. [Epiphany.] This Sequence is given by Father Joachim Brandt (a monk of the Abbey of St. Gall), in his ms. collection of Hymns, Sequences, &c., 1507. Brandt gives the following description, "Alla de Epiphanii Christi Sequentia ascendens b. Notkeri, titulis Pulla turbata. Canitur praeipue in Octave Epiphaniae," ("Another joyful Sequence of Blessed Notker’s [died 912] for the Epiphany of Christ, with the title: The troubled Virgin. It is sung especially in the octave of the Epiphany.") The title "Pulla turbata," "The troubled (or disturbed) Virgin," has caused some difficulty as to what may be its meaning; but for its use we may refer to St. Matthew iii. 1. Jerusalem being termed the Virgin daughter of Sion; the troubling there mentioned occurring at the season of the Virgin. The words of the hymn are modelled on those of the 18th Psalm.

The text is given in Mone, No. 67; Daniel, ii, p. 52; and Kerkein, No. 44, in each ease with notes, and extensive readings from ancient ms., the oldest being of the 11th cent., and referred to by Daniel. The most curious difference is in the conclusion. "Laus Trinitati aeternae, All, All, All, All, All;" whilst Daniel and Kerkein have "Laus Trinitati aeternae in baptismo domini quae clarificatur: Hinc canamus: Alleluia." In addition the text is also in an 11th cent. ms. in the Brit. Mus. (Harl. 2961, f. 234 b), and in three 11th cent. mss. at St. Gall, Nos. 376, 380, 381.
In his Med. Hym., 1863, p. 84, Dr. Neale says, "Next to St. Notker himself, the most famous writer of the Prose named from him was Godescalcus," and at p. 42 of this Sequenc, "We shall have another occasion to speak of the 'Deposition of Alleluia' at Septuagesima, for which this famous Sequence was written by Godescalcus." Brandt, Daniel, and Kehrein all declare that the Sequence is by St. Notker. For Dr. Neale's ascription to Godsealcus we find no evidence, and must assign the Sequence to St. Notker [see Alleluia]. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. The strain upraise of joy and praise, Alleluia.

By J. M. Neale, appeared in the Hymnall, N. enlarged edition, 1834, and in his Medieval Hymns, 2nd ed., 1863; it has passed into almost every hymnal published since that date. In the 2nd ed. of his Medieval Hymns, 1863, Dr. Neale gives the history of its somewhat peculiar construction, and complains most bitterly of its being sung to Trottie's chant. He says:

"There is only one thing with respect to the use of any of my hymns that has grieved me: the rejection of the noble melody of the Alleluia Sequence, and that for a third-rate chant. What would be said of changing the Hymn? And yet I really believe it would suffer less than does the Constantine Council by such a substitution. Further be it noticed, every sentence, I have almost said every word, of the version was carefully fitted to the sacred, weight of the lines corresponds to the length of each treatment in the original; and these are now stretched on the Procerustean bed of the same meaningless melody. That the original music cannot be learnt in an hour or two is most certain; but seeing that I have heard it thoroughly well sung, and most heartily enjoyed, by a school choir, varying in ages from fourteen to fifty, it is not unworthy of the great church meetings, as at Ely, Salisbury, Sherborne, and elsewhere, including the words in their programmes, so utterly to spoil it in that performance? Let it be remembered that I have some little right to speak on the subject, having been the first to introduce the Sequence to English readers, and there being, even now, no other translation but my own." (Preface, p. 1.)

Notwithstanding this earnest protest of the translator, the original melody is practically unknown. It is included in the Hymnal, with the accompanying Harmonies. The adaptation from Dr. Neale's tr. in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 189; "in sweet consent let all the anthem sing, Alleluia," cannot be called a new rendering of the Sequence.

2. Let us all in concert sing. By H. Alford, 1st pub. in a festival service book, and then included in J. Barnby's Original Hymn to Popular Tunes, 1st series, 1869. It is also given in several American collections.

3. Let us all in chorus sing. By R. C. Singleton, written in 1870, and pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Anglican H. Bk., 1871. [J. J.]

Capitan, Herr Gott, Vater mein. [Christian Faith and Life.] 1st pub. in the Erfurt Evangeliun of 1526, and thence in Wackerneug, iii. p. 116, in 8 st. of 11 l. Generally entitled "The Magrave Casimir's Hymn," the beginnings of the stanzas forming the words "Casimir Magrgraaf zu Brandenburg." The hymn may have been written for him by the author of the similar hymn "Herr, gebe mir, Herr, geber Gott!" Tr. as "Divine Protector, Lord, and Sire," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 43. [J. M.]

Capito, Wolfgang, s. of Hans Köpfel or Koppfle, farrier and counsellor at Hagenu, in the S.P.C.K. Ps. & Hys. for "Baptism," st. iii. was omitted. This form has been repeated in other hymnals. In 1871 it was included in the S.P.C.K. Church Hymns, for "Theological Colleges," a few judicious and appropriate alterations having been made to adapt it to that purpose. [J. J.]

Captain of Thine enlisted host. C. Batty. [Missions.] Appeared in the Kendal H. Bk. 1757, at 8 st. of 4, and from thence passed into one of the early editions of Lady Huntington's Coll. From that Coll. st. i.-iii. were taken by Williams and Boden, 1801. This form of the hymn has descended to several modern collections, including the N. Cong., 1859, 992, where, however, it is attributed to C. Wesley in error. Snapp's text, in his S. of G. & G., 1872, is st. i., iii., and iv. altered. [J. J.]

Carols. A carol is a song of joy originally accompanying a dance. Its origin and history, together with such collateral information as space will permit, may be best arranged under the following heads: i. Derivation; ii. Historical Use of the Term; iii. The Carol and the Dance; iv. Sacred and Secular Carols; v. The Sacred Carol; vi. The Mysteries and Miracle Plays; vii. The Reformation Period; viii. Carol Literature; ix. Conclusion.

i. Derivation.—The word Carol is derived from the Italian Carola, a ring-dance, from caroala, to sing. The Latin is said to come from the old French carole, or carole. The musical term carola in Boccaceo is synonymous with ballata; which the Crusca dictionary defines "cannona, che si canta balando," i.e. a song which is sung and danced at the same time.

ii. Historical Use of the Term.—The word carol has been in use, English for at least some six hundred years. In the 13th cent. Robert of Gloucester wrote:—

"After me, as ryte was, the menstrues goede aboute, And kuytes and sweyneys in carole get route."

Chaucer, in the 14th cent. In his "Knight's Tale," I. 2205, we read:—

"What ladys fayrest ben, or best dancing,
Or which of hem can carole best or sing,
Of all this now I make no mention."

In many instances also he uses it in connection with dancing as, for instance, in "The Romant of the Rose":—

"These folk of which I tell you so
Upon a carole ventrino tho,
A ladie kerveld hem, that bright
Thousande the blissfeul and the light.
Well could she sing and lustily—
None half so well and serenely—
And comebe enough for suche doing
As longhunte karolling.
There mightest thou karolles see
And spak daunce and merry ben
Ne cote I never thamos go Whillest that I saw hem dancing so."

Gower, about the same date, wrote:—

"And so befalleth amonye
That she carole upon a songe,
When I it here, I am so sodde,
That I am fro my self so sodde
As though I were in Paradise."

In the 16th cent. Spenser writes in the Epithalamion, I. 133:—

"But most of all, the damsel's do delight,
When they their tymbrels synge,
And thereupon do daunce and carol sweet,
That all the seyences do ravish quite."

In the same poem he also writes:—

"Hark! how the cheerful birds do chant their lays,
And carol of love's praise."

Shakespeare uses the word in his Midsummer Night's Dream, act ii. sc. 2, l. 43; in his As You Like It, act v. sc. 3. Milton, in the 17th cent. has it in Paradise Lost, bk. xii. l. 927; and in Comus, l. 849; Dryden, too, in the latter part of the same century, not to mention innumerable authors of more recent date. Under the term Carol, we may thus include a large class of popular songs, the first of which were characterised by dance-measures, both of time and action.

iii. The Carol and the Dance.—Both song and dance were employed in the earliest ages of mankind in some acts of Divine worship, whether of the true God or of heathen deities. Man's offerings were plainly to be of the very best, the most excellent in kind, and such as afforded the greatest test of self-abnegation and surrender on the part of the worshipper. Hence arose amongst the heathen, by perversion of revealed truth, human sacrifices. With better reason was it judged fitting that the Divine worship should be celebrated with the highest results of mental and artistic culture. Grace and aesthetic beauty of every sort in architecture, in painting, in sculpture, and in poetry were esteemed (as they ought to be) amongst the best of those gifts which, coming from God, ought to be dedicated to God. And, in its way, not music alone, but dancing, or "the poetry of motion" also was put on an equality with those other fine arts.

Ancient dancing was gymnastic, or mimetic; either for exercise of the body, or to express the feelings of the mind. Homer, Aristotle, Herodotus, Pindar, Athenaeus, and others of a more recent date, have abundant allusions to dances. The song and the dance were, however, gradually debased in the superstitions, and too often licentious, ceremonial of idolatrous worship. At no time, moreover, after the very first, can we regard them as having been exclusively sacred. The dance indeed, apart from its religious use in heathen temples, has come to be generally regarded, in this country at least, as wholly secular, and unfit for employment in the ordinary solemnities of Christian worship.

Instances of dancing as a part of Divine worship abound in the Old Testament. The 149th Ps. contains a direct precept, "Let the children of Zion be joyful in their King. Let them praise His name in the dance;" and in the 150th Ps. "Praise Him in the cymbals and dances." We also read, "There is a time to weep, and a time to laugh, a time to mourn, and a time to dance." (Eccl. iii. 4). These precepts are strikingly illustrated in the history of the Jews. The sublime Song of Moses had its appropriate antiphon when "Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances," and answered back the chorus of the men, "Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath He thrown into the sea." (Ex. xvi. 25). The dances of the daughters of Shiloh are recorded as of ordinary occurrence in the Book of Judges (ch. xxi. 21); and Jephthah's daughter, ignorant of his rash vow, came out to meet him on his return from his victory over the Ammonites "with timbrels and with dances." (Judges xii. 34). Other instances might be named; but perhaps the most striking, and certainly the most generally well known, instance of jubilant religious dancing recorded in Holy Scripture is that of King David, on the occasion of his bringing up the sacred Ark of God from the house of Obed Edom into the city of David, when, laying aside his royal robes, he took part in the ritual of the sanctuary, and, vested simply in the humble linen ephod (or surplice) of ministerial service, he danced before the Lord. It has moreover been well suggested that Hebrew poetry actually owed its origin and special charm to the chorale dance, and that the chorale dance fact itself began in carolling. It is evident that the sacred hymns were sung by opposite choirs; one usually performed the hymn itself, the other a particular distich. The movements of the dance suggested the parallelisms of the verse. In the New Testament social festivities with dances are alluded to with not a breath of disfavour by our Lord Jesus Christ Himself, in the parable of the Prodigal Son, and in the instance of the children playing in the market-place.

The following extract from Philo the Jew, describing the meetings of the Therapeuta, will show how in the early part of the first century something very like carolling in its strictest sense was practised by that ascetic branch of the sect of the Essenes, in their nocturnal religious worship.

"And after supper they celebrate their sacred vigil. And the vigil is conducted on this wise: They all stand up in a crowd, and in the midst of the symposium first of all two choirs are formed, one of men, and one of women, and for each, one most honoured and skilled in song is chosen as a leader and director. Then they sing hymns composed to the praise of God, in many metres, and to various melodies, in one singing together in one room, and in another with antiphonal harmonies, moving their hands in time and dancing (συνεργάζόμενοι) and being transported with divine enthusiasm and devoutly, one while lyric measures, and at another tragic plainsong, strophes and antistrophes, as need requires. Then when each choir, the men separate and the women separately, has partaken of food by itself, as in the forests of Bacchus, and quaffed the pure god-loving wine, they mingle together and become one choir out of two—the mimetic representation of that of yore starting on the shore of the Red Sea on account of the miracles wrought there . . . To this [the singing of the Song of Moses] the chorus of the male and female Therapeuta afforded a most perfect resemblance with its variant and concordant melodies; and the sharp searching tone of the women together with the baritone sound of the men effected a harmony both symphonic and altogether musical. Perfectly beautiful are their motions, perfectly beautiful their discourse; grave and solemn are these carolers (συνεργάζομενοι, dancers and singers—members of a choir—from λυρός, a band of singers and dancers; a ring-dance); and the final aim of their motions, their discourse, and their chorale dancers (συνεργάζομενοι is πίειν)." (Translated from Dr. Mangey's ed. of Philo's Works, from the original Greek, compared with the Editor's Latin translation, 1742, vol. ii. pp. 404-5, On the Communional Life.)

With regard to the subsequent practice of dancing with singing in Christian Churches, it is surely not altogether unreasonable to conjecture (in the absence of historical proof) that the traditional account of such carolling as that of these Therapeuta, if not of a similar choralism among their Christian fellow-countrymen, may possibly have had some influence on the minds of the rulers of the Church, leading them not sternly and absolutely to deprive their hearthstone converts of the customary dances of their former religious ceremonies. It must, however, be admitted, that there is no record of the use of the sacred dance in the Primitive Church, unless, indeed, these Therapeuta were Christians, an opinion which is not generally received.

[Dr. Burney, in his History of Music, confounds these Therapeuta with the Christians; probably misled by Eusebius. In the Supp. to Collier's Life of Caxton it is also called Christians. See Riddle's Christian Antiquities, pp. 181, note: Eusebius's Hist. Eccles. I. II., c. 17: Burton's Lectures on the First Three Centuries, x. and Mosheim, bk. 1, pt. i. ch. ii. § 15.]

Later on, in some places, dances under duress were tolerated. The third Council of Toledo, 589, however, forbade dances in churches, through the vigil of saints' days. That of Austerre, 590, forbade secular dances in churches. In 858, Gautier, Bp. of Orleans, condemned the rustic songs and women dancers in the Presbytery on festival days. In 1216 the Council of Avignon prohibited theatrical dances and secular songs in church. In 1212 processions danced round the churches at Paris, and women danced in the cemeteries. We are informed by Jacques de Voragine, (a writer of the 14th cent.) that, as a condition of the remission, by the Bp. of Liége in the 13th cent., of a tax previously paid by the merchants of Verviers, a deputation of certain magistrates and clergy of Verviers, headed by a cross, danced under the corona in the nave of the Cathedral of St. Lambert, at Liége, on Tuesday in Whitsuntide. This was continued until the Cathedral was burnt down by the French revolutionary soldiers, in 1794. In the 17th cent. the apprentices and servants of York were accustomed to dance in the nave of the Minster on Shrove Tuesday; and in Wiltshire the inhabitants of Wotton and Basingstoke, by a custom long recognized, went up in a dance annually to Salisbury Cathedral. To this day, a dancing procession, chanting a carol to the tune of "Adam hatte sieben Sohne," takes place at Echternach in Luxembourg on Shrove Tuesday. Also in the Cathedral at Seville, ever since the 12th cent., on Shrove Tuesday, on the feasts of Corpus Christi, and of the Immaculate Conception, twelve young choristers, dressed as pages in antique Spanish costume, sing a jubilant carol at the lectern in the choir before the high altar, accompanied by an orchestra, ending in a ringing peal (a succession of notes sung on one note). This is followed by a dance round the lectern, and concluded by the choristers ranging themselves in line and playing "a regular and most harmonious fantasia on castanets." A few more instances might be given of carolling in its strictly literal sense in the later Middle Ages. Thus the dance, though generally discontinued, has never entirely died out, and the musical phase of the carol remains as vigorous as ever.

iv. Sacred and Secular Carols. Under the term "carol" we may include a large class of popular songs, the first of which were characterized by dance measures, both of time and action. It has come eventually to be used to designate a kind of lyrical poem, usually, but not exclusively, on sacred subjects, intended to be sung with or without musical accompaniment, but it sometimes departs widely from the jubilant subjects of its original use, becoming more of the nature of the hymn, as its secular counterpart, the ballad, also, in like manner, rises in some instances into the sentimental and romantic poem. The melody both of the carol and of the ballad are usually completed in the first stanza or verse, and repeated for each of the others.

v. The Sacred Carol. The special difference between hymns, strictly so-called, and carols, may perhaps be most accurately marked by quoting the definition of the former given by St. Augustine:

"Do you know what a hymn is? It is singing with the praise of God. If you praise God and do not sing, you utter no hymn. If you sing, and praise not God, you utter no hymn. If you praise anything which does not pertain to the praise of God, though in singing you praise, you utter no hymn." (See Primer of Plainsong. Novello.)

There is doubtless a wide borderland on which many a religious song may not inaccurately be classed under the head both of hymn and of carol. The most ancient Latin sacred lyrics are sometimes entirely direct addresses of prayer or praise to God, i.e., hymns. But they sometimes deflect (as do the Psalms themselves) from direct addresses to God into historical references to His miraculous works and providential interpositions in behalf of His people; or into subjective, contemplative admiration of the Divine dealings with His faithful servants as individuals, thereby indirectly promoting His glory, but not directly ascribing glory to Him, and thus "praising Him." Such songs do not come strictly within St. Augustine's definition; and it may therefore be suggested that they partake more or less of the nature of religious carols. And this applies equally to many modern compositions called hymns. It seems, then, not too much to assert that from the very beginning the Christian Church has been using sacred lyrics, which, whether we range them under the head of Psalms, Hymns, Spiritual Songs, Odes, Canticles, or simply Songs, had among them some at least, if not many, having the special characteristics of the carol. The first of these is undoubtedly the Gloria in Excelsis, which Bp. Jeremy Taylor calls a carol in his Life of Christ. To many of the Sequences (q. v.) of a later age the same designation might justly be applied. With the gradual disuse of the ancient languages and the birth of modern European tongues, and also coeval with the secular songs of the minstrels, troubadours, and minnesingers, religious songs—carols in fact—came to be composed in the languages then best understood by the common people. Of these, though many have perished in many cases through wanton destruction in the 16th and 17th centuries, yet a sufficient number remain to mark the character of the later mediaeval carols, and thus to link the past with the present.

vi. Mysteries and Miracle Plays. The continuous chain of the history of carolling gains many a link from the records of the Mysteries and Miracle Plays. These plays extend from the 4th cent., when Gregory Nazianzen, Archbishop and Poet, and a Father of the Church, banished pagan plays from the stage at Constantinople, and introduced select stories from the Old and New Testament, to the celebrated Ober-Ammergau Passion Play of to-day. The songs introduced into these religious plays were essentially carols, and in no country were they popular earlier than in England. A proverb of French origin, current in the 14th and 15th cent., shows that the singing of ballads and carols was then very general in Britain. It reads,

"Gailli cantans, Angli jubilant, Hispan plangunt, Germani ibant, Itali capitans."

The translation at the same period was,

"The French sing or pipe, the English carol, the Spaniards wail, the Germans howl, the Italians coper."

The last allusion is rather to their unsteady holding of notes than to their facility in florid singing. (Popular Music of the Olden Time, by W. Chappell, i. Intro. ix.)

vii. The Reformation Period. This was a period of darkness and despair to the carol writers and the carol and ballad singers. "The reign of Queen Elizabeth gave the death-blow to the long-sustained race of English minstrels" (Dr. Rimbault's Little Book of Songs and Ballads), by the edict which pronounced them all "rogues, vagabonds, and sturdy beggars" (Dict. of Music, &c., by Sir G. Grove). Musicians held ballads in contempt, and great poets rarely wrote in ballad metre. Notwithstanding the advance made in music of the highest artistic kind, both abroad and at home, in the 16th and 17th cent. ballads, carols, and other ditties gradually shared the obloquy of the minstrels. These were all but lost and forgotten by the close of the 17th cent., the teaching of music was discouraged, and even in Shakespeare's day he makes the clown in the "Winter's Tale" boast of the exceptional cast of his chorus at his father’s sheep-shearing feast:—

"What will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she says it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty mouses for the shearsers: three-man song-men all [i.e. singers of three-part songs], and very good: new: but they are most of them means [tenors] and bases: but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to horn-pipes" [i.e. dance tunes]. Act. iv. sc. ii.

In the literature of the 16th cent. we have instances of the hold which even the term "Carol" had upon the national mind. In 1562 were published Cretensian Carolles autoriesgied by my Lorde of London [Bp. Grindal]; in 1564 we have Carols exhorting men to put their trust in Christ alone; and in 1579, Carols or godly hymns for Christmas. Later on we have a few lyrics of this class in the works of B. Southwell, G. Wither, W. Austin, Ben Jonson, P. Herrick, Jeremy Taylor, N. Tate, and others. In the 18th cent. a carol may be found here and there, such as C. Wesley’s "Hark, all the welkin ring," but the true revival of carols and carolling is found in the collection and publication of carols in the early, and the writing of original carols in the latter part of the present century, aided probably not a little by the Christmas Carol broadsheets and chap-books which were somewhat extensively sold from 1800 to 1830, and less extensively somewhat later.

viii. Carol Literature.—The carol literature at the command of the hymnologist and literary student may be thus classified: (1) Ms. (2) Printed Carols, Old and New; (3) Lullaby Carols; and (4) Secular Carols

(1) Ms. Carols.—The great Ms. store-house is the library of the British Museum. Its treasures have been examined by many students, and some of the results have been published by T. Wright, M.A., and others. One of the earliest pub. by Mr. Wright is from a Ms. of the 16th cent. It records, in Latin, the conversion of England by the mission of St. Augustine in the 6th cent. from St. Gregory the Great, in which the softening influence of Christianity on the harshness of the ancient language is recorded.

"Eccles. Britanniæ
Frenses olivæ bartie
In Prævæs Evangelicæ
Exultetas unica.

(Lo! the British tongue, e'erwhile harshly grating barbarously, now, in praise of the Trinal Unity, sounds forth Alleluia, joyously inspired by the arrival of the glad Evangelic vine.)"

The Liber Elianeus preserves the well-known first stanza of a carol by Cauvte, of the 11th cent.:

"Merry sang the monks of Ely,
As kneale the king rowed thereby,
Row, knights, now near the land,
And hear we these monks sing.

Du Meril gives from the Brit. Mus. Ms., 1189, in his Poésies Populaires Latines Du Moyen Age, 1847, p. 43, a "Chant sur Nativité du Christ," the first of which reads:

"Nunc clericorum conceto devota sit cum gaudio in tanta nativitate et festione hono!"

There is a singularly interesting Ms. in the Brit. Mus. (Sloane 2583) generally ascribed to the reign of Henry VI. (1422 to 1461), and very difficult to decipher. Fortunately there is a modern printed copy in Songs and Carols, edited by T. Wright, M.A. From its historical references, the date of one at least of these songs is fixed between 1362 and 1369. It may be inferred that the songs in this Ms. belong to a numerous class of popular literature, that they were handed orally from generation to generation by those who sung them, and that a few of them only were copied down by accident as in this and similar Ms. collections. The particular song alluded to is No. 11, p. 73, in Mr. Wright's Songs & Carols, 1847. It is in 8 st., and begins:

"Thynk man woor thou art wroth
Powe and naked thou were better nowt
Thynk how Crist thy soyle bath bowt
And fond to servyn hym to pay."

The remaining verses tell of famine, pestilence, death, storm, lightning, thunder, the burning of the tolbooth at Lynne; and exhorts men to take to heart these warnings of Divine mercy.

"Lok man, how thou setest thy lyf
And how thou spendyst thy wyettes v
Go to cherch, and do the schryf,
And bryng thy soyle in redy way."

The following Christmas Carol, in which we have a curious blending of Latin and English, is from the same Ms. It is No. vi. in Mr. Wright's work:

"Eve, Benne bólde
Natus est de virginine.
Blyssed be that mayde Mary,
Born he was of holy body,
Goddess sothe thyght on hir,
Non ex virilli semine.
In a manour of an axe
Hesse lay and luthed was Harey peyn for to pass
Pro peccante homine.
Kynges commer fro dyvess londe
With grete gyftys in here honde,
In Bedlem the childe they fonde,
Stellae ducti lumiens.
Man and chykly bothe old and yong
Now in his blysful comynyng,
To that chyld mon we syng
Glória tibi Domine.
Nowel, nowel in this halie
Make mynye I pray you alle
Onto the chylde may we call
Ulo sine crimen."

Another carol in this Ms. is as follows:

"Alleluiá, Al. Al. Al. Alleluiá
Deo patri sit glória.
Salvator mundi domine,
Fader of hevene blessed thou be,
Thyn thou greyst a mayden with an ave.
Quae vocatur Maria.
Adésto núnc præpitatus
Thynk how Kathryn, thy son swete Jesus,
Man to become for love of us
Deo patri sit glória."

There are about 76 songs in this Ms., a large proportion of them being carols, which, translated into modern English, with good tunes from equally old sources, might be utilised with advantage by competent editors for present use. There are unfortunately no musical notes in this rare and interesting Ms.

Another 15th cent. Ms. supplied materials for Songs and Carols now first printed from a Ms. of the XVth cent., edited by Thomas Wright, Esq., M.A., F.R.A.S., &c. Printed for the Percy Soc., 1847. From this Ms. we quote the following carol as being of more than usual interest:

"Thynk man woor thou art wroth,
Powe and naked thou were better howt,
Thynk how Crist thy soyle bath bowt,
And fond to servyn hym to pay."
The whole of this book is in a measure a reflection of the unsettled state of Church services, and the upheaving of the old order of things at the dawn of the Reformation. It does not appear that any interpreter has as yet published an intelligible version of the entire Ms., or of any of the most interesting parts of it. Both Sandys, No. VII., and the Editor of Christmas with the Poets, p. 6, have indeed quoted, from folio 5 b, one carol, the former printing the old English, the latter modernising it. The following is a literal version of this carol from the Ms. itself:

In die Natalitatis [with musical notation]. [Solo.]
Tenor. Nowell; Nowell; Nowell; Nowell;
"Who is there that sympath so Nowell Nowell."
"I am here My Crist Masso"
[Plain-song] "Welcome my lord Syl Christ Masso" [Chorus] "Welcome to all both more and less."

With similar mixture of verse and chorus, in harmony of the most "opercose" kind, we find on fol. 8 b the following, also headed,

In die Natalitatis.

vi. c c a F C D E F. Joseph wonder how this may be.
That many wax gret wheny and she ever have layvi in chassist.
If she be w'chyle, hit ys not by me.
mervel not Joseph.
The holy gost w'merciful distace
In here [se her] hath the entry w'towe ofence
God and man conceived by his presence
In virginne pure w'tove violence.
What the angel of god to me dothe say
Joseph must and will unble obey.
Albye prevyly [privily] y[1] wold have stole away
But now will y fre her till that y say

The following is from the same source

[M.S. 5663, fol. 406]:

Jhesu fill virginis misericere nobis.

Angels ther were mylde of mode
Song to that awete fode,
With joye and blisse,
misericere nobis.

[ebith or erdith] In a cave was that chyde layde,
Both one and sye with hym playde,
With joye and blisse,
iserere nobis.

[who] Then for ou shadde his blade,
And also he dyedde pro vobis,
And for us I wisse,
iserere nobis.

* Abrasped, to awaken (also neuter), to rouse oneself (Nares's Dictionary). Hence the line may mean Sing we all loudy. "ludely."
CAROLS

And then to hell he take the way,
To ransom them that there lay
With joy and bliss, miserere nostre.

Another, for Epiphany, begins thus:—

There were three persons, and one Lord.
The Selves baptized with one accord,
The Jather said the blessed word,
He is fillus meus.

[The spelling here is modernised.]

In addition to the MSS. from which we have quoted, there are others which have been consulted, in which many carols may be found and illustrated, c.g.:

Nase's Glossary of Mediaeval Music may be consulted for the interpretation of 16th and 17th cent. words.

(2) Printed Carols.—Printed carols, whether in collections or scattered in various other works, and, as it were, buried under a mass of heterogeneous literature, next claim attention. In Ames's Typographical Antiquities, we learn that Wynken de Worde printed in 1521 a set of Christmas carols, and that these were festival remnants for enlivening the Christmas celebration. See also Warton's Eng. Poetry, iii. sec. 26. The following list, though by no means complete, will indicate the nature and character of some of the rarer and less known works in which carols may be found. Including books and broadsheets, we have the following:

2. Psalms, Sonnets and Songs of Sadness and Pity. 1547. William Byrd (?).
4. Hymns and Songs of the Church. 1614.
5. Devotions. 1635. William Austin.
9. Paraphrase upon the Canticles. S. Woodford.
10. Supp. to Tate and Brady. 1700. N. Tate.
14. The Christmas Box; or New Year's Gift. R. T. S. c. 1794-96, containing all the carols which the Society had previously issued as separate tracts.
19. Christmas Carols; three series with music, by Dr. Gauntlett.
21. Divers Carols for Isaac and Sunday Tales of Holy Church. 1844. A. H. Brown. This has an interesting introduction on the whole subject.

We have by no means exhausted the list; but these works, and those now to be more fully described, will be sufficient to indicate the wealth of carol literature which we possess. In addition there are:

(3) Poems by Herrick (1591-1674). Of these the following may be mentioned as truly religious and poetical carols:—

1. "In numbers, and but these few,
   I sing thy birth, O Jesu."
2. "What sweeter music can we bring Than carols for to sing?"
3. "Tell me thou clear and heavenly tongue
   Where is the Babe but lately sprung, Lies He the tyly-lanks among?"

(1) The Anglo-Norman Period to the Reformation.
(2) The Elizabethan Era (1585-1603). This period furnished the following amongst others:—

1. "Was not Christ our Saviour Sent unto us from God above?"
2. "Behold, a silly [simple] tender Babe
   In freezing winter night."
3. "I sing the birth was born to-night,
   The Author both of life and light."
4. "Immortal Babe, who this dear day
   Didst change Thine heav'n for our clay."
5. "Run, Shepherds, run where Bethlehem's blast appears,
   We bring the best of news, be not dismayed."
6. "O than the fairest day, three fairest nights, Night to best days in which the sun doth shine."
7. "All after pleasures as I rid one day,
   My horse and I, both tired, bodile and minde."
8. "Sweet music, sweeter far
   Than any song is sweet."
   Edmund Baxton.
9. "The wrathful winter pricking on space
   With blushing blast, and all prepared the treen."
10. "Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated."
   W. Shakespeare.
CAROLS

1. "Down with the rosemary and the bays,
Down with the myrtle and the holly;
Instead of holly, now upraise
The greener box, for show."
Of these No. 3 is the "Star Song," and 4 is for Candlemas Eve.
(1) The Civil Wars, the Commonwealth, and the Restoration. George Wither is the leading singer of the earlier part of this period. His carols include:—
1. "As on the night before this happy morn." H. Crayth. 1653.
3. "Teach us by your example, Lord." H. Crayth. 1653.
Passing to others we have:
6. "It was the winter wild." J. Milton. 1653.
7. "Come, we shepherds, whose blest sight." R. Cremer. 1653.
9. "All you that in this house be here." R. Cremer. 1653.
10. "Now that the time is come wherein
Our Saviour Christ was born." R. Cremer. 1653.
(2) Poor Robin's Almanack. 1790.
(3) The Eighteenth Century. The editor of Christmas Carols in the Poets (the collection with which we are now dealing) says, "Few poems bearing reference to the Christmas Festival appear to have been produced during that era of the revival of English literature which has acquired the epithet of Augustus." He quotes from John Grey, John Hampfyle, and R. J. Thruston; but their verses have not the true ring of carol minstrelsy, and are not likely to have been used as such. Singles on the other hand, he omits all reference to J. Byron's "Christmas, awake, salute the happy morn," and C. Wesley's "Hark, how all the wild rings." (4) Nineteenth Century. In this division we have extracted from 29 poets, including Sir Walter Scott, W. Wordsworth, Southey, Croly, Barham, Tennyson, and Wordsworth, etc., with the tunes to which he had been accustomed to hear them sung when he was a child in church and in private houses on Christmas Eve, throughout the West of England, up to the latter part of the 18th century. They used to be practised several weeks beforehand; and on the night of Christmas Eve, and on the Festival of the Nativity itself, they were sung with great fervour at home, after the 8 p.m. drawing of the ales hot from the oven, and the festive drags of ale or cider, and at Church, instead of the metrical Psalms, especially at the afternoon service; and, he informs us, "none of the sports or gambols, so frequently practised on subsequent days, ever mixed themselves with the religious observances of Christmas Eve." The characteristic of these carols is that they consist for the most part of simple narratives of Holy Scripture with a grateful admonition to corresponding Christian duty and gratitude. They are set to music of a solemn melody and a sprightly movement, derived apparently from very early carols, and mostly in the Ancient Church Modes. There are eight carols, the first lines of which are:
1. "The Lord at first did Adam make." This deals with the Fall, in 1 st of 16 lines, and a refrain of five, and is set to a tune in the Dorian mode, and in time.
2. "When God at first created man." The Fall, the Damnation, and the Nativity are dealt with. The melody is in the Eolian mode, and in time.
3. "A Virgin most pure as the prophet's do tell." This is also given in W. Burnaby's Christmas Tunes, No. 23, p. 313, with a different form of the melody. From these two sources it was rearranged in 1860, by the late E. Sedgley, in his set of Ancient Christmas Carols, arranged for four voices. The melody is in the 7th or Mixolydian mode.
4. "When righteous Joseph wedded was." This is in 5 st of 4 L. M., and has no chorus.
5. "While shepherds watched their flocks by night." This is in 8 st of 8 L. M. is sweetly plainsong in sentiment, and somewhat above the ordinary level of poetical feeling.
6. "Let all that are in earth incline." This is in 16 st of 4 L. M., with a chorus of 41. —
"For to redeem our souls from hell, Christ is the Saviour of us all." In this carol the whole story of Christmas and Epiphany is told in plain and hymns, well calculated to catch the ear and touch the hearts of simple and unsophisticated carolers. The tone is bold and effective, in the Doric mode on A, and in 3 time.
(c) Some years ago an extremely rare book was brought from Stockholm, and placed in the hands of the Editor of the Hymnal. In this, the Carols for Christmas-Tide, and Easter-Tide, subsequently published in 1853 and 1854, were the fruits of the Rev. J. M. Neale's study of the verse, and the Rev. T. Helmore's interpretation and harmonisation of the musical notation it contained. This small duodecimo volume is the—Piae Cantiones Exclamativae et Scholasticae, utrum Episcoporum, in Inclito Regno Sueciae partim Mariae, partim Theodori, Theol.
R. Ath. (Printed at Uppsala.)

These "pious songs of ancient bishops, everywhere in vogue in Sweden," were revised and edited in the year 1582 by the Most Rev. Theodore Peter Rubta, of Nyland; they are stated, in the title-page, to be most highly esteemed by the Church of God, and the School at Abo, in Finland. The dedication to his Patron the "Illustrissimo et Nobili Lord Christian Horn, Free Baron of Aminna," enforces the Apostolic teaching as to the use of Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs, by the practice of the "Old Fathers," who always joined music with the Word of God, as also by that of the wise governors and pious Bishops of the Christian Church. This dedication is dated from Rostock, May 23, 1582.

Every canticle of the 75 contained in the 200 pages of this little book has the notes of a melody to which all the verses are to be sung, some being also furnished with a second part, others with three or four parts. A few are noted throughout, after the manner of sequences, with recurring strains, but not in exact regular verses, as in the usual tunes of carols and hymns. The first part of the little book (to p. 19) contains "Odeum de Nativitate," then follow others, de Pasuance, de Resurrectione, etc.; at pages 104, 105, 106 and 107 there are the Tescanis, or, Tenor and Bassus, of a setting of the Hymn "Avita duxeris memoriam," in the Doric mode on D. Next a Puyrian melody to a carol, "In Festo Pentecostes," at p. 109, "Sings, In Trinitate," at p. 115, in Eucharista; at p. 112, Canteniae precum, some of them Hymnus in the strictest sense. Some songs follow, lamenting, and inveighing against crimes, wickedness, and general corruption of manners. At p. 154, to 176, in Carmina, "De Sola Scholastica," and the collection closes with a couple of songs under each of the following headings, In Concordia; Historiae Canteniae, and In Tempore Vernali.

"The Piae Cantiones were published for the use of the Lutheran communion in Sweden. Neither words nor music, however, were changed from earlier sources; and they occur in the Libraries of Germany, England and France, with no other difference than..." traditionally repetition and popular variations would naturally introduce. (See the Prefaces in the folio ed. of Helmore and Neale's Carols for Christmas and Easter-Tide for further information.)

(j) Soon after the publication of the 12 Carols for Christmas-Tide, and of the 12 for Easter-Tide before mentioned, Mr. Edmund Sedding, in 1860, published a set of nine Antient Christmas Carols, corresponding with the 18m ed. of Helmore and Neale's Carols in size, type, and four-part vocal arrangement in compressed score, and a separate book of words; a 19th ed. appeared in 1863; and that year a second set of seven more carols by the same energetic "Canter of S. Raphael, Bristol," was published, and to the prefaces of each set the reader is referred for further information.

(g) Three original carols of the late Dr. Neale may also here be noticed:

(1) "Pies and Lazarus," arranged by Edmund Sedding—the melody is of the 15th cent.—"Now bring in good cheer!" (2) "Good Christmas all, oserve," for Christmas Morning; music by the Rev. Thomas Helmore. (3) Lines written expressly to a Danish air by E. Herneae, written by Dr. Neale as to W. H. Lambert, who also received a pianoforte copy of the music from Mrs. Neale. Mr. Lambert arranged it for 4 voices, to which Mr. Mann added wind instrument accompanying. As a grand march also, it has been performed both at the Crystal Palace and elsewhere. The words are, it is believed, now for the first time published, through Mr. Lambert's courtesy to the writer:

A Soldier's Carol, by Rev. John Mason Neale, M.A. (d.1885) written to the Danish air "Der Tapfer Landsoldat" (by E. Herneae).

1. God bless the brave and true,
God bless the brave and true,
God bless and bring them thro',
Yes, God bless and bring them thro';
Whatever be the light!
God bless and save the right,
And send the happy morn-
That shall end a gloomy night;
True men have all one hope, boys,
One faith, one strength, one aim;
And though the battle differ,
The crown shall be the same.
And therefore God with us;
And we will be with Him.
Hurray! hurray! hurray!

2. With God to guard and guide,
With God to guard and guide,
We laugh at all beside;
Yes, we laugh at all beside:
Cheer up, brave hearts, and trust;
You can, you will, you must;
And see the God of battle, lads,
And not the arm of dust.
The world and all its legions,
They band against the right;
But if we have the truth, boys,
We also have the might;
And therefore God for us,
And we will be for Him.
Hurray! hurray! hurray!

3. So close, and firm, and near!
So close, and firm, and near!
Let him, poor wretch! who may
The cause to gold betray!
For us—the sword is drawn—
Yes, and the scabbard flung away!
Strike in, strike in for justice!
Be spent, as well as spend;
And then—this life may go, boys,
The other cannot end,
And therefore God with us,
And we will be for Him.
Hurray! hurray! hurray!

* The famous word passed along the lines, when the British soldiers led themselves at Fontenoy, 1745.

(h) Dr. Rimbault's Little Book of Christmas Carols, and Mr. Husk's excellent Collection of Songs of the Nativity, must not be omitted from the list of books included in the various and abundant sources of supply of original carols accessible to "readers," and to singers, of this popular Christian music.

(i) Carols for use in Church during Christmas and Epiphany, by the Rev. R. R. Chope, 1875. The book has in all 112 carols. These include many old traditional ones, and many quite new, which (a reviewer in the Literary Churchman states) "are quite worthy, as a rule, of appearing with their time-honoured compaes." There is also a learned and most interesting Introduction, by the Rev. S. Baring-Gould; and in it will be found much doctrine appeared also in the fourth part of the Sacramt.

(j) Christmas Carols, New and Old, the words edited by the Rev. Henry Ramsden Bramley, M.A., with illustrations by the Brothers Dalziel, and music edited by Dr. Stainer, N.D., is a handsome addition to carol literature of the present times: excellent in the poetry, picturesque in the illustrations, correct and refined in the music and its arrangements. There is an excellent preface in a smaller ed. of this book, and an index giving the source of the music and of the words of each carol. (Novello & Co.) Of the 70 examples in this work there are some 39 from traditional sources, 19 of which are to be found in other collections; thus 11 of them are in Sandys, 3 in Gilbert, 3 in Christmas with the Poets, 2 in Helmore and Neale, and 12 in Chope. From this collection we select the following carols as being excellent for their sound, their religious union, and poetic fervour. But where almost all are, in their several kinds, very good, this notice of a few must not be taken as any disparagement of the rest.

2. "Come, tune your heart," Tr. by Frances E. Cox from the teismen.
5. "On the birthday of the Lord," Tr. by Dr. Littledale from the Latin.
8. "The Babe in Bethlehem's manger laid." This is traditional from Chappell's Ode.
9. "The Virgin stills the crying," Tr. by H. R. Bramley. The melody to this carol is by J. Barby. It is a famous example of the modern tunes and their arrangement, happily combining the simplicity of pure diatonic melody with slight touches of modern harmony.
10. "Once again, O blessed time," by the Rev. W. Bright, d.d., high-toned faith and warm devotion, with very harmonious verse, characterize this most charming Christmas song.
11. "All this night, bright angels sing." by W. Austin, 1635, set to music by Sir A. Sullivan.
12. "Forth then she came to seek whose He did roam." Among the carols of a legendary and imaginative cast perhaps the most striking in this collection is this by Dr. Stainer. It is a original conception, and not, as might be thought, the elaboration of a most lovely legend. The carol is very beautiful, and chosen with a lovely lesson:

"Know thou, dear brother, in these Christmas hours,
Sorrow, the like snow, will melt if He but smile.
And if He chooseth thy way, thou wast thy path with flowers.
Amidst thy mirth think on His thorns awhile.

13. "A Babe is born, all a Maid," This is a good specimen of the 15th cent. of a mixture of the ver-crucial with well-known lines of the Old Office hymns, as noted before. The first stanzas reads—

"A Babe is born, all of a Maid
To bring salvation with us;
No more are we to sing afraid,
Vest, Creator Spiritus."

Hall, is already noted above. It was written for the church of Exeter Cathedral.

Concerning No. 6 above, "The great God," &c., Dr. Stainer has supplied the following facts:—

He says he has every reason to believe that the melody as originally was the same as that of "A Virgin unspotted, O my, and her speech so sweet and mild, the Tune has never received such as copies of the tune to the day.
However, it is agreed by all that they have printed; but from Gloucestershire, &c., we obtained that was always sung to these words ("A Virgin unspotted, &c."); but difficulty widely from its usual form. It was considered so beautiful that Dr. Stainer got his co-editor to arrange other words for it. Thus we are indebted to the happy accident of a variation in the melody for another carol on the Nativity. "The great God of heaven is come down to earth," equal to the former ("A Virgin unspotted") in the clearness and interest of its narrative, and far surpassing it in depth of thought, and elegance of diction.

(8) An excellent collection of Carols,
Hymns and Noels for Christmas was published by T. W. Stanford, in 1883. This volume contains lyric. The editor has caught the spirit and adopted the true style of church harmony, both in the arrangements of the tunes generally and in the six he has composed himself.
The work deserves wide circulation, and a clearer typography than the engraved pages of the first issue.

Gould, with music edited by the Rev. H. F.
Sheppard, 1884-86.

(2) Carols and Poems from the 15th cent. to the Present Time, by A. H. Bullein, 1885.

(3) In Excelsis Gloria: Carols for Christmas-tide, 1885. This is set to music by A.
H. Brown, and contains both ancient and modern Carols not found in other modern collections.

(4) Carols for Easter and other Tides.

By the Rev. R. R. Chope, 1887.

(5) Lollaby Carols. One of the most striking of these we have already given, p. 209.
Of course a few specimens must suffice. From the Latin we have "Sleep, my Babe! O sleep, the Mother, a tr. of "Dormi, Fili, dormi, Matre." by Mary D. Monnirle, in the Rev.
Gerard Moultrie's Hymns and Lyrics, 1667; from the German of J. C. Ruse, "Sleep well, my dear, sleep safe and free," in Jacob's
"Hymno Germanica, 1722;"
from Old English, "My sweet little Baby, what meanest you for to cry," in Byrd as above, and Montgomery's Christian Poet, 1827; "Sweet baby, sleep, what ails my dear," G. Wither, 1641 as above; and
"Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber," by I. Watts.

(4) Secular Carols. Amongst the less sacrificed or wholly secular carols may be mentioned the famous Queen's College, Oxford's Christmas banquet; not only there, but at all great holiday of monarchs and nobles; songs in praise of holly and ivy; wassailing songs, and those of the wassail, all so well described by Sandys. It is perhaps allowable to add a brief account of at least one specimen of a class, by no means uncommon in earlier days, legendary in its origin, and sometimes childish in their character.

At Coventry, in 1483, Richard H.-, witnessed the "Lauda Corporis Christi," and also did Henry VII.
in 1485. This play opens at the sending forth of the decree of Augustus, and the consequent journey of the Magi. and the B. V. Mary to Bethlehem. On the way the she sees a tree, and asks what it is. St. Joseph replies,  "For suhle Mary it is a cherry tree; in tymne of year, ye might feed them your fill." They converse on the tree, to the delight of being on a cherry tree; she to have some of the fruit. He deems it impossible to get at it, but implies that He by whom she is with it should never grant her wish. She prays God that, if it is His will, she may have some of the cherries. The tree immediately nows down to her. Joseph fear he was misled the Blessed Trinity, and adorns himself. Hence the subject of the carol still sung, with various readings, in many parts of England, "Joseph parted of man."
Sands, at p. 241; Chope, No. 26; and Bramwell and Stainer, No. 28; give each a different version. In Chope the legend is eliminated, doubtless that the rest of the song may not be excluded from use in Church. Mr.
Baringsould considers this story is the lingering of a very curious mystery tradition, common to the whole race of man, that the eating the fruit in Eden was the cause of the descendant of Eve being the Mother of man who was to wipe away that old transgression;"
and he refers to Himodi epic poetry, the mythology of the Mexicans, a romance that has lately appeared from the catacombs of Egypt, and other rare sources of information in support of this view.

ix. Conclusion.—The revival of carol singing already alluded to has stimulated both poets and composers to add fresh stones to that abundance already transmitted to our age early and more thoroughly believing times. The translations from the Latin writers in the Ages of Faith, when happily turned to true English idiom, and versification (as many are, specially those of the late Valentine Dr. John Mason Neale), are not only most worthy of use, but are the best patterns and fortunately most limited; for the lyric and carol writers of the present day,
Time, the certain arbiter of true excellence, has tried the old as it will eventually the new.
"It is impossible at one stretch to produce a quantity of new carols, of which words and music shall alike be original. They must be the gradual accumulation of centuries; the offerings of different epochs, of different countries, of different minds, to the same treasury of the Church. None but an empiric would venture to make a set to order." (Neale, Preface to Carols for Christmas-Tides.) [T. H.]

Carpenter, Joseph Edwards, Ph.D., journalist, compiler of popular songs and ballads, dramatic writer and author of songs and hymns, was born in London, Nov. 2, 1814, and died in London, May 6, 1885. For a short time he was on the staff of some local journals in London. His works, original and compiled, number nearly 20. These include his Songs: Sacred and Secular, 1856, and from this volume his hymns are taken. Dean Alford included his "Lord and Father of creation"
(Holy Matrimony) in The Year of Grace, 1857

Cary, Alice, the elder of two gifted sisters, was b. near Cincinnati, Ohio, 1820, removed to New York in 1832, and d. there Feb. 12, 1871. The story of the two sisters—of their courageous move from a rural, western home, their life in the metropolis, their mutual affection, and inability to live apart—has attracted much admiring and sympathetic interest. As poets they were of nearly equal merit. Besides some prose works, Alice pub. a vol. of Poems in 1850. Her hymns are:

1. Earth with its dark and dreadful ill. Death anticipated. This fine lyric is given in Hymns and Songs of Praise, N.Y., 1874, and dated 1870.
2. Along the mountain track of life. Lent. The authorship of this hymn, although sometimes attributed to Alice Cary, is uncertain. It appeared anonymously in H. W. Beecher's Pulpit and Pulpit Coll., 1835, No. 438. It would seem from its tone and the refrain, "Ne'er see Thee," to have been suggested by Mrs. Adams's "Ne'er see, my God, to Thee," which appeared in 1841.

In addition to these there are the following hymns by her in the Lyra Sac. Amer., 1869:

3. Bow, angels, from your glorious state. Peace desired.
4. I cannot plainly see the way. Providence.
5. Leave me, dear ones, to my number. Death anticipated.

Cary, Phoebe, sister of the above, b. near Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 4, 1824, and d. within six months of the death of the same sister, Newport, July 31, 1871. Her works include Poems and Pastorals, 1854; and Poems of Faith, Hope and Love, 1868. With Dr. Charles F. Deems she compiled Hymns for all Christians, 1869. Her hymns are:

1. One sweetly solemn thought. Anticipation of Heaven. This piece was not intended for public use, nor is it a suitable metre for musical treatment, yet it has won universal acceptance and popularity. In some instances this has been attained by change of metre as in the Smydl, to the Bp. Ps. & Hymns, 1860, No. 1183. Johnson's Encyclopaedia is in error in saying it was "written at the age of 17." The Congregational Quarterly for Oct., 1874, says, "it was written, she tells us, in the little back third story bedroom, one Sabbath morning in 1852, on her return from church." This statement shows that it was composed when she was 28, and not 17. The popularity of the hymn in G. Britain arose mainly through its use in the Evangelistic services of Messrs. Moody and Sankey. In the Protestant Episcopal Ps. of Col. and Home, Phila., 1860, No. 383, it is given as "A sweetly solemn thought."

The following additional pieces by this author are in the Lyra Sac. Amer., 1868:

2. Go and sow beside all waters. Sow Sowing.
3. Great waves of plenty rolling up. Gratitude.
4. I had drunk, with lips unsated. Living Waters.

César, Heinrich, was b. at Greussen in Thuringia, i. 1597, and became deaconus at Labian, East Prussia, in 1624. He was instituted Feb. 25, 1627, as pastor at Loewenhagen, near Königberg (Löwenhagen or Leuehagen), and d. there, in his 72nd year, Aug. 11, 1699 (see, from Pastor Winkler of Loewenhagen). The hymn:

Cast thy burden on the Lord. [Strength in God.] This hymn appeared anonymously (in common with all the hymns therein) in Rowland Hill's Ps. and Hymns, &c., 1st ed., 1783, No. 64, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Encouragement for the Weak." In this form it passed into several collections to 1833, when it appeared in the Leeds H. Bk., No. 571, written by G. Rawson. As the hymn in both forms is in C. U., and the latter somewhat extensively, we append the two.

B. Hill's text, 1783.

Cast thy burden on the Lord. Cast thy burden on the Lord.

Only lean upon His word; Only lean upon His word;
Those will soon have cause Those will soon have cause to the bloom to the bloom
His eternal faithfulness. His eternal faithfulness.
He sustains thee by His He sustains thee by His friend, friend,

Be Thyself our constant Be Thyself our constant Rock; Rock;
Make us by Thy powerful Make us by Thy powerful hand. hand. Strong as Sion's mountain Strong as Sion's mountain stand.

By comparing the portions in italics in each of the above it will be seen, st. i. and v. of the 1853 text are from Rowland Hill, 1783; and st. ii. iii. and iv. are by G. Rawson. In some hymnals, especially in America, alterations are introduced into the 1853 text, as for instance in the Hymns and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, and others. The extent of these, and others may be gathered from the given text with those above:

Christmas hours, e. Cast thy burden on the Lord, joy but smile; And enable thee to stand: And enable thee to stand:
with flowers, His companionship, love, and His companionship, love, and thorns awhile. power. power.

Caswall, Edward, M. ... This...
Cawood, John, M.A., b. at Matlock, Derbyshire, March 18, 1773. His parents being in humble circumstances, he received in childhood but a limited education, and at 18 was engaged in the service of the Rev. Mr. Gurnham, Sutton-in-Ashfield, Notts. Three years' study, however, under careful direction, enabled him to enter St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, in 1797. Obtaining his degree in 1801, he took Holy Orders, and became successively Curate of Ribford and Dowles, and Incumbent of St. Ann's Chapel of Ease, Bewdley, Worcestershire. He d. Nov. 7, 1859. His hymns, 17 in all, were never published by himself. Of these 9 were included in Cottrell's Set, 8th ed., 1819, No. 268-276. Most of these have passed into other collections. These are:

1. Almighty God, Thy word is cast. After a Sermon. (1819.)
2. Hark! what mean those holy voices? (1819.)
3. [see note] (1819.) Christmas.
5. In praise of hol. (1819.) Pater Noster. (1819.) Psalms.
6. [see note] (1819.) Holy Innocents.
7. God's countenance is over me. (1819.) Psalms.
8. [see note] (1819.) Saviour's birth. (1819.)
9. By Sandy's. (1819.) A brief account.

Cennick, John, a prolific and successful hymn-writer, was descended from a family of Quakers, but brought up in the Church of England. He assisted J. Wesley and then G. Whitefield in their labours for a time, and then passed over to, and died as a minister of, the Moravian Church. Born at Reading, Dec. 12, 1718, he was for some time a land surveyor at Reading, but becoming acquainted with the Wesleys in 1739, he was appointed by J. Wesley as a teacher of a school for colliers' children at Kingswood in the following year. This was followed by his becoming a lay preacher, but in 1740 he parted from the Wesleys on doctrinal grounds. He assisted Whitefield until 1743, when he joined the Moravians, and was ordained deacon, in London, in 1749. His duties led him twice to Germany and also to the North of Ireland. He d. in London, July 4, 1755. In addition to a few prose works, and some sermons, he published:—

(1) Sacred Hymns, for the Children of God in the City of their Pilgrimage, Lond., J. Lewis, 1816. (2nd ed. Lond., B. Millers, 1714), 1st. 11., 1714; (2) Sacred Hymns for the Use of Religious Societies, &c., Bristol, F. Farley, 1743; (3) A Collection of Sacred Hymns, &c., Dublin, S. Powell, 3rd ed. 1749; (4) Hymnus and Music to the Eternal King, composed for the Choir of Little Children as desired to be saved. Dublin, S. Powell, 1751. Additional hymns from his was were pubd. by his son-in-law, the Rev. J. Swartwine, in the Moravian R. Bk., 1789, of which he was the editor. There are also 16 of his hymns in his Sermons, 2 vols., 1753-4, some being old hymns rewritten, and others new.

Many of Cennick's hymns are widely known, as "Lo, He cometh, countless trumpets," "Brethren, let us join to bless;" "Jesus, my all, to heav'n is gone;" "Children of the heavenly King;" "O rest ye, sleep, for every favour;" "We sing to Thee, Thou Son of God;" and the "Graces:" Be present at our table, Lord;" and "We thank Thee, Lord;" &c. Some of the stanzas of his hymns are very fine, but the hymns taken as a whole are most unequal. Some excellent centers might be compiled from his various works. His religious experiences were given as a preface to his Sacred Hymns, 1741. In addition to the hymns named, and others annotated under their first lines, the following are in C. U.:—

1. Be with me [us] Lord, where'er I [we] go. Divine Protection. [1741].
2. Cast thy burden on the Lord. Submission. [1743].
3. Not unto us, but Thine alone. Praise to Jesus. [1743].
5. We sing to Thee, Thou Son of God. Praise to Jesus. [1743].
6. When, O dear Jesus, when shall I? Sunday Evening. [1743].

Cerne lapsum servulun. J. W. Petersen. [Lond.] 1st pub. in the Geistliches G. B. Halle, 1697, p. 33, in 12 st., entitled, "Hymnus animi lactantis ut vicinaris," and thence as No. 263 in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704. It is a dialogue between the Soul (1-vi., xi., xii.) and Jesus (vii.-x.), in 12 st. of 8 line. Freylinghausen also included as No. 271 a full tr. contributed by L. A. Gotter, beginning "Siehe! ich gehalten Knecht." This is No. 273 in Forster's R. B. ed. 1853. The trs. are:—

1. (Look on me Thy servant fall'n;) as No. 631 in (1) of the Moravian R. Bk. 1754. (2) Jesus cometh to fulfill," a tr. of vii., as tr. ii. of No. 762 in the Moravian R. Bk., 1803 (1808, N. 994). (3) "Lamb of God, all praise to Thee," as st. iii. of No. 262, in the Moravian R. Bk., 1801 (1806, N. 440).

Červenka, Matthias (Erythronus), was b. at Čelakovitz, Béhemia, Feb. 21, 1821. He was consecrated bishop of the Bohemian Brethren in 1533, and was also secretary of the Unity. He d. at Przem, Moravia, Dec. 12, 1669. One of his hymns, written in Bohemian, has passed into English as follows:—

Aj jak jest to mila učasť. [The Christian Church] Founded on Ps. xcviii. In the Bohemian Brethren's R. Bk., 1581, folio 172 b., in 24 st. Tr. into German by J. D. Künstler, Mariazell, 1822; and into German by H. F. Kirchherr, Prag, 1822, and thence in Wackerherg, ib. p. 428, beginning, "Schau, wie lieblich und gut ist an's leib's kommen." Tr. from the German as No. 359 in the Moravian R. Bk., 1819 (1846, No. 465), beginning, "How good and pleasant is it to behold." [J. M.]

Chadwick, John White, was b. at Marblehead, Mass., U.S., Oct. 19, 1810; graduated at the Cambridge Divinity School, July 19, 1834, and ordained minister of the Second Unitarian Church, Brooklyn, N.Y., Dec. 21, 1844. A frequent contributor to the Christian Examiner; The Rudder; Old and New; Harper's Magazine; and has published many poems in American periodicals. His hymn on Unity, "Eternal Ruler of the ceaseless round," was written for the graduating class of the Divinity School, Cambridge, June 19, 1804. It is in Holders' Congregational Hymns, 1884. It is a hymn of superior merit. [W. G. H.]

Chamberlain, Thomas, M.A., was b. in 1810, and educated at Westminster, and Christ Church, Oxford (M.A. in honours, 1831). From 1837 to 1842 he was Vicar of Cowley, Oxford, and in 1842 he became Vicar of St. Thomas the Martyr, Oxford. He is Student of Christ Church, and Hon. Canon (1862). He was also from 1844 to 1880 Rural Dean of Oxford. His pub. works include Theory of Christian Worship, 2nd ed. 1855; Seven Ages of the Church, 1858; and a Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans, 1870. He also edited:—

To these collections Mr. Chamberlain contributed the following hymns:—

1. Among the salutes of God. Royal Salutes.
2. Another year is well nigh gone. S. next before Advent.
3. Apostle and Evangelist. St. Matthew. "To be inerected before the Doxology of any common metre hymn."
5. Mark's what mean those gladsome voices. Christmas. Adapted from other hymns.
6. O Guardian of the Church divine. Ordination. Adapted from other hymns.
7. Of all the twelve Thou call'st. St. John the Evangelist.
9. Sweet it is to blend in union. St. Edward the King; and St. Dunstan.
10. The Church is one throughout the globe. Unity of the Church.
11. The ten commandments once for all. For Protestant Saints.
13. 'Twas Thou, O Lord, Who gav'st the word. St. Augustine of Canterbury.
14. When once the Lord from Egypt. St. Edward the King; and St. Dunstan.

In addition to these hymns, No. 135, "And now the saint by whose dread pains," consists of stanzas adapted to SS. Andrew, Thomas, Matthías, Barnabas, Peter, James, Bartholomew, Simon and Jude, and designed to be introduced in the hymn "The eternal gifts of Christ the King." [J. J.] his attention was specially attracted to the Liturgical and other Ecclesiastical lore appertaining to the Catholic, and to St. Osmund, its Bishop, 1078. St. Osmund compiled from different sources a series of Divine Offices, and Rules for their celebration within his diocese. These Rules were in two parts, the Ordinal, and the Consuetudinary.

The use of these Rules became very extensive; and although in certain parts the Use of York, Hereford, Bath, and Lincoln varied, yet John Bentworth, the Cistercian Abbot of Jervaulx, writing within a hundred years after St. Osmund's death, says that these Rules and Offices had been adopted throughout England, Wales, and Ireland.

About 1230 (after the opening of the New Cathedral at Salisbury) these Rules were collected and rewritten in a complete volume, entitled Tractus de Officiis Ecclesiasticis (Ms. in the Cathedral Library). In the mean time the Ordinal had become partly welded into the Consuetudinary, and partly (especially that portion therein omitted from Malmesbury Thursday or Easter Eve) incorporated in the Breviary, Missal, and Processional, which had assumed definite shapes. From these materials, together with the aid of several MSS. and early printed Breviaries, Mr. Chambers published a collection of:

The Psalter, or Seven Ordinary Hours of the Divine Office, with the Hymns for the Year, and the Variations in the Use of York and Hereford. These were accompanied with a Preface, notes, and illustrations, together with music from a MS. folio Antiphonary of the early part of the 14th cent. (In the Salisbury Cathedral Library) with a similar folio (in London), by a MS. of the 14th cent. (Hul. 2951.)

Mr. Chambers' subsequent publications include:

(1) The Evensong; or, Book of Daily Devotion of the ancient English Church according to Sarum Use, London, 1848. To this a number of the Psalms and others were added. (2) A Companion for Holy Communion for Clergy or Laymen; with a Prefatory Oration for Intercourse, from the Ancient English Offices of Sarum (2nd ed. 1853). This was accompanied with notes and authorities. (3) Laudas Sion, Ancient Latin Hymns of the English and other Churches, Transliterated into Corresponding Metres, Pt. I, 1857; Pt. II, 1866. (4) An Order of Household Devotions for a Week, with Variations for the Seasons and Festivals, from the Ancient English of Sarum Use, London, 1834. (5) A Complete & Particular, yet concise, account of the mode of conducting Divine Worship in England in the 13th and 14th centuries, contrasted with that in use at the Present Time, London, 1871. (6) A br. from the original Greek of the genuine works of Irenaeus, Episcopus, the Christian Neoplatonist (A.D. 200), with notes and quotations from the Fathers.

Mr. Chambers' publications and trs. have had no small part in stimulating the great change which has taken place in the mode of worship in the Church of England, His trs. of Latin hymns are close, and the Psalters, though they have much strength and earnestness, and the rhythm is easy and musical. Those in C. U. are mainly from the Laudas Sion. Greater use, however, might be made of these translations than has been done. Their earnestness and dignity would raise the tone of many collections.

Chandler, John, M.A., one of the earliest and most successful of modern translators of Latin hymns, was b. at Witley, Godalming, Surrey, June 16, 1806, and educated at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, where he graduated in 1827. He took Holy Orders in 1831, and became Vicar of Witley in 1837. He d. at Putney, July 1, 1876. Besides numerous Sermons and Tracts, his prose works include Life of William of Wykeham, 1842; and Horae Sacrae; Prayers and Meditations on the writings of the Divines of the Anglican Church, with an Introduction, 1814. His translations, he says, arose out of his desire to see the ancient prayers of the Anglican Liturgy accompanied by hymns of a corresponding date of composition, and his inability to find these hymns until he says, "My attention was a short time ago directed to some translations (by Isaac Williams) which appeared from time to time in the British Magazine, very beautifully executed, of some hymns extracted from the Persian Breviary, with originals annexed. Some, indeed, of the Sapphic and Alcaic and other Horatian metres seem to be of little value; but the rest, of the peculiar hymn-metre, Dimeter Lycian, appear ancient, simple, striking, and devotional—in a word in every way likely to answer our purpose. So I got a copy of the Persian Breviary [1736], and one or two other old books of Latin Hymns, especially one compiled by Georgius Cassander, printed at Cologne, in the year 1586, and regularly applied myself to the work of selection and translation. The result is the collection I now lay before the public." Preface, p. of the Prima. Ce., viii., ix.

This collection is:—

(1) The Hymns of the Primitive Church, now first collected, translated, and arranged, by the Rev. J. Chandler. London, John W. Parker, 1837. These trs. were accompanied by the Latin texts. The trs. were arranged, with additional trs., original by Chandler, and some few taken from other sources, were republished as (2) The Hymns of the Church, mostly Primitive, Collected, Translated, and Arranged for Public Use, by the Rev. J. Chandler, M.A. London, John W. Parker, 1841.

From these works from 30 to 40 trs. have come gradually into C. U., some of which hold a foremost place in modern hymnals, "Alleluia, best and sweetest;" "Christ is our Corner Stone;" "On Jordan's bank the Baptist's cry;" "Jesus, our Hope, our hearts' Desire;" "Now, my soul, thy voice upraising;" "Once more the solemn season calls;" and "O Jesus, Lord of heavenly grace," being those which are most widely used. Although Chandler's trs. are somewhat free, and in a few instances, doctrinal difficulties are either evaded or softened down, yet their popularity is unquestionably greater than the trs. of several others whose renderings are more massive in style and more literal in execution.

Chapin, Edwin Hubbell, D.D., was the most distinguished man of the Universalists in later years. In his early days he was eminent as a lecturer; and as a preacher until his death. He was b. in Union village, Washington, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1814, and educated at Bennington, Vermont. He was successively pastor at Richmond, Virginia, 1837; Charlestown, Mass.; Boston, 1846; and from 1848, of the Church of the Divine Paternity, New York city. He d. Dec. 26, 1880. He pub. several works, and edited, with J. G. Adams, Hymns for Christian Devotion, Boston, 1816. This is perhaps the most prominent Universalist Collection in the States. To it Dr. Chapin contributed the following hymns:—
Charlotte Elizabeth

Dr. Neale's tr. is of a portion only of the Canon, including Ode i. Troper. i. 2; iii. 6; iv. 1, 2, 3; v. 1, 3, 4, 5; vi. 1; ix. 2, 3, 4, 5. It is "A song, a song of gladness!" Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 11 st. of 81. In 1866, st. vi.-viii., x. xi. were included as, "The Lord, the Lord hath triumphed," in H. J. Palmer's Supplemental Hymnal; and again, with slight alterations, in the People's H., 1807.

Charles, D., jun. [Welsh Hymnody, § ii. 2.]

Charles, Elizabeth, née Rundle, is the author of numerous and very popular works, intended to popularize the history of early Christian life in Great Britain; of Luther and his times; of Wesley and his works; of the struggles of English civil war, and kindred subjects as embodied in the Chronicles of the Schenck-Cotta Family, the Diary of Kitty Trevelyan, &c., was b. at Tavistock, Devonshire. Her father was John Rundle, M.P., and her husband, Andrew Paton Charle,s, Barrister-at-Law. Mrs. Charles has made some valuable contributions to hymnology, including original hymns and translations from the Latin and German. These were given in her:

1. The Faith of Christian Life in Song; or, Hymns and Hymn-writers of Many Lands and Ages, 1858;
2. The Three Wakeings, and other Poems, 1859; and
3. The Chronicles of the Schenck-Cotta Family; (4) Poems, &c., 1877. This has some additional pieces.

Her hymn on the Annunciation, "Age after age shall call thee [her] blessed," appeared in her Three Wakeings, &c., 1859.

[J. J.]

Charles, Thomas. [Welsh Hymnody, §ii. 2.]

Charlesworth, Vernon J., was b. at Barking, Essex, on April 28, 1839, and educated at Homerton College. In 1864 he became co-pastor with the Rev. Newman Hall at the old Surrey Chapel, and in 1869 the Head Master of Mr. Spurgeon's Stockwell Orphanage. Mr. Charlesworth has pub. The Life of Rowland Hill, &c., 1876, and, in co-operation with Mr. J. Manton Smith, Flowers and Fruits of Sacred Song and Evangelical Hymns. To this work he contributed:

1. As you gather round the family board. Praise for Orphans.
3. Come, brethren, let us sing. Praise to God.
5. Heart to heart by love united. Holy Matrimony.
6. How blest in Jesus' name to meet. Praise to Jesus.
7. Our lamps are gone out, and the daylight is past. The Needful Virgin.
8. Sweetest fellowship we know. Walking in the Light.
9. The day of the Lord is at hand. Advent.
10. There is a land as yet unknown. Heaven.
11. To a blessed thing while we live to sing. Praise.
12. When far from Thee, and blest of heart. Grace.

In addition to these hymns, Mr. Charlesworth contributed:

14. I've nothing to bring Thee, Jesus. Tent to Fulleran & Smith's Evangelical Echoes, 1884, and has printed a considerable number as leaflets. Two of the most recent, "As the eastern hills are glowing" (Morning), and "Lengthening shadows, gently falling" (Evening), should find their way into common use. Mr. Charlesworth's hymns are very spirited and of a popular character.

Charlotte Elizabeth. [Teena, C. E.]
Children of the pious dead. [All Saints.] An anonymous hymn in 4 st. of 8 l. given in Spenser Murch's Sabbath Scholars' H. Bk., 1849. In the Applecore S. S. H. Bk., 6th ed., 1853, there is a different text, where in the last stanza the "sirens"—those who through faith did mighty work: Heb. xi—are they who approve the "flight of faith" below, whilst in Murch's book the Almighty is represented as watching the conflict. The unity of thought in the Applecore book seems to point it out as the original. This text is repeated in the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879. The hymn probably first appeared in a magazine. [W.T.B.]

Children of Zion, know your King. J. Montgomery. [Appeal to the Jews.] In the Bap. Ps. & Hymns, 1838-80, No. 764, this hymn is dated 1822. It is in the m. ms., but without date, and the earliest appearance it made in any of Montgomery's works, so far as we can trace, is in his Original Hymns, 1833, where it is given as in the m. in st. of 4 l. It is entitled, "Invitation to the Jews to acknowledge Christ." [J. J.]

Children's Hymns. In giving a brief sketch of this subject we find ourselves at every step face to face with the difficulty of lack of materials, from the destruction, by the busy little fingers of earlier generations, of the hymn-books we would so gladly treasure. It was long before it dawned on the Church that special hymns for children were needed—indeed, the only ancient hymn for children, that of Clemens Alexandrinus (see Greek Hymnody, § iii.), is more fitted for a youth of fifteen than for the period of childhood. Nevertheless, plenty of proof exists of the share the children had in the worship of the Church, e.g., the st. of Prudentius:

Te rurs, et Te juvenis,\footnote{Simplices pulchrae.}
Parvulum te coheres,\footnote{Voce concordes pulchrae.}
Tarba matrum, virginesque,\footnote{Tarba matrum, virginesque.}
Nec spe oraculo vestro\footnote{Nec spe oraculo vestro.
The story of the seven boys singing the
"Gloria, laus, et honor," before the Emperor
Louis, and so obtaining St. Theodelph's liber-tion, will at once show that though no special provision for children's hymns was made, yet
the young were by no means neglected. Probable, in a less enlightened period, the mental capacity of the less educated common people was about that of their children, and so the lack of special provision was not felt. The early vernacular cards and hymns do not ap-ppear to have been composed for children, though the children then, as now, sang them; and the history of juvenile hymnody commences with

Children of the heavenly King. J. Cennick. [Encouragement to Pray.] This is the most popular of the author's hymns, and, in an abbreviated form, it is found in a large proportion of the hymnals published in the English language for more than 100 years.
It appeared in his Sacred Hymns for the Chil-drew of God, &c., 1742, Pt. iii., in 12 st. of 4 l.
In 1753, G. Whitefield gave 6 st. in his Collected Works, No. 38 of Pt. B. M. Madan repeated this in 1769, and thus the abbreviated form came into use. Departures from Whitefield's arrangement are found in several instances, but as the full text has been included by Dr.
Rogers in Lyra Brit., 1807, p. 666, and can be easily consulted, they are not tabulated.
Whitefield's text consisted of st. i., ii., iv., v., vii., and xii. In Bingham's Hymn. Christ Laureate, 1781, p. 123, there is a Latin rendering of the text as given in Bickesche's Christian Psalmody, 1833, "Filii Regis supermi
cautius." [J. J.]

Children, go to your work. J. Montgomery. [Child workmen.] In the Bap. Ps. & Hymns, 1838-80, No. 765, this hymn is dated 1822. It is in the m. als., but without date, and the earliest appearance it made in any of Montgomery's works, so far as we can trace, is in his Original Hymns, 1833, where it is given as in the m. in st. of 4 l. It is entitled, "Invitation to the Jews to acknowledge Christ." [J. J.]

Nec spe oraculo vestro\footnote{Nec spe oraculo vestro.
The story of the seven boys singing the
"Gloria, laus, et honor," before the Emperor
Louis, and so obtaining St. Theodelph's liber-tion, will at once show that though no special provision for children's hymns was made, yet
the young were by no means neglected. Probable, in a less enlightened period, the mental capacity of the less educated common people was about that of their children, and so the lack of special provision was not felt. The early vernacular cards and hymns do not ap-ppear to have been composed for children, though the children then, as now, sang them; and the history of juvenile hymnody commences with

Children of the heavenly King. J. Cennick. [Encouragement to Pray.] This is the most popular of the author's hymns, and, in an abbreviated form, it is found in a large proportion of the hymnals published in the English language for more than 100 years.
It appeared in his Sacred Hymns for the Chil-the Reformation so far as England is concerned. It easily divides itself into four periods, each with its own special characteristic. (i.) 1562-1713. The period from Sternhold to the issue of Watts's Divine and Moral Songs. (ii.) 1715-1780. The interval from Watts till the establishment of Sunday Schools. (iii.) 1789-1810. The history of the Evangelical Sunday School movement. (iv.) 1810-1884. The recognition of the importance of early religious training. We have but limited space to devote to each of these, and, merely pointing out the leading characteristics of each period and author, for fuller information we shall leave the student to consult the biographical notices of the writers in other parts of this Dictionary.

i. 1562-1713. Whether the Primers of Henry VIII., Edward VI., and Elizabeth were specially intended for youth, we can hardly say; at any rate, the hymns therein contained were merely translations of the old Latin hymns, but the Precationes Piae of 1568, with its Latin hymns of Ellinger, Flaminius, Buchanan and others, was evidently prepared for school use, and ancient hymns long lingered at the schools of Harrow, Eton, St. Paul's, and a few colleges; nor are they quite extinct at the present time.

Of vernacular hymns, the 1560 edition of Sternhold and Hopkins mentions on the title that the version is:

"Very meet to be used of all sorts of people privately, for their Godly solace and comfort: laying apart all ungodly songs and ballades, which tend only to the nourishing of vice and corruption of youth."

This version was retained in the complete edition of 1602, and on subsequent title pages. The long struggle ensued between Puritanism and Anglicanism, culminating in the Commonwealth and the Restoration, left little time for the cultivation of sacred poetry, and none for poetry for children. A hymn or two in Withers's Halleluia, 1611, a child's grace by Herrick, 1647, seem all worthy naming till 1653, when Jeremy Taylor appended his "Festival Hymns" to the Golden Grove. These, he remarks, are "fitted to the fancy and devotion of the younger and pious persons Apt for memorizing to be joined to their other prayers."

The idea was still that of private use, not of public worship; and when about 1674 Bishop Ken issued his "Three hymns" for the boys of Winchester College it is still the same. A worthy Baptist, Abraham Cheere, had in 1672 issued a volume which contains many short hymns and acrostics for children whom he had known, and whose names are given. A little later, Benjamin Keach (q.v.) printed his:

"War with the Devil; or, the Young Man's Conflict with the Powers of Darkness, in a Dialogue Discovering the Corruption and Vanity of Youth, the Horrible Nature of Sin and deplorable Condition of fallen Man."

This became very popular as a chapbook, and with its quaint woodcuts and strong Calvinism suited the prevailing taste. It contains a few hymns, and was often given as a present, the copies yet remaining sometimes containing the autographs of donor and recipient expressed in the kindliest quaint Nonconformist phraseology of the time. The examples of Ken and Taylor, of Keach and Cheere, were now followed by others, and two little penny books by Buyvan and Mason for childish use were issued, but no copies are known to exist at the present time. Matthew Henry, in his Family Hymns, 1695 (enlarged in 1702), and the compiler of A Col. of Ps. H. and Spiritual Songs, Fitted for Morning and Evening Worship in a Private Family, 1701, intended their books for the use of children and others, and one edition of Derrington's reform of Austin's Devotions annexes tunes for the hymns. The nonjuror Bishop, George Hickes, in his translation of Fénelon's Instructions for the Education of a Daughter, 2nd ed., 1708, gives in the "Little Office for Two or more Young Ladies under the same Government: to be used at any time," an earlier translation of "Jesus, dulcis memoria," revised by himself, and two poems at the close, one of exquisite freshness and beauty. It is in 9 st. of 6.1. We have but space to quote st. 1, 2, 5, 8 and 9.

"To Theodosia."

Wouldst be happy? little child,
Be thou innocent and mild.
Like the patient lamb and dove,
Full of sweetness, full of love.
Modestly thy looks compose,
Sweet and blushing like the rose.
When in gardens thou dost play,
In the pleasant flow'ry May,
And art driven by sudden showers:
From the fresh and fragrant flowers;
Think, how short that pleasure is,
Which the world esteemeth bliss.
When the fruits are sour and green,
Come not near them, be not seen.

Touching, tasting, till the Sun
His sweet ripening work hath done.
Think, how harsh thy nature is.
Till Heaven ripen thee for bliss.
Or lest thou shouldst drop away,
Like the leaf that fell to-day;
Still be ready to depart,
Love thy God with all thy heart;
Or when thou wilt ascend on high
From Time to Eternity.

Paradise is sweeter here
Than the flowers and roses here;
Here's a glimpse, and then away,
There will be for ever, ever,
Where thou ever in Heaven's spring,
Shall with saints and angels sing."

The other stanzas are of equal merit, and the whole is worthy of Breton or Wither at their best. It is so Elizabethan in tone and colour that it excites suspicion whether Hickes had not met with it in ms., and was the publisher only, not the author. The other poem is not so good, though it contains a pleasing "Hymn."

But a greater is at the door; these early attempts are but the first-fruits; for Isaac Watts, whose Psalms and Hymns revolutionized Non-conformist hymnody, is also justly entitled to be called the first writer of children's hymns. ii. 1715-1780. The immediate cause of the publication in August, 1715, of Watts's Divine and Moral Songs for Children seems, from the quaint dedication,

"To
Mrs. Sarah,
Mrs. Mary, and
Mrs. Elizabeth
Daughters of Sir Thomas Abney, Knt., and Alderman of London," to have been the writer's gratitude for the kindness and attention shown him by the children's parents in the two preceding years during his long illness and convalescence; but from the preface, "To all that are concerned in the Education of Children," we learn:

---
CHILDREN'S HYMNS

"The greatest part of this little book was composed several years ago, at the request of a friend, who has been long engaged in the work of catechising a very great number of children of all kinds, and with abundant skill and success. So that you will here find nothing that savours of a party. The children of high and low degree, of the Church of England and Dissenters, baptised in infancy or not, may all join together in these songs."

This would seem to indicate we owe Watts's efforts to a Church of England clergyman. Both dedication and preface are omitted from all but very early editions, and well repay perusal. The high note of toleration struck by Watts has, we are happy to say, been recognised by most compilers since, and there is far less of party spirit and sectarianism in the hymn-books for the use of children than in collections for those of a larger growth. The success of the Divine and Moral Songs was immediate and lasting; edition after edition was issued, and for more than a century editions printed in country towns as well as in centres of population testified to the need felt and met. Many attacks have recently been made on the theology of these hymns, especially with reference to future punishment, and to a certain extent, with justice, but Watts is mild compared with some contemporary theologians in description and assertion, and he evidently photographed the phase of religious thought then existing. Since this was not discovered for a century, when the work of the Divine and Moral Songs was well nigh done, the objection seems uncalled for, and we can all recognise the sterling practical value of the Divine Songs:—"I thank the goodness and the grace," "Almighty God, thy piercing eye," "And now another day is gone," "This is the day when Christ arose," "Lord, how delightful 'tis to see," while of the Moral Songs (enlarged in a later edition) "Tis the voice of the sluggard," and "The Rose," are still memorable. The exquisite "Cradle Hymn," after the fine praise of F. T. Palgrave, himself a writer of children's hymns of high merit, needs no commendation from us.

The popularity of Watts prevented, to some extent, similar attempts in the same direction. A broadside, however, of the reign of George I., is in existence which shows that hymns were occasionally sung by the children at the charity sermons on behalf of particular schools, and in Poems, Amorous, Moral and Divine, 1718, we find "The Incarnation, A Carol, Sung by some children in Church." Such slender beginnings and rare exceptions are these that, except two facts, we cannot point to any single mention of special hymns for children in public use in the Church of England, till the third period of our story.

A curious book by John Fowler, issued at Exeter in 1738, has a preface by Doddridge, but it can hardly be called a hymn-book. Doddridge, however, in 1744, rendered into metre "The Principles of the Christian Religion, expressed in plain and easy verse," and this is admirably done. It is in 24 portions, and some valuable hymns might be extracted therefrom, though as a whole it is unsuited for modern use. The xvithth edition, "On the Nature and Design of the Lord's Supper," gives an interesting glimpse of juvenile Nonconformist worship and illustrates Doddridge's well-known "My God, and is Thy table spread?" (q. v.).

The memory of Christ's death is sweet, When saints around the table meet; And break the bread, and pour the wine, Obeying to His word divine.

While they the bread and wine receive, (If on their Saviour they believe,) They feast, as on His flesh and blood, Cordial divine, and heavenly food.

Their covenant thus with God renew, And love to every Christian shine: Well may their souls rejoice and thrive; Oh! may the blest hour arrive When, ripe in knowledge and in grace, I at that board shall find a place.

And now where there His people do, I would at humble distance view; Would look to Christ with grateful heart, And in their pleasures take my part: Resolved while such a sight I see, To live to Him who died for me.

From this, the non-communicating attendance of children was evidently approved by the writer, and the chastened devotion of the lines is eminently calculated for the purpose intended. Stormier times in the religious world were at hand, and the calm of Watts and Doddridge would not satisfy C. Wesley or J. Cennick, and to each of these we must give some attention. Cennick having joined the Moravians, issued at Dublin, in 1754, his Hymns for Children, in 2 vols. The work is of excessive rarity, the copy in the Fulneck Library being probably unique. It has never been properly examined by hymnologists, but later Moravian collections, notably that of 1780, take many hymns from this source.

The specimens we have seen are tender, simple, and very mystical, but with little poetical beauty, full of Moravian tenets and fancies, but, as Pope says of Beaumont, "a man who has the art of stealing wisely" would find Cennick suggestive and worthy of attention. The best in the Moravian H. Bk., 1749, are:—No. 623, "O Thou before whose Father's face," a prayer for the ministry of Angels, and two funeral hymns, Nos. 623 and 624, "Happy the child who are gone," and "How sweet the child rests." The second, No. 623, was long popular, but has been murdered by alteration, as in Dr. Alton's Children's Worship, No. 453. When, in 1763, C. Wesley published his Hymns for Children, he had already written many for the young which were scattered through other works. A second ed. of these hymns appeared in 1767 with the words And Others of Riper Years added to the title. The work was never very popular, and with the exception of "Gentle Jesus, meek and mild," has hardly a hymn in it known to modern collections outside the Wesleyan body. John Wesley, in a Preface dated March 27th, 1790, gives the clue to this, and as his words well illustrate our subject, we quote them:

"There are two ways of writing or speaking to children: the one is, to let ourselves down to them; the other, to lift them up to us. Dr. Watts has written in the former way, and has succeeded admirably well, speaking to children as children, and leaving them as he found them. The following hymns are written on the other plan; they contain strong and manly sense, yet expressed in such plain and easy language, as even children may understand. But when they do understand them, they will be children no longer, only in years and stature."

When these words were written the day had already dawned when collections, not separate books by one author, should contain hymns on both plans, and be issued with richer provision for the needs and wants of the rising generations.

iii. 1789–1840. The establishment of Sunday Schools in different parts of the country immediately resulted in people finding Watts hardly sufficient, and consequently collections were made and fresh hymns written. It being impossible to enumerate the whole of these collections and hymns, we must restrict ourselves to the more important. Robert Hawker the Commentator's Psalms and Hymns sung by the Children of the Sunday School, in the Parish Church of Charles, Plymouth, at the Sabbath Evening Lecture, passed through 13 editions at least, and was probably issued after 1789, when the Charles Sunday School was established, as it borrows from Rippon, whose earliest date is 1787. Of the 104 hymns it contains, 44 are from Watts, and 35 from the Olney Hymns. 2 (one a revision from Hart) are apparently Dr. Hawker's, the rest by various authors. In 1790 Rowland Hill issued his Divine Hymns attempted in easy language for Children, which contained 44 hymns. This was revised by Cowper before publication, and was intended for the "Southwark Sunday School Society." In 1808, a collection by Rowland Hill of 298 hymns was issued, and enlarged in 1819. The preface says that the Southwark Sunday School Society, like the parent Society, adopted

"A truly catholic and enlarged plan, so that the children educated by them are conducted to such places of worship, always where Evangelical truths are preached, but passing an equal portion of their Sabbath day's attendance in such congregations, whether Church or Chapel, as use or omit the liturgy of the Established Church."

He did not, however, reprint all the hymns of his own book of 1790, omitting, inter alia, "a hymn for a child that has ungodly parents," which might have caused scandal. Nor should we omit to mention the great philanthropist Jonas Hanway's book. In his ammendment, Proposals for Establishing County Naval Free Schools, 1785, are embedded 18 hymns and 29 psalms. 1792. In 1785 the Moravian Brethren of Bethlehem issued a small collection chiefly from their 1789 book. In 1800 appeared II. for the Use of the Sunday Schools in Manchester. This is decidedly superior in fitness and taste to anything previous to that date. In the same year a small collection was issued at Chatham. To the Nottingam Collection, a few years later, John Burton, jun., contributed his hymns; and the Bristol book of 1812 was one of the earliest to give the names of the authors. Meanwhile the Methodists had not been idle. They had recognized the need of new hymns, and Robert Carr Brackenbury and Benjamin Rhodes wrote some pleasing hymns for young Wesleyans. Joseph Benson, the biographer of John Fletcher, issued, in 1806, a collection from these sources and others, and this became, until 1823, the standard Wesleyan book.

The publication in 1810 of Ann and Jane Taylor's classic Hymns for Infant Minds rendered previous collections incomplete, and the Original II. for Sunday Schools, and other books by Mrs. Gilbert (Ann Taylor) also tended in the same direction.

Two new factors in our history now appear; the issue of magazines for children (The Youth's Magazine commenced in 1805) and the formation of the Sunday School Union. The one brought many fresh hymn contributions to its pages; the other provided an authorised hymn-book for Sunday Schools, and so checked the supply. In general collections, too, the entry in the list of subjects "For the Young" now begins to appear; but from that day to this in all collections the proportion allotted to children is most inadequate. The 2nd ed. of the Sunday School Union Hymn Book for Scholars is dated 1816, the 3rd of that for Teachers 1821. These continued in use till 1840, when they were enlarged. Many hymns were issued for anniversary services on fly-sheets, notably Case of Montgomery for the Sheffield Witanwaste gathering, and some of Montgomery's highest successes have been won in this field.

To the Child's Companion, established in 1824, John Burton, jun., sent his hymns; to the Children's Friend, Dorothy Ann Thrupp, under the signature of Iota, and H. F. Lyte, contributed; while in the Protestant Dissenter's Juvenile Magazine, 1833, &c., appeared T. R. Taylor's too few and genial lyrics. J. Cowd wrote some for his own parish, specimens of which are in the Lyra Britannica, 1858, and in Dr. Rogers's Child's Hymnal, &c., but some of the most beautiful of his productions, now before us, remain unprinted. The issue, in 1833, of John Peel Clapham's Leeds S. S. U. Bk. is noteworthy. It has been repeatedly revised, and contains good work.

iv. 1841–1844. More need now began to be felt among Churchmen and Nonconformists of something different from the narrow Calvinism of earlier days, and as the Tractarian movement gained ground, if Tractarian children were to sing hymns at all, new ones had to be written; for, to express the formulas of the new school, there were no English hymns to be had. The first noteworthy attempt was Mrs. F. M. Yonge's Child's Christian Year, 1841. Kehoe wrote the preface and contributed two new hymns, but the bulk of the book is from J. Astley, Isaac Williams, the 1st series of his Brearley Hymnals, and J. H. Newman from the Lyra Apostolica. It was several times reprinted, but is more fitted for the children of the educated classes than for the poor. I. Williams himself issued in 1842 his Ancient Hymns for Children, a selection from his book of 1839, slightly altered; and his Hymns on the Catechism, a valuable little work, must also be mentioned. But in the same year, and with more success, Dr. Seale pub. his Hymnals for Children, a 2nd following in 1844. and a third in 1846. These became really popular, and some may be found in C. U., alike in England and America, at the present time. Still a need was felt for something more simple, and in 1848 Mrs. Cecil Frances Alexander pub. her Hymns for Little Children. Charmingly simple and tender, clear in dews, and of poetic beauty, combining the plainness of Watts with the feeling for and with childhood of the Taylor sisters, and uniting with both the liturgical associations of the English Prayer Book, they remain unequalled and unapproachable. "Every morning the red sun."
"Once in royal David's city," "There is a green hill far away," will at once occur as instances in point. They have reached nearly a hundred editions. Subsequent efforts by Mrs. Alexander have not been so successful, her Narrative Hymns, Moral Songs, Poems on the Old Testament (2 series), containing nothing worth of note; but her "We are but little children weak," contributed to Dr. Hook's Church School Hymn Book, 1830, strikes a higher key, and in the S. C. K. P. & *Hymns, 1852, The roseate hues of early dawn;" "Jesus calls us, o'er the tumult," are very good, though not specially adapted for the young. Most of the contents in the same field are noticeable, and in Helen Taylor's Sabbath Bells, N.D., and Missionary Hymns, 1846, will be found good hymns, proving that not in one school of thought merely was the gift of combined simplicity and beauty to be found. To this same period belong Miss Leeson, Mrs. Herbert Mayo, and Miss A. W. Thripp. To Mrs. May's
Hymns & Poems, 1847, Miss Thripp contributed some of her best work. In the addition of the Rev. John Curwen, and the introduction of the Tenor Sol-fa System in many Nonconformist schools, led to the production of his Child's Own Hymn Book, very deservedly popular.

Originally issued in 1840, as Sacred Songs, another selection as *Hymns and Chaunts appeared in 1841; two years later they were combined as The Child's Own Hymn Book. It was subsequently enlarged, and in 1855 contin-tained 169 hymns; but in 1870 the entire book was recast under the title of The New Child's Own Hymn Book. Biographical notes on this have been pub. by the editor's son. From 1850 onwards a constant stream of collections has passed through the press, of which we can notice but the most important. The Church of England Sunday School Institute revised their earlier book in 1868 under the editorship of a Committee, with the work failing chiefly on Mr. George W. Fleming, who was abandoned in 1872 for one more modern in tone. A little book of Children's Hymns and School Prayers was issued by the S. C. K.
Compilers of Church Hymns, and in 1881 Mrs.
Cayoock issued The Child's Hymn Book, which passed under the revision of Bishops
How and Oxenden and the Rev. John Elletton. It has at once taken the leading place among Church books, and contains not only the best hymns hitherto published, but new hymns, some of which are of equal value.
Among other Church collections we name:
The Rev. J. C. Miller's, N.D.; the Hymns and Carols, ed. by W. C. Dix, 1869; Hymns and Carols for the Children of the Church, 1876;
and Hymns for the Children of the Church, 1878.
The last contained new compositions by Mrs.
C. F. Hermanus and Mrs. E. H. Mitchell, which will win their way. The Wesleyans in 1870 revised their preceding book of 1862-5, and with some success, but a new revision was called for in 1879, and the result was the Methodist Sunday School Hymnbook, containing 566 hymns. This, in our judgment, ranks first in merit of any collection for children yet made, and is approached only by Mrs. Carev Brook and the Rev. G. S. Barrett. Among the Congregationalists several books of importance appeared from time to time. Butler's
H. & Sacred Songs, 1855; Major's Book of Praise for Home & School, 1869; Alcott's Children's Worship, 1876; and the present authorised selection, the Rev. G. S. Barrett's Book of Praise for Children, 1881, an enlargement of the Rev. W. G. Horder's book under the same title, issued in 1875. Less has been done among the Baptists, the only book of high merit being the Rev. W. R. Stevenson's School Hymnal, 1880. The English Presbyterians have Psalms & Hymns for Children's Worship, in addition to 61 hymns for the young in their Church Praise, 1882. In Scotland, which has done little in the way of original compositions in this line, we may name Rev. James Bonar's School Worship, 1878, and the United Presbyterian Hymnal for the Young, 1883. Among the 'Friends' the *School & Mission Hymn Book, 1873, is well edited. The Roman Church has only one book worth naming in this connection, the Rev. Henry Formby's Catholic Songs. This, issued partially about 1853, has been revised, and is now issued in two parts as the Junior School Song Book and the Senior School Song Book. It is of higher calibre than we generally find in hymnals of the Roman Catholic communion.

It only remains to notice the miscellaneous books not yet mentioned. The Sunday School Union issued their Songs of Gladness in 1871, containing originals by Miss Doudney, W. P.
Balfern, and others, and this has been subse-quenty enlarged. Their latest publication is The Voice of Praise, 1886. It contains 600 hymns, and is a meritorious work. The issue in America of hymns of a revival type has been followed by the reprint, on this side the Atlantic, of many of this school, but they can scarcely win a lasting popularity, and belong rather to American hymnody. Dr. Rogers issued his pictorial Child's Hymnal, N.D., which contains some hymns not elsewhere accessible. In closing this survey we specially name Dr. W.
Fleming Stevenson's Hymns for Ch. & Home, 1873, containing 100 hymns for children. The biographical index and the notes to the hymns are the best attempt hitherto made to collect facts as to children's hymns, Mr. Curwen's Biographical Notes already alluded to being its only rival.

Chope, Richard Robert, M.A., b Sept.
21, 1830, educated at Exeter College, Oxford,
B.A. 1855, and took Holy Orders as Curate of Staple ton, 1856. During his residence at Stapleton the necessities of the Choir led him to plan his Congregational Hymn and Tune Book, pub. in 1857. In 1858 he took the Curacy of Sherborne, Dorset; in the following year that of Upton Scudamore, where he undertook the training of the Chorus of the Warminster district for the first Choral Festival in Salisbury Cathedral; and in 1870 that of Brimpton. The enlargement of the ed. of The Congregational Hymn Book was pub. 1862, and The Canticus, Psalter, &c., of the Prayer Book, Noted and Pointed, during the same year. In 1865 he was preferred to the parish of St. Augustine's, Queen's Gate. South Kennington, and subsequently pub. Carols for Use in Church during Christmas and Epiphany, 1875; Carols for Easter and Other Tides, 1887;
and other works. Mr. Chope has been one of the leaders in the revival and reform of Church Music as adapted to the Public Services. He was one of the originators of The Choir and Musical Record, and was for some time the proprietor and assistant editor of the Literary Churchman. [J. J.]

Χορός Ἰσραήλ. St. Cosmas. [Transfiguration.] This Canon of the Ascension is found in the Greek Service Book Office for that Festival, Aug. 6, and in Anth. Græca, p. 176. It dates from the early part of the 8th cent., and in common with all festival Canons it consists of 8 odes, the 2nd ode being gentilical (see Greek Hymnody, § xvi. 10). The only tr. into English is a cento principally from the first four odes, beginning as above and rendered "The choirs of ransomed Israel" by Dr. Neale in his Hym. of the Eastern Church, 1862, p. 84. It is thus derived: st. i. from ode i.; st. ii. from odes ii. and iii.; st. iv. from odes iv. and v. St. vi. is Dr. Neale’s own, is a reference to the heavenly glory, and quite in the modern manner. It is introduced as a climax, but is not in the original, as that does not feel this need. From this tr. the following centos have been taken: People’s H., st. i., vi.; S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hymns, st. i., iv.-vi.; Palmer’s Supp. Hymnal, 1866, st. i., iii., iv., vi., and "In days of old on Sinai," being st. iv.-vi. in H. A. & M., 1868 and 1875. [J. J.]

Chorus novae Hierusalem. St. Fulbert of Chartres. [Easter.] As St. Fulbert d. cir. 1029, this hymn dates from about the beginning of the 11th cent. It is found in an 11th cent. ms. in the Brit. Mus. (Vesp. D. xii. f. 72 b), and from this is printed in the Latin Hymn of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 159. It is also in an 11th cent. ms. at St. Gall (No. 387). Its English use was extensive. It is first given in the Sarum Brev. as the hymn at first Vespers of the octave of Easter, and so for all Sundays to the Feast of the Ascension (Hym. Sarisb., 1851, pp. 90, 91); in York, the same, with the addition, “When the Sunday Office is said”; in St. Alban’s through Easter week at Terce. It is also in the Aberdeen Brev.

The text is also in the following works: Daniel, I, No. 191, iv. p. 140, with various readings; More, No. 167; Car. Newman’s Hymn Br., 1838 and 1865; Bugg’s Annotated H. A. & M., 1867, p. 129, and others.

The second stanza, “Quo Christus invictus Leo” (in H. A. & M., “For Judah’s Lion bursts His chthonus”), is based upon a mediaval belief, thus preserved in the words of Hugh of St. Victor, “Quum leona parit, suos catulos mortuos parit, et ilia custodit tribus dies, dicens omnium peper corum exspectat vivificavit. Sic Omnipotens Pater Filium in sumum tertia die suscitavit a mortuis.” [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:—
1. Ye choirs of New Jerusalem, Your sweetest name of Campbell, from the Sarum Brev., written for and 1st pub. in his Hys. and Anthems, &c. (St. Andrew’s), 1850, pp. 75–6, in 6 st. of 4 l. In 1858 it was included, with a slight alteration in st. ii., 1. 3, and the omission of st. vi. in the Scottish Episc. Coll. No. 77. This was partly rewritten, and a doxology was added thereto by the compilers of H. A. & M., and given in their “trial copy,” 1859, No. 78, and then in their 1st ed. 1861. This is the form of the hymn which is in most extensive use. In Mr. Shipley’s Anna Sanctus, Campbell’s text is given from his ms.

2. Thou New Jerusalem on high. By J. M. Neale, from the Sarum Brev., given in his Medieacls Hys., 1851. In revising it for the Hymnal N., 1854, Dr. Neale rendered it, “Ye choirs of New Jerusalem, To sweet new strains,” &c. This was repeated in his Medieaecals Hys., 2nd ed. 1863, with st. ii. rewritten, and is the form of the hymn in C. U.

Translations not in C. U.:—
1. Ye choirs of New Jerusalem, Begin, &c. J. D. Chambers, 1, 1857.
5. Jerusalem, thy song be new, Lord Brey, in Mr. Shipley’s Anna Sanctus, 1884.

Christ from the dead is raised. Tate and Brady. [Easter.] A rhymed version of 1 Cor. xv. 20, the 3rd anthem appointed for Easter Day in the Book of Common Prayer. It is found in the Supp. to the New Version, for details of which see Eng. Psaltes, § xiii., and New Version.

Christ is risen! Christ is risen! He hath burst, &c. A. T. Gurney. [Easter] 1st pub. in his collection A Book of Praise, &c., 1862, No. 119, in 3 st. of 12 l. It is in C. U. in three forms:—
1. The original, which is seldom found outside the author’s Coll.
2. The text as in Church Hymns, 1871, No. 133. In the Church Times for Feb. 19, 1875, the author denies that this arrangement, whilst in the folio ed. of Church Hymns, 1851, Mr. Elrington (one of the editors) allows that “The variations in this hymn amount to an almost complete recasting of it. The fine conception of the hymn was grievously marred by faulty execution, and sincere thanks are due to the author for permitting his original to be so daringly manipulated” (p. xiii.). This text has been introduced into American use through the Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882.
3. The text as in H. A. & M., 1875, No. 138. Against this also the author complains in the same letter to the Church Times. It also has been introduced into American C. U. It was given in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1894.

Christ is risen, the Lord is come. H. H. Milman [Easter.] This Easter hymn was given in the author’s Sel. of Ps. and Hys., &c., 1837, No. 2, for Easter, in 3 st. of 8 l., in his Poems, 1859, vol. ii. p. 132; and again in the 11th ed. of Heber’s Hymns, 1842, p. 115, divided into 6 st. of 4 l. Amongst modern hymnals it is found in Kennedy, 1863, No. 702, with slight alterations, and the addition of the refrain “Alleluia!” It is also in the Coll. for Harrow School Chapel, and others. [J. J.]

Christ is the Foundation of the house we raise. J. S. B. Monsell. [Foundation Stone of a Church.] Written for the laying of the Foundation Stone of St. Mary CHRIST IST ERSTANDEN

Magalenp, Paddington, in 1865, and pub.
with an account of the ceremony in the Church Times. In 1866 it was included in Dr. Monn's Hymn of Love and Praise, 2nd ed., pp. 193–194, in 12 st. of 8 l., and repeated in his Lyric Hymns, 1870, and his Parish Hymnal, 1873, No. 200. In Church Hymns, No. 307, it is abbreviated from the original. Authorised text, Parish H.

[J. J.]

Christ ist erstanden, Von der Marter alle
[East.] One of the earliest German hymns, this is found in various forms as early as the 12th cent., and variously given by Wackernagel, ii. pp. 43–44. It was sometimes used alone, sometimes as part of the liturgical services at Easter, as at the lighting of the lamps, and sometimes woven into the early Passion plays (compare its use by Goethe in Faust, pt. 1). Wackernagel, ii. pp. 726–732, gives also seventeen versions from the 15th cent. The versions vary in length from 5 1. to 11 st. of 4 l. (Cf. Hoffmann von Falke's Leben's Geschichte der deut.

1. Wackernagel, ii. No. 935, in 3 st., from the Geistliche Lieder, Erfurt, 1531 (previously in Klag's G. B., Wittenberg, 1529), and thence in V. Babst's G. B., 1545, and most succeeding hymn-books, and recently as No. 126 in the Uran. L. S., 1551. This form Luther held in such esteem of it that he said, "After a time tires of singing all other hymns, but the Christ ist erstanden' one can always sing again." The only tr. in C. U. is:

New is Christ risen, by A. T. Russell, in his Ps. & Hym., 1851, Appendix, No. 3.

Other trs. are:

(i) "Christ is now risen again," by Bp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 563). (2) "The Lord is risen, and gone before," by Miss Fry, 1845, p. 70. (3) "Christ the Lord is risen, Out of," by Miss Winkworth, 1865, p. 37. [J. M.]

CHRIST LAG IN TODESBANDEN. M. Luther.

[East.] 1st pub. in Eyn Embrichion, Erfurt, 1524, entitled "The hymn, 'Christ ist erstanden,' improved." Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 12, in 7 st. of 7 l., and the same in Schircks ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1834, p. 20, and in the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 127.

Only slight traces of the "Christ ist erstanden," (q. v.) are retained in Luther's hymn St. iv. v., are based on the sequence "Von der Scharfe des Meeres" (q. v.) and one or two expressions may have been suggested by the "Surround Christus hodie." (q. v.) These German and Latin hymns, with the Scriptural notices of the Passover Lamb, furnished Luther with the materials of this beautiful poem, but the working out is entirely original, and the result a hymn second only to his unequalled "Ein feste Burg." (q. v.)

Translations in C. U.:

1. Christ in the bands of death was laid, a good tr., omitting st. v., by A. T. Russell, as No. 104 in his Ps. & Hym., 1851.

2. Christ lay whilst in Death's strong band, a fall and good tr. by R. Massie in his M. Luther's

CHRIST, OF ALL MY

3. In the bands of death He lay, Who, a full and good tr., but not in the original metre, by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Series, 1835, p. 87. Slightly altered, and omitting st. ii., as No. 714 in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. In full, but altered, is Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 261. The version beginning "in death's strong bands Christ Jesus lay," No. 749 in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, is st. i., iv., vi., vii., mainly from the Lyra Ger., but partly from the C. B. for England, with two lines from Mr. Massie.

4. Three days in Death's strong grasp He lay, a good tr. of st. i., iv., vii., based on Mr. Massie, as No. 87 in Pott's Coll., 1861.

6. Jesus in bands of Death had lain, a tr. of st. i., iv., vii., by Miss Borthwick, contributed as No. 79 to Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, and included in her C. B. L. L., ed. 1884, p. 259.

CHRIST IN THE PROPHET. M. Luther.

[East.] 1st pub. in Hym. und S. Poems, 1742, p. 206, in 8 st. of 8 l., as the second hymn on "Waiting for Christ the Prophet" (F. Works, 1878–79, vol. iii, p. 262). In 1780 J. Wesley compiled a canto therefrom, consisting of st. ii. vi., and included it in the Wes. H. Bk. No. 348, as:—"Open, Lord, my inward ear." In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1196, is the same canto, slightly altered, as:—"Open, Lord, mine inward ear." [J. J.]

CHRIST, OF ALL MY HOPES THE GROUND.

R. Wardlaw. [Christ All, and in all.] This hymn appeared in the Supp. which he appended to the 8th ed. of his Select of Hymns, &c. (1st ed., 1803), in 1817, No. 488, in two parts, the 2nd part beginning, "When with fasting sickness worn," Pt. i. is in 6 st., and Pt. ii. in 7 st. of 4 l. Both parts have been adopted in t. Britain and America. In the latter, however, the most popular of the hymns is a cento composed of st. i., vii., x-xii., as in Dr. Hattfield’s Church H. Bk., N.Y., 1872, No. 896; or the same cento reduced to 4 st. of 4 l., as in several collections.

[Ch.]

Christ our Passover for us. C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] Pub. in Hymns on the Lord’s Supper, 1743, No. 81, in 4 st. of 8 l., and again in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 275. In the Wes. H. Bk. of 1875, No. 905. — “Jesus, Master of the Feast,” is composed of st. iii., iv. of this hymn. It is curious to note that these same stanzas were introduced into the hymnals of the Church of England by Toplady through his Ps. and Hymns in 1776. [Ch.]

Christ our Passover is risen today, Sons of men, &c. C. Wesley. [Easter.] This is one of the most popular and widely used of C. Wesley’s hymns. It appeared in the Hymns and S. Poems, 1759, in 11 st. of 4 l., with the heading “Hymn for Easter.” In his Ps. and Hymns, 1760, No. 92, M. Madan introduced some alterations, and omitted st. vii., thereby forming a hymn of 8 st. It is from this form of the hymn that all subsequent arrangements of the text have been made. It is curious that although it was in several collections of the Church of England in 1780, yet J. Wesley omitted it from the Wes. H. Bk. which he compiled and published during that year, and it was not until the issue of the Hymnals that to that collection in 1830, that it appeared therein in any form, and then the alteration of st. iv., 1, 3, “Dying once, He did not die, to save,” was adopted from Madan. Its use is extensive in all English-speaking countries. The reading, “Christ, our Lord,” &c., dates from Cotterill’s Sel., 1810 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 185). [Ch.]

Christ the true anointed Saviour, C. Wesley. [Christ the Prophet.] From his Scripture Hymns, which were left in ms. at his death. In the Arminian Magazine for May, 1789, J. Wesley announced his intention of publishing these hymns. That publication, however, was restricted to a few which were given in the magazine from time to time. The ms. was embodied in the P. Works of J. and C. Wesley, 1868-72, vol. x. “Hymns on the Four Gospels,” &c. This hymn was given in the Hymnals of the Wes. H. Bk., 1830, and is retained in revised ed. of 1875. [Ch.]

Christ. Whose glory fills the skies, Christ the true, &c. C. Wesley. [Morning.] 1st pub. in J. and C. Wesley’s Hymns and S. Poems, 1740, p. 61, in 3 st. of 6 l., and entitled “A Morning Hymn” (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 224). In 1776, A. M. Toplady included it, unaltered, in his Ps. and Hymns, No. 296, and for many years it was quoted as his production. Montgomery, however, corrected the error in his Christian Poetist in 1825, its extensive use in the Church of England, and by Nonconformists, is due mainly to Toplady and Montgomery. The latter held it in special esteem, and regarded it as “one of C. Wesley’s loveliest progeny.” In its complete form it was not included in the Wes. H. Bk. until 1875. Its use is extensive. The hymn: — “Thou, whose glory fills the skies,” as found in the People’s H., 1867, No. 570, is the same hymn with slight alterations. In the 8. C. K. Church Hymns, the doxology is from the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853: st. ii. and iii. have also been used in the cento “O disclose Thy lovely face,” &c. It has been rendered into Latin by the Rev. R. Bingham, in his Hymn, Christ. Lat., 1871, as “Christe, cujus gloriae.” The American use of the original is extensive. [Ch.]

Christ unser Herr zum Jordan kam. M. Luther. [Holy Baptism.] Probably written 1541, and pub. as a broadsheet in that year (Wackernagel’s Bibliographie, 1855, p. 172). In Low German it appeared in the Magdeburg G. B., 1542, and in High German in the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1547. In Wackernagel, ill. p. 25, in 7 st. of 9 l., and the same in Schircks’s ed. of Luther’s Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 59, and as No. 258 in the Unr. L. S., 1881. The original title is “A hymn on our Holy Baptism, wherein is briefly embraced What is it? Who instituted it? What is its use?” It is a Catechetical hymn setting forth the Lutheran doctrine of Baptism, and is based on St. Matt. iii. 13-17, and St. Mark xvi. 13. The only tr. in C. U. is —

To Jordan came our Lord the Christ To do, Tr. in full in R. Massie’s M. Luther’s Spiritual Songs, 1854, p. 69; repeated with st. vii. altered, as No. 210 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1886. Also in Dr. Bacon, 1884, p. 69.

Hymn to Jesus Christ, &c. Gregory of Nazianzus. [Easter.] This hymn to Christ on Easter Day dates from the 4th cent., and is found in various editions of St. Gregory’s Works, in Daniel, ill. 6, and in the Anth. Grac. Crr. Christ., 1871. A translation, “O Christ the King! since breath pent up,” &c. by A. W. Chatfield, appeared in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876. (See Greek Hymnody. iv.)

[Ch.]

Christe, coelestis medicina Patris. [In time of Pestilence.] This hymn is in the Mozarabic Breviary, Toledo, 1562, f. 811, as the hymn at Vespers in the Office for one or more sick persons, and again (f. 69) on the Thursday after the Octave of the Epiphany, called the “Vespers of the Sick.” Daniel, No. 165, gives the text, with a note, and classifies it with hymns written not earlier than the 6th, nor later than the 9th cent. Tr. as:

Christ from the Father sent to bring us healing. Written by R. F. Littledale for the Priest’s Prayer Book, enlarged ed. 1866, and from these transferred to the People’s H., 1867. [Ch.]

Christe cunctorum dominator alme. [Consecration of a Church.] This hymn of unknown date and authorship, is found in three ms., of the 11th cent. in the Brit. Mus. (Jul. A. vi. f. 68 b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 112 b; Harl. 2961, f. 250), in the Latin Hymn. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, p. 141, and in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Brev. in the Brit. Mus. The oldest ms. in which it is now found is one of the 9th cent. in the Library at Bern. Daniel, I. No. 96, and iv. pp. 110 and 364, has the full text with various readings from the Brev. H. and other sources. Tr. as:—

0 Christ, Thou Ruler of the Universe, by J. D. Chambers, in his Lauds Stu., Pt. i, 1871, p. 477.

Two centos from this vigorous tr. have been adopted, the first beginning with st. i., in Thring's Col., 1882, and the second with st. iv.:—

"Behold, 0 God, how thankful in Thy praise," in T. Darby's Hymns, 1885. Also tr. as, "Only begun Word of God eternal." Printed for the use of St. Barnabas, Finsfno, 1884. St. viii. and ix. are original.

It has also been rendered into English through the German as follows:—

De, dem der Himmel un die Erd' sich bunget, by A. L. Rambach, in his Anthologie, i. p. 176, in st. i. Thence altered and beginning "O Herr, der dem sich Erd' und Himmel bunget," in Knappe's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 1129 (1855, No. 1296). The only tr. in C. U. is:—

Eternal Son of God. O Thou, a tr. in L. M. of st. i. v, vi. ix. as No. 131 in the Ohio Lutheran Hymnal, 1880. [J. M.]

Christe, fili Jesu summ. [St. Benedict.] The oldest known text of this hymn is found in a ms. of the 11th cent., at Stuttgart. It is also in a 15th cent. ms. in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 1850, f. 118). Mone gives it as No. 888, and thinks it is of the 16th cent.; and Daniel, iv. p. 184, gives the text without note or comment. Tr. as:—

Jesus Christ, with God the Father Consubstantial.

Only Son, by G. Moultrie, 1st pub. in the Church Times, July 9, 1864; again in his Hymns & Lyric, 1867; and in the People's H., 1867, No. 242. [J. J.]

Christe hanc hora tertia. [For the Third Hour.] This hymn is found in an Anglo-Saxon Hymnary of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 39). In the ms. it is given for the Nativity, at Terce; the hymn for Sexta being "Septima natae virgine" (f. 39 b); and that for None being "Hora none quam canimus" (f. 39 b). The three parts are printed from this ms. in the Lat. Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, pp. 151-152. Tr. as "O Christ, our Lord, in this third hour," by J. D. Chambers, in t.i. Lauds Stu., 1857, and repeated in Skinner's Daily Service Hymn., 1861. [J. M.]

Christe, qui lux es et dies. [Lent.] An Ambrosian hymn, quoted by Hucbmar, Abp. of Rheims, in his treatise, Contra Godolphinum. . . De und un non Trinid Deitate, 857, thus fixing its date at an early period. Although the Benedictine editors have assigned some hymns to St. Ambrose on the strength of their being quoted in the same work, yet they have rejected this as the work of that Father. (Migne, tom. 16-17.) The text and uses of this hymn are:—

(1) In the Monument Brit., Toledo, 1502, f. 304 b, it is given as a hymn for compline on sundays, with an additional stanza which reads—

"Tetra noctis insidiae
Hujus temporis libera
Tuo lucis magnalia
Totum chorum inimina."

(2) Daniel, L. No. 23, gives the tr. from two 13th cent. ms. at Würzburg, &c. He also gives an additional verse which reads—

"Ad te clamamus domine,
Noel nos deelinerque,
Festina; tu tardaveris,
Suscurre nobis misericors."

(3) Mone, No. 76, gives the tr. from a ms. of the 8th cent., preserved at Darmstadt, with readings of later ms. and printed Breviaries, and an extended note.

(4) Daniel follows in 1855 (Tr. pp. 64-5), with references to his former note, and to Mone, and further readings from ms. and printed Breviaries.

(5) It is found in a ms., c. 900, in the Bodleian (Junius, 25 f. 127 b); in three ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Mus. (Jul. A. vi. f. 32 b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 11; Harl. 2961, f. 220 b); and in the Latin Hymn. of the Anglo-Saxon Church is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (Surtees Soc., 1851, p. 12).

(6) It is also found in Hymns. Strasbourg, (Lond. 1851), the Sarum and York Breviaries; Card. Newman's Hymn. Ecclesiastics, 1838 and 1865; Wackernagel, 1864, No. 21; Rosler; Eulenspiegel; Buggs' annotated H. d. A. M., and others. In the various Breviaries its use differed, but it was mainly confined to Lent. [W. A. S.]
CHRISTE, QUI SEDES

1558, where it is in 7 st. of 4 l. Included in the Hamburg Enchiridion, 1558, and recently as No. 507 in the Ann. L. S., 1851. In Nöldcke's Alber, 1857, p. 43. St. vi., vii., says Lauxmann, have formed a very favourite evening prayer for families in Württemberg from olden times till now. The only trs. is:

"We are Thy heritage indeed," of st. v., vii., as No. 244, in pt. i. of the Norvian H. Bk., 1784. [J. M.]

Christe, qui sedes Olympia. Jean Baptiste de Sautéll. [St. Michael and All Angels.] Given in the Clunia Brei., 1686, p. 1086, and in his Hymnus Sacri et Noni, 1609, p. 40; and in the ed. of 1698, p. 182, as "Christe, summi Rex Olympi," and in 7 st. of 6 l. In the revised Paris Breviary, 1736, st. ii. was omitted, and various alterations were introduced. Other French uses vary both from Paris Brev. and the original. "Christe, qui sedes Olympia," is the Paris text from which all the trs. into English have been made. It is given in Chandler's Hys. of the P. Ch., 1857, p. 224; and in Card. Newman's Hymnæ Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1863. The stanza omitted from the Paris Brev. is:

"Quotquot adstant, sempiternum
Qui tribunal ambient,
Hi tot ardent Imperants
Ferre jussa praetere
Ire teris, et reder,
Sacra per commodata."—Ed. 1698, p. 182. [W. A. S.]

Translation in C. U.:

Christ in highest Heaven enthroned, by W. Palmer, in his Short Poems and Hys., 1845, in 6 st. of 3 l. From thence it passed, unaltered, into the St. Saviour's (Leeds) Sacred Hymns & Anthems, 1846, and with slight alterations and a doxology into Hys & Intros, 1852. It is also given in Murray's Hymnæ, 1852, as, "Christ, to Whom, enthroned in Heaven"); in H. A. & M., 1861, and the Hymnary, 1872, as "Christ, in highest heaven enthroned"); and (st. iv.—vi), from Murray's Hymnæ, as "Hate are they o'er all creation," in Kennedy, 1893.

Translations not in C. U.:

2. 0 Christ, Redeemer of mankind, by R. F. Littledale, written for and 1st pub. in the People's H., 1867, No. 293, in 7 st. of 4 l. and signed "F. R."

ii. Roman Breviary Text.

Placare, Christe, servulia. This text is found in all editions of the Rom. Brev. since 1632, and in Daniel, i., No. 243. It is tr. as:

0 Christ, Thy guilty people spare, by E. Caswall. 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, pp. 191-2, and again in his Hymns &c., 1873, p. 103. This is the tr. commonly used in Roman Catholic collections for missions and schools. Another tr. is:

"O be not angry, Lord, with those," by Wallace, 1874. [J. J.]

Christe Redemptor omnium [gentium] Ex [De] Patre. [Christmas.] This Ambrosian hymn is sometimes ascribed to St. Ambrose, but is rejected as such by the Benedictine editors of his works. (Paris Brev. 1890, p. 186.) The furn. tr. is known in three forms. These are, i. The Original; ii. The Roman Breviary text; iii. and the Paris Breviary text.

i. Original Text.

Christe Redemptor omnium Ex Patre Patris unice. This is found in three ms. of the 11th cent. in the Brit. Mus. (Jul. A. vi. f. 32 b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 31; Harl. 4971, f. 227 b), and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, p. 119, printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham. The text in Daniel, i., No. 75, "Christe Redemptor gentium, De Patre," is from later authorities. In his vol. iv. p. 115, Daniel gives the earlier renderings from a Rheinau ms. of the 11th cent. The Hymn. Sarisb., 1851, p. 12, gives the text, with readings from various English uses. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:

1. Jeus, the Father's Only Son, by J. M. Neale, given in the Hymnal N., 1st ed., 1852, No. 13, and continued in later editions. In 1884 it was transferred to the Hymner.

3. O Christ, Redeemer of mankind, by R. F. Littledale, made for and 1st appeared in the People's H., 1867, and signed "F. R."

Translations not in C. U.:

2. Christ, whose redemption all doth free. Primer. 1819.
4. O Christ, Redeemer of the world. J. D. Chambers. 1857. [J. J.]

ii. Roman Breviary Text.

Jesu Redemptor omnium, Quem lucis ante originem. This form of the hymn was given in the revised Roman Breviary, 1632, for Vespers and Matins on Christmas Day. The text is in Daniel, i., No. 75; and in Card. Newman's Hymnæ Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1865. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:

1. Jesu, Redeemer of the world, by E. Caswall, 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1843, p. 45, and
A cento of 5 st., being st. 8, 10, 12, 32, 96, beginning, “Nuncius praesepi mihi labra suum,” was tr. by Dr. R. M. Magritt as “O let some swift-winged angel” and contributed to the 1874 Draft Hymnal of the United Presb. Church. When included as No. 95 in the Presb. Hymnal, 1876, it began, “Lord! let Thy Spirit holy,” but when Dr. Magritt reprinted it together with the Latin in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1878, No. 42, it began, “Lord! let Thy swift-winged angel.” This was again altered in the 1786 ed. to, “Lord, let some swift-winged angel.” It is one of the best of his translations. Another tr. is, “Christ, of Thy Saints the Head, the King,” in 50 st. of 8 lines, by Sir William Mure, pub. as A Spiritual Hymne of the sacrifice of a sinner to be offered upon the altar of a humbled heart to Christ our Redeemer, &c. Edinburgh, 1829. J. M.]

Christe, sanctorum decus angelorum. St. Rabanus Maurus. [St. Michael.] This hymn is in four forms, not counting slight variations of text, as follows:—

i. Original Text.

Christe sanctorum decus angelorum, Rector humani generis et auctore. It is in three ms. of the 11th cent. in the Brit. Mus. (Vesp. D. xii. f. 92; Jul. A. vi. f. 58; Harl. 2961, f. 243), and is also printed from an 11th cent. ms. belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Durham in the Latin Hymns. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 116. Of this text there is no translation.

ii. Textus Receptus.

Christe sanctorum decus angelorum, Rector humani generis et auctore.

This is given by Daniel, i. No. 188, with various readings, and by Motte, No. 311, also with notes. To these are added in Daniel, iv. p. 165, readings from a ms. of the 11th cent. belonging to the Abbey of Rheinsa; and at p. 371 he says, that the hymn is also found in a ms. of the 9th cent. in the Town Library of Bern.

Translations of this text are:—

1. Christ, the glory of the holy angels. W. J. Blyeh. 1827.
2. Christ, the holy angels’ Grace. J. W. Hewett. 1829.

iii. Roman Breviary Text.

Christe sanctorum decus angelorum, Gentilis humanae Sator et Redemptor, given in the Rom. Brev., 1632, for the Feast of St. Michael, at Lauds. The text is also in Daniel, i. No. 188; Carl. Newman’s Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; Königfeld, ii. 131; Bässler, No. 71, &c. In this arrangement, st. v.:—

“Hinc lei nostri gentirix Maria
Tutus et nobis chorus angelorum
Semper assistat, simul et beata Conco tota.”

is changed to—

“Virgo dux pacti genetrix lucis
Et sacer nobis chorus angelorum
Semper assistat, simul et miranda
Regia coeli.”

In the translations the full force of this change has been evaded by all with the exception of Caswall.

Christi Blut und Gerechtigkeit. N. L. von Zinzendorf. [Redemption.] This fine hymn was written in 1739, during his return journey from St. Thomas's in the West Indies, and 1st pub. 1739, in Appendix vii. to the Herrnhut G. B., 1738, as No. 1238, in 33 st. of 4 i. In Knapps ed. of Z.'s Geistliche Lieder, 1843, p. 135, it is marked as "On St. Eustachius," which has been interpreted to mean that it was written on the island of St. Eustatius, in the Dutch West Indies, but quite as probably means that it was written on St. Eustachius's day, viz. on March 22, 1739. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 399, reduced to 20 st., and thus as No. 1291 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. St. i. is taken from the hymn, "In Christi Wunden schlafl ich ein," ascribed to Paul Eber (q. v.).

Translations in C. U.:
1. Jesus, Thy blood and righteousness, a spirited but rather free tr., omitting st. 6, 11, 13, 22, 23, 25-28, by J. Wesley, in H. and Sacred Poems, 1740 (P. Works, 1808-72, vol. i. p. 346). Of these 24 st. 16 were adopted in the H. and Spiritual Songs, 1753, No. 68, and 11 (1, 2, 6-8, 10, 11, 13, 21-24, 26, 27) in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 181 (ed. 1875, No. 190). In most collections it is still further abridged. The most usual cento is that given by M. Madan, in the 2nd ed., 1763, of his Ps. and Hymns, No. 175, which is of Wesley's st. 1, 12, 2, 13, 15, 24. This is found in Bickersteth's Christian Psalms, 1833, and has been recently given, omitting st. xii., in Speep's S. G. of G. and G., 1870; Irish Ch. Hymnal, 1873; Spurgeon's 0. H. Bk., 1869; Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. H., 1868, and other collections. Among the various British and American hymnals which begin with Wesley's first line, the other sts. used for making centos are taken from the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 (6-8, 21-23).

The hymn is also found under these first lines:
1. Jesus, Thy robe of righteousness (st. 1.), in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836; Leeds H. Bk., 1843; N. Cong., 1859; Bapt. Ps. & Hymns, 1858, etc.
3. Jesus, Thy grace and righteousness (st. 1.), in English version, 1847.

5. The holy, meek, unspotted Lamb (st. vi.), in American Sabbath H. Bk., 1854.
7. Lord, I believe were sinners more (st. viii.), in Evangel. Union Hymnary, 1878.
8. Jesus, be endless praise to Thee (st. xxiv.), in L. H. Hastings's Hymnal, 1869.
9. Jesus, the Lord, my righteousness (st. 1.), in The Enlarged London H. Bk., 1879.

Another tr. is:

More's notes and readings are extensive. He considers it to be of the 8th cent. Daniel iv. 120, quotes More's text, references, and part of his notes. It is tr. as:

Mark! a glad exulting through. by P. Onslow, in the Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 6, in 8 st. of 4 i., and from thence into Alford's Year of Praise, 1867, No. 2. [J. M.]

Christi corpus ave. [Holy Communion.] Levis, in his Anecdota Sacra, 1792, pp. 32, 35, gives this as "A salutation for the Lord Jesus Christ, by St. Anselm of Canterbury." On this authority it is sometimes ascribed to St. Anselm; but from the fact that the hymn is not in his works, and that Daniel, ii. p. 328, and More, No. 214, give the text, and are doubtful of his authorship, this assumption is uncertain. More quotes it from a Reichenau ms. of the 14th cent. It is tr. as:

Rall, Body born of Mary, by R. F. Littledale, 1st pub. in the Altar Manual, 1863; again in Lyra Eucharistica, 1865, and in the People's H. Bk., 1867. [J. J.]

Christi hodierna celebremus natalitiam. [Christmas.] A sequence in the Mass of the sixth day after Christus Natale, whether it be a Sunday or not, in the Sarum Missal, and for the third Mass of Christmas Day, in the Hereford and York Missals. In the Hereford M. the first line reads, "Christi hodiernae natalitiae omnis una." With the exception of the second verse, the intercessions and endings of the verses are in the letter a. The Sarum text is given in the Rubric for Saturday, 1867, col. 74; the York in the Sarum S. of York, 1867, No. 614 (of the 10th cent.), it begins as in the Hereford M. In the Bodelian ms., No. 915, f. 136 (written c. 1000), and in an 11th cent. Winchester ms. now in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (ms. 473), it begins with st. ii. "Coelicus resonaet." It is tr. as:

O come, loud anthem let us sing, by E. H. Pimlott, written for the 1st pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 135. Also given in Dean Pimlott's Things New and Old, 1884. Also tr. as:

Let us celebrate this day, Christ the Lord's nativity. C. R. Pearson. 1885. [J. J.]
Christi miles gloriosus. [St. Vincent.] A hymn for the Festival of St. Vincent at Lauds is found in a 12th cent. ms. in the Bodleian (Laud. Latinn, 95 f. 144 b) and in a 14th cent. Sarum Brev. in the Brit. Mus. (wss. Reg. 2 A. xiv., f. 183 b). It is reprinted in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Glorious was the Christian warrior, by J. D. Chambers, in pt. ii. p. 58, of his Lauda Suyon, 1866, from whence it passed unaltered into the People's H., 1867.
2. For his Lord, a soldier glorious. An anonymous tr. in the Antiphoner and Gradal, 1880, and again in the Hymner, 1892. The doxology (st. iii.) is from Chambers. [J. J.]

Christi perennas nuntiis. Jean Baptiste de Sainteul. [SS. Mark and Luke.] Pub. in the Cluniac Brev., 1866, p. viii., and in his Hymni Sacri et Nori, 1859, 197; and in the ed. 1898, p. 210, as a hymn for the Evangelists, in st. of 4 l. In 1736 it was included, with alterations, in the revised Paris Brev. as the hymn for first and second Vespers on the Feasts of SS. Mark and Luke. It is also appointed for the same Feasts in other French Breviaries. The Paris Brev. text is given in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1865. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Heralds of Christ, to every age, by J. Chandler, from the Paris Brev., in his Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 92 (with the Latin text), in 5 st. of 4 l. This was repeated in the Cooke and Burton Psalter, 1853; Dr. Oliphant's Hymns for the Observant, etc., 1854, &c. In the English Hym., 2nd ed., 1856 (3rd, 1861), it is given as:—Eternal gifts of Christ our King; and in the Hymns for the Roman Missal, 1860, as:—Herald of Christ, through all time.

2. Christ's everlasting messengers, by I. Williams, is the most widely used of the trs. of this hymn. It appeared in the Feb. number of the British Magazine, 1847, and again in the translator's Hymns, tr. from the Paris Brev., 1839, p. 277, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is found in several collections, including the People's H., 1867; Alford's Year of Praise, 1867, &c.

3. Heralds of Jesus through all time, by E. Caswall, is pub. in his Minstrel of the World, 1857, and again in his Hymns, &c., 1873. In the Hymnary, 1872, it is given with alterations by the compilers as:—Behold Christ's heralds through all time.

4. Behold the messengers of Christ, by the compilers of H. A. & M., is based upon I. Williams, as above. It was given in the 1st ed., 1861, and again in the revised ed., 1875.

Translation not in C. U.:—

Praise to Thy saints, to Thee, O Lord. 19th cent. [J. J.]

Christian children, hear me. J. M. Neale. [All Saints.] Is found in his Original Psalms, Hymns and other Ecclesiastical Verses, 1868, pp. 30-33. It is a “Children's Hymn,” 9 st. of 6 l., for All Saints Day and is accompanied with the note:—This is written to the very lovely melody of Laus Deo, nunc cantamus, in the Sarum Gradual.” In 1867 it was included in the People's H.

Christian children must be holy. C. F. Alexander. [Circumcision.] Appeared in her Narrative Hymns for Village Schools, 1859, No. ii. on “The Circumcision,” in 5 st. of 4 l. Given without alteration in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.

Christian, seek not yet repose. Charlotte Elliott. [Watch and Pray.] Appeared in her Morning and Evening Hymns for a Week, 1839, appointed for Wednesday Morning, and entitled “Watch and Pray that ye enter not into temptation.” It is in 6 st. of 3 l. with the refrain “Watch and Pray.” Although unrecognized for some time by hymnal compilers, in the later collections, beginning about 1860, it holds up a prominent position, and its use in all English-speaking countries has become very extensive. [J. J.]

Christians awake, salute the happy morn. J. Byrom. [Christmas.] This hymn is compiled from a poem of 48 lines, in two parts of 32 and 16 lines respectively, which was pub. in his posthumous Poems, &c., 1773, p. 58; and again in his Works, 1814, vol. ii., p. 37. It is one of two poems for Christmas Day. The popular form in which it now appears as in H. A. & M. was given to it in Cotterill's Select., 1819, No. 212. This was repeated by Montgomery, in his Christian Psalmist, 1825. From these two works it has passed into most collections now in use in English-speaking countries. There are also other versions in C. U. An altered version, beginning:—“With songs of praise salute, &c., is found in T. Darlington's Hymns, &c. Orig. text, with which all centos should be compared, in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 116. [J. J.]

Christians! brethren! are we part. H. K. White. [Dismissal.] Appeared in Dr. Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 883, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled, “Dismissing; or, A Parting Hymn.” It was somewhat extensively used for some fifty years or more, but of late it has rapidly declined in popularity. It is usually given as:— “Christian brethren! are we part.” With this beginning it is used in four forms, as in (1) Harland's Ch. Psalter; (2) Windele, Barry, &c.; (3) Snape; (4) L. Hymns; and as (5) “Come, Christian brethren, ere we part,” in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1846. It is also in use, but to a limited extent, in America. [J. J.]

Χριστός Γενναται: δοκίμασθε. St. Cosmas. This is the first of eight Odes or Hymns, which form St. Cosmas's Canon for Christmas Day. The Greek Office for Christmas Day is of great length and interspersed with hymns by St. Germanus of Constantinople, St. Anatolius, John the Monk, St. Romaratus the Melodist, and Casia, in addition to the Canon of St. Cosmas. The latter was written early in the 8th century, St. Cosmas dying about 795, and has been reprinted in Greek in Migne's Patrologiae, tom. lxxxix., in Auth. Graeca Christi, p. 163, in Daniel, ii., pp. 55-60, and in Dr. Litteldele's Office, &c., of the Holy Eastern Church, 1893, pp. 55-85. The translations into English are those in hymned measure by Dr. Neale, in his Hymns of The eight Odes which are thus based on their corresponding Canticles are: —

Ode i. Ἡμεροθεία γαννατά: δόξανε.

Christ is born! Tell forth His fame: By J. M. Neale, from his Hymn, of the E. Church, 1862, in 4 st. of 6 l. In 1868 it appeared as “Christ is born! Exalt His name!” in the Strom Hymnal, No. 45, and from thence has passed in the same form into other collections. The original text was restored in the Hymnary in 1872, No. 142. In Dr. Littledale’s Offices, &c., it is tr. as “Christ is born, His glory.”

The remaining Odes are not in C. U. —

Ode iii. Το βράχος τῶν οἰκίαν.

“Him, of the Father’s very Essence.” J. M. Neale.

“The Son, before the worlds.” R. F. Littledale.

Ode iv. Ἡδύνω εἰς τὴν ὅρκης.

“Rod of the Root of Jesse.” J. M. Neale.

“Rod of the Root of Jesse.” R. F. Littledale.

Ode v. Θεὸς ἐν εἰρήνῃ.

Ode vi. Σιγάγχρων ἐνώρω.

“As Jonah, issuing from his three days’ tomb.” J. M. Neale.

“As the sea-monster vomited.” R. F. Littledale.

Ode vii. Οἱ γυναικὶς εἰσερέθην.

Ode viii. Θαμαστοὶ ὑπερφιέσθη ἢ δροσοβάλεσ.

“The dewy freshness that the furnace flings.” J. M. Neale.

Ode ix. Μυρισμὸν ζιτων.

The hymn Ἡμεροθεία γαννατά (q.v.) (“A Great and mighty wonder”) is from the same Office for Christmas Day. [See Greek Hymnody, § xvii. 3.] [J. J.]

Christ’s own Martyrs, valiant cohort. J. M. Neale. [All Saints.] Appeared first in the Church Times, Oct. 29, 1864, signed J. M. Neale, and after revision, in his Hymns Chiefly Mediaeval, on the Joys and Glories of Paradise, 1865, and is described by the author as “an attempt of my own; intended as a processional Hymn for All Saints.” It is in 10 st. of 6 l., and entitled “Christ’s own Martyrs,” pp. 31–81. In 1866 it was republished in Neale’s Original Sequences, Hymns, &c., pp. 55–60, with the following note on st. i. 1–2: —

White-robed and palmiferous throng.

“This word [palmiferous] has been objected to as not English. It occurs, however, in Codworth, from whom, as an English writer, there is (1 take it) no appeal. It has been characterised by Archbishop Trench, who quotes from Codworth, as ‘beautiful.’

The text of 1865, with the change of st. vii. 1. 6. “stained” for “veined” was included in the People’s Hymn, No. 291. [J. J.]

Christus dumem, Qui per crucem. St. Bonaventura. [Lent.] This is ascribed to St. Bonaventura, as a hymn for a Little Office of the Passion, at Lauds, and as such it is given in the various editions of his Works. Mone, No. 85, gives the text from ms. of the 14th cent. at Strassburg and Karlruhe, and an extended note. Daniel, iv. p. 219, repeats the text, but not the notes in full. It is also given in various medieval books of devotion as the Cursus Collecti and the Hortulus animae. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.: —

1. To Christ, whose Cross. By F. Oakley in his Devotions commemorative of the Most Adorable Passion of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, 1842, in 5 st. of 6 l. In 1864 this was included, unaltered, in Skinner’s Daily Service Hymnal.

2. To Christ, whose Cross repaired our loss. This hymn, which is No. 258 in the Hymnary, is a cento; st. i., ii., being i. and ii. from the above; st. iii. from Oakley’s tr. of “Qui pressura,” and st. iv. and v. from his tr. of “Qui Jacuisti” in the same work. The last two hymns named are distinct from the “Christus dumem,” and are printed in Mone and Iacint, immediately after it.

Translations not in C. U.: —

1. Christ, our Leader and Redeemer. J. D. Chambers, 1851.

2. To Him who died and rose again. T. W. Bickham, in his Jubilee Hymnal of St. Bernard, 1867. [W. T. B.]

Christus der ist mein Leben. [For the Dying.] The oldest accessible form of this hymn is in M. Vulpina’s Ein schön gemischtes Gesangbuch, Jena, 1669, No. 148, in 7 st. of 4 l. Wackernagel, v. p. 435, gives this and also a second form from a Christliches Gesangbühlein, Hamburg, 1612, in 8 st. In the New L. S., 1851, No. 808, st. i.–vii. are as 1669, and st. viii. as 1612. According to a tradition, Christus, Lux indecissa. [Holy Communion.] This hymn is given in Mone, No. 204, in 10 st. of 4 L. from 14th cent. Ms. at Karlsruhe, one of which belonged to the Abbey of Reinchenau. Mone adds readings and notes. Tr. as:

1. Christ. Light unceasing, with Thy flesh, by J. D. Chambers. 1st In his Companion to the Holy Communion, 1855, and his Laudas Sion, 1857, in 10 st. of 4 L. In the St. John’s (Aberdeen) Hymnal, 1870, No. 235, st. 3-4, 7-9 are omitted.

Christus tenembris obistam. Jean Baptiste de Sandelin. [Epiphany.] Pub. in his Hymni Sacri et Nati., 1688, p. 15 (ed. 1688, p. 72), in 4 st. of 4 L. In the revised Paris Brev., 1736, st. 1-iii. were given, with the addition of three stanzas from another source. The hymn is also found in other French Brevs. The Paris Brev. text is given in Card. Newman’s Hymni Eucharistici, 1838 and 1863, and that adopted by the translators.

Transl. In C. U.:—
Through Judah’s land the Saviour walked, from the Paris Brev., by J. Chandler, in his Hymns of the Primitive Church, 1837, in 6 st. of 4 L. This is given in an abbreviated form in Kennedy, 1863, No. 273, and altered to “Through Jewry’s darkness Jesus walks,” in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 178.

Translations in C. U.:—
1. And now heaven’s growing light is manifest. J. Williams, 1839.
2. He dwells on earth, along His path. R. Campbell, 1848, and revised as “The bright and morning star arose,” from the Campbell MS., in Mr. Shipley’s Annual, 1844.
3. Of dark Judæa’s gloomy shores. J. D. Chambers, 1867.

Church of England Hymnody.
[Baptist Hymnody, Church of.]

Church of Christ, by God’s right hand. J. Conder. [Colonial Missions.] Appeared in his Hymn. Bk., 1836, No. 500, in 4 st. of 6 L., and based upon the words, “Make straight in the desert a highway for our God.” It was repeated in The Choir and The Oratory, 1837, p. 261, and entitled, “The Claims of our Colonies.” Also in his Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 129. In the New Cong., No. 965, it is given without alteration. It is one of the very few hymns which recognizes the claims of our colonies upon the prayers and assistance, in matters spiritual, of the mother country, and as such, although not a hymn of any great merit, it is yet deserving of more extended use.

Churchyard, Thomas. [Old Version, § 21.] Churton, Edward, D.D., s. of the Ven. Ralph Churton, sometime Archdeacon of St. David’s and Rector of Middleton Cheney, Northampton, was b. in 1800, and educated at the Charterhouse and Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated in honours, in 1821. He was for some time one of the Masters at Charterhouse. He took Holy Orders in 1826; was the first Head Master of the Hackney Church of England School, 1830; Rector of Crayke, 1835; Prebendary in York Cathedral, 1841; and Archdeacon of Cleveland, 1846. He d. July 4, 1874.

Archdeacon Churton’s works include: (1) The Early English Church, 1840. (2) Memoir of Bishop Pearson, 1844. (3) Lays of Faith and Loyality, 1845. (4) Memoir of Joshua Watson, 1861. He also edited several works, including Lays of Faith and Loyalty, 1845, &c. He is known to hymnology through his work, The Book of Psalms in English Verse, 1884. This is commonly known as the Cleveland Psalter. The Preface is of more than usual value and of its rendering the Psalms, some of which are of great excellence (see Psalms English, § 10.), a few have come into C. U., the best known being, “God of grace, O let Thy light.” The following, mainly in Kennedy, 1863, are from the Cleveland Psalter—
1. Come, arise and let us go. Ps. 22.
2. Earth with all thy thousand voices. Ps. 23.
3. For ever, Lord, Thy faithful word. Ps. 23.
4. God of truth, all faithful Lord. Ps. 23.
5. God my hope, my strength, my King. Ps. 23.
7. How shall I render to my God. Ps. 23.
8. I lift mine heart to Thee. Ps. 150.
9. If our God had not been our friend. Ps. 150.
10. In thee, O Lord, I trust. Ps. 150.
11. Lord, hear me, grant my sorrow’s boon. Ps. 146.
12. Lord, hear my suppliant prayer. Ps. 146.
13. Lord, hear the voice of my complaint. Ps. 146.
14. Lord, I have called on Thee; for Thou. Ps. 146.
15. Lord, my heart is with the lowly. Ps. 146.
16. Lord, my Rock, to Thee I cry. Ps. 146.
17. Lord, to my sad voice attending. Ps. 146.
18. O happy state on earth to see. Ps. 146.
19. O praise the Lord, for He is love. Ps. 146.
20. O stand in awe, and fear to sin. Ps. 146.
21. Raise the psalm to thee all glorious. Ps. 146.
22. To the day all days excelling. Ps. 146.
23. To Thee our guilty deeds. Ps. 146.
24. Whence to Thee I make my prayer. Ps. 146.

Archdeacon Churton’s trs. from the Latin, Spanish, and Anglo-Saxon, were included in his Poetical Remains, Lond., 1875. [J. J.]

Cives celestis patriae. Bp. Marbolius. [The heavenly Jerusalem.] This hymn is given in Mone, No. 637, from a ms. at Admont dated 1098, in 16 st. of 6 L. It deals with the mystical meaning of the precious stones in the foundation of the heavenly Jerusalem. Dr. Neale, by whom the tr. in C. U. was made, and pub. in his Med. Hys., 1851, p. 36, introduces it with the following preface—

“The ruggedness of the translation is merely a copy of that of the original in the following poem of Marbolius, successively Archdeacon of Angers and Bishop of
CLAMANTIS ECCE

Beness, who died 1125. Its title, a Prose, clearly proves it to have been intended, if not used, as a sequence in the Mass of some high festival, probably a dedication. The mystical explanation of precious stones is the subject of the good Bishop's poem de gemmaz, which seems in its time to have obtained a high reputation. The Prose, which I here give, is certainly not without its beauty, and is a good key to mediaeval allusions of a similar kind.

Dr. Neale appends to his tr. an extensive note on the mystical meaning of the precious stones, in which he quotes largely from a commentary on the prose by Marbodus. The tr. is:

Ye of the heavenly country, sing. It is in 16 st. of 6 l. A cento, composed of st. i., xx., xvi., was given in the Irvingite Hym. for the Use of the Churches, new ed. 1870. Beyond this the tr. is not in C. U. [J. J.]

Clamantis ecce vox sonans. Nicholas le Tourneaux. [Epiphany.] This is a hymn at first Vespers, during the octave of the Epiphany, and the Baptism of our Lord, in the revised Paris Brev. of 1796. It originally appeared in the Cluniac Brev. in 1586, p. 230.

The text is in Card. Newman's Clives hier.

Translations in C. U.:

1. The voice of one that cries aloud. This tr., based on J. Chandler's, was given in J. A. Johnston's English Hymnal, 1852, No. 63. In the 1862 and 1865 editions it was altered to "A voice of one that loudly cries."

2. The Herald's cry with thrilling sounds, by J. D. Chambers, in his Lustral Syon, 1857, p. 114. On p. 115 of the same work is a tr. of the Nocturn hymn, "Non ablunum lymphae Deum." From these two trs. the hymn, No. 175, in the Hymnary, 1872, "The Baptist's cry with thrilling sounds," is composed, st. i., ii. being from the first, and st. iii.-vi. from the second.

Translations not in C. U.:

3. Hurk, in the wilderness. R. Campbell, from the Campbell MS., in Mr. Shipley's Annae Sanctae, 1844.

4. Let the voice of she that crieth, W. J. B.ew. 1837.

Clapham, Emma, second daughter of John Peele Clapham, was born in Hanover Square, Leeds, Oct. 18, 1830. Miss Clapham, who has given much time and attention to Sunday Schools and philanthropic work, contributed under the initials of "E. C." the following hymns to the Leeds Sunday School H. Bk., ed. 1858, edited by her father:

2. Lord, we meet to pray and praise. Meeting of Church workers.

3. Saviour, where dwellest Thou? Meeting of 3 School Teachers.

Miss Clapham has also contributed several pieces to newspapers and the periodical press. [J. J.]

Clapham, John Peele, was born at Leeds, July 7th, 1801, and educated privately, and at the Fulneck Moravian School, and the Protestant Free Church Grammar School, Manchester. He was a magistrate for the West Riding of Yorkshire, and Treasurer of the County Courts in Yorkshire. He was a member of the Congregational body, and took a warm interest in their religious and philanthropic work. Burley, Harrogate and Ilkley were specially benefited by his zeal and munificence. His interest in Sunday Schools commenced at an early age, and continued to his death, on Nov. 19, 1873. In 1833 he edited the Leeds Sunday School Hymn Book, and also the revised edition, 1862. To this work he contributed the following hymns under the signature of "J. P. C.:

i. To Hymns Sel. and Original, 1833.

1. God of unio, God of love. S. S. Teachers' Meeting.

2. Let us unite to bless the Lord. Sunday.

3. Our Father, and our heavenly King. The Lord's Prayer.

5. Strengthen thy stakes, extend thy cords. Foundation-stone of a School.

6. Sweet is the word, O Lord, to raise. New Year.

7. Thou gracious Father of the poor. The True Riches.

8. We dare not God's own holy day. Sunday.

ii. To the same Collection, ed. 1858.

10. A little pilgrim on life's way. Looking unto Jesus.

11. The little pilgrim was no fiction, but a bonnie, loving, and lovely lad of nearly ten years old, our youngest son. He died at school, after a week's illness, and the refrain of his father's lines—"Jesus, my Saviour, were the last words we could catch before he finished his pilgrimage."—Curwen's Hym., Notes, p. 7.

13. Come away from the train Sunday.

15. Father in heaven, for Jesus' sake. Grace before Meal.

17. How good and how pleasant. Praise to God the Father.

20. Pure religion, Christian love. Praise to God the Father.

22. We own Thy care, we love Thy word. Praise. [J. J.]

Clapp, Eliza Thayer, a resident at Dorchester, Massachusetts, U.S., and author of Words in the Sunday School; and Studies in Religion, 1845, contributed at the request of Ralph W. Emerson three hymns and two poems to The Dial, 1841. From one of the hymns, in 9 st. of 4 l., pub. in The Dial, July, 1841, and entitled "The future is better than the past," the hymn "All before us now is but a way" (Onward with Confidence) is taken. It was given in Hedge & Huntington's Unitarian Hymn. for the Church of Christ, 1853, and has been repeated in several collections, and is usually attributed to Emerson, but in error. (George Cooke, in Journal of Speculative Philosophy, 1885.)

Clara diei gaudia. [St. Anne.] The dates given to this hymn are uncertain, and range from the 9th to the 13th cent. None, No. 791, gives the text from ms. at Freiburg, and in the Library of the Lyceum at Constantinople, of the 13th cent. He adds a few readings to the text. Daniel, 1. 239, iv. 175, refers to several Breviaries of the 16th cent., but none earlier than 1500, and to a ms. of the 11th or 12th cent. belonging to the town Library of Hamburg. [W. A. S.]
Translation in C. U. —

Speciosa Anna! [Juda's glory, by E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1848, p. 263, in 6 st. of 4 l. On republishing it in his Hymns, &c., 1873, p. 188, he added an original refrain. This refrain is a special invocation of St. Anna. In the 2nd ed. of the Appendix to Hymnal N., 1862, it was altered as, "Holy Anna, Juda's glory," and from thence it passed into the People's H., 1867. In the Roman Catholic Hys. for the Year, N. D., it is given as "Blessed Anna, Juda's glory." In T. Chamberlain's Hys. used at the Church of St. Thomas the Martyr, Oxford, 1841, No. 149, st. i–iii, are by Caswall, and st. iv., v. by T. Chamberlain.

Clark, Alexander, D.D., b. March 10, 1833, d. July 13, 1879. Dr. Clark was for many years a Minister of the American Methodist Episcopal Church, and the editor of the Methodist Recorder, pub. at Pittsburgh.

Two of his hymns: —

1. Heavenly Father, bless me now. Lent.

are given in I. D. Sankey's Sec. S. & Solos.

Clark, Charles, b. in London, April 19, 1838, was educated for the ministry at the Baptist College, Oxford; and in 1862 became minister at North Parade Chapel, Halifax. He was subsequently minister at Mazepond, London; Broadmead, Bristol; Albert Street, Melbourne, Australia, and is now (1865) pastor of the Baptist Church, London. His hymns for children, "Jesus, holy Saviour, Shepherd of the sheep," was contributed to the School Hymnal (Lond., 1880).

[W. R. S.]

Clark, John Haldenby, M.A., b. at Chesterfield, Derbyshire, Jan. 28, 1839, and educated at the Grammar School there, and at St. John's Coll., Cambridge, where he graduated in 1861. On taking Holy Orders, he became Curate of Barnby Moor and Fangtoun. After labouring in various parishes he became, in 1870, Vicar of West Bergholt, nr. Colchester, Norfolk. Mr. Clark is known through his translation, "Soldiers, who are Christ's below," in 1880 he pub. The Marriage of Cana, and Other Verses: Lyman. It contains a few trsl. from the Latin, in addition to original verse.

[J. J.]

Clark, Willis Gaylord, b. at Otisco, Oswego County, New York, 1840, d. June 12, 1841. He was sometime editor of the Philadelphia Gazette, and contributed to the Knickerbocker Magazine. His poetical writings were published in 1846. His hymn: —

We have met in peace together, was written for the 8th Anniversary of the American Sunday School Union, 1832. It is unknown to the English collections.

[F. M. B.]

Clarke, James Freeman, D.D., is a grandson of James Freeman (q. v.), from whom he was named. He was b. at Hanover, New Hampshire, April 4, 1810, and graduated at Harvard College, in Arts, in 1829, and in Divinity, 1833. Receiving ordination as a Unitarian Minister, he was Pastor at Louisville, Kentucky, from 1833 to 1840; of the Church of the Disciples, Boston, from 1841 to 1850; and also from 1853. Dr. Freeman for some time edited, whilst at Louisville, The Western Messenger, and is the author of Orthodoxy, its Truths and Errors, 1866; The Christian Doctrine of Forgiveness, 1852; The Christian Doctrine of Prayer, 1854, and other works. In 1844 he published the Hymn Book for the Church of the Disciples. This he enlarged in 1852. To each edition he contributed five hymns. Of these ten hymns five are found in the Lyra Sac. Amer. The best known of Dr. Clarke's hymn are: —

1. Father, to us Thy children, humbly kneeling. [Holy thoughts desired.] Dr. Clarke says this was manufactured from —

2. Infinite Spirit, who art round us ever [Holy thoughts desired], which was written in Kentucky about 1853, and printed in the Dial soon after.

3. Brother, hast thou wandered far! [The Prophetic Son.] This appeared in his Disciples' H. B., 1844, and is somewhat extensively used. It appeared in an abbreviated form as, "Hast thou wasted all the powers?" beginning with st. i., in Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, 1855; Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, and subsequently in others in G. Britain and America. The next three are also in one or two English collections.

4. To Thee, O God, in heaven. [Holy Baptism.] 1844.

5. To Him who children blessed. [Holy Baptism.] 1844.

6. Dear Friend, whose presence in the house. [Christ's presence desired.] 1834. The beauty and value of this last hymn have been partly, and deserve to be more fully, recognized. It is found in Lyra Sac. Amer., which also has the following on "The Protestant Reformation": —

7. For all thy gifts we praise Thee, Lord. This hymn was sung at the collation given by the Unitarians of New York and Brooklyn to the Members of the Convention assembled in the former city, Oct. 22, 1845. As originally written it contained 8 st.; the last two are omitted from both Lyra Sac. Amer, and Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith. [F. M. B.]

Clarke, Samuel Childs, M.A., b. Jan. 6, 1821, and educated at Queen's College and St. Mary Hall, Oxford, graduating B.A., 1844, and M.A. 1846. On taking Holy Orders he became successively Curate of Thorverton, and of Dawlish, Devon; Vicar of St. Thomas by-Launceton, and Head Master of the Launceton Grammar School, and Vicar of Thorverton, 1873; and Hon. Sec. of the Exeter Board of Education. Mr. Clarke has pub. some educational works: Thoughts in Verse from a Village Churchman's Note Book, 1848, and Services of Song for Christmas, Passiontide, Ascension, Harvest (S. P. C. K. catalogue), Advent, Eastertide, Missionary, Flower, and Children's Services. These Services of Song have been sanctioned for use in churches by the Bishops of Exeter and Salisbury. Mr. Clarke's hymn include: —

1. All hail, all hail to the natal day. Christmas. Contributed to the Parish Church Hymnal.
2. Frame of the light. Morning. In the Parish Church Hymnal.
3. Great Giver of all good, to Thee again. Harvest. This is the best known of our author's hymns. It was first printed in the Musical Times, 1861, with music by Barlow. In 1866 it was included in the Appendix to the S. P. C. K. 's and Hymns, in 1572 in the Hymnary, and again in many other collections.

6. It is thou didst arise here on earth, St. Thomas, in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1951.

11. Now a new year opens. The New Year. In Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, and one or two American collections.

13. O Lord, it is a joyful thing. Evening. In the Parish Ch. Hym., &c.

15. Once more the sheaves are gathered. Harvest. In Suppl. to Harland's Ch. Hym., the author's Harvest-tide Service of Song, &c., 1876.

In addition to these hymns, most of those given in Mr. Clarke's Services of Song are his composition, as are also the 19 in his Services for Children. Lordl. Pitman, N. D. Some of these are intituled " S. C. C. " Taken as a whole these hymns are a good addition to the common store for special occasions, and should be consulted by hymn-book compilers.

Clarin decus ejunii. St. Gregory the Great. [Lent.] The oldest form of this hymn is in two mss. of the 11th cent. in the Brit. Mus. (Vesp. D. xii. f. 52; Harl. 2961 f. 238b), and from a ms. of the 11th cent. at Durham in the Latin Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 65. It is also given in various editions of St. Gregory's Works; in Migne, tom. 178, col. 849; Daniel, i., No. 148; Moore, No. 71; Hymn. Sacreb., 1851; Carlyle Newman's Hymni Ecclesiarii, 1858 and 1865, and others. The use of the hymn in England was extensive. It is found in the Sorum, York, Canterbury, Worcester, and other English Brevts.

Claudius, Matthias, s. of Matthäus Claudius, Lutheran pastor at Reinfelde in Holstein (near Lübeck), was b. at Reinfelde, Aug. 15, 1740. An ancestor, who died as a Lutheran pastor in 1586, had Latinized his name, Claus Paulsen, to Claudius Pauli, and his descendants had adopted Claudius as their surname. Claudius entered the University of Jena, in 1759, as a student of theology, but being troubled with an affectation of the chest, and finding little attraction in the Rationalism of Jena, he turned his attention to law and languages. After a short visit to Copenhagen, as private secretary to a Danish count, he joined in 1768 the staff of the Hamburg News Agency (Adress-Comptoir Nachrichten). Removing to Wandsbeck, near Hamburg, he took in 1771 the editing of the literary portion of the Wandsebek Bote, and contributed a number of his poems to the Göttingen Museum-Almanach. In 1776 he was appointed one of the Commissioners of Agriculture and Manufactures of Hesse-Darmstadt, and in 1777 editor of the official Hesse-Darmstadt newspaper, which he conducted in the same spirit as his Wandsebek Bote. At Darmstadt he became acquainted with Goethe (then living near by at Frankfurt), and with a circle of freethinking philosophers. During a severe illness in 1777, he realised, however, the spiritual emptiness of the life at Darmstadt; the buried seeds sown in his youth sprang up; and he once more became in faith as a little child. Renouncing position and income, he returned to Wandsbeck to re-edit the Bote, which he conducted in a distinctively Christian spirit. In 1788 he was appointed to the Crown Prince of Denmark's editor of the Schleswig-Holstein Bank at Altona, but continued to reside at Wandsbek till 1813, when he was forced by the war to flee, and was unable to return till May, 1814. The next year he removed to the house of his eldest daughter in Hamburg, and d. there Jan. 21, 1815 (Koch, vi. 417-429; Allg. Deutsche Biog., iv. 279-281). His fugitive pieces appeared in two parts. Annaea annae versum poetae; oder sammliche Werke des Wandsebeker Bothen, Wandsbeck and Hamburg, 1774 pt. iii. 1777, iv. 1782, v. 1789, vi. 1797, vll. 1802, viii. 1812). While much of his poetry was distinctively Christian in its spirit, and many of his pieces might rank as popular sacred songs, yet he wrote no hymns designed for use in Church. Three pieces have, however, passed into the German hymn-books, all of which have been tr. into English, viz.:—

I. Das Grab ist leer, das Grab ist leer. [Easter.] 1st pub in pt. viii., 1812, as above, p. 121, in 10 st. Tr. as "The grave is empty now, its prey," by Dr. H. Mills, 1839, printed in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1870.

II. Der Mond ist aufgegangen. [Evening.] His finest hymn, conceived in a child-like, popular spirit—a companion to the more famous hymn, "Nun ruhen alle Wälder" (q. v.). According to tradition it was composed during his residence at Darmstadt, 1764, while walking on the so-called Schnempelweg, a foot-path leading by the river-side up to the Odenwald. 1st pub. in J. H. Voss's Musae-Almanach, Hamburg, 1779, p. 184, and then in pt. iv., 1782, as above, p. 57, in 7 st. of 6 l. Included as No. 432 in the Oldenburger G. B., 1791, as No. 589 in the Württemberg G. B., 1842, and in the Univ. L. S., 1851. The only tr. in C. U. is:—

The silent moon is risen, good and full, as No. 322, in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "The fairest moon hath ascended," in the British Magazine, Nov. 1831, p. 618. (2) "The moon on high
3. We plough the ground, we sow the seed, in 4 st. of 8 l. with chorus, without name of tr., is No. 215 in G. S. Jellice's Coll., 1807. [J. M.]

Clausnitzer, Tobias, b. at Thum, near Annaberg, in Saxony, probably on Feb. 5, 1619. After studying at various Universities, and finally at Leipzig (where he graduated M.A. in 1643), he was appointed, in 1644, chaplain to a Swedish regiment. In that capacity he preached the thanksgiving sermon in St. Thomas's Church, Leipzig, on "Reminiscere" Sunday, 1645. [ii. Sunday in Lent] on the accession of Christina as Queen of Sweden: as also the thanksgiving sermon at the field service held by command of General Wrangel, at Weiden, in the Upper Palatinate, on January 1, 1649, after the conclusion of the Peace of Westphalia. In 1649 he was appointed first pastor at Weiden, and remained there (being also appointed later a member of the Consistory, and inspector of the district) till his death, on May 7, 1684 (Koch, iii. 354, 355; Allg. Deutsche Biog., iv. 297; Bode, p. 33; ms. from Pastor Kljuukhardt, Thum). Three hymns by him are known as follows:

1. Jesus dein betreutes Leiden. [Passion-tide.] 1st pub. in his Passions-Blume, Nürnberg, 1662, a volume containing 12 sermons on the Passion of our Lord. The hymn appears at p. 17, in 7 st. of 6 l. entitled, "Clausnitzer's Passion-Hymn which may be sung with each Musical Station." This form is No. 496 in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746. This hymn has passed into English through a recast, probably by Gensch von Breitenau, beginning, "Herr Jesu, deine Angst und Pein," in 6 st. of 7 l. 1st pub. in the Voluständiges G. B., Plien, 1675, No. 41, repeated as No. 101 in the Univ. L. S., 1851. The only tr. in C. U. is:

Lord Jesus: may Thy grief and pain, a good tr. of st. 1., ii., iii., by A. T. Russell, No. 94 in his Ps. and Hym., 1851.

2. Lieber Jesu wir sind hier. Dith and Dein Wort anzuhören. [Public Worship.] 1st pub. in the Altdorffsches Gesang-Büchlein, 1663, No. 39, in 3 st. of 6 l., as a Sunday Hymn for use before Sermon. It appeared with Clausnitzer's name in the Nürnberg G. B., 1676, No. 391, and has since come into universal use. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1092. Tr. as:

1. Gracious Jesus! in Thy name, a good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 82 in the Dalten Hospital H. Bk., 1848. Included as No. 454 in the ed. 1857, of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Or. ed. 1864, No. 50, considerably altered with st. i. 1, 4, ii. 1–4, from Miss Winkworth, and a doxology added).

2. Gracious Jesus! we are here, a recast of his 1848 tr., made by A. T. Russell for his Ps. & Hym., 1851, No. 19.

4. Blessed Jesus, at Thy word, a full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 2nd
328 CLEFT ARE THE ROCKS

5. Dear Lord, to hear Thee and Thy word, a good tr. by Mrs. L. C. Smith; included as No. 50 in Dr. Stevenson's H. for Ch. & Home, 1875.

Trans. not in C. U.:

(1) "Dearest Jesu! we are here, Thee to hear," by J. C. Jacobi (1770, p. 32; 1772, p. 43; 1732, p. 72, alt.). In the Moravian R. Bk., 1793, No. 12 (1849, No. 3), by C. J. Latrobe. (2) "Dearest Jesu, we are here, for to hear," as No. 423 in pt. 1. of the Moravian R. Bk., 1754. (3) "Here in Thy presence we appear," by J. Swettzer, as No. 10 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789. (4) "Blessed Jesus, we are here," by Miss Manning, 1863, p. 148. (5) "Precious Jesus! here we are," in the British Herald, Nov. 1863, p. 360, repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, p. 419. (6) "Dear Redeemer, we are here," by N. L. Frothingham, 1874, p. 204.

III. Wir glauben all an einen guten Vater, Sohn und heiligen Geist. [Trinity Sunday.] 1st appeared in the Culmbach-lay Bk. G. B., 1668, p. 132, with the initials as C. A. D.' With Clasnutzer's name it was included as No. 572 in the Nürnberg G. B., 1876, in 3 st. of 8 l. In the Bavarian G. B., 1854. Tr. as:

1. We all believe in one true God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, in full by Miss Winkworth in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 75, and thence as No. 115 in the American Meth. Epis. Hymnal, 1878, and the Evang. Assoc. H. Bk., 1882, No. 64.

2. One true God we all confess, by E. Cronewitt, as No. 209 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880. [J. M.]

Cleft are the rocks, the earth doth quake. [Good Friday.] This hymn is sometimes attributed to Bp. Heber, but in error. It appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, pp. 64-5, in 7 st. of 5 l. 1, and as "Anon." Two cents therefrom have come into C. U.:

1. "Cleft are the rocks," &c., in Alfred's Ps. and Hymns, 1844, and his Year of Prayer, 1867. This is composed of st. 1, 3, iv., xiii.

2. "Despised is the Man of grief," in Dr. Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840; and his Hymn of P. and Prayer, 1873, being st. iii., v., and vi. considerably altered.

These verses are usually ascribed to "C. Dawson," but upon what authority we cannot determine. [J. J.]

Clemens, Titus Flavius (Clemens Alexanderinus). St. Clement of Alexandria, was b. possibly at Athens (although on this point there is no certain information) about A.D. 170. His full name, Titus Flavius Clemens, is given by Eusebius (H. E., vi. 13) and Photius (Cod. 111), but of his parentage there is no record. Studious and anxious to satisfy his mind on the highest subjects, he is said to have been a Stoic and Elecetic, and a seeker after truth amongst Greek, Assyrian, Egyptian, and Jewish teachers. He himself commemorates six teachers of eminence under whom he studied the "true tradition of the blessed doctrine of the holy apstles." At Alexandria he came under the teaching of Panæus, and embraced Christianity. Panæus being at the time the master of the Catechetical School in that city. On the retirement of Panæus from the school for missionary work, Clement became its head, cir. 190, and retained the position to 203. His pupils were numerous, and some of them

Clephane, Elizabeth Cecilia, third daughter of Andrew Clephane, Sheriff of Fife, was b. at Edinburgh, June 18, 1830, and d. at Bridgend House, near Mirose, Feb. 19, 1869. Her hymn appeared, almost all for the first time, in the Family Lute. It was under the general title of Breathing on the Border. In publishing the first of these in the Treasury, the late Rev. W. Arnot, of Edinburgh, then editor, thus introduced them:

"These lines express the experiences, the hopes, and the longings of a young Christian lately released. Written on the very edge of this life, with the better land fullly in the view of faith, they seem to us footsteps printed on the sands of Time, where these sands touch the ocean of Eternity. These footprints from the Good Shepherd led through the wilderness into rest, may, with God's blessing, contribute to comfort and direct succeeding pilgrims."

The hymns together with their dates are:

of note, including Origen, and Alexander, afterwards Bp. of Jerusalem. Driven from Alexandria by the persecution under Severus (202-203), he wandered forth; it is not known whither. The last notice we have of him in history is in a letter of congratulation by his old pupil, Alexander, then Bp. of Cappadocia, to the Church of Antioch, on the appointment of Aesopius to the bishopric of that city. This letter, dated 211, seems to have been conveyed to Antioch by Clement. Beyond this nothing is known, either concerning his subsequent life or death, although the latter is sometimes dated A.D. 220.

The works of Clement are ten in all. Of these, the only work with which we have to do is The Tutor, in three books. The first book describes the Tutor, who is the Word Himself, the children whom He trains (Christian men and women), and his method of instruction. The second book contains general instructions as to daily life in eating, drinking, furniture, sleep, &c.; and the third, after an inquiry into the nature of true beauty, goes on to condemn extravagance in dress, &c., both in men and women. Appended to this work, in the printed editions, are two parentes: the first, "A Hymn of the Saviour' ("γένος τον Ιησοῦν Χριστόν, and the second, an address "To the Tutor." (Εἰρων τῶν Μαθητῶν.) The latter, beginning, Στρατιωτός ἤδη, is attributed to Clement in these texts, in which it is found; but it is supposed by some to be of an earlier date; the second is generally regarded as by a later hand (see Greek Hymnody, iii.) For list of use, in which "The Tutor" is given, and for fuller details of Clement see Dict. of Christian Biog., pp. 509-517.

The hymn of the Saviour, the earliest known Christian hymn, has been tre. into English as follows:

Στρατιωτός ἤδη. The earliest tr. is "Shepherd of tender youth." This is by Dr. H. M. Dexter (q. v.). It was written in 1846, first pub. in The Congregationalist [of which Dexter was editor], Dec. 21, 1849, and is in extensive use in the United States. In Gr. It is also given in several collections, including The N. Consum., 1859; Eng. Ps. & Hymns, 1858; the R. T. Society's C. L., &c.

There are also trs. not in C. U., viz.: (1) "Bride of Colts untaught," by Dr. W. L. Alexander, in the American Christian. Lib., vol. iv. p. 343; see also p. 345. (2) "Bride of Colts untaught," by Dr. H. Bonar, in The Sunday at Home, 1879, p. 11. (3) "We belong to Jesus," by the Rev. W. A. Chatfield, in his Songs and Hymns of the Rossett Greek Christian Press, 1876. Mr. Chatfield, following the Anth. Gramm. Chr. Oud., 171, p. 37, begins with the eleventh line: βασιλιάς ἦσαν ἡμοί ἐν πάντας ἡμῶν. "O Thou, the King of Saints, all-conquering Word." His tr. extends to 46 lines. [J. J.]

Clephane, Elizabeth Cecilia.
CLEVELAND, BENJAMIN.

Cleveland, Benjamin. Probably a Baptist, but known only by his Hymns on Different Spiritual Subjects, in Two Parts, whereof the 6th ed. appeared in Norwich, Connecticut, in 1792. He is the author of:

"I could find from day to day." Longing for Christ. This was preserved from oblivion by the Hartford Soc., 1799, and is now in general use as altered and abridged to 4 st. by Nettleton, in his Village Hymns, 1824, No. 145. What is supposed to be the original text of the first four stanzas is found in Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872, No. 576.

Cliford, C. L., a nom de plume of Mrs. Faw Mettme (q. v.).

Clug to the Crucified. H. Bonar. [Abiding in Christ.] Contributed to his Bible H. Bk., 1845, No. 294, in 2 st. of 12 l., and based upon 1. John ii. 28, "Abide in Him." It was repeated in his Hymns of Faith & Hope, 1857, and in several hymn-books, including the H. Comp., &c. In the N. Cong. and Allen's SuppL. Hymns, it is altered to "Abide in Him, abide."

Clug to the Mighty One. H. Bennett. [Trust in Jesus.] This hymn is usually dated 1861. It was given as No. 3 in his Hymnus, by H. B., 1867, in 3 st. of 8 l. It is found in several collections in G. Britain and America, as in Spooner's S. of G. & G., 1872; Hymns & S. of Praise, N. Y. 1874, and others.

Clothed in Majesty sublime. Joanna Baillie. [Ps. xlvii.] This appeared in her Fugitive Verses, 1840, in 5 st. of 4 l., as "Thoughts taken from the 93rd Psalm." In this form it is not in C. U., but as "Arrayed in majesty divine," it is sometimes found.

From the preface to her Fugitive Verses, we learn that she contributed to a proposed revision of the Scottish psalm and Paraphrases. Three hymns which she had heard, "for the Scotch Kirk." This revision never took place. Joanna Baillie was the daughter of a Scotch minister, b. at Bothwell, 1764, and d. at Hampstead, 1851. Her poetical pieces, including Plays, &c., are well known.

Clyne, Norval, m.a., b. of the late Captain John Clyne, of the Royal Scots Regiment.

COELIESTE ORGANUM.

was b. at Ballycastle, Ireland, Feb. 21, 1817, studied and graduated M.A. at the University of Aberdeen (Marischal College), and in 1846 became a member of the Society of Advocates in Aberdeen. He is the author of Ballads from Scottish History, 1863, &c. He was appointed one of the Aberdeen members of the Committee which compiled the Draft Hymn for the Scottish Church, 1857, and contributed to it two hymns, viz., "Chief Shepherd of the chosen fold," and "Jesus! Heaven's eternal King," which he afterwards included in the Aberdeen Hymnal, of which he was the compiler (see Scottish Hymnody, vi. 7). These he have passed into various collections. A Christmas carol by him, "The blasts of chill December sound," originally pub. in The Scottish Witness, has been included, as No. 64, in the Rev. R. B. Chope's Carols for use in Church, 1875.

Cobbe, Frances Power, daughter of Charles Cobbe, D.L., of Newbridge House, Co. Dublin, was b. Dec. 4, 1822. She has written extensively on various subjects. The most important of her publications are:

Miss Cobbe has written only a few poems. Two of these were included in her Italy; Brief Notes on Politics, People, and Places in Italy in 1864 (1864), and a third in a Birthday Address to Lord Shaftesbury.

As "God draws a cloud over each gleaming morn" (Rest in the Lord), it was written in 1859, in reply to some verses by an acquaintance, which were of a sad and depressing tendency. It has passed into several collections, including Horder's Congregational Hymns, 1884, and others.

Cobbin, Ingram, m.a., b. Dec. 1777, and educated for the Congregational Ministry at Hoxton Coll. Entering the ministry in 1802, he was successively pastor of congregations at Banbury, at Holloway, at Putney, and at Credington. He was also for some time Secretary of the Home Miss. Society. He d. at Camberwell, March 10, 1851. His publications were numerous, including Scripture Parables in Verse, 1818; The Village Hymn Book, 1829; and a tr. of Caesar Malan's Hymns [see French Hymnody], 1828. He also contributed the following hymns to the Bapt. New Soc., 1829:

1. As I lay on the wind, and in its flight. Regeneration.
2. Before the Almighty power began. Sovereignty.
3. If 'tis sweet to mingle where. Prayer Meeting.
4. Lord! there is a throne of grace. Prayer.
5. Lord! to Thy benevolent care we owe. Harvest.

Of these hymns, Nos. 3 and 4 are in the most extensive use, and are given in several modern collections, specially amongst the Baptists.

Coeliste organum hodie sonuit in terris. [Christmas.] This Sequence is of unknown authorship and date. Morel, No. 358, quotes this hymn from a 12th cent. ms. at Grau, and holds that it is by a French writer. Morel quotes it from the ms. collection of Brandel, 1507 (St. Gall ms., No. 546), where it is called a sequence, "patris alicius S. Galli conventus.” It is found in two 14th cent. ms., in the Brit. Mus. (Laudsdown, 452, f. 12 b.; Caligula A. xiv. f. 44 b), &c. Every line of the sequence ends in a. In the English Uses a curious but not uncommon diversity prevails. These may be gathered from their reprints, the Sarum Missal, Burntisland, 1861; the York Missal, Surtees Soc., 1872; and the Hereford Missal, 1874. Tr. as:—

“Hark, the heavens’ sweet melody, by E.H. Pinna), written for and 1st pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 134. It was republished in the translator's "Things New & Old," 1884. Another tr. is, "This day celestial melody," by Pearson, 1868.

3. The leaders of the Church of Christ, by G. Phillimore, in the Parish H. Bk., 1863, in 5 double stanzas of 4 l., the last two being original. This was repeated in the 2nd ed. 1874, and in the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871.

Ye princes of the courts on high, by J. D. Chambers, in pt. ii., p. 4, of his Lauds Serm., 1866. The hymn, "Princes of the court on high," was adapted from this tr. by the Editors of the Hymnary, 1872, No. 388.

Translation not in C. U.:

Hail, princes of the host of heaven. J. Chandler, 1847.

3. Coelestis ales nuntiat. Jean Baptiste de Sainteul. [Annonciation.] 1st pub. in his Hymni Sacri et Nori, 1889, p. 2, and again in the same, 1898, p. 15, in 5 st. of 4 l. In 1736 it was included in the revised Paris Brev. Also reprinted in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1855. Tr. as:—

1. The angel spoke [spoke] the word, by E. Caswall—his quoted opening line being, "Supernus ales nuntiat,"—in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 267; and again in his Hymns, &c., 1873, p. 170. This is given in the Appendix to the H. Noted, and in the St. John's Hymnal (Aberdeen), &c.

2. Hail blessed morn, when earth from heaven, by W. Cooke, made for the Hymnary, 1872, and given with the signature “A. C. C.”

Translations not in C. U.:

1. The herald light from Heav'n on golden wing, by J. Williams, 1839.

2. The swift-winged herald from on high, by J. D. Chambers, 1863.

Coelestis aulae panditut. Jean Baptiste de Sainteul. [Virgini.] Given in the Cluniac Brev., 1886, p. Ixv., and in his Hymni Sacri et Nori, 1889, p. 217, and 1898, p. 217, for "Sanctius Virginus." In the revised Paris Brev., 1736, it was appointed for Virgins, not being Martyrs. The text is also given in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1855. Tr. as:—

Open is the stately hall, by I. Williams, 1st in the British Magazine, 1835, vol. viii., p. 518, and again in his Hymns, from the Paris Brev., 1839, p. 321. It has passed into Hymns & Introits, 1852; Kennedy, 1863; the Hymnary, 1872; and the Altar Hymnal, 1884, &c.

In 1736 it was given in the revised Paris Brev., as the hymn for the "Commont of Apostles at Lauda." It is also in the Lyons and other French Breviaries. Text in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1855, and Chandler's Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 87.

Translations in C. U.:

1. Ye captains of a heavenly host, by I. Williams, in his Hymns, tr. from the Paris Brev., 1839, p. 274, and thence into the App. to the H. Noted.

Coelestis O Jerusalem. [All Saints.] This' hymn is usually given as from the revised Paris Brev., 1736. It is not in that edition, but was added, for the Vigil of All Saints Day at Lauda (together with "Pugnate, Christi milites," the hymn at Matins for the same festival), in later editions. It is also given in the Menaion Brev., 1834, and is given in 6 st. of 4 l. in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1855, and in Bigga's Annotated H. A. & M., 1867, p. 212. Its author is unknown.

Translations in C. U.:

1. 0 heavenly Jerusalem, by I. Williams, pub. in his Hymns, tr. from the Paris Brev., 1839, p. 258. This tr., with slight alterations, was given in Mozley's Hymns, 1852; H. A. & M., 1861-75; the People's Hymns, 1867; Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk.; and (in two forms, each opening with the above first line) in the Roman Catholic Hymns, for the Year, N.D., No. 50. In addition to these, it is given in an altered form as, "0 heavenly Queen, High Salem," in Blew's Ch. H. & Tune Book, 1852; as, "0 heavenly Jerusalem, city," &c., in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; and as, "Jerusalem the heavenly," in the Hymnary, 1872.

Coffin, Charles, b. at Buzanay ( Ardennes, in 1670, d. 1749, was principal of the college at Beauvais, 1712 ( succeeding the historian Rollin), and rector of the University of Paris, 1718. He pub. in 1727 some of his Latin poems, for which he was already noted, and in 1736 the bulk of his hymns appeared in the Paris Breviary of that year. In the same year he published them as Hymni Sacri Aureae Carolo Coffin, and in 1735 a complete ed. of his Works was issued in 2 vols. To his Hymni Sacri is prefixed an interesting preface. The whole plan of his hymns, and of the Paris Breviary which he so largely influenced, comes out in his words.

"In his porro scriptiis Hymnis non iam poeeto in- duendum spiritum, quam nimio et tari consensuum esse existimavi. Piacerne ignarum, argumenta convenien- tur, partitiva scripturae Sacrae filosyphos depignamp- quae laudis Ecclesiae cantum numera amaturam."

His hymns are described by a French critic as having less brilliancy than those of San- teuil (q.v.), but more simplicity and mecont. They number 100 in the edition of 1736. Translations into English by J. Chandler, I. Williams and others, are noted under their respective Latin first lines. [W. B. T.]

Coffin, Robert Aston, D.D., b. at Brighton in 1819, and educated at Harrow, and at Christ Church, Oxford. In 1843 he became Vicar of St. Mary Magdalene's, Oxford; but in 1845 he resigned and joined the Church of Rome. In 1853 he became Rector of the R. C. Church of St. Mary's, Clapham; and in 1858 the R. C. Bishop of Southwark. He d. at Teignmouth, April 6, 1885, and in 1892 he pub. —

_Hymns and Verses on Spiritual Subjects: being The Sacred Poetry of St. Ambrose Maria Liguori_ . . .

Translated from the Italian, and added by Robert A. Coffin, Priest of the Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer, Lond., Burns & Lambert. One or two of these _trs._ previously appeared in a small collection which he edited: Hymns for the Confession of the Holy Trinity, Jesus, Mary, and Joseph. Lond., Impr., Dec. 31, 1856.

Some of these _trs._ are in C. U. in Roman Catholic hymn-books for schools and missions. [J. J.]

Coles, Charles, b. May 20, 1793, at Wellow, in Somersetshire, d. 1813. In early life was a clothweaver; joined the Baptist church at Bradford, Willits, and in 1758 began to preach at Whitchurch, Hants. In the year following he became pastor of the Baptist church there, a position he maintained with honour and usefulness for fifty years. He d. Dec. 3, 1813.

He pub. —"A Three-fold Alphabet of New Hymns. 1. On the Public Ministry of the Word. II. On Baptism. III. On the Lord's Supper. To which is added a Supplementary Supplement, Lon., 1792." The title, "Three-fold Alphabet," was given from the fact that the hymns in each of the first three sections are arranged alphabetically, even letter being represented with the exception of C. The total number of hymns, including the Supplement, is 61. These hymns are sober and scriptural in sentiment, but prose in style. Several are found in the earlier collections as Denham, Godfrey, and others; but they have almost died out of use. [W. R. S.]

_Coleridge, Hartley_, eldest s. of S. T. Coleridge, b. 1796, d. 1849, is known to hymnody through some pieces published in his (posthumous) Poems by Hartley Coleridge, with Memoir by his Brother, Lond., 1851, including "Do not afraid to pray: to pray is right" (Prayer); and "In holy books we read how God hath spoken" (Voice of God in Nature).
COLLECTS IN VERSE

56, 58, 59, gives the "Pange lingua" text, together with readings from ms. of the 14th and 15th centuries. Daniel, iv. p. 245, compiled Hosea's text with his own, and added readings from the Aberdeen Breer. [W. A. S.]

In tracing out the tr. of this hymn we follow the Breviary divisions, viz.:

i. Ad Vestas.

Callandemus Magdalenae. A tr. of this part altered from a tr. by G. Moultrie from his Epistles of S. Dorothea, 1870, p. 78, was given in the Antiphoner & Grail, 1880; and again in the Hymner, 1882, No. 119, as "Sing we now the praise of Mary." Another tr. beginning, "Holy Magdalen praying," by J. D. Chambers, is in his Laudis Eterna, pt. iii. 1866, p. 88, but this is not in C. U.

ii. Ad Nocturnum.

Assumption ortinalum. Dr. Neale's tr. of this part of the hymn, on its appearance in the 2nd ed. of his Medieval Hymn, 1882, was prefixed with these words:

"The very elegant hymn, Pange lingua Magdalenae, of English origin, is in the Sarum Breviary, divided into three, for Vestas, Vessas, and Lauds. I translated it for the Hymner not, but it was thought too complex for popular use. The Lauds hymn was accidentally kept, the other translations lost. It is in the Catholic edition of The Day Hours."

Dr. Neale's tr. is, "As the gardener, Him addressing," and is given in the Hymner, 1882, No. 120, and others.

iii. Ad Laudes.

O Maria noni fine. This is given in the Antiphoner & Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882, No. 121, as "Weep not, Mary, weep not longer." It is altered from a tr. by G. Moultrie. In these two works a tr. of the complete hymn may thus be found. [J. J.]

Translations not in C. U.:

1. Sing we now of Mary's trial, joy and sorrow let us tell. G. Moultrie, in his Epistles of St. Dorothea, 1870, p. 78.
2. Sing we now with praiseful voices. D. T. Morgan. 1871-72.

Collects in Verse. [Prayer, Book of Commen.

Collett, William Lloyd, M.A., was b. at Little Hford, Essex, and graduated at Queen's College, Oxford, in 1842. On taking Holy Orders he held several appointments until 1855, when he was preferred to the Vicarage of St. Stephen's, Hammonsmith. Mr. Collett compiled the Appendix added to the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, for use in St. Stephen's Church, 1855, and contributed to that Hymnal in 1855 his Ascensiontide hymn, "Hail, triumphant King of Glory," No. 153, in 3 st. of 8 l. [J. J.]

Collins, Henry, M.A., educated at Oxford, where he graduated about 1834. He was ordained to the Ministry of the Church of England, but in Nov., 1857, he entered the Roman communion, becoming a member of the Cistercian Order in 1860. Author of Life of the Rev. Father Gentili, &c., 1861; The Spirit and Mission of the Cistercian Order, 1866, &c. His hymns, were pub. by him before leaving the Church of England, in his Hymns for Missions, 1854, first pub. at Leeds, and then by Shrington of Oxford, and Messrs. of London. It contains 37 hymns, of which two only were by him:—"Jesus, meek and lowly" (Passiontide), and "Jesus, my Lord, my God, my all." (Love of Jesus desired.) These hymns are in extensive use. [J. J.]

Collins, S. A., the wife of an American Baptist Minister, is the author of several hymns and temperance songs, including "Jesus, gracious One, calleth us to thee" (Invitation), in I. D. Sauter's Soc. & & Sodas, No. 2, 1881.

Collyer, William Bengio, M.D., b. at Blackleath, April 14, 1782, educated at Homerton College, where, when 16 years old, he was enrolled as a student for the ministry. At 22 he began his ministry at Peckham; on Dec. 17, 1801, ordained pastor of a small church consisting of two communicans. From 1814 to 1826 he was also pastor of a Church meeting in Salters' Hall. On June 17, 1817, a new chapel was opened for him at Peckham. There, from the time of his settlement in 1801, he laboured with great success and honour until Dec. 11, 1853, on which day he preached for the last time. He d. Jan. 8, 1854.

Dr. Collyer was eminent in his day as an eloquent Evangelical preacher, when formalism in the Claverton and Arminian in doctrine, prevailed. He was a man of amiable disposition, polished manners, and Christian courtesy; popular with rich and poor alike. He was the author of a series of lectures on Divine Revelation, in seven volumes: Scripture Facts, Prophecies, Miracles, Parables, Doctrines, Duties, Comparisons. Dr. Collyer compiled a hymn-book with the title, Hymns partially collected and partly original, designed as a supplement to Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns, 1812. It was intended at first for the use of his own congregation only, and was to include many hymns composed by himself, to be sung after sermons which he had preached to them, but he was led to alter the plan. It comprises 979 hymns, 6 choruses, and 4 doxologies, arranged in groups according to their authors, and not subjects. Of this number 57 were written by Dr. Collyer, and are for the most part short descriptive or didactic poems, religious or moral essays in verse, and not hymns addressed to the Creator and Redeemer. Some of them are devoid of Christian truth, and are poems of nature or of sentiment. Some of them were written during the hard and sorrowful times of the wars of Bonaparte, and relate to famine and national calamity. Several were prepared for the public meetings of missionary and benevolent societies, which had their origin in his time. He also pub. Services suited to the solemnization of Matrimony, Baptism, &c., 1857, which contained 99 of his hymns, &c.; Hymns for Israel, a Tribute of Love for God's Ancient People, 1848 (47 hymns). In Dr. Leckie's original Hymnal, 1843, there are also 39 of his compositions. Many of his pieces appeared in the Evangelical Magazine, and were also appended to his numerous published sermons. A few of his hymns are still in C. U., including, "Another fading day is gone"; "Assembled at Thy great command"; "O Jesus, in this solemn hour"; "O Thou, the helpless orphan's hope"; "Return, O wanderer, return," and the fine cento, "Great God, what do I see and hear."

Colver, Nathaniel, D.D., an eminent preacher and abolitionist, b. at Orwell, Vermont, 1794, and entered the Baptist Ministry in 1836, becoming successively Pastor at Boston, Detroit, Cincinnati, and Chicago. After the war, in 1865, he founded the Colver Institute at Richmond, Virginia. He d. Sept. 23, 1870. In 1848 he contributed 17 hymns to Barnard's Christian Melodist, Boston, U.S. Of these the best known are:—"Come, Lord, R. Z
COME, ALL YE CHOSEN

COME away to the skies. C. Wesley. [Birthday.] Written on the anniversary of the birth of his wife, Oct. 12. 1755, and 1st pub. in his Hymns. for Families, 1767, No. 163, in 8 st. of 4 l. P. Works, 1668-72, vol. vii. p. 196. In 1780 it was included in the Wes. H. Bk. as No. 478, and has been retained in all subsequent editions of that collection. It is also given in other collections of the Methodist body, and in a few American Hymnals. [J. J.]

COME, blessed Spirit, Source of light. B. Beddome. [Holy Spirit.] This hymn is given in his Sermons, 1816, vol. iv., and in his (posthumous) Hymns, 1817, No. 186, in 4 st. of 4 l., and in each instance it is undated. It is found in extensive use in American hymn-books in two forms: 1st the original, as in Dr. Hattfield's Church H. Bk., 1872 (where it is dated 1770); and 2nd changed from f.m. to a.m. in the Meta. Episcop. Hymns, 1849, "Come, Spirit, source of light." [W. T. B.]

COME, children, hail the Prince of Peace. [Praise to Christ.] An anonymous hymn in 5 st. of 4 l. not traced beyond the S. S. H. Bk., Phila., 1820, i. No. 162, and the Silver St. S. Scholar's Companion (7th ed.), 1821. From the time of its insertion, in 1813, in Bateman's Sacred Melodies for Children, it has been growing in favour both in England and America. In the latter it is sometimes found, as in the Baltimore S. S. H. Bk., 1843, as "Come, let us praise the Prince of Peace," the order of the st. being changed and the hymn altered. It is an imitation of "All hail the power of Jesus' Name." [J. J.] Come, children, join the angelic [heavenly] throng. [Praise to Christ.] An imitation by an unknown writer of "All hail the power of Jesus' name," given in the Leeds S. S. H. Bk., 1862, and in the Leeds S. S. U. H. Bk., 1864; and also as "Come, children, join the heavenly throng," in the Silver Street S. S. Companion, 1880, in 4 st. of 4 l. [J. J.]

COME, children, join to sing. C. H. Bateman. [Praise to Christ.] 1st pub. in his Sacred Melodies for Children, 1843, No. 4, in 5 st. of 5 l. and the refrain; again in later editions, and in his Children's Hymnal, 1872. It is given in several collections in G. Britain and Canada, and is one of the most popular of the author's hymns. [J. J.]

COME, dearest Lord, descend and dwell. I. Watts. [Whitmultide.] Given in the enlarged ed. of his Hymns. and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 195, in 5 st. of 4 l. In 1733 G. Whitefield included it in his Coll. This was followed by R. Conyers in his Coll., 1774, and others, until the use has become extensive both in G. Britain and America. In many cases, especially in America, the term "dearest," so objectionable to many, is changed to, "Come, gracious Lord," &c. [J. J.]

COME, desire of nations, come: Hasten, Lord, &c. C. Wesley. [Second Advent.] Written as one of the Hymns Occasioned by the Earthquake, March 8, 1750, and 1st pub. in a tract bearing that title during the same year.
COME, DIVINE IMMANUEL

The unusual visitation of the earthquake created a great sensation in London and the neighbourhood, and the excitement of the people did much to set forth the calm faith, and to bring out the sterling worth of the Wesleyans. The feelings of both were embodied in the hymns which C. Wesley wrote on the occasion. This particular hymn was included in J. Wesley's Select Hymns, 1761, and other works, and in the Wes. H. Bk., as one of the "Additional Hymns," c. 1800. It is retained in the new ed., 1873, and is found in several collections in G. Britain and America. Orig. text in P. Works, 1848-72, vol. vi. p. 48. [J. J.]

Come, every pious heart. S. Stennett. [Praise to Christ.] Published in A Collection of Hys. for the Use of Christians of all Denominations, London, 1782, and again in Rippon's Selection, 1787, No. 489, in 6 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "A Song of Praise to Christ." It is given in modern collections it is usually composed of st. ii., iii., iv., and v., as in the Bap. Ps. and Hys., 1858-60, No. 269, where, however, it is dated 1832 in error. Its use in America is very extensive. In the Church & S. H. Bk., 1879, it is given as, "Come, ye youthful heart," and in a few collections as "Come, ye who love the Lord, And feel His," &c., including Dr. Walker's Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1853, and others. [J. J.]

Come, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Honour the means, &c. C. Wesley. [Adult Baptism.] 1st pub. in Hys. & S. Poems, 1749, vol. ii., No. 181, in 6 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1848-72, vol. vi. p. 388). In 1753, it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 461, and the revised ed., 1757, No. 476. It is in several collections in G. Britain and America, as the Susquehanna, 1855; the Amer. Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878, &c. In some American hymn-books, as Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, st. iii., vi., are given slightly altered as "Father, in these reveal Thy Son." [J. J.]

Come, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, One God, &c. C. Wesley. [For Spiritual Peace.] 1st pub. in his Short Hymns, &c., 1762. In the form in which it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1760, No. 213, and continued in later editions, it embodied Nos. 200, 201, and 202 of the Short Hymns, these being based on Num. vii. 44, 5 (P. Vers., 1803-1872, vol. iv. p. 65). From this, st. 1, No. 661 in Snepp's S. of G. & G., 1872, "Eternal Sun of Righteousness," is taken. It is composed of st. III., vi., slightly altered. [J. J.]

Come, happy children, come and raise. Dorothy A. Thrupp. [Child's Song of Praise.] Appeared in Hys. for the Young, c. 1830 (5th ed. 1836), in 6 st. of 4 l.

In 1848 it appeared again in Dr. Miller's Ps. & Hys., 1848, and others, as, "Come, Christian children, come and raise." This text, with slight alterations, the omission of st. vi., and the passing on of st. ii. (rewritten) to the end as st. v., was repeated in Church Hymns, 1871, No. 367. In the Meth. Free Church S. S. H. Bk., 1868, Miss Thrupp's text is again altered as "Come, let the young unite and raise." The original hymn is sometimes said to have appeared in Mrs. H. Mayo's Sel. of Hys., &c., 1838, but this is an error. [W. T. B.]

Come, heavenly love, inspire my song. Anne Steele. [Redeeming Love.] This poem of 39 st. of 4 l. appeared in her Hys. for Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. 1. p. 7 (2nd ed., 1780, vol. 1. p. 7), and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863, p. 4. From the poem the following stanzas are in C. U.:

1. Come, heavenly love, inspire my song. This was given in the Bristol Coll. of Ash and Evans, 1769, No. 129; repeated by R. Conyers, in his Coll., 1772, and again by others to modern hymnals. It is composed of st. 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 37, and 39.

2. Come, Holy Ghost, inspire our songs. This was given in the Utrecht Sel., 1805; and repeated in Cotterill's Sel., 1810-19, and from thence has passed into a few collections in G. Britain and America. It is composed of st. 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, slightly altered from the original, and an added stanza probably by Cotterill.

3. Come, heavenly Dove, inspire my song. This is in the Amer. Evangelical Hym., by Hall and Lasar, N. Y., 1880, st. 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 33, 37, and 39 being included therein.

4. Come, Holy Spirit, guide my song. This is composed of st. i., ii., vii., and xxxvii., slightly altered. It is No. 63 in Windle's Coll.

5. The Saviour, 0 what endless charms. This cento in Snepp's S. of G. & G., 1872, No. 174, is composed of st. 2, 3, 8, 37, and 39. [J. J.]

Come, Holy Ghost, descend from high. [Holy Baptism.] This cento, in 2 st. of 4 l., appeared in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 99. It is composed of st. i. of C. Wesley's "Come Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Honour the means," &c., as above, but slightly altered; and st. ii. probably by Toplady. This was repeated in T. Beck's (q. v.) Hymns, &c., 1782. In Bickersteth's Christian Postludes, 1823, it is given in error as C. Beck's composing, and this error is repeated in later collections. [J. J.]

Come, Holy Ghost, my soul inspire; Spirit of, &c. R. Mant. [Whitewash.] Appeared in his Holydays of the Church, &c., vol. 1., 1828, pp. 317-318, in 6 st. of 4 l. at the close of a Meditation and Collect, which follows an account of the life and work of St. Barnabas. In 1837 it was transferred to his
COME, HOLY SPIRIT

Ancient Hys. from the Rom. Brev., &c., as one of his "Original Hymns," No. 105, without alteration, and entitled, "Hymn to the Comforter for Faith, Hope, and Charity." It is also included in Bp. Mant's "Ancient Hymns," &c., 1871. In Kennedy, 1865, No. 1180, the hymn, "Holy Ghost, my soul inspire," is this hymn in a slightly altered form. Another arrangement is:—"Holy Spirit, in my [our] breast," which was given in the enlarged ed. of Morrell & How's Ps. & Hymns, 1864, No. 119.

Come, Holy Spirit, come, Let Thy bright beams, &c. J. Hart. [Whitenside.] Contributed to his Hys. composed on Various Subjects, 1759, No. 4, in 9 st. of 4 l., and headed, "To the Holy Ghost." One of the earliest to adopt it was Toplady, in his Ps. & Hym., 1776, No. 237, with alterations which have come down to modern collections. This text is that usually adopted in Ch. of England hymnals. It is easily recognized by st. 1., ll. 5, 4, which read:—

"Dispel the sorrow from our minds, The darkness from our eyes," instead of—

"Dispel the darkness from our minds, And open all our eyes," as in the original. Most of the American collections follow Toplady's text with slight variations, and as in the Bap. Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865-72, &c. The abbreviated text in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873; Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872; Stowell's Ps. & Hym., 1831 and 1877, and others, are from the original. No. 151, in the Mitre, 1836, is a cento, st. i. ii. being from this hymn, and st. iv. from C. Wesley's "Spirit of faith, come down," in each case with alteration. Full orig. text in Lyra Brit. 1867, p. 273. [J. J.]

Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove, My sinful maladies remove. S. Browne. [Whitenside.] Few hymns in the English language have been subjected to so many alterations and changes as this, which according to the author's title, concerns "The soul giving itself up to the Conduct and Influence of the Holy Spirit." An enumeration of all these changes would tend to increase rather than to lessen the complications which surround the various texts in modern hymnals. The most that can be done will be to give the original text, and then to indicate the sources of the important changes in C. U.

1. The hymn appeared in S. Browne's Hys. & Spiritual Songs, 1720, Bk. i., No. 131, pp. 173, 174, in 7 st. of 4 l., as follows:—

"Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove, My sinful maladies remove; Be thou my light, be thou my guide, O'er every thought and step preside."

"The light of truth to me display, That I may know and choose my way; Plant holy fear within mine heart, That I from God may never depart."

"Conduct me safe, conduct me far From every sin and hurtful snare; Lead me to God, my final rest, In His enjoyment to be blest."

"Lead me to Christ, the living way, Nor let me from His pastures stray, Lead me to heaven, the seat of bliss, Where pleasure in perfection is."

COME, HOLY SPIRIT

"Lead me to holiness, the road That I must take to dwell with God; Lead to Thy word, that rules must give, And sure directions how to live."

"Lead me to means of grace, where I May own my wants, and seek supply; Lead to Thyself, the spring from whence To fetch all quick'ning influence."

"Thus I, conducted still by Thee, Of God a child beloved shall be; Here to His family pertain, Hereafter with Him ever reign."}

2. In 1769 Ash and Evans pub. in their Bristol Coll., as No. 161, the following version:

"Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove, With light and comfort from above, Be Thou our Guardian, Thou our Guide, O'er every Thought and Step preside."

"Conduct us safe, conduct us far From every sin and hurtful snare; Lead to Thy Word that Rules must give, And teach us Lessons how to live."

"The Light of Truth to us display, And make us know and choose Thy Way; Plant holy Fear in every Heart, That we from God may never depart."

"Lead us to Holiness, the Road, That we must take to dwell with God; Lead us to Christ, the living Way, Nor let us from His pastures stray."

"Lead us to God, our final Rest, In His enjoyment to be blest; Lead us to Heaven, the Seat of Bliss, Where Pleasure in Perfection is."

3. This version was included in Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 2nd ed., edited by Walter Row, 1872, No. 335, with the following alterations:

st. 1., 1. 1., "Come gracious Spirit, heavenly Dove," st. 11., ll. 1-3, Lead to Thy word; for that must give.

This version was again repeated with minor changes, including "precepts" for "pastures," in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, and others.

4. The next change of importance came with Hall's Mitre, 1836, No. 79, in which the last stanza reads:—

"Lead us to God, our only rest, To be with Him for ever blest; Lead us to heaven that we may share, Fulness of joy for ever there."

5. In Mercer, 1864, this verse is transposed as:—

"Lead us to heaven, that we may share, Fulness of joy for ever there; Lead us to God, our final rest, To be with Him for ever blest."

6. On comparing the texts of modern collections with these details we find that (1) the original is represented in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise Hymnal, 1867; and Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872; (2) the Ash & Evans text as in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858-80, with "gracious," for "holy"; (3) the interwoven text of Browne's Ash & Evans, Toplady, and Hall, as in the H. Comp., with "final rest," for "only rest;" (4) the Browne, Ash & Evans, Toplady, Cotterill, and Mercer text, Oxford ed. of Mercer, No. 228; and, through the same source, the Hymnary, 1872, and H. A. & M., 1875, &c. The American collections follow in the same tracks, and are generally reproductions of the English text. Two centers remain to be noticed, that in Thring's Coll., 1882, where st. vi. of the original is rewritten by the editor, and the arrangement, "Come gracious Spirit, gift of love," which is found in the S. S. Union H. Bk., and other collections for children. [J. J.]
COME, HOLY SPIRIT

COME, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove, With all Thy, &c. J. Watts. [Whitfield.] 1st pub. in his Hymns & Songs, 1707, (id. 1709, Bk. ii., No. 34, in 5 st. of 4 l.), and entitled, "Breathing after the Holy Spirit: or, Ferocity of Devotion desired." The changes which have been made in this hymn are very numerous. About twenty texts are now in C. U., each differing from the other in some detail, and all joining in reiterating certain expressions in the original. The original reads:

"Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove, With all Thy quickening pow'r, Kindle a flame of sacred love In these cold hearts of ours."

"Look how we grovel here below, Fond of these trifling toys. Our souls can neither fly nor go To reach eternal joys.

"In vain we tune our formal songs, In vain we strive to rise Hosannas languish on our tongues, And our devotion dies."

"Dear Lord! and shall we ever live At this poor dying rate, Our love so faint, so cold to Thee, And Thine to us so great?"

"Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove, With all Thy quickening pow'r, Come, shed abroad a Saviour's love, And that shall kindle ours." The changes which have been made in this text have been mainly directed against st. ii. and iv. J. Wesley met the difficulty in his Coll. of Ps. and Hymns, 1743, by omitting st. ii. and making st. iv. 1, 1, to read, "And shall we then for ever live." This text was given in the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk. 1839; the revised ed., 1875, and others. The reading of st. ii., ll. 3, 4, which has been received with the greatest favour is:

"Our souls, how heavily they go To reach eternal joys."

This was given in G. Whitley's Coll., 1753, No. 99, and repeated by M. Madan, 1760; Toplady, 1776; Bickersteth, 1833, and thus to modern collections. The most acceptable reading of st. iv., ll. 1, 2, was given in Bickersteth's Christ. Psalmody, 1833. The numerous minor changes in the text of this hymn are of note. The rewritten forms of the text, one by Cotterill, in his Sel., 1819, and the second by Hall or Osler, in the Mitre, 1836, are both failures. The American collections vary in their readings in common with those of the British. In its various forms the use of this hymn is extensive.

COME, Immortal King of Glory. T. Oliver. [Advent—Judgment.] One form of this hymn, in 29 st. of 6 l., was pub. by the author as a pamphlet, and printed by Griffith Wright, at Leeds, but undated. A second form in 36 st. with parallel Scripture references, was printed at Bristol, and dated 1763. The two forms were reprinted by D. Sedgwick in his reprint of Oliver's Hymns, 1808. Two centos have been compiled from the second form of the hymn as follows:

1. Come, Lord Jesus, O come quickly. This is No. 236 in Snell's Song of G. & C., 1872, and is composed of st. 9, 20, 21, 29, 22, and 35.

2. Le: He comes with clouds descending: Hark! the trump. &c. This was given in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862, and is composed of st. 4, 5, 7, 20, 21, 34, 27, 29, 23, and 35.

These centos are usually dated 1757. This date is uncertain with regard to the first form of the hymn, and certainly wrong as applied to the second form, from which they are taken. [See Le He comes. &c.] W. T. B.

COME in, thou bless'd of the Lord; Enter in Jesus, &c. T. Kelly. [Reception of a Member.] Appeared in Kelly's Appx. of original hymns, added to A Coll. of Ps. & Hymns, Dublin, 1802, No. 268, in 5 st. of 4 l., as "Come on, thou bless'd," &c. In his Hymns, &c., 1804, and later eds, it is changed to "Come in," &c. Of the 5 stanzas, 4 were repeated by Montgomery in his Christ. Psalmist, 1823, as an anonymous hymn. It has failed to attain a position in G. Britain, but in America it is given in several hymnals, including Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865–72, and others. It is sometimes given as, "Come in, thou bless'd of the Lord, O come," &c.

COME in, thou bless'd of the Lord; Stranger nor foe, &c. J. Montgomery. [Reception of a Member.] In the m. ms. this hymn is dated "July 1, 1834." It was pub. in Conder's Cong. H. Bk., 1836, No. 471, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1833, No. 150. Its popularity is greater in America than in G. Britain. [J. J.]

COME, kingdom of our God. J. Johns. [Prayer for the increase of Spiritual Life.] Contributed to Beard's Manchester Unitarian Coll., 1837, No. 203, in 5 st. of 4 l. and headed, "Prayer for the kingdom of God." In 1840 it was rep. in Dr. Martineau's Hymns, &c., and subsequently in numerous Unitarian and other collections in G. Britain and America. It is sometimes used on behalf of Missions. The fifth stanza, which is the finest in the hymn, is usually omitted in the American collections. Orig. text in Dr. Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, and the American Hymns and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, with, in the latter, st. v., l. 2, "raise the," for "raise Thy glorious throne." [J. J.]

COME, labour on! Who dares, &c. Jane Borthwick. [Labour for Christ.] This hymn was given in Miss Borthwick's Thoughts for Thoughtful Hours, 1839, in 7 st. of 6 l., but in the new ed. of 1863, p. 48, it was rearranged as 7 st. of 5 l., and in this form it has come into C. U. in many hymnals, including Thring, the H. Comp., Snell, &c., and a few American collections. [J. J.]

COME, let our voices join to raise. J. Watts. [Ps. v. xii.] His mag. version of the 98th Ps., given in his Ps. of David, &c., 1719, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Canaan lost thro' Unbelief; or, a Warning to declining Sinners." Its use in G. Britain is limited. In America it is found in a large number of hymnals. Sometimes, as in the Church Pastoral, Boston, 1864, it begins with st. ii. leave, "Come, let our souls address the Lord." [J. J.]

COME, let us adore the Lord's gracious hand. J. Cennick. [Morning.] Appeared in his Sacred Hymns, &c., 1745, Ps. ii., No. 20, in 4 st. of 8 l. In 1753 it was Come, let us search [Christian Fellowship.]

This is No. 161, in vol. ii. of the Hymns and Sacred Songs, 1749. It was included in the Ps. & Hymns of the Church of England, and is very popular. The text was adopted by Whitefield in his Funeral Hymns, 1750, and many others amongst the older compilers, and is retained by the greater number of modern editors, both in G. Britain and America. The hymn, in whole, or in part, has been rendered into many languages, including one in Latin, "Venite, sancti, nostra lacta carmina," in Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Lat. 1871.

Come, let us join our friends above.

C. Wesley. [Christian Fellowship.]

The hymn is sometimes misquoted as "Come, let us search our hearts and try," but it was written as "Come, let us search our hearts and try." It was published in his Sermons, 1724, and in Watts's Psalms, 1830, No. 171. Oliver made further alterations in the text for his

The use of the hymn, whether in full or in an abbreviated form, has extended to all English-speaking countries. Orig. text in F. Works 1686-72, vol. vi. p. 219. The text was adopted by Madan, 1776, by Toplady, and later on by others, in the Church of England; by J. Wesley in the Wes. H. Bk. 1780, No. 45, and by Nonconformists generally.

Come, let us ascend. Our journey pursues. Roll round, &c. C. Wesley. [Christian Fellowship.]

This is No. 91, in vol. ii. of the Hymns and Sacred Songs, 1749, in 6 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1686-72, vol. vi. p. 547.) M. Madan gave 6 stanzas in his Coll., 1760; Toplady repeated the same in his Ps. & Hymns, 1776, and this text was adopted by the Wesleyan Bk. 1780, No. 486, and is retained in the revised ed., 1875, No. 499. Both this text and that of Madan, are in C. U. Interesting notes on the spiritual benefits conferred on persons by this hymn, are given in Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883.

Come, let us join our cheerful songs.

I. Watts. [Christian Fellowship.]

This is one of the most widely known and highly esteemed of Watts's compositions. It has no special history beyond the fact that it appeared in his Hymns and Sacred Songs, 1707, and the enlarged ed. 1709, Bk. ii., No. 62, in 5 st. of 4 l., and in his Collected Works, 1715, No. 177, in 6 st. of 4 l., and was included in the Ps. & Hymns of the Church of England, and is retained by the greater number of modern editors, both in G. Britain and America. The hymn, in whole, or in part, has been rendered into many languages, including one in Latin, "Venite, sancti, nostra lacta carmina," in Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Lat. 1871.

Come, let us join our friends above.

C. Wesley. [Christian Fellowship.]

This is No. 115, in vol. ii. of the Hymns and Sacred Songs, 1709, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "A Funeral Hymn." Although it was not included in the Wes. H. Bk. until the addition of the Supp. in 1830, it had been in C. U. outside of Methodist denominations for many years before. The hymn text was adopted by Whitehead, 1753; Madan, 1750; De Courcy, 1767; Toplady, 1776, and many others amongst the older compilers, and is retained by the greater number of modern editors, both in G. Britain and America. The hymn, in whole, or in part, has been rendered into many languages, including one in Latin, "Venite, sancti, nostra lacta carmina," in Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Lat. 1871.

Come, let us join our friends above.

C. Wesley. [Christian Fellowship.]

This is No. 108, Bk. ii., of his Hymns and Sacred Songs, 1709, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "A Funeral Hymn." Although it was not included in the Wes. H. Bk. until the addition of the Supp. in 1830, it had been in C. U. outside of Methodism for many years before. It was adopted by Whitehead, 1753; Madan, 1750; De Courcy, 1767; Toplady, 1776, and many others amongst the older compilers, and is retained by the greater number of modern editors, both in G. Britain and America. The hymn, in whole, or in part, has been rendered into many languages, including one in Latin, "Venite, sancti, nostra lacta carmina," in Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Lat. 1871.
COME, LET US SING

Come, let us sing the song of songs.
J. Montgomery. [Praise.] According to the act. This hymn was written in 1841. It was pub. in his Original Hymns, 1833, No. 88, in 7 st. of 4 l. Although but little known in G. Brit. it is somewhat extensively used in America. As altered in 1867, it has passed into the Churchman's Altar Manual, 1882, and others. [J. J.]

COME, LET US SING

COME, O THOU ALL

COME, little children, learn to praise.
[Praise to God.] Appeared in R. Hill's Coll. of Hymns for S. Schools, 1808, in 6 st. of 4 l. In this form it is unknown to the modern hymnals, but as "Come, children, learn your God to praise," it is given in several, including the S. S. U. Coll. and others. Possibly the hymn is by R. Hill, but we have no evidence to that effect. [W. T. B.]

COME, Lord, and tarry not.
H. Bonar. [Second Advent desired.] Printed in May, 1846, at the end of one of the Kelso Tracts, and again in his Hymns of Faith and Hope, 1857. It is in 4 st. of 4 l. With the heading "Come, Lord," and the motto from St. Augustine, "Sensus mundus." Centos, varying in length and construction, but all beginning with st. 1., are in extensive use in America. In G. Brit. it is less popular. A cento, beginning with st. 1., "Come, Lord; Thy saints for Thee," is also given in Kennedy, 1863, No. 22. [J. J.]

COME, Lord, and warm each languid heart.
Anne Steele. [Joys of Heaven.] 1st pub. in her Poems, chiefly Devotional, &c., 1760, vol. 1, p. 34; (2d ed., 1780, vol. 1, p. 34); and in Sedgwick's rev. of her Hymns, 1803, p. 21. In the Ash & Evans Bristol Coll., 1769, 8 st. were given as No. 402, and were thus introduced into the Nonconformist hymnals. R. Conyers (Ps. & Hymns, 2nd ed., 1754, No. 390) and W. Row, through Topsham's Ps. & Hymns, 2nd ed., 1787, No. 411, gave other centos to the Church of England. Centos, all beginning with st. 1. and usually compiled from one of those collections, are found in a great number of hymnals both in G. Brit. and America. [J. J.]

COME, magnify the Saviour's love.
E. Oder. [Psalms. 1.] 1st pub. in Hall's Mitre, 1836, No. 95, and again in the author's Church and King, March, 1837 (p. 84), where it is given after a prose meditation on "Christ exalted through humiliation and suffering," being the theme for the Sunday next before Easter. From the Mitre it has passed into several collections. The Mitre text, which differs somewhat from Church and King, is generally adopted.

COME, mild and holy Dove.
J. Austin. [Whitsuntide.] 1st pub. in 19 st. of 4 l. in his Devotions in the Ancient Way of Officers, 1608 (for Laud's Holy Dove) and in the adaptations of the same by Dorrington and Hickes. No. 140 in the Anglican Hymn, 1808, is a cento from this hymn in 4 st. [W. T. B.]

COME, my soul, thy suit prepare.
J. Newton. [Prayer.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1774, Book 1, No. 31, in 7 st. of 4 l., and in later editions of the same. It was included in some of the older collections, and is still in extensive use in G. Brit. and America, sometimes in full, and again in an abbreviated form. Orig. text as above, and in Lyra Brit., 1867.

COME, O Thou all victorious Lord.
C. Wesley. [Lent.] Written during a visit to Portland, June, 1746 (see the author's Journal and Meth. Mag., May, 1869), where the occupation of the quartermen suggested the line of thought and the appeal:

"Strike with the hammer of thy word,
And break these hearts of stone."
Come, O Thou Traveller. unknown. C. Wesley. [Prayer.] This poem was 1st pub. in Hymns & Poems, 1742, in 14 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Wrestling Jacob." It is based on the incident in Jacob's life as recorded in Gen. xxxii. 24-32. Although a poem of great power and finish, it is unsuited to Public Worship. It received the most unqualified praise from J. Watts, who, J. Wesley said, did not scruple to say, "that single poem, Wrestling Jacob, was worth all the verses he himself had written" (Minutes of Conference, 1788); and J. Montgomery wrote of it as:—

"Among C. Wesley's highest achievements may be recorded, "Come, O Thou Traveller unknown," &c., p. 43, in which, with consummate art, he has carried on the action of a lyrical drama; every turn in the conflict with the mysterious being against whom he wrestles all night, being marked with precision by the varying language of the speaker, accompanied by intense, increasing interest, till the rapturous moment of discovery, when he prevails, and exclaims, 'I know Thee, Saviour, Who Thou art.'" (Christ. Pulpit, 1825, xiii.-iv.)

Notwithstanding this high commendation, and of it as a poem it is every way worthy, its unsuitability for congregational purposes is strikingly seen in the fact that it is seldom found in any hymnal, either old or new, except those of the Methodist denominations.

In 1780 it was given, with the omission of st. v. and vii. in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 136, in two parts. Pt. ii. being, "Yield to me now, for I am weak." These parts were subsequently col. 1797) numbered as separate hymns, and as such are Nos. 140 and 141 in the revised ed. 1785. In the Hymns for the use of the Mth. Episco. Ch., N. Y. 1849, it is broken up into four parts, each bearing a number as a separate hymn, as:—"Come, O Thou Traveller unknown!"; "Wilt Thou not yet to me reveal?"; "Yield to me now, for I am weak!"; and "The Sun of Righteousness on me." In their new Hymnal, 1878, which has taken the place of the 1819 book, the division, "Wilt Thou," &c., is included in the first, "Come, Thou, &c.

There is also a cento from this poem in the N. Conn. No. 1683, beginning, "O Lord, my God, to me reveal." Orig. text in P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 173. [J. J.]

Come, on, companions of our way. J. Montgomery. [Life a Pilgrimage.] Written for the Sheffield Red Hill S. S. Anniversary and printed in a broadsheet, March 1829. [Stanzas] in 4 st. of 6 l. In 1853 it was included in his Original Hymns, No. 153. It is the Scottish Evang. Union Hym., 1878. [J. J.]

Come, on, my partners in distress. C. Wesley. [Heaven anticipated.] This hymn has interwoven itself into the personal spiritual history of Methodists probably more completely than any other hymn by C. Wesley. The instances given in Stevenson's Methodist H. Book Notes, 1883, p. 235, and the Index, although numerous and interesting, but very inadequately represents the body of his productions. Its history is simple. It appeared in the Hymns and S. Poems, 1749, in 8 st. of 6 l.; in M. Madaan's Coll., 1760, in 5 st.; and again in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, with the omission of st. iii., as No. 324. The last form of the text has passed into numerous hymnals in all English-speaking countries. Two centos from the hymn are also in C. U., both commencing with st. ii. — "Beyond the bounds of time and space." The first is in the Wesley H. Bk., 1853, No. 638, and others, and the second in Mercer, Oxford ed. 1864-71, No. 104. Orig. text. P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 168. [J. J.]

Come, our indulgent Saviour, come. F. Doddridge. [Easter.] 1st pub. in J. Orton's ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1756, No. 245, in a st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Disciple's Joy at Christ's appearance to them after the Resurrection." It was also given in J. D. Humphrey's ed. of the same, 1839. The form in which it is usually known is, "Come, condescending Saviour, come;" This was given in the Bristol Coll. of Ash Evans, 1869, No. 211. It was repeated in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1853, and other collections, and was thus handed down to the modern hymnals. In Dr. Alexander's Augustine H. Bk., 1819-65, st. i., iii., and iv. are given as, "Come, great and gracious Saviour, come"; and in the Bpt. Hymnal, 1879, st. iv. and v. as, "Enter our hearts, Redeemer blest." [J. J.]

Come, pure hearts, in sweetest measures. B. Campbell. [Feasts of Evangelists.] This is a tr. of a Latin cento. Campbell's original ms. is headed "Psallat corde mundo." Paraphrase upon three stanzas of Adam of St. Victor's two hymns, "De SS. Evangelists." The cento is thus composed:—

St. i. Psallat corde mundo. "Come, pure hearts, in sweetest measures." This was taken from the text of Gliscedes, as in Trench's Lit. Poetry, 1849, and not from the original, which reads, "Psalms corde lastabant." St. ii. Paradisi his rigatur. "See the rivers four that gush forth," is st. 9 of "Jucundare piece Betsis," as in Daniei, i. p. 84.

St. iii. Horum rivo debritias. "Here our hearts inebriated," is st. 8 of "Jucundare," &c., as above.

This paraphrase was pub. in his St. Andrews Hymns & Anthems, 1850, p. 96. It was repeated with slight alterations in Rosson's Hymns & Anthems, 1851, and one or two others, but its use was limited until 1861, when the compilers of Hymns A. & M. adopted st. i., ii. from Campbell, and replaced st. iii. with one of their own. In the Hymnals, st. i., ii., are from Campbell, slightly altered, and st. iv. is new. The text of Lowles Dominis, N. Y., 1884, is from Hymns A. & M. Full Latin text are:
COME, SEE THE PLACE
in Gantier, li., 1859; Wrangham, iii., 1883 with tr.]; Daniel, ii. 84–88. [J. J.]

COME, see the place where Jesus lay, For he hath left, &c. J. Montgomery.
[Easter.] Written for “The Seventh Anniversary of the Sheffield and Attercliffe Missionary Union in aid of the London Missionary Society,” and first sung in public in Howl-street Independent Chapel, Sheffield, on Easter Sunday, April 2nd, 1820. It was printed on a flyleaf for use at these services, and signed “J. M.” In 1825 it was included, after careful revision, by Montgomery in his Christ. Psalmist, No. 407, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, “The power of Christ’s Resurrection,” No. 495, and again in Original Hymns, 1853, No. 127. Its use is extensive, the revised text of 1825–53 being that which is usually followed. [J. J.]

COME, sinners, to the gospel feast. Let every soul, &c. C. Wesley. [Invitation.] 1st pub. in his Hymns for those who seek and those who have Redemption, &c., 1747, in 21 st. of 4 l., and entitled “The Great Supper” (P. Works, 1688–72, vol. iv. p. 274). Two centuries, both beginning with st. i., are in C. U.:—(1) which was included in M. Madan’s Coll., 1760, No. 22, in 8 st., and is the source of the text as given in the Church of England hymnals; and (2) the Wes. H. Bk. cento given in that vol., 1780, and repeated in various Nonconformist collections. A cento for Holy Communion is also in the earliest eds. of the Lady Huntington Coll., beginning:—

Come, sinners, to the gospel feast,
Jesus invites you for his guest.

In late eds. of the same Coll. it begins “Come, sinner,” &c. It is compiled from st. i., xii., xiii., xiv., xvi. A hymn beginning:—

Come, sinners, to the gospel feast;
O come without delay.

is included in many American collections, as Dr. Hatfield’s Church H. Bk., 1872; the Bap. Praise Bk., 1871, &c. It has been traced to the Bap. Psalmist of Stow & Smith, 1813, No. 418. In some of those collections it is given for that it is the same cento as that in the Lady Huntington Coll. It has, however, nothing in common with that cento, nor with Wesley’s original, except the first line. In st. i., l. 3 reads, “For there is room in Jesus’ breast,” and then the remaining four stanzas remain almost exactly as in the text of the original edition. The expression “There’s room,” a style of composition altogether foreign to C. Wesley’s usual method. It is Anon., 1843. [J. J.]

COME, then, my God, the promise seal. C. Wesley. [Prayer.] This is the second of two hymns on St. Mark, xi. 21.

What things soever ye desire when ye pray,” &c., which appeared in his Short Hymns, &c., 1762, vol. i., No. 314, in 3 st. of 8 l., and again in the P. Works, 1688–72, vol. i. p. 53. In 1780 it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 405, as “Come, my God, the promise seal,” and in this form has passed into various collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

COME, Thou Conqueror of the nations. C. Wesley. [Hymns.] From his Hymns on the Expected Invasion, 1759, when

COME, Thou Conqueror

P. Doddridge. [Witamontiae.] This hymn is unattributed to J. Wesley, where it begins, “Oh come, celestial Spirit, come.” It was pub. in the altered form by J. Orton, in Doddridge’s posthumous Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 288, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys’ ed. of the same, 1839. In the Bap. Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, st. iv. is omitted.

COME, Thou Conqueror of the nations.
it was feared that an attack on England would be made by the French. The tract was pub. in 1759, this hymn being No. 8, in 8 st. of 6 l. In 1830 it was included, with the omission of st. v., in the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk. and is retained in the ed. of 1875. It is also found in other collections, including Kennedy, 1823, No. 1777, where it is given as "Come, great Conqueror of the nations," in 5 st., the abbreviation being made by the omission of st. iii. and iv. Orig. text, P. Works 1865-72, vol. iv. p. 160. [J. J.]

Come, Thou desire of all Thy saints. Anne Steele. [Public Worship.] This hymn appeared with the heading, "Intreating the Presence of Christ in His Churches," in the author's Poems on Subjects chiefly Doctrinal, 1760, vol. i. p. 76 (2nd ed., 1780, vol. i. p. 76). In 1769 it was reprinted in the Bristol Coll. of Ash & Evans, and was thus brought into C. U. Its American use is much greater than that in G. Britain. It is usually abbreviated, and is sometimes given, as in the Church Pastoral, Boston, U. S., 1864, as "Come, O Thou King of all Thy saints." This cento is made of st. i., vi., vii. Orig. text in Solvigny's reprint of Miss Steele's Hymns, 1863. [J. J.]

Come, Thou Fount of every blessing. [Whitminster.] As various and conflicting statements concerning this hymn abound, it will be necessary to trace, 1st its History, so far as known; and 2nd, to discuss the question of its Authorship.

1. Its History. This in detail is---

1. In a Church book, kept by Robert Robinson (q.v.), of Cambridge, and bequeathed by him to the Rev. William Robinson, of Cambridge, his biographer, there is an entry in Robert Robinson's handwriting which reads:--

"Mr. Wheatley of Norwich published a hymn beginning "Come, Thou Fount of every blessing." (1758.)"

This entry forms part of a list of the works which R. Robinson had written and published. This gives us a definite date, 1758.

2. Nothing has yet been found which can be identified as being issued by "Mr. Wheatley of Norwich" in which this hymn can be found.

3. The earliest known text in print is in a Collection of Hymns used by the Church of Christ in Angel-Alley, Bishopton, 1758, now in the library of the Drew Theological College, Madison, New Jersey, U.S.A. It is No. 1, and in 4 st., beginning respectively:--

St. i. "Come, Thou Fount of every blessing."

St. ii. "Here's my Eden ever!"

St. iii. "O, to grace how great a debtor."

St. iv. "O, that day when free from sinning."

4. This text was repeated in the Hymns of the Apostles' Collection of Hymns, Nottingham, 1777; and in a Dublin Collection, 1785. Shortly afterwards, however, it seems to have fallen out of use.

5. The second and well-known form of the hymn in the first three stanzas as given above is found in M. Madan's Ps. & Hymns, 1761; (a) Whitefield's Ps. & Hymns, 11th ed., 1767; (b) the Countess of Huntington's Coll., 1764; and most of the hymn-books pub. during the latter part of the last century. The text, as in Madan's Ps. & Hymns, 1761, which is the 1739 text with the omission of st. iv., is that usually adopted by modern compilers, and is given in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 479.

ii. Authorship. This has been claimed for Robert Robinson on the one part, and for the Countess of Huntington on the other. The evidence in each case is:--

(1) For Robert Robinson.

1. The entry in his own handwriting in the Cambridge Church Book, in which he enumerates it with his various prelections as noted above.

2. His name is added to it in the 3rd ed. of A Collection of Hymns adapted to Public Worship, 1714; and has since been repeated in almost every collection in which author's names are given from that date to the present.

3. Mr. Dyer, in his Memoirs of the Life & Writings of R. Robinson, 1761, states that most Robinson's papers there was a letter from Dr. Rippon, the compiler of the well-known Hymns, by the Rev. H. Bk., in which he acknowledges that one or both of the stanzas were by Robinson, and names "Come, Thou Fount of every blessing" as one. Dr. Rippon gives it as No. 509, and for the "New Year." It is in 3 st., and signed Robinson.

ii. For the Countess of Huntington.

1. Found with a copy of J. & C. Wesley's Hymns & Sacred Poems, Dublin, 1747, are 21 leaves of writing paper. On the first leaf is written a list of several of the theatrical publications of the Wesleys. Following it are hymns copied from Cennick, Watts, &c.; one by "Mrs. D. B." and this hymn. These fill 10 leaves of the 21, and the rest are blank. On the title-page of this book is written in the same hand-writing "Diana Bindon, 1759." On the inside of the cover of the book is pasted a Wesleyan Methodist quarterly ticket containing a small engraving of Christ washing on of the disciples' feet. On this is written, "Nov. 9, Diana Vandeleur," but the year is not given. The Wesley publications named on the first leaf reach down to 1756.

2. Amongst the ms. hymns is "Come, Thou Fount of every blessing." It is headed, "Hymn to the Countess of Huntington." It is in 5 st., i.-iv. being the same, with slight differences in the text, as noted above as being in the Coll. of Hymns used by the Church of Christ in Angel Alley, Bishopton, 1759; and st. v. beginning, "If Thou ever didst discover," from C. Wesley's hymn "Jesus, help Thy faithful creatures," from his Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii., No. 84.

3. Upon this evidence alone we write with the Diana Bindon ms. and D. Solvigny's ms. correspondence (before us) Solvigny carried on a long controversy in the Notes and Queries, and other periodicals, in 1854-5, contending throughout that "Diana Bindon" was a personal friend of Lady Huntington's, and that she had made this ms. copy direct from another ms. by the Countess. And this he did not only upon the worthless evidence here given, but also whilst receiving, privately, direct testimony to the contrary, together with a positive denial made to him by Lady Huntington's biographer. His see, show that having committed himself, he held it to be beneath him, and damaging to his reputation, to acknowledge his error.

From the foregoing account very much that appeared in the correspondence and is found in the ms., is omitted, and the bare facts alone are given. These facts conclusively show that the author was Robert Robinson, and not Selina, Countess of Huntington.

The original text is probably given in the Angel Alley Coll. (see above, i. 3), 1759, in 4 st., but the accepted text, and that which is in very extensive use in all English-speaking countries, is that given in 3 st. of 8 l. in Madan's Ps. & Hymns, 1761 (see above, i. 5). [J. J.]

Come, Thou long expected Jesus. C. Wesley. [Christmas.] Appeared in Hymns for the Nativity of Our Lord, 1744, No. x., in 2 st. of 8 l. The tract in which it appeared formed the first of those called the "Festival Hymns," which were subsequently pub. by Cummin in 1746. It was not included in the Wes. H. Bk. until the revised ed. of 1783, No. 688, although it was given by Whitefield in his Coll. 1758, and later editions; by Madan, in his Ps. & Hymns, 1760; by Toplady, in his Ps. & Hymns, 1776; and by others. It is found in a great number of hymnals in G. Britain and America, specially those of the Church of England, and usually without alteration, as in Hym. Comp., No. 96. A marked departure from this rule is, "Come,
COME, THOU SOUL

Come, Thou soul - transforming Spirit, J. Evans. [Before Sermon.] This hymn was contributed to G. Burder's Coll. of Hymns from Various Authors, 1784, No. 13, in 2 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "Improving the aid of the Spirit." In modern hymnals it is found in three forms as follows:

1. The original. This was reprinted from Burder, by W. Jay, of Bath, in his Sel., 1797, No. 326, but without signature. From Jay it passed into other hymnals, with the addition of "Joy" as a title, as in the American Hymn Controversy, H. B. K., 1849. The original text is also in Boyce's Select.

2. In the Williams and Boden Coll., 1801, the hymn was given in an altered form, and with the addition of the stanzas, "Then, when... the signal's given," from "Lord, dismiss us with Thy blessing." In Kemble's New Church Hymn. Bk., 1873, this is repeated with further alterations, and the omission of the added stanzas.

3. In Bickerstaff's Christian Psalms, 1814, No. 353, is the original with the addition of two stanzas from "Lord, dismiss us with Thy blessing." This cento has almost died out of use.

Although these three forms of the hymn exist, most modern editors are falling back upon the original, especially in America, where its popularity is greater than in G. Britain. [J. J.]

Come to a desert place apart, J. Aitken. [Church Guilds.] 1st printed in his Hymnary, 1838, No. 59, in 5 st. of 4 l., in London by J. & A. Churchill, 1836.

Come to our [dark] poor nature's night. G. Bawson. [Whitsuntide.] Contributed to the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 397, in 9 st. of 4 l., and from whence it has passed into numerous collections. In 1876 the author included a revised text, in 8 st., in his Hymns, &c., No. 46. This, however, is not in general use. Orig. text, N. Cong. No. 438.

Come to our dark nature's night, in the new ed. of H. Comp., is a slightly altered version of the orig. text with the omission of st. v. In the American Hymnary, 1871, it is given as "Holy Ghost, the Infinite." [J. J.]

Come to the morning prayer, J. Montgomery. [Daily Prayer] This invitation to daily worship was printed in the Evangelical Magazine for Dec., 1842, where it is dated "Aug. 4, 1842," in 4 st. of 4 l. It was also included by Montgomery in his Original Hymnary, 1853, No. 79, and entitled "Daily Prayer." It is given in Hymnary, No. 10, in an unaltered form. It is also found in a few American collections.

This form of the hymn in America is "Come to the morning hour." This is found in several collections, as the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865; the Bap. Praise Book, 1871, &c. [J. J.]

Come to Thy temple, Lord. H. Alford. [Advent.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hymns, 1844, No. 2, in 4 st. of 4 l., again in his Poetical Works, 1865, and his Year of Praise, 1887. It has passed into several collections.

In T. Darlington's Hymnary, &c., 1885, it begins, "Thy temple visit, Lord." [J. J.]

Come unto Me, ye weary. W. C. Dix. [Invitation.] This hymn, which ranks as one of the best of Mr. Dix's efforts, was pub. in 1867 in the People's H.; in 1889, in the Appx. to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hymns; in 1871, in Church Hymn.; in 1875, in M. & M.; and in other collections. It has also been reprinted in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884. [J. J.]

Come, we [ye] that [who] love the Lord. I. Watts. [Joy and Praise.] 1st pub. in his Hymns & S. Songs, 1707, and again, 2nd ed., 1709, Bk. ii., No. 30, in 10 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Heavenly Joy on Earth." In its original and full form it is rarely found in modern collections, the N. Cong. in 1859, No. 693, and the Bap. Ps. & Hymns, 1858-80, being exceptions. With the alteration of st. ii., 1, 3, of "favourites" to "children." It has undergone many alterations and revisions. Of these the principal are:

1. "Come ye that love the Lord." This was given by J. Wesley in his Ps. & S. Hymns, pub. at Charlestown, U. S., 1736-7, during his stay in Georgia. In this form st. ii. and ix. are omitted, and the rest are considerably altered. After slight revision this text was repeated by Wesley in the We. H. Bk. 1746, and in the revised ed. 177, and in most collections of the Methodist communion.

2. "Come ye who love the Lord." This reading of the first line was given by Cotterill in the 8th ed. of his Sel., 1819, and is followed in M. Comp. and others.

The different arrangement of stanzas, and the variations in the text which have been adopted by the numerous editors who have used it in one form or another may be counted by the hundred. The example set by Wesley in 1736, was followed by Whitefield, 1753; Madan, 1769; Conyers, 1772; Toplady, 1776, and onwards to the latest modern collection. No text can, as a rule, be relied upon. The original is easy to obtain, in modern editions of Watts. The hymn, as a whole, is regarded as a good specimen of Watts's powers. [See English Hymnody, Early, § xiii.]

Come, weary souls, with sin distressed. Anne Steele. [Invitation.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1769, vol. i. p. 27, in 5 st. of 4 l. and entitled, "Weary souls invited to rest" (2nd ed., vol. i. p. 27); and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. It is in extensive use both in G. Britain and America, and sometimes with "sins" for "sin" in the opening line. It was introduced into the Nonconformist hymnals through the Bristol Coll., 1708, of Ash & Evans, and into those of the Church of England by Conyers, 1772, and Toplady, 1776. [J. J.]

Come, ye followers of the Lord. C. Wesley. [Prayer.]* One of six hymns which were 1st pub. in 1743, at the end of a Tract entitled, A Short View of the Difference between the Moravian Brethren lately in England, and the Rev. Mr. John & Charles Wesley. It was also given in Hymns & S. Poems, 1749.
one exception, noted below, were subsequently adopted as the authorized text. It is given in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., No. 256, with "blessed regions" for happy regions, in st. iii., 1. 3; "blessed regions" is the original reading, and was restored to the text by the author. It is in somewhat extensive use. In Boardman's Sel. of Hys., Philadelphia, 1860, it is given as "Come, ye saints, draw near and wonder;" and in the H. Bk. of the Evang. Association, Cleveland, Ohio, 1882, as "Come, ye saints, behold and wonder." [J. J.]

Come, ye saints, and raise an anthem. Job Hupton. [Praise to Christ.] This hymn was 1st pub. in the Gospel Magazine, Sept. 1805, as a revised version of st. 1, 2, 4, 5, 8, 9, 10 and 12, as an illustration of the possibility of producing a hymn of merit out of somewhat crude materials. The first stanza by Hupton, and by Neale, will illustrate the way in which the latter suggested this might be accomplished.

1. Stanza i., by Job Hupton:—
"Come, ye saints, and raise an anthem,
Sing to Him who found a ransom,
Th' ancient of eternal days,
In your nature,
Born to suffer in your place."

2. Stanza i., by Dr. Neale:—
"Come, ye faithful, raise the anthem,
Clear the sky with shouts of praise;
Sing to Him who found a ransom,
Ancient of eternal days
God eternal, Word incarnate,
From the heaven of heaven obeys."

Job Hupton's text is unknown to the hymnals, but Dr. Neale's has come into somewhat extensive use. The text of the latter is in the People's H., 1867, No. 476, with the reading of st. iii. II. 3–4 as:—
"With the ceaseless interlude
Which they raise, the sons of light, and not as in the People's H. The liberties taken by Dr. Neale with Hupton's text have been followed by others in dealing with his, Church Hymn being specially prominent in this respect. In fact no text can be relied upon until verified by a reference to the Christian Remembrancer, or the People's H., with the corrections noted above. [J. J.]

Come, ye thankful people, come. H. Alford. [Harvest.] 1st pub. in his Ps. and Hymns, 1844, No. 116, and subsequently, after revision, in his Poetical Works, 1865, and his Year of Praise, 1867, in 7 st. of 8 l. In 1861 the compilers of H. & M.: included an altered version in that Collection. This was repudiated by the author, but still retained by the compilers of H. & M., with an explanatory note in the Preface in some of the subsequent editions. The present text in Alford's Poetical Works, 1865, is the authorized text, and that usually given in modern hymnals. This hymn has given a greater popularity and more extensive use, both in Great Britain and America, than any other of the author's hymns. [J. J.]

Come, ye weary sinners, come. C. Wesley. [Invitation.] 1st pub. in his Hymns for those that seek, and those that have Redemption, &c., 1747, in 4 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868–72, vol. iv. p. 220). With slight alterations, and the omission of st. iii., it was included in the Wes. Bk., 1780, No. 28, and has been retained in all later editions. This is also the text usually given in other collections, both in G. Britain and America. In the Met. Episco. Hymns, 1849, and the New Hymnal of the same body, 1878, the hymn "Come, weary sinners, come," is a cento from this hymn. It was made by the Committee of the 1849 book. The original 8 of 7 is turned into s. m. [J. J.]

Command Thy blessing from above.

J. Montgomery. [Divine Worship.] Written for the Sheffield Sunday S. Union, Whitsuntide gathering, June 5, 1816, and printed for that occasion, and in the Evang. Mag., Sept., 1816, p. 372. In 1819 it was included in Cotterill's Sel., No. 13, in 5 st. of 4 lines, and there entitled "For God's blessing on His assembled people." In 1825 it was republished, with alterations, by Montgomery, in his Christ. Psalms, No. 470, and again with the same text in his Original Hymns, 1833, No. 99. The arrangement, however, in C. U. are various, some following Cotterill's text, as in H. Comp., from Bickersteth's Christ. Psalms, 1833, others the revised text of 1825 and 1833, and others, as in N. Cong., a mixture of the two. The American use also varies in like manner. [J. J.]

Communion, a liturgical term for the antiphon which was originally sung during the communion of the people in the Roman Rite, but which now the priest says after the absolutions at the Epistle side of the altar. It usually consisted of a verse of Holy Scripture, but the following instances of metrical Commissions in the shape of short hymns are found in the Sarum Missal. No. 3 occurs also in the York and Hereford, and No. 4 in the York Missal.

Communion of my Saviour's blood.

J. Montgomery. [Holy Communion.] Appeared in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 511, in 6 st. of 4 lines, and entitled, "The Lord's Supper," and again, without alteration, in his Original Hymns, 1833, No. 130.

It is not in extensive use in its original form, but altered, and beginning with st. ii., as, "To feed on Christ, the living bread," it is given in Kennedy, 1863, in 2 st. of 8 lines, and the diction which closes the 2nd st. not being in the original.

Compston, John, second s. of the Rev. Samuel Compston, was b. at Smallbridge, Rechdale, Jan. 9, 1828. He became minister of the Baptist Church, Inskip, near Preston, in 1852, was subsequently pastor of churches at Bramley, near Leeds; Barnsley; and York Road, Leeds. In 1878 he removed into Somerseth, to become pastor of the united Baptist churches of Fiveheads and Isle Abbotts, near Taunton. In 1880 he organized and became Secretary to the Taunton District Psalmody Union.

Mr. Compston pub. (1) Lancashire School Songs, 1853 (14th thousand, 1857), afterwards incorporated in the larger school hymn-book, entitled (2) Sacred Songs for Home and School, 1860, of which Rev. J. Lees was co-editor; (3) Popular Sacred Hymnody, 1863.

Mr. Compston, however, is best known in connection with the Temperance Hymnody. In 1857 he edited (4) The National Temperance Hymnody; and in 1861 the (5) National Temperance Hymnal, a new and greatly improved ed. of the former work. It contains nearly 600 temperance hymns and songs set to appropriate music. Twenty of these hymns are by Mr. Compston.

Mr. Compston is also the author of several pamphlets written in connection with the temperance and other philanthropic movements.

Let all the world with prayer and praise. C. B. Pearson in Sarum Sequences, 1811.

Conder, Eustace Rogers, M.A., D.D., &c, of Josiah Conder, b. April 15, 1826, near St. Albans. He studied at Spring Hill College, Birmingham; took his M.A. degree, with gold medal, in Philosophy, in the University of London, in 1844, and settled at Poole, Dorset, as Pastor of the Congregational Church there. In 1861 he removed to Leeds, as minister of East Parade Chapel. In 1882 he received the degree of D.D. from Edinburgh University. The following hymns by Dr. Conder are in the Leeds & S. N. Bk., 1862-1878:

1. Oh, bright are the mansions. The Home of the Children of God.
2. Where is the Land of cloudless day? Jesus the Way to Heaven.

Dr. Conder's Heart Chords were printed for private circulation in 1874.

Conder, George W., only s. of George Conder, was b. at Hitchin, Herts, Nov. 30, 1821. After studying at Highbury College, London, he became, in 1845, co-pastor, with Mr. Judson, of High Wycombe Congregational Church. In 1849 he succeeded the late Dr. Winter Hamilton as minister of Belgrave Chapel, Leeds, passing thence to Cheetham Hill, Manchester, in 1864; and Queen's Road, Forest Hill, Lon-Conder, Joan Elizabeth, nee Thomas, the wife of Josiah Conder, was the daughter of Roger Thomas, and granddaughter of the sculptor, L. F. Roubiliac, b. April 6, 1785, d. Jan. 22, 1877. Mrs. Conder contributed poems to The Associate Minister, 1810, under the signature "E."; to her husband's work, The Star in the East, 1824, anonymously; to the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, in her own name; and to The Choir and Oratory, 1837, with an asterisk. Of these, seven were given in Conder's Hymns of Praise, Prayer, and Devout Meditation, 1856. Of these the following appeared in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, and through that work have come into C. U.:

1. The hours of evening close. Saturday Evening.
2. When Mary to the Heavenly Guest. Mary anointing the feet of Jesus.
3. What blissful harmonies above. The heavenly choir.
4. Not Thy garment's hem alone. Desiring Pardon. This last is the most popular of her hymns. The tune St. Faith's was composed for it by Mr. Beale, and pub. in The Psalmist, 1842.

Conder, Josiah, fourth s. of Thomas Conder, engraver and bookseller, and grandson of the Rev. John Conder, d.d., first Theological Tutor of Homerton College, was b. in Falcon Street, City, London, Sept. 17, 1789, and d. Dec. 27, 1855. As author, editor, and publisher he was widely known. For some years he was the proprietor and editor of the Eclectic Review, and also editor of the Patriot newspaper. His prose works were numerous, and include:

The Modern Traveller, 1830; Italy, 1831; Dictionary of Ancient and Modern Geography, 1834; Life of Bunyan, 1835; Protestant Nonconformity, 1835-39; The Law of the Sabbath, 1830; Epistle to the Hebrews (a translation), 1834; Literary History of the New Testament, 1844, Harmony of History with Prophecy, 1840, and others.

His poetical works are:

(1) The Withered Oak, 1805; this appeared in the Athenaum.
(2) The Beulah, 1811.
(4) Sacred Poems, Domestic Poems, and Miscellaneous Poems, 1824.
(5) The Choir and the Oratory, on Praise and Prayer, 1837; Preface dated Nov. 8, 1836.
(6) Hymns of Praise, Prayer, and Devout Meditation, 1856. This last work was in the press at the time of his death, and was revised and published by his son, the Rev. E. R. Conder, M.A. He also contributed many pieces to the magazines and to the Associated Ministers, 1830, under the signature of "C.

In 1838, selections from The Choir and Oratory were published with music by Edgar Sanderson, as Harmonia Sacra. A second volume was added in 1839. To Dr. Collery's (q.v.) Hymns, &c., he contributed 3 pieces signed "C.; and to Dr. Leitch's Original Hymns, 1843, 4 hymns.

As a hymn-book editor he was also well known. In 1836 he edited The Congregational Hymn Book: a Supplement to Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns (2nd ed. 1844). To this collection he contributed fifty-six of his own hymns, some of which had previously appeared in The Star in the East, &c. He also published in 1851 a revised edition of Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns, and in the same year a special paper on Dr. Watts as The Poet of the Sanctuary, which was read before the Congregational Union at Southampton. The value of his work as Editor of the Congregational Hymn Book is seen in the fact that eight out of every ten of the hymns in that collection are still in use either in G. Britain or America.

As a hymn writer Conder ranks with some of the best of the first half of the present century. His finest hymns are marked by much elevation of thought, expressed in language combining both force and beauty. They generally excel in unity, and in some the gradual unfolding of the leading idea is masterly. The outcome of a deeply spiritual mind, they deal chiefly with the enduring elements of religion. Their variety in metre, in style, and in treatment saves them from the monotonous mannerism which mars the work of many hymn writers. Their theology, though decidedly Evangelical, is yet of a broad and liberal kind. Doubtless Conder's intercourse with many phases of theological thought as Editor of the Eclectic Review did much to produce this catholicity, which was strikingly shown by his embodying many of the collects of the Book of Common Prayer, rendered into verse, in his Choir and Oratory. Of his versions of the Psalms the most popular are "How honoured, how dear" (84th), and "O be joyful in the Lord" (100th). His hymns in most extensive use are, "Bread of heaven, on Thee I feed"; "Beyond, beyond that boundless sea"; "The Lord is King, lift up thy voice" (this last is one of his best); "Day by day the manna fell:" "How shall I follow him I serve;" "Heavenly Father, to whose eye" (all good specimens of his subdued and pathetic style); and "O show me not my Saviour dying." This last is full of lyric feeling, and expresses the too often forgotten fact that the Church has a living though once crucified Lord.

The popularity of Conder's hymns may be gathered from the fact that at the present time more of them are in C. U. in G. Britain and America than those of any other writer of the Congregational body, Watts and Doddridge alone excepted.

In addition to the hymns named above and others which are annotated under their respective first lines, the following, including two already named (4, 16), are also in C. U.:

i. From Dr. Collery's Hymns, &c., 1812.
1. When in the hours of lonely woe. Lent.
ii. From The Star in the East, &c., 1824.
2. Be merciful, O God of grace. Ps. lxxvi.
3. For ever will I bless the Lord. Ps. xxxvii.
5. Now with angels round the throne. Hymnology.

iii. From The Congregational Hymn Book, 1836.
7. Blessed be God, He is not strict. Longsuffering of God.
9. Grant me, heavenly Lord, to feel. Zeal in Missions.
10. Grant, O Saviour, to our prayers. Collect 6th S. after Trinity.
11. Head of the Church, our risen Lord. Church Meetings.
CONDITOR ALME SIDERUM

12. Holy, holy, holy Lord, in the highest heaven, &c.
Praise to the Father.

15. Lord, for Thy Name’s sake! such the plea. In Natural Danger.

16. O be joyful in the Lord. Ps. c.

17. O breathe upon this languid frame. Baptism of Holy Spirit desired.

19. O God, Protector of the lowly. New Year.

20. O God, to whom the happy dead. Burial.

24. O how shall feeble flesh and blood. Salvation through Christ.

25. O how should those be clean who hear. Purity desired for God’s Ministers.

27. O Thou divine High Priest. Holy Communion.

28. O Thou Who givest all their food. Harvest.

29. O Thou Whose covenant is sure. Holy Baptism.

30. Praise on Thee, in Zion-gates. Sunday.

31. Praise the God of all creation. Doxology.

32. See the ransomed millions stand. Praise to Christ.

33. The heavens declare His glory and magnificence. Ps. cxxvii.

34. Thou art the Everlasting Word. Praise to Christ.

35. Thy bands have made and fashioned me. Thanks for Daily Mercies.

36. To all Thy faithful people, Lord. For Pardon.

37. To His own world He came. Ascension.

38. To our God loud praise give. Ps. cvi.

39. Upon a world of guilt and night. Purification of E.F.M.

40. Welcome, welcome, sinner, hear. Invitation to Christ.

41. Whereover two or three. Continued Presence of Christ desired.

42. From The Choir and the Oratory, 1837.

43. Baptised into our Saviour’s death. Holy Baptism.

44. In Thy word, Lord. Ps. cxix.

45. On a cloud to the desert. Christ the Comforter.

46. From Leichfild’s Original Hymns, 1843.

47. I am Thy workmanship, O Lord. God the Maker and Guardian.

48. He, that hast Thou been here? But when. The Resurrection of Lazarus.

49. Thy grace that I did choose Thee. Chosen of God.

50. This is altered in the Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1863, to Lord, do not that I did choose Thee, thereby changing the metre from 9.6.8.6.

51. From Hymn of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856.

52. Comrades of the heavenly calling. The Christian race.

53. When to these 48 hymns those annotated under their respective first lines are added, Coader’s hymns in C. U. number about 60 in all.

[Advent.] This hymn is sometimes ascribed to St. Ambrose, but on insufficient evidence. It was rejected as such by the Benedictine editors; and with this the best authorities agree. It is known in various forms, the more important being the following:—

1. The text as in Daniel, 1, No. 72, in 8 st. of 4 1., and the doxology. This text, when corrected by readings given in his vol. iv, p. 118, and 364, from a MS. of the 9th cent. at Bern; another of the 10th cent. at Munich, and others of the 9th and 11th cent., respectively, which belonged to the Abbey of Rheims, is the

2. In The Latin Hym. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, pub. by the Sixtus Soc., 1847, p. 34, from an MS. of the 7th cent. at Bern; another of the 10th cent. at Munich, and others of the 9th and 11th cent., respectively, which belonged to the Abbey of Rheims, is the

3. The Hymns Alme Siderum, 1841, with readings from the York, Canterbury, St. Albans, Worcester, and other English Breviaries.

5. Coader’s text, No. 34, is from the Cistercian Brevisaries, specially a MS. of the 14th cent., formerly belonging to the Cistercian Nunnery of Lichtenthal. This text was used in iv. pp. 356 and 369, and gives a summary of the evidence respecting this question of original text, and shows, that no MS. earlier than the foundation of the Cistercian Order appears to contain this text; whereas the ordinary version is found in a MS. at Bern of the 9th cent.

6. The Sarum Brev. It is appointed as the Vesper hymn on the Saturday before the 1st Sunday in Advent, and about Advent on Sundays and week-days when no festival occurs. In the Rom. Brev., it is the Vesper hymn in Advent on Sundays, and whenever the Feria Office is said; beginning with the Saturday preceding the 1st Sunday in Advent.

7. A cento composed partly from the Rom. Brev. version of this hymn is given for first and second Vessera on the Feast of the Most Holy Redeemer (3rd Sun. in July) in the Appendice to the Rom. Brev. It consists of lines 1-4, 9-16; then a special stanza of 4 L followed by lines 17-20 and a doxology. The Office in which this cento is found was first authorized for use in the Venetian territories. The origin of the Festival for which it was compiled is as follows:—The people of the city of Venice, when suffering from the effects of a plague which swept off a great number of the inhabitants and caused great terror, made a vow that if God should grant relief a church should be built by public subscription, dedicated to the Most Holy Redeemer, and a yearly visit paid to it by the magistracy of the city. In 1576 the plague ceased, and the church of SS. Santissimi Redemptores was built; the annual act of homage being fixed for the third Sunday in July. The Government of the Venetian Republic obtained permission (when the devotion had greatly extended itself after many years of perseverance), on the 24th of April, 1724, from the Sacred Congregation of Rites, at Rome, that the Office of the Most Holy Redeemer should be said by all the clergy of the city of Venice with the rank of a Lesser Double; in 1724 this licence was extended to the whole Venetian territory; in 1729 the Feast was made a Greater Double; in 1731 a Double of the Second Class; finally, in 1735, an Office was added.

Of the various forms of this hymn the translators have usually confounded themselves either to the Sarum or the Rom. Brev. The results are as follows:—

Translations in C. U.:

1. Creator of the stars of night, by J. M. Neale, in the 1st ed. of the Hymnal N., 1852, No. 10, in 6 st. of 4 1. This is repeated without alteration in later editions of the Hymnal N.; in Skinner’s Daily Hymnal, 1864; in the Hymner, 1882, and others. It is also given as “Creator of the starry height, Thy people’s,” &c., in H. A. & M., 1861 (the alterations being by the compilers, who had printed another arrangement of the text in their trial copy of 1859), and Allon’s Supplemental Hys., 1868, &c. In Mercer, Oxford ed., 1864, it is rewritten by Mercer. Another rendering, slightly altered, from the Hymnal N. is, “Creator of the starry height, Of faithful hearts,” &c., in the Hymnary, 1872.

2. Creator of the starry height, by F. Pott, in his Hymns, &c., 1861. This is based upon Dr. Neale, and the H. A. & M., revised text as above. It is repeated in Church Hys., 1871.

3. Creator of the starry height. The faithful, &c., by R. F. Littlejohn, in the People’s H., 1867, and signed “F.”

4. In addition to the foregoing, other arrangements are given in Chope, Thring, and others. That in Thring is the most complicated of all. In it Dr. Neale, H. A. & M., the Rev. F. Pott, the Hymnary, Chope, Mr. Thring, and others, are represented. The result is good.
Translations not in C. U.:
3. Thou Framor of the starry heaven (with the stanza bracketed by Daniel as probably an interpolation into the hymn. J. D. Chambers, 1887.
5. Fair Framor of the stars so bright. Dr. E. Denison’s Jubilee Hymnals, &c. 1847.
8. O Thou the Maker of each star. Lord Brayt. Nos. 7 and 8 are in Mr. Shipley’s Annals Sancuta, 1884.

Roman Brev. Text. Creator aima siderum.

1. Creator of the starry height, of hearts believing, &c. by W. J. Copeland, in his Hymns for the Week, &c, 1849, p. 53 in 6 st. of 4 1. This was given in an altered form, as "Creator of the starry poles," in the English Hymnal, 1852, again altered, but nearer to the original tr. in Murray’s Hymnal, 1852; and in later eds. of the English Hymnal. It is also given, without alteration but with the omission of the doxology, in Lyra Musica, 1884.

2. Creator of the starry frame, by E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 43. This is the tr. in C. U. in Roman Catholic collections for schools and missions. It is also given in the St. John’s Hymnal (Aberdeen), 1870. In his Hymns and Poems, 1873, Caswall altered the first stanza to “Dear Maker of the starry skies,” and thereby seriously weakened the hymn.

3. Maker of the starry spheres, by R. Campbell, in his Hymns and Anthems, 1850, p. 42. This was repeated in the Cook & Denton Hymnal, 1853; the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; Kennedy, 1863; Sursum, 1868, and other collections.

No. 6, 7, and 8 are in Mr. Shipley’s Annals Sancuta, 1884.

Congregational Hymnody, American. (American Hymnody, § 111.)

Congregational Hymnody, English.

1. Notwithstanding the controversy which prevailed in the 17th cent. in the Baptist and Independent denominations as to the lawfulness or otherwise of singing in Divine Worship, the Independents, taken as a whole, were in favour of the practice. The distinction, however, which they, possibly unconsciously, drew between prayer and praise when set forth in prose, or in verse, was clearly marked. A set form in prose, either of prayer, as in the prayers and collects of the Book of Common Prayer; or of praise, as in the Gloria in Excelsis and other hymns in the same service, was regarded as an abomination; but petitions, supplications, praises, and thanksgiving of precisely the same character when given in verse were received with pleasure, and used in both public and private worship by all but the most rigid and austere. The rejection of the one set form, that of prose, was complete and final; the growth of the other, that of verse, was gradual and enduring.

2. The earlier stages of this growth are given in detail, from the Psalm and Hymns of W. Barton, 1644, to those of I. Watts, 1705-1723, in the article on Early English Hymnody, § vi.-xiii. By W. Barton, through his Book of Psalms in Metre, 1644, his Psalm and Hymns, 1651, and his various Centuries of Hymns, culminating in Six Centuries of Select Hymns, &c., 1688 [see Barton, W.]; by T. Shepherd, in his Several Pieces, 1699; by Matthew Henry, in his Family Hymns, 1695; by A Collection of Divine Hymns, 1694, gathered from six different authors, including R. Baxter and J. Mason; and by minor efforts on the part of others, the way was prepared for the advent and work of Isaac Watts.

3. The value and importance of the hymnological contributions of Isaac Watts to the Christian Church, from the dawn of the 18th century to the present time, cannot be estimated. No collection of hymns in the English language, compiled for general congregational use, save two or three of an exceptional type, has been published since 1720, without extracts from one or more of his works being embodied therein. In universality of use, Watts is only equalled by C. Wesley. This great result has been attained by a combination of excellences in which poetic power, cathedrality of spirit, and simplicity in embodying the vital truths of Christianity in song have stood pre-eminent. His strength—and it was great—and his weaknesses—and they were few—are set forth in the articles on the English Psalms, § xv.; and on Early English Hymnody, § xiii.

4. For some years after the publication of his Portraits of David in 1719, Watts’s Psalm and Hymns (the latter being his Hymns and Spiritual Songs, 1707-1709) constituted the hymn-book of the Congregational body. The great wave of religious thought and feeling which swept over the nation as the result of the work of Whitefield and the Wesleys, together with the poetical contributions of the latter, created on the one hand a desire for greater variety in the songs of the Christian life, and on the other partially supplied that want. It was found that Watts, in common with all men, had not the power to produce a complete work; a work which should be of high and uniform excellence, and should grasp in full the varied and shifting scenes of life. There were depths of passion, despair, and woe which he had not fathomed; there were heights of ecstatic joy which he had not reached. The broad field of Christian Song he had made his own. To others was left the cultivation of smaller spaces where the concentrated efforts of gifted men would yield rich results.

5. The conviction that Watts could not sing for all men, and had not sung for all time, was not long in dawning upon the members of his own community. The form in which this conviction received practical expression was first given in Supplements to Watts, mainly by individual Ministers of the Congregational... body, followed by Collections compiled, some by individual editors, and others by Committees sometimes acting on their own responsibility, and at other times under the auspices of the Congregational Union.

6. One of the first to compile a Supplement to Watts was Dr. Thomas Gibbons. His work was published in 1769, and followed by a second edition in 1784. The 1st ed. of Rowland Hill's Coll. of Psalms and Hymns was dated 1733. It was designed as a complete hymnbook, and was the first in the Congregational body to break away from the Psalms and Hymns of Watts. It ran into many editions, but those of a later date are the first edition rearranged with additions. All the hymns are given without any indication of authorship. Hence has arisen the difficulty of identifying the editor's contributions. Rowland Hill's Coll. was superseded at Surrey Chapel, by James Sherman's Coll. in 1844; and Sherman's Coll. by C. Newman Hall's Christ Church Hymnal, 1876. George Burder's Coll. of Hymns, 1784, was a return to the Supplement series. His range was limited, and included, as he puts it, "the respectable names of Doddridge, Newton, Hart, Wesley, Cowper, Toplady, and Cennick." W. Jay of Bath could not break away from Watts, and so in 1787 he published for his own congregation A Selection of Psalms and Hymns of Peculiar Metre. Another Supplement followed in 1801. It was edited by Dr. E. Williams and the Rev. James Boden, and published at Doncaster. The authors' names were given in the first edition, but omitted from the second, and subsequently restored. It had a very limited circulation, and is known chiefly through Boden's contributions, and the anonymous "Jerusalem, my happy home." Two years after Williams and Boden, Dr. Wardlaw followed the example set by Rowland Hill, and published his Selection of Psalms and Hymns at Glasgow, 1803. John Dobell's New Collection of more than Seven Hundred Evangelical Hymns dates from 1806. It was also a Supplement to Watts. Its chief value is in its record of authors. In this respect, although very faulty, it was the most complete up to that time. Dr. Collyer's Hymns partly Collected and partly Original, 1812, was published no less valuable. Its peculiarity lay in the grouping of all the hymns of a given author under his name, beginning with Dryden and ending with himself; and its value in the number of original hymns contributed by Conder, Montgomery, Ann and Jane Taylor, Raffles, McAll, and others; and from the ms. of H. Kirke White. This Supplement was followed in 1813 by another Collection of Hymns, designed as an Appendiz to Dr. Watts &c. by Thomas Cloutt, afterwards known as Thomas Russell. It ran into more than twenty editions, but added little or nothing to the treasury of sacred song. Dr. Raffles's Collection of 1816, and Dr. A. Reed's, of 1817, contained original hymns by their respective editors. A new departure took place in 1822 by the publication of A Selection of Hymns for the Use of the Protestant Dissenters in the United Kingdom, and the Independents and Christians of the Independent Order in Leeds, and edited by a committee consisting of the Revs. E. Parsons, R. Winter Hamilton, and T. Scales. As a Supplement to Watts it was an improvement on former works. Efforts by others were made, but were too unimportant to be enumerated. The last Supplement to Watts of any importance was, curiously enough, the first official hymn-book of the Congregationalists.

7. In accordance with a resolution passed by the Congregational Union in 1833, J. Conder compiled a collection in conjunction with a Committee appointed for the purpose, and in 1836 this collection was published as The Congregational Hymn Book. This collection of 620 hymns was enriched by some original hymns by Montgomery, and although the editor suffered severely from the common weakness of all hymn-writing editors in over-estimating the value of his own productions, yet the sterling worth of the book is realized in the fact that eight out of every ten of the hymns therein are still in use in G. Britain or America. In fairness to Conder it must be added that all his hymns were submitted to the Committee, and some as anonymous, and received their approval before incorporation in the book. Dr. J. Campbell's Comprehensive Hymn Book, 1841, was M. Wilks's 1798 edition of Whitefield's Ps. & Hymns, enlarged to 1900 hymns. It was a heavy book, and failed to secure general adoption. Dr. A. Reed's third effort resulted in The Hymn Book, 1842, a weak production on the old lines. Dr. Leitch's Original Hymns, 1843, contained 370 hymns, for the most part published for the first time. The Revs. W. M. Bunting, Dr. Collyer, Dr. R. W. Hamilton, Dr. Raffles, J. Montgomery, Mrs. Gilbert, and others, well known to hymnody, failed to impart to the collection either life or popularity. It was a disastrous failure. Ten years afterwards a second Committee at Leeds, consisting of the Revs. H. R. Reynolds, T. Hindswell, G. W. Conder, W. Guest, and W. Morgan, published the well-known Leeds Hymn Book, 1853, as Psalms, Hymns, and Passages of Scripture for Christian Worship. It followed the conventional lines of most Nonconformist collections. The educated taste displayed in the text, the extension of the area of selection to the hymnological treasures of the Church of England, the Church of Ireland, the Church of Rome, and the tone of confidence and strength which pervaded the whole book gave it a literary character before unknown to Congregational hymnody. Its influence was soon felt throughout the whole denominations. Although a private enterprise, it gradually assumed a more than private character, until, in 1859, The New Congregational Hymn Book—after garnering from it its choicest treasures, and adding thereto much that was new and valuable—was published with the official imprimatur of the Congregational Union. From that date the older collection rose in historical importance, as it declined in general use. The New Congregational Hymn Book is, from the standpoint of the denomination, a good and sound collection. It has more of Watts than any other modern work: but this element, natural to the denomination, is balanced by a good selection from all ages and nations. Its Supplement, published in 1874, is very inferior.
The mutilations in the texts, made without any reason on poetical, theological, or ecclesiastical grounds, are very numerous, and are distinguished by extreme poetical weakness and by lack of sympathy with the authors. Taken as a whole, the weakness of the collection is in its size. It is too large to be uniformly excellent. Dr. Parker's Congregational Hymnal, 1831, was a heavy production on the old lines, and a failure. Dr. Allen's Supplemental Hymns for Public Worship, 1864-75, is designed to be used with any Congregational hymnbook which may be lacking in hymns by modern writers, and in translations from Greek, Latin, and German. As it presupposes the use at the same time of another book, in which all the well-known hymns of the older writers are found, it claims to be supplemental only to those books. As such it is good, well arranged, and carefully edited. Another work of this kind is the Appendix to the Leeds Hymn Book of 1853, by G. W. Conder, published in 1874. It contains 203 hymns as against 341 in Dr. Allen's collection. Through its selection of Psalms and portions of Holy Scripture, pointed for chanting, its Suffrages, Advent Antiphons, and Meditations it comes nearer to the modern collection of the Church of England than any other Hymnal or Appendix amongst the Nonconformists.

8. The latest additions to Congregational hymn-books are The English Hymn Book, 1874, by R. W. Dale, d.d.; the Congregational Hymns, 1884, by W. G. Horder; The Congregational Psalmist Hymnals, 1886, by H. Allon, d.d.; and the Congregational Church Hymnal, 1897, edited by the Rev. G. S. Barrett, b.a., and published by the Congregational Union.

9. Dr. Dale's work, he tells us in his Preface, "is called The English Hymn Book because I have endeavoured, as far as possible, to insert only those hymns which seem to me to be in harmony with the characteristic type of English piety. The religious life of this country, in its healthiest forms, is distinguished by a certain manly simplicity very alien from the sensuous sentimentality which has been encouraged by some recent hymn-writers, and even the poetically hymns of the Middle Ages, and the noble songs of German Protestantism, do not express very naturally the religious thought and emotion of ordinary Englishmen." A work compiled upon these lines naturally falls back upon the older writers for much of its material, and knows nothing of some of the most popular of modern compositions. Of its 1269 hymns 58 begin with A, and of these there are 26 hymns which are neither in Horder, Allon, nor the Congregational Church Hymnal. These are mainly from Watts, Wesley, Anne Steele, Beddome, Bruce, Deck, Elizabeth Scott, and others amongst the older, and Bonar and Bishop Wordsworth amongst modern writers. The names of these authors of the hymns peculiar to Dr. Dale's book indicate with tolerable clearness what he means by "the characteristic type of English piety"; and "the religious thought and emotion of ordinary Englishmen." The hymns which come under other letters of the alphabet, and which are peculiar to this collection as distinct from Horder, Allon, and the Congregational

10. Mr. Horder's Congregational Hymns, A Hymnal for the Free Churches, has, in addition to 841 metrical hymns, which among 350 authors and translators are represented, in most cases in an unaltered form, many of the Psalms together with Passages of Holy Scripture and Ancient Hymns in English prose, pointed for chanting. Its range is beyond anything before attempted by Congregationalists, its contents having been gathered from all ages and nations that could furnish a Christian hymn of a moderate type, and in an English dress. The classification is that usually adopted in Congregational hymn-books, but in greater detail, includes hymns for children, and a special section entitled "The Home Sanctuary" for private use. Taking, as in the case of Dr. Dale, the hymns in A as representative of the whole, there are 41 hymns, of which 7 are peculiar to the book. These are by Bubier, McDaid, Emerson, Whitmer, Newton, and others, drawn from the Latin and Greek writers. Those show that, whilst the solid groundwork of recognized Congregational hymnody is the strength and stay of the book (as seen in the 53 hymns under A which are common to Dale and others), poetic warmth and cultured expression have been sought after and attained. The tone of the book is bright and buoyant, and its literary standard is exceptionally high.

11. Dr. Allon's Congregational Psalmist Hymnal contains 221 hymns arranged in the manner common with Nonconformist collections, and derived principally from the New Congregational Hymn Book, 1859; its Supplement, 1869; and his own Supplemental Hymns, 1868. Of the 49 hymns under A, 7 are peculiar to it as distinct from Dale, Horder, and the Congregational Church Hymnal. These are by Watts, Deck, Chandler, Hammond, Elizabeth Scott, and two from the German. It maintains more distinctly the names show the collection the historical traditions of Congregational hymnody, and is, from the historical standpoint, the representative book of that body. The music by which it is accompanied is excellent.

12. The latest collection is that issued in 1887 by the Congregational Union as the Congregational Church Hymnal. It contains nearly 300 hymns, arranged in the usual manner, and edited with great care. Of these there are 81 hymns which are peculiar to Horder, Allon, and the New Congregational Hymn Book of 1859, it has thus added there to valuable contributions, and especially from the hymnody of the Church of England. Through this somewhat extensive admixture of Anglican Hymnody it stands out in marked contrast to Dale, with its theological coldness; to Horder, with its poetic warmth and large importation of refined American hymns; and to Allon, with its old-fashioned Congregationalism, broadened out into wider sympathies, and rendered additionally attractive by its admirable musical setting. In hymnological accuracy it is equal to either of these collections; its earnest spirituality is very marked; and its musical setting is excellent.

13. The high position which the hymnody of the Congregationalists has taken is due to many causes. The greatest names are Watts, Doddridge, and Conder. A few in the second rank have produced lyrics of great beauty. The third class is very large, their productions are numerous, and their merits uniformly weak. The freedom which enables any one to publish a collection of hymns, and any congregation to adopt it or not, has had much to do in producing this result. For all who could write there were abundant opportunities for publication, and for the pastor who ventured to compile a collection, there was the certainty, except in instances the most rare, of its adoption by his own congregation, and the encouraging possibility that it might be acceptable unto others. Such elements of success, stimulating authors and compilers, from W. Barton, in 1644, to the Congregational Church Hymnal, in 1887, could not fail to produce much that is of permanent interest and value.

Congreve, George Thomas, b. at Ilingston, 1821, and educated for the medical profession, has practised in London for many years. As a Deacon of the Baptist Church, Ilke Lane, Peckham, and Superintendent of its Sunday School, he has done much to advance the interests of that body, and to popularise Sunday School work. In the interest of Sunday Schools he published, in 1869:—

Gems of Song for the Sunday School. A Hymn-book adapted for General Use in Schools and Families. Lond., Elliot Stock. To this was added Gems of Song from 1871.

Of this collection about one million copies have been sold. Mr. Congreve contributed three to:—

1. Beyond the dark river a land I behold. Heaven.
2. For ever beautiful abide. Heaven.
3. Hark! what voice the silence breaks. Invitation.
4. How sweet (boly) in the Bible, how pure is the light. Holy Scriptures.
5. Look back! 'tis time I marked the road. New Year.
6. Look to Jesus! yes I may. Looking to Jesus.
7. Mark the stiles, frail and fair. Flower Services.
8. O Saviour, dear Saviour, remember me now. Lent.
9. Shepherd sweet, and fair, and holy. Prayer to the Good Shepherd.
10. Sweet Star of the morn. Christ the Morning Star.
11. There is a throne of matchless grace. The Throne of Grace.

Most of these hymns have been repeated in other collections for children. They are elevated in tone and simple and direct in expression; and are specially useful for children's services.

Conrad of Quinseuff was priest at Steinkrich on the Queis, near Lauban, Silesia, and d. 1382 at Lüwenberg, Silesia. B. G. Corner (see below) says that his tombstone in the St. Francis Chapel of the Cloister at Lüwenberg, bore the epitaph composed by himself:—

"Christe, tuum minum salutum facias et optimam, Consistat hic odas, venec lyrique melodias."

After the building had been in use for some time as a military arsenal an examination in this century failed to find any traces of this monument. (See Hoffmann von Fallerleben's Geschichte der deutschen Kirchenlieder, Hanover, 1861, p. 78.) He is the author of a hymn or sacred poem, long popular in Silesia:—

Du lente gut, des jares tiurste quarte. [Easter.] In 5 st. of 17 l. In Wachter's, ii. p. 388; Hoffmann von Fallerleben, p. 78; Kehrein's Katholische Kirchenlieder, 1., 1859, p. 521; from ms. of the 15th cent., at Breslau and Leipzig, and from Cernow's Gross Catholick G. B., Nürnberg, 1531. It is tr. as "Fair Spring, thou season of the year," by H. Winkworth, 1859, p. 88. [J. M.]

Consors Paterni luminis. St. Ambrose. [Early Morning.] This is one of the twelve hymns which the Benedictine editors regarded as undoubtedly the work of St. Ambrose; and it is cited as by St. Ambrose by Hinemar in his treatise, De uni et non trinidad Deitate, 857.

It is found in the Roman, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris (1443), and other breviaries. In the Sarum use it was the hymn on Tuesday at Masses from the Sunday after the Octave of the Epiphany up to the first Sunday in Lent. *Mone, l. p. 372, cites it as an 8th cent. ms. of Trèves, where it is assigned to Tuesday Night: and this is the use of the Roman Breviary. The text, in 3 st., and a doxology, is given by Daniel, l., No. 19 (at iv. p. 37 he cites it as in a 10th cent. Rheinau ms.); Thomassin, l. p. 407; Newman's H. E., 1826 and 1845, &c. It is also found in three ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Yasp. D. xiii. f. 15; Jul. A. vi. f. 25; Harl. 2961, f. 222); in two ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 413, 414; in an 11th cent. ms. in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, No. 391, p. 233; and in the Lat. Hymn, of the Anglosaxons, Nursey Soc., 1851, p. 11, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham. [J. M.]

Translations in C U.

1. Consort of paternal light. By Bp. Mant, in his Ancient Hymns, 1837, p. 8 ed. 1874, p. 19. This was repeated in Kendall's 1863, No. 1447.

2. Thou Consort of Thy Father's throne. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Sion, 1857, p. 13. This is given in the Hammer, 1882, with alterations, as "O Light of Light, O Dayspring bright."

Translations not in C U.

1. Brightness of the Father's glory. By Pope, 1824.
5. Pure Light of Light, eternal day. E. Onslow, 1849.
6. One with the Eternal Light. R. Campbell, 1850.
7. O Partner of the Father's Light. R. Thornton, in his St. Ambrose: His Life, &c., 1879. [J. J.]

Cook, Russell Sturgis, b. at New Marlborough, Mass., March 6, 1811, was educated for the Congregational Ministry, and married a daughter of Dr. Cesar Malan, of Genoa. From 1839 to 1856 he was one of the Secretaries of the American Tract Society. He was the originator of its system of colportage. Subsequently he became Secretary of the New York Sabbath Committee. He also edited the American Messenger. He d. at Pleasant Valley, New York, Sept. 4, 1864. His hymn:

"Christe, tuum minum salutum facias et optimam,
Consistat hic odas, venec lyrique melodias."
Just as thou art, without one trace. Invitation. Was pub. in the American Messenger, March, 1850, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was written as a companion hymn to Miss Elliott's "Just as I am, without one plea," and was sent by the author to her. It was soon adopted by editors of American hymn-books, sometimes in an abbreviated form, beginning with st. ii. as, "Burdened with guilt, wouldst thou be blest?" as in the Sabbath H. Bk., 1838. It became known in Germany through Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862. In that collection it was reprinted from an anonymous tract, in which st. ii. and vi. are omitted. This form of the hymn is usually given in the English collections. Full orig. text in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869-70. [F. M. B.]

Cooke, William, M.A., was b. at Pendlebury, near Manchester, in 1821, and was educated in private schools. In 1839 he went up to Trinity Hall, Cambridge, and took his B.A. degree in 1843, and his M.A. in 1847. Ordained Deacon in 1844, and Priest in 1845, by the Bishop (Blomfield) of London, and having served the Assistant Curacies of Hillingdon, near Uxbridge, and of Myholt and Brantham in Suffolk, he was presented, in 1848, to the Incumbency of St. John's, Charlotte Street, London; in 1850, to the Vicarage of St. Stephen's, Shepherd's Bush; and in 1856, to the Vicarage of Gospel, Suffolk. In 1850, he was a Select Preacher to the University of Cambridge; and from 1849 to 1857, Examining Chaplain to the Bishop (Graham) of Chester, by whom he was made Honorary Canon of Chester in 1854. In 1858 he was elected a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of London. He is the author of The Power of the Priesthood in Absolution, in 1858; Of Ceremonies, Lights and Customs (a Letter to the Rev. T. W. Perry), and various Sermons. In 1843, he issued a Book of Hymns for the use of the Congregation worshipping at St. John's, Charlotte Street, London; in 1853 was joint editor with the Rev. W. B. Denton, of The Church Hymnal; and in 1872 was associated with the Rev. Benjamin Webb, Prebendary of St. Paul's, in the editorship of The Hymnary. For that collection he translated and composed several hymns, his signature in some cases being "A. C. C.," i.e. "A Canon of Chester." [J. J.]

Cooper, Edward. [Staffordshire Hymn-books.]

Copeland, William John, B.D., was b. at Chigwell, Sept. 1, 1804, and educated at St. Paul's School, and Trinity College, Oxford, graduating B.A. 1829, M.A. 1831, and B.D. 1840. He was a Scholar of his College, and afterwards Fellow and Dean. Taking Holy Orders, he became Curate of Hackney, and of Littlemore, and in 1849 Rector of Farnham, Essex, and Rural Dean of Newport. He was also Canon to the Bishop of St. Albans. Died at Farnham, Aug. 25, 1883. Mr. Copeland has published:

Hymns for the Week, and Hymns for the Seasons. Translated from the Latin. Lond., 1826. He was also the Editor of Card. Newman's Sermons. These trs. are mostly from the Roman Breviary, and preceded those by E. Caswall, pub. in 1849. Although they are not extensively used in their original form, yet they had a marked effect on the text of some later translators, and have contributed much towards the compiling of concordances as found in modern hymn-books. Each tr. is annotated in this Dictionary under its first Latin line. In 1847 Mr. Copeland printed translations of Bp. Ken's Morning, Evening, and Midnight Hymns, the first lines of each, reading, (1) "Sugne anima solis aequali;" (2) "Jam nocte laudes Tu Deo;" (3) "Sono Domini mei excitatum." [J. J.]

Cor arca legem continens. [Laws of Jesus.] In the Supplement to Pars Aestiva in the Roman Breviary, Bologna, 1827, this hymn (in 6 st. of 4 l.) is found at p. 221 and is assigned to Lauds on the festival of the Sacred Heart (see "Auctor beate saeculi"); the hymn for Vespers being, "En ut supera criminum." Both hymns are also in Daniel, ii. p. 360. Tr. by E. Caswall in his Latina Catholica, 1849, p. 119, and his Hymn. & Poems, 1873, as, "Ark of the Covenant! not that." In 1839, st. i., iii., v. were given in Hymn for the Chr. of Christ, Boston, No. 378. Other trs. are:

2. O tender Heart, strong ark which doth contain. Miss Multibolland, in Mr. Shipley's Annew Sacrae, 1841. [J. M.]

Cor meum Tibi dedo, Jesu dulcissimae. [Gift of the heart to Jesus.] The authorship and date of this hymn are unknown. The text, under the heading "Ad Jesum," and in 4 st. of 6 l., is in Daniel, ii. p. 570; the Hymnodia Sacra, Miinster, 1728, p. 152, and the Psalteriolum canticorum Catholicae, Cologne, 1722, p. 50. Tr. as:

1. My heart to Thee I give for s;ye. By R. F. Littleclale, contributed to the Priests' Prayer Book, 1864, and the People's H., 1867.
2. I give my heart to Thee, by Rev. Palmer. Concerning this tr. Dr. Schaff says in his Christ in Song, 1869-70, that the Latin text was "freely and happily reproduced by the Rev. Dr. Ray Palmer, for this collection, Aug. 20, 1868. I know of no other English version." Dr. Littleclale's tr., however, was pub. some five years before. Dr. Palmer's tr. was repeated, with alterations, in the 1869 Supp. to the New Cpp.
3. All my heart to Thee I give, by J. Ellerton. Written June 3, 1874, set to music by Dr. John Naylor, and pub. by him as a sacred song. Loud', Newello, 1874. [J. J.]

Corpus meum clarum Domini. [Holy Communion.] This hymn is given by Mon. No. 221, from a ms. at Mainz of the 15th cent. It is in 18 lines, and headed "Oratio metrica composita in elevatio corporis Christi." It is tr. as:

Hail, glorious Body of the Lord, by R. F. Littleclale. It was 1st pub. in the Litta Exegetica, 1853; then in the Altar Manual, 1853; and finally, with alterations by Dr. Littleclale, in the People's H., 1867. [J. J.]

Cosin, John, D.D., s. of Giles Cosin, of Norwich, b. at Norwich Nov. 30, 1584; educated at the Free School of that city and Corpus College, Cambridge. Taking Holy Orders he became (besides holding minor appointments) Prebendary of Durham Castl—COSMAS, ST.

Cosmas, St., The Melodist. (Died cire. A.D. 740.) The second among the Greek ecclesiastical poets. He was adopted by the father of St. John of Damascus, and educated with him by a Sicilian monk also named Cosmas, who had been redeemed from slavery by his adopted father. The two foster-brothers retired together to St. Sabas, and there stimulated, assisted, and vied with one another in the composition of hymns. It is not certain whether some of the Canon, Triodia, and Iliomena under the name of Cosmas may not be the work of the elder Cosmas. (For details of works and criticism see Greek Hymnody, § viii. 3.) He was elected Bishop of Maumna in A.D. 743, and is commemorated in the Greek Calendar on Oct. 14. The story of Cosmas the elder is beautifully told in Milman's Lat. Christ., vol. ii. 364. Daniel, vol. iii., gives 12 pieces by him, and Dr. Neale has tr. in his Hymns of the Eastern Church, 1822, the Canon for Christmas Day, and a cento from that for the Transfiguration. To English readers he is known through the tr. of this cento, "The choirs of ransomed Israel," and its abbreviated form, "In days of old on Sinai."

COTTERILL, THOMAS 263

Cotterill, Thomas, M.A., was the son of a woolstapler at Cannock, Staffordshire, where he was b. Dec. 4, 1779. After attending the local boarding-school of the Rev. J. Lomax, he proceeded to the Free School, Birmingham. He graduated at St. John's College, Cambridge (B.A. 1801, M.A. 1805), of which he became a Fellow. Taking Holy Orders, he became Curate of Tuttonby in June, 1803 (not 1806, as stated by Miller in S. & Songs of the Church). His subsequent charges were the Incumbency of Lane End, Staffordshire, 1808-17, and the Perpetual Curacy of St. Paul's, Sheffield, 1817-23. He d. at Sheffield Dec. 29, 1823 (not Jan. 5, 1824, as in the Gentleman's Magazine), aged 44. His volume of Family Prayers attained to the sixth edition in 1824. As a hymn-writer, Cotterill is less known than as the compiler of a Selection of Psalms and Hymns which has had a most marked effect on modern hymnals. The 1st ed. of that Selection was pub. in 1810, and the 9th in 1820. All subsequent issues were reprints of the last. The most important ed. is the 8th, 1819. Its value and influence are noted elsewhere (see England Hymnody, Church of). To that Selection Cotterill contributed at various dates 25 original hymns and versions of individual psalms. These, in common with all the hymns in the Selection, are given without author's name. Through the aid, however, of marked copies [in the collections of Brooke and Julhau] and of members of Cotterill's family, we are enabled to identify most, if not all, of his original productions. In addition to those which are annotated under their first lines, we have—

Cotterill, Jane, née Boak, daughter of Rev. John Boak, and mother of the Right Rev. Henry Cotterill, Bp. of Edinburgh; b. in 1780, married 1811 to the Rev. Joseph Cotterill; died 1825. Mrs. Cotterill contributed to the Appendix to the 6th ed. of Cotterill's Sel., 1813, the following hymns:—
1. "O! from the world's vile slavery," (For Hallelujah.)
2. "Proclaim!" (For Resignation.) These hymns were rep. in Montgomery's Christian Psalter, 1825, and Mrs. Cotterill's name was appended thereto for the first time. Their use is not extensive. The first, "O! from the world's," &c., is found in Kennedy, 1863, No. 321, as, "From this enslaving world's control," the alterations being by Dr. Kennedy. [J. J.]
the legal proceedings over the 8th ed., 1819. The 8th ed. contained 267 hymns in addition to 128 versions of the Psalms and 6 Doxologies, the 9th only 132. Its full title was A Selection of Ps. and Hymns for Public Worship, Lond., T. Cadell, 1820. It may be noted that copies of the 8th ed., 1819, are found with two distinct title-pages. One of these, accompanied with the preface, was for the public, the second, without the preface, for the use of the congregations of St. James's and St. Paul's, Sheffield.

Of Cotterill's hymns the most popular are, "O'er the realms of pagan darkness," "Let songs of praise fill the sky," and "Jesus exalted far on high," but these are not distinguished by any striking features of excellence. He was more happy in some of his alterations of older hymns, and in the compiling of cantos. Many of the readings introduced into the great hymns of the Church first appeared in his Selection. The most notable amongst these are, "Rock of Ages," in 3 st., as in H. A. & M., 1861, the Wes. H. Bk., and other collections; "Lo! He comes with clouds descending," and "Great God, what do I see and hear." Cotterill's connection with the Uttoxeter Ps. & Hymns, 1805, is given in detail in the article on Staffordshire Hymn-books, and his lawsuit over the 8th ed. of his Sel., 1819, in the article on England Hymnody, Church of [J. Cottle, Joseph, b. 1770, d. 1853. A native of Bristol, and from 1791 to 1798 a bookseller and publisher. He is best known as the friend of Coleridge and Southey, of whom, in 1837, he pub. Recollections, and in 1847 Reminiscences. He was the author of numerous works in prose and verse. In 1801 he pub. a New Version of the Psalms of David, of which a 2nd edition (privately printed) appeared in 1805. In 1828 he pub. Hymns and Sacred Lyrics. In Three Parts, by Constantius. Only a few copies were printed with this title, the greater part of the issue reading "by Joseph Cottle," instead of "by Constantius." "These Hymns, Psalms and Sacred Lyrics," Cottle says, "are all originals, written progressively through a period of 20 years." Some of them found their way into a few collections, but have little poetical merit, and are now disused.

Cotton, George Edward Lynch, d.d., b. at Chester, Oct. 29, 1813, was the s. of Captain Thomas Cotton, who was killed in action on Nov. 13 in the same year. He was educated at Westminster, and Trinity College, Cambridge, graduating B.A. in 1836. His first appointment was as an assistant master at Rugby. From Rugby he passed to Marlborough as Head Master in 1832. In 1858 he was consecrated Bishop of Calcutta, as successor to Dr. Daniel Wilson. He was drowned, on disembarking from a steamer at Calcutta, Oct. 6, 1866. His hymn, "We thank Thee, Lord, for this fair earth" (q.v.) is deservedly popular.

Cotton, Nathaniel, m.d., born in 1797, and educated for the medical profession at Leyden. Giving his attention more especially to brain diseases, he first assisted a physician, who devoted his attention to the insane, at Dumbarton; and they erected a large Asylum at St. Albans. In 1763 the poet Cowper became one of his patients, and, on his recovery, conceived a warm attachment for his medical friend. Dr. Cotton d. at St Albans, Aug. 2, 1788. Several of his hymns appeared from 1760 onwards in Dr. Dodd's Christian's Magazine, some signed "Dr. Cotton, St. Albans," some "N.," and some without signature. His poetical works were pub. posthumously:—

Various Pieces in Verse and Prose, 2 vols., Lond., Dodsley, 1791; and Visione in Verse, &c., with Memoir, 1808. His hymns came into use through Collyer's Coll., 1812. They are:

1. Amid the various scenes of ill. Affliction sanctified. From Various Pieces, &c., 1791.
2. Tell me, my soul, O tell me why. Sin the cause of fear. From Various Pieces, &c., 1791.
3. This is the day the Lord of Life. Sunday. From Various Pieces, &c., 1791.
5. With fierce desire the hunted hart. Ps. 43.

Dr. Cotton's most widely known hymn is, "Affliction is a stormy deep," q.v. It is a part of No. 5.

Huntingdon Hymnody, Countess of.

Cousin, Anne Rosse, née Cundell, is the only daughter of David Ross Cundell, m.d., Leith, and is the widow of the Rev. William Cousin, late Minister of the Free Church of Melrose. She has contributed many poems to various periodicals: 7 hymns to The Service of Praise, 1865, edited by the Rev. J. H. Wilson, of Edinburgh; and 1 to the Ps. and Hymns, for Divine Worship, 1856, the Hymnal of the English Presbyterian Church. 4 of her hymns are included in the Scottish P. Hymns, 1876. Her most popular hymn, "Tae sands of time are sinking," was first pub. in The Christian Treasury for 1857, and gives its title to the collected edition of her poems published in 1876, as Immortal's Land and other Pieces by A. R. C. This is a collection of 107 hymns and poems, many of which are very beautiful. In general they are, however, rather meditations than hymns suited for public worship. Of these the following, in addition to the noted under their first lines, are in C. U.:

2. O Christ, what burdens bowed Thy head. Good Friday.
3. To Thee, and to Thy Christ, O God. Praise.
4. To thy father and thy mother. Filial Duty.

Coverdale, Miles, d.d., a celebrated English Divine and Reformer, b. in Yorkshire, 1487, and educated at Cambridge. He was for some time a Canon of the Order of St. Augustine. On embracing the Reformed Faith, he went abroad, 1528, and associated with Tyndale and various continental Reformers. His translation of the Bible was published in 1535, and the second version of the New Testament, 1538. Returning to England, in 1551 he was promoted to the see of Exeter. On the accession of Mary he went to Denmark, and then to Geneva. At the latter place he assisted his fellow refugees in producing the celebrated Geneva Bible. In 1559, on the accession of Elizabeth, he returned to England, but instead of resuming his see, he accepted the Rectory of St. Magnus, London Bridge. He d. in Feb. 1569, and was buried in St. Bartholomew's church, by the Exchange.
Feb. 19, 1569. For his Goodly Psalms, one of the earliest metrical efforts in the English language, but mainly from the German, see English Poets. § v., and Goodly Psalms. [J.J.]

Cowper, William, the poet. The leading events in the life of Cowper are: b. in his father's rectory, Berkhamstead, Nov. 26, 1731; educated at Westminster; called to the Bar, 1754; madness, 1763; residence at Huntingdon, 1765; removal to Olney, 1768; to Weston, 1766; to East Dereham, 1785; death there, April 25, 1800.

The simple life of Cowper, marked chiefly by its innocent recreations and tender friendships, was in reality a tragedy. His mother, whom he commemorated in the exquisite "Lines on her picture," a vivid delineation of his childhood, written in his 60th year, died when he was six years old. At his first school he was profusely wretched, but happier at Westminster; excelling at cricket and football, and numbering Warren Hastings, Colman, and the future model of his versification, Churchill, among his contemporaries or friends. Destined for the Bar, he was articled to a solicitor, along with Thurlow. During this period he fell in love with his cousin, Theodora Cowper, sister to Lady Hesketh, and wrote love poems to her. The marriage was forbidden by her father, but she never forgot him, and in after years secretly aided his necessities. Fits of melancholy, from which he had suffered in school days, began to increase, as he entered on life, much intensified in ensuing years after his father's death. But on the whole, it is the playful, humorous side of him that is most prominent in his nine years after his call to the Bar: spent in the society of Colman, Bonnell Thornton, and Lloyd, and in writing satires for The Commons and St. James's Chronicle and halfpenny ballads. Then came the awful calamity, which destroyed all hopes of distinction, and made him a sedentary invalid, dependent on his friends. He had been nominated to the Clerkship of the Journals of the House of Lords, but the dread of appearing before them proved a bar to his fitness for the appointment overthrew his reason. He attempted his life with "laudanum, knife, and cord," in the third attempt he actually succeeded. The result of his life now first showed itself—a belief in his redemption by God. But for the present, under the wise and Christian treatment of Dr. Cotton (q. v.) at St. Albans, it passed away; and the eight years that followed, of which the two first were spent at Huntingdon (where he formed his lifelong friendship with Mrs. Unwin), and the remainder at Olney in active piety among the poor, and enthusiastic devotion of his contemporaries (q. v.), were full of the realisation of God's favour, and the happiest, most lucid period of his life. But the tension of long religious exercise, the nervous excitement of leading at prayer meetings, and the extreme despondence (far more than the Calvinism) of Newton, could scarcely have been a healthy atmosphere for a shy, sensitive spirit, that needed most of all the joys of social companionship. A year after his brother's death, madness returned. Under the conviction that it was the command of God, he attempted suicide: and he then settled down into a belief in stark contradiction to his Calvinistic creed, "that the Lord, after having renewed him in holiness, had doomed him to everlasting perdition" (Southey). In its darkest form his affliction lasted sixteen months, during which he chiefly resided in J. Newton's house, patiently tended by him and by his devoted nurse, Mrs. Unwin. Gradually he became interested in carpentering, gardening, glazing, and the tendance of some tame hares and other playthings.

At the close of 1780, Mrs. Unwin suggested to him some serious poetical work; and the occupation proved congenial, that his first volume was pub. in 1782. To a gay episode in 1783 (his fascination by the wit of Lady Austen) his greatest poem, The Task, and also John Gilpin were owing. His other principal work was his Homer, pub. in 1791. The dark cloud had greatly lifted from his life when Lady Hesketh's care accomplished his removal to Weston (1786): but the loss of his dear friend William Unwin lowered it again for some months. The five years' illness of Mrs. Unwin, during which his nurse of old became his tenderly-watched patient, deepened the darkness more and more. And her death (1786) brought "fixed despair," of which his last poem, The Curate, is the terrible memorial. Perhaps no more beautiful sentence has been written of him than the testimony of one, who saw him after death, that with the "composure and calmness" of the face there was mingled, as it were, a holy surprise. Cowper's poetry marks the dawn of the return from the conventionality of Pope to natural expression, and the study of quiet nature. His ambition was higher than this, to be the Bard of Christianity (Benham, p. xvi.). His great poems show no trace of his melancholy, and are full of healthy piety. His fame as a poet is less than as a letter-writer: the charm of his letters is unsurpassed. Though the most considerable poet, who has written hymns, he has contributed little to the development of their structure, adopting the traditional modes of his time and Newton's severe canons. The spiritual ideas of the hymns are identical with Newton's: their highest note is peace and thankful contemplation, rather than joy: most of them are full of trustful or reassuring faith. Ten of them are either submissive (44), self-reproachful (17, 42, 43), full of sad yearning (1, 34), questioning (9), or dark spiritual conflict (38-49). The specialty of Cowper's handling is a greater plaintiveness, tenderness, and refinement. A study of these hymns as they stood originally under the classified heads of the Olney Hymns, 1779, which in some cases probably indicate the aim of Gons under the guidance of the task, as well as the ultimate arrangement of the book by Newton, shows that one or two hymns were more the history of his conversion, than transcripts of present feelings; and the study of Newton's hymns in the same volume, full of heavy indictment against the sins of his own regenerate life, brings out the peculiar danger of his friendship to the poet: it tends also to modify considerably the conclusions of Southey as to the signs of insane madness in Cowper's saddest hymns. Cowper's best hymns are given in The Book of Praise.
by Lord Selborne. Two may be selected from them: the exquisite tender "Hark! my soul, it is the Lord" (q. v.), and "Oh! for a closer walk with God" (q. v.). Anyone who knows Mrs. Browning's noble lines on Cowper's grave will find even a deeper beauty in the latter, which is a purely English hymn of perfect structure and streamlike cadence, by connecting its sadness and its aspiration not only with the "discord on the music" and the "darkness on the glory," but the rapture of his heavenly waking beneath the "pathetic eyes" of Christ.

 Authorities. Lines, by Hayley; Grimshaw: Southey; Professor Goldwin Smith: Mr. Benham (attached to Globe Edition): Life of Newton, by Rev. Jostah Bull; and the Galley Hymns. The numbers of the hymns quoted refer to the Galley Hymns. [H. L. B.]

 Cox, Christopher Christian, M.D., was a Maryland physician, and long prominent in the public service. Born at Baltimore, Aug. 28, 1816, and graduated at Yale College, 1835. He practised medicine in Baltimore, 1838, and in Talbot County, Maryland, 1843. In 1851 he became Brigade Surgeon U. S. A., and resided in Washington. He d. Nov. 25, 1882. He was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. His hymn in C. U. are:

1. Silently the shades of evening. Evening. Written in 1840 or 1846, and pub. in Woodworth's Cabinet, 1847, with music. It is much used in American hymn-books.

2. The burden of my sins, O Lord. Land. Appeared in the Cantata Domino, Boston, 1859, together with two additional originals and two translations. These hymns are unknown to English collections. [F. M. B.]

 Cox, Frances Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. George V. Cox, b. at Oxford, is well known as a successful translator of hymns from the German. Her transl. were pub. as Sacred Hymns from the German, Lond., Pickering. The 1st ed., pub. 1841, contained 49 transl. with the original text, together with biographical notes on the German authors. In the 2nd ed., 1864, Hymns from the German, Lond., Rivingtons, the transl. were increased to 56, those of 1841 being revised, and with additional notes. The 45 transl. were composed of 27 from the 1st ed. (22 being omitted) and 29 which were new. The best known of her transl. are "Jesus lives! no longer (thy terror) now"; and "Who are these like stars appearing?" A few other transl. and original hymns have been contributed by Miss Cox to the magazines; but they have not been gathered together into a volume. [J. J.]

 Coxe, Arthur Cleveland, D.D., LL.D. One of the most distinguished of American prelates, and son of an eminent Presbyterian minister, the Rev. Samuel H. Cox, D.D., was b. at Mendham, New Jersey, May 10, 1818. Graduating at the University of New York in 1838, and taking Holy Orders in 1841, he became Rector of St. John's, Hartford, Connecticut, in the following year. In 1851 he went to England, and on his return was elected Rector of Grace Church, Baltimore, 1854, and Calvary, New York, 1863. His consecration as Bishop of the Western Diocese of New York took place in 1865. His residence is at Buffalo. Bishop Coxe is the author of numerous works. His poetical works were mostly written in early life, and include Advent, 1837; Athanasia, &c., 1842; Christian Ballads, 1840 (Preface to the English edition, April, 1848); Halloween and Other Poems, 1844; Saul, a Mystery, 1845, &c. Some of Bishop Coxe's hymns are found in the collections of every religious body in America, except the official collections of his own. This is accounted for by his too scrupulous modesty. As a member of the Hymnal Committee, in 1869-71, he refused to permit the insertion of his own lyrics. As he has not preserved memoranda, and has no precise recollection of dates, several dates here given are somewhat uncertain.

 2. Body of Jesus, O sweet Food. Holy Communion. Written at St. James's College, Maryland (since broken up by the Civil War), Ascension Day, 1856. It was first printed for private use, and then pub. in the Cantata Domino, Boston, 1859, No. 53, and again in other American collections. It is also in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and in The Churchman's Altar Manual, 2nd ed., 1883.

 4. Christ is arisen. Easter. This is suggested by, and partly tr. from, the famous Easter Chorus in Goethe's Faust, "Christ ist erstanden" (see Goethe), and appeared in Halloween, 1844.

 5. His who for Christ hath left behind. St. Matthew. From his Christian Ballads, &c., 1840.

 7. Lord, when Thou didst come from heaven. A hymn for Epiphany, on behalf of Eastern Missions, appeared among the "Lays" appended to Halloween, 1844, and again in later editions of the Christian Ballads. It is sometimes abbreviated, as in Lyra Sac. Amer., "Westward, Lord, the world alluring."

 8. Now pray we for our country. National Hymn. A stanza from Chronicles, or meditations on events in the history of England, called up by visiting her abbeys and cathedrals, and appeared in Christian Ballads, 1840. Originally it began, "Now pray we for our mother," and, with the succeeding stanza, was a call upon Americans to pray for their mother country. It is adopted by Dr. Martineau in his Hymns, 1873.

 9. O walk with God, and thou shalt find. Holiness. Appeared in his Halloween, &c., 1844, and is found in Lyra Sac. Amer.
Craig, John, was b. in 1512, educated at the University of St. Andrews, and became a Dominican monk. Being suspected of heresy, he went, in 1537, to England, then to France, and finally settled among the Dominicans in Bologna. There, on reading Calvin's Institutes, he embraced and taught his views. Being accused of heresy, he was sent to Rome and imprisoned. He was sentenced to be burnt, August 23, 1539, but escaped at the death of Paul IV. On Aug. 18, 1541, from Rome he went by Bologna and Milan to Vienna, where he preached before the Emperor Maximilian II., who gave him letters of safe conduct to England. Having returned to Scotland, he became minister of the Canongate (then Holyrood House), Edinburgh, in 1541, and in 1542 joint minister with John Knox of St. Giles's. In 1571 he became minister of Montrose, in 1573 Superintendent of Mar and Buchan, and in 1575 of Holyrood and domestic chaplain to James VI. He d. 12th December, 1600.

In the Scottish Psalter of 1561-62, there are 15 Psalm versions by him, viz. : Ps. 24, 56, 75, 102, 103, 110, 111, 112, 132, 136, 140, 141, 143, 145; see the first lines under Scottish Hymnody, § II. 3. They are mostly in r. m. and thus only once repeated in the Scottish Psalter, of 1560, considerably altered, as the second versions of Ps. 136, 143, and 145. Craig's best known work is A shorte and summe of the whole Catechisme, Edinburgh, 1541, reprinted at Edinburgh in 1883, with a careful biographical introduction by T. G. Law. [J. M.]

Cramer, Johann Andreas, b. Jan. 27, 1723, at Jöhstadt, or Johann-Georgen-Stadt, in the Saxen Harz, where his father was pastor. After studying at the University of Leipzig, where he graduated M.A. in 1741, he was in 1748 appointed preacher at Crellwitz, near Lützen, and in 1750 Court Preacher and member of the Consistory at Halle in 1790. Four years later he became German Court Preacher to King Frederick V. of Denmark, at Copenhagen. There he obtained great fame as a preacher and teacher; and was appointed in 1765 Professor of Theology in the University. But after the accession of Charles VII., in 1766, the free-thinking party in the State gradually gained the ascendancy, and procured his removal; whereupon he was appointed, in 1771, Superintendent in Lübeck. When the orthodox party regained power in 1774, he was recalled to Denmark, as Vice-Chancellor, and First Professor of Theology in the University of Kiel, and in 1784 Chancellor. He d. at Kiel on the night of June 11-12, 1788 (Koch, vi. 334-344). A. Deut. Bibl, iv. 550-551; Bode, pp. 54-55—the last dating his birth, Jan. 29.

Cramer was rather a writer of religious lyrics than of hymns, though at least so of his compositions passed into the hymn-books of his times. His Psalm versions are noted under Psalter, German, § VI. Those that have been tr. into English are all included either in the Algemeine G. B., Altona, 1763, or his collection in Sheets, Holstein, or in his Sammelthe Dercksche, Leipzig, 1748-53. They are:

Crashaw, Richard, s. of the Rev. William Crashaw, was educated at the Charter House and Pembroke Hall, and Peterhouse, Cambridge. Of the latter college he became a Fellow, and distinguished himself both in Latin and English poetry. In common with many others he was ejected from his Fellowship for refusing the Covenant. Entering the Roman Communion he went to Paris, seeking preferment. Failing for a time, he was assisted by Cowley, the poet, in 1646, and by him recommended to Queen Henrietta Maria, who was then residing in Paris. Under her patronage he travelled in Italy, and subse-sequently became a Canon in the Church of Loreto. Died in 1659. Prior to his leaving England he wrote his Steps to the Temple, 1646, in which are given versions of two Psalms; and subsequently The Delights of the Musee. Carmen Deo Nostro was pub. posthu-mosously in 1652. It contained hymns both original and translated. His Poems were edited by Turnbull, 1856; and by Dr. Grosart in 1869. [English Poets, § x.; English Hymnody, Crassellus, Bartholomäus, son of Johannes Crasellus, sheepmaster at Wernsdorf near Glauchau, Saxony; was b. at Wernsdorf, Feb. 21, 1667. After studying at Halle, under A. H. Francke, he became, in 1701, pastor at Nidda, in Wetterau, Hesse. In 1708 he was appointed Lutheran pastor at Düsseldorf, where he d. Nov. 10, 1723, after a somewhat troubled pastorate, during which he felt called upon to testify strongly and somewhat bitterly against the shortcomings of the place and of the times (Koch, iv. 418-421; Allg. Deutsche Bünie, iv. 566-67; Bode, p. 55: ms. from the Pastor Baltzer, Wernsdorf; the second dating his call to Düsseldorf 1706). Of the 9 hymns by him which Freylinghausen included in his Geistreiches G. B., 1704, two have been tr.:—

1. Dir. dir. Jehovah, will ich singen. Prayer. A hymn of supplication for the spirit of grace rightly to praise and worship God, founded on St. John, xvi. 25-28, the Gospel for Reformation Sunday. 1st pub. in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 367, in 8 st. of 6 l. Repeated as No. 291 in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and in almost all collections, as in the Berlin
G. L. S., ed. 1823, No. 930.

The well-known tune (known in England as Winchester New as reduced to L. M. in H. A. & M., No. 50) which appeared with this hymn in Freylinghausen, was altered from a melody to 'Wer nur den lieben Gott lasst walten,' in the Musikalisches Handbuch der Geistlichen Melodien, Hamburg, 1789. See L. Erik's Chornbuch, 1883, No. 63, and p. 247; also No. 261.
The common, but erroneous, attribution of this tune to Crassellus arose from confusion between the authorship of the tune and the words. There is no evidence that Crassellus wrote any tunes.

1. Give to the Lord thy heart. 1861. "Offertory."
2. How tenderly Thy hand is laid. 1863. "Resignation."
3. Looking unto Jesus. 1864. "Jesus All in All."
4. Lord, we know that Thou art near us. 1864. "Resignation."
5. O Saviour, I have taught to plead. 1864. "During Secrett."

These plaintive lines were written a short time before her death.

Though gloom may veil our troubled skies. 1864. "Resignation."

CROLY, GEORGE, LL.D., b. in Dublin, Aug. 17, 1810, and educated at the Dublin University (B.A. 1834, LL.D. 1851). After taking Holy Orders, he laboured in Ireland till about 1810, when he took up his residence in London, and devoted himself to literature. In 1835 he succeeded to the united benefices of St. Stephen's, Walbrook, and St. Benet Sherehog, retaining the same till his death, which occurred suddenly in the public street, Holborn, Nov. 24, 1860. His prose publications, in addition to contributions to Blackwood's Magazine, were numerous, and dealt with biographical, historical, and scriptural subjects. His hymns were given in his—

This collection contained 25 psalms, 50 hymns, and 6 poems. Of these 10 psalms, 12 hymns, and the 6 poems bear Dr. Croly's initials. The following have come into C. U. mainly through Windle's Coll.:—

1. Be still, be still, impatient soul. "Patience."
2. Behold me, Lord, and if I do not. "Lent."
3. Lift up your heads, ye gates of light. "Ascension."
5. Teach us, O Lord, this day. "Sunday."
6. Thou, Lord of mercy and of might. "Lent."

All these date from 1854, with the exception of No. 6, which appeared in his Scenes from Scripture and other Poems, 1851. [ ]

CRONENWETT, E., a Lutheran Pastor at Butler, Pennsylvania, U.S.A., contributed to the Evangelical Lutheran Hymnal, Published by Order of the Ev. Lutheran Joint Synod of Ohio and other States, 1880, in addition to 20 texts from the German, the following original hymns, some of which rank with the best in the collection:—

1. A holy state is wedded life. "Domestic Worship."
2. Faith is wisdom from on high. "Faith."
3. Heavenly Father, Jesus taught us. "Prayer."
4. Lord, Thine immensity I adore. "Omniscience."
5. O Triune God, Thy blessing great. "Domestic Worship."
6. Of omniscient grace I sing. "Omniscience."
7. Of Zion's honour angels sing. "Ordination."
8. The precepts of the word are pure. "Holy Scripture."
9. The Spirit's fruits are peace and love. "Fruits of the Spirit."
10. With a marred in our eyes. "Foundation Stone laying of a Church."
11. To thee, our fathers' God, we bow. "Domestic Worship."
12. Unto Caesar let us render. "National Thanksgiving."
13. We have a sure, prophetic word. "Holy Scripture."

CROSSWELL, WILLIAM

Cross, Ada, née Cambridge, daughter of Henry Cambridge, b. at St. Germain's, Norfolk, Nov. 21, 1844, and married, in 1863, to George Frederick Cross, who, in 1870, took Holy Orders as a curate in Eng., and subsequently, after holding various curacies in Australia, became, in 1877, incumbent of Coleraine, in the diocese of Ballarat. Her works include Hymns on the Holy Communion, 1866; Hymns on the Litany, 1865, &c.; and she has also contributed to Lays of the Pious Minstrels, 1862; English Lyrics, &c.; and published a prose story, "The Two Surplices," 1865, and tales in various magazines. Her hymns have attained to some popularity, and are characterized by great sweetness and purity of rhythm, combined with naturalness and simplicity. The best known are:—

1. Humbly now with deep contrition. 1865. "Lent."
3. Light of the world, O shine on us. 1865. "Domestic Worship."
5. The dawn of God's dear Sabbath. 1866. "Sunday Morning."

Crossman, Samuel, B.D. From A. Wool's Athenae Oxoniensis (1720, vol. ii. p. 730) we gather all that is known of this hymn-writer. Wood says concerning him:—

"Samuel Crossman, Bachelor of Divinity of Cambridge, and Probate of Bristol, son of Samuel Crossman, of Bradford, Monachorum, in Suffolk. He hath written and published several things, as The Young Man's Monitor, &c., London, 1664, &c., and several sermons, among which are two sermons preached in the Cathedral of Bristol, 20th Jan., 1679, and 30th Jan., 1680, being the days of public humiliation for the execrable murder of King Charles I. printed at London, 1681, 4to; also a sermon preached 23rd April, 1680, in the Cathedral Church of Bristol, before the Gentlemen of the Artillery Company newly raised in that City, printed at London, 1680, 4to, and An Humble Plea for the quiet rest of God's Ark, preached before Sir John Moore, Lord Mayor of London, at St. Mildred's Church in the Poultry, 5th February, 1684, London, 1682, 4to, &c. He died 4th Feb. 1683, aged 80 years, and was buried in the South Aisle of the Cathedral Church in Bristol" (of which he had been appointed Dean a few weeks before).

Crossman's contributions to hymnody were given in a small pamphlet entitled:—

This pamphlet, which was reprinted by D. Sedgwick, Lond., 1683, contains 9 sacred poems. Of these the following are in C. U.:—

1. My life's a shade, my days. "Resurrection."
   ...This is in e. of 4.1, together with a chorus to each stanza of 4.1. It is sometimes given as "Life is a shade, my days," as in Kennedy, 1683.
2. Sweet place, sweet place alone. Pr. i. "Jerusalem on high."
   ...Pr. ii. These two parts form one hymn.
   ...The most popular portion is Pr. ii. This is given in numerous collections in Britain and America.
3. Farewell, poor world, I must be gone. "Death Anticipated."
   ...This is given in the Comprehensive Hymnal, 1844, and in a few of the older American hymn-books.
4. My song is love unknown. In the Anglican H. Bk., 1865.

CROSSEWELL, William, B.D., was b. at Hudson, N.Y., Nov. 7, 1804; graduated at Yale College, 1822; entered for a time upon law studies, but eventually he entered Hartford College as a Theological Student, and then took Holy Orders in the Protestant
CROWLEY, ROBERT

Episcopal Church in 1829. In 1829 he became Rector of Christ Church, Boston; in 1840, of St. Peter's, Auburn, New York; and in 1844, of the Church of the Advent, Boston. Died suddenly at Boston, Nov. 9, 1851. While at Hartford he assisted, during 1827-28, in editing The Watchman, and contributed to it many of his poetical pieces. His Memoir was written by his father, the Rev. Dr. Crosswell, of New Haven; and his Poems, collected by his father, were edited, with a short Memoir, by Dr. (now Bishop) Coxe, and pub. at Boston in 1860. Of his hymns the following are in C. U.:—

1. Lord, go with us, and we go. Journeying. This in Hymns for the Church and Home, 1860, No. 212, is a portion of his "Traveller's Hymn," 1st pub. in 1833. Concerning it Dr. Coxe says, "When on a journey with him, I reminded him of his 'Traveller's Hymn,' which I had seen but could not remember; and he told me, if I recollect aright, that it was a sort of Improvisation, which bubbled up when he was going with Dr. Wainwright from Boston to New York to attend the General Convention." (Memoir, p. xlii.) In his notes, p. 282, he indirectly fixes the date of composition as 1832. Orig. text in 2 st. of 8 l., in Poems, p. 255.

2. Lord, lead the way the Saviour went. For Sisters of Mercy. Written in 1831 for the Howard Benevolent Society of Boston. Dr. Cox has entitled it "Hymn for Sisters of Mercy," and says he "ventured to give it a name suited to the present state of the Church, in which Deaconesses and Sisters of Mercy are among other realizations of the poet's ardent hopes. Perhaps we owe him to his faithful prayers." (Notes to the Poems, p. 283.) It is generally accepted as the best American hymn for benevolent occasions. Orig. text, Poems, p. 256.

3. New girl your patient leans again. Advent. This hymn for Advent is in 3 st. of 4 l. Poems, p. 209; Hys. for Ch. and Home, No. 55.

4. O Saviour, leave us not alone. Lent. This is from his hymn for Lent beginning, "Thou who, for forty days and nights," in 4 st. of 4 double lines. In its abbreviated form it is found in Hys. for Ch. and Home, No. 89. Orig. in Poems, p. 219, in 4 st. of 4 double lines.

5. We come not with a costly store. Epiphany. For the Epiphany, from his Poems, p. 215, and based upon the Gospel of the day, in 2 st. of 8 l.

6. And now the solemn rite is past. Ordination. This is composed of st. vii., viii., of his poem, "The Ordinal," in Poems, pp. 69-71, slightly altered. "The Ordinal" was written in 1828, and describes minutely his own ordination at his father's church, at New Haven, and the feelings inspired, by the solemnity. It was printed in The Watchman, 1829. (Poems, Preface, p. xviii.) The portion given as "And now the solemn rite is past" was included in Hays's Hymns, 1830.

Dr. Crosswell also tr. the "Veni, Creator Spiritus" (q. v.), as "Come, Spirit, come and bless us." His hymns are mostly unknown to the English collections. [F. M. B.]

CROWLEY, ROBERT. The date of this writer's birth is unknown. He was educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he was elected to a Fellowship in 1842. He acted as a printer under Edward VI. On the accession of Mary, he became one of the Frankfurt exiles. When Elizabeth ascended the throne, he returned, and was successively Vicar of the parishes of St. Giles, Cripplegate, 1556, and St. Lawrence Jewry, 1576. He also became Prebendary of St. Paul's in 1563. He d. June 18, 1588, and was buried in St. Giles's Church, Cripplegate.

Crowley is known to students of early English as the first editor of Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry, of which he printed two editions in 1550. He rendered the Psalter and Litanies, and composed several hymns, 1549, and also pub. In 1550, his School of Virtue and of Good Nature, which was composed of trs. of Latin hymns. He is generally regarded as the first person who rendered the entire Psalter into English verse. Specimens of his version are given in Holland's Psalms of the Netherland, and in Cotton. He was also the author of The Voice of the Last Trumpet, 1566, given in Cooper's Observations Anglo-Scoticns, &c., and of a very rare poem.

"Pleasure and Payne, Heaven and Hell, Remember these four and all shall be well." [J. T. B.]

Crown Him with many crowns, [Christ the King.] Four hymns are found in common use, each of which opens with this stanza. They are:—

1. By Matthew Bridges, which appeared in his Hymns of the Heart, 2nd Ed., 1831, p. 58, in 6 st. of 8 l., and headed, "In the eights diademata multa. Apoc. xix. 12." This was repeated in his Passion of Jesus, 1852, p. 62, where the title runs, "Third Sorrowful Mystery, Song of the Seraphs, Apoc. xix. 12." In treatment and expression it has a more than slight resemblance to Kelly's "Look, ye saints, the sight is glorious" (q. v.). With alterations, and sometimes abbreviations, it appeared for congregational use in the People's H., 1867; H. A. & M., 1870 and 1875; Sarum, 1868; Hymnary, 1872; Hy. Comp., and others.

2. In the Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. and Hys., 1868, there are 10 st. of 4 l., of which 8 st. are from M. Bridges, and 2, i.e., st. vii. and viii. "Crown Him the Lord of Might," &c., are by another hand.

3. In S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, we have a consoled based upon Bridges's text, and thus composed, i. Bridges alt.; ii. Draper alt.; iv. Rev. G. Thring; v. Bridges alt.; vi. from S. P. C. K. as above; vii. ll. 1-4, Rev. G. Thring; vii. ll. 5-8, Bridges.

4. The hymn opening with the same stanza in Thring's Coll., 1882, is practically new. The 1st st. and 1 of the 5th being all that have been adopted from M. Bridges. Its original form in which it first appeared was, "Crown Him with crowns of gold." (In the American College Hymnal, N. Y., 1876.) This was in Dr. Thring's Hymns and Sacred Lyrics, 1871, p. 75, that portion of it contained in the Church Hys., as noted above, having previously appeared in that collection. In 1880, on being transferred to Mr. Thring's Coll., M. Bridges's opening stanza was substituted for the original in order to retain those fine lines:—

"Hark! how the heavenly anthem dawns
All music but its own.
A portion of the original hymn is sometimes given in American hymnals as, "Awake, my soul, and sing." It begins with line 3 of st. i., and is No. 272 in the Bap. H. and Tune Bk., Philadelphia, 1871. [J. J.]
CROWNS OF GLORY

Crows of glory ever bright. T. Kelly. [Jesus Crowned.] 1st pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Hymns on Various Passages, &c., 1806, in 5 st. of 4 l., but in all subsequent editions, after 1806, with alterations and an additional stanza. In modern hymns it is given in Kennedy's, 1863, No. 705, and in Spence's S. G. & G., 1872. The authorized form, but in the People's H., 1867, No. 479, it is abbreviated and altered. It is also in use in America. [J. J.]

Crüger, Elisabeth, née von Menez-ritz, was the daughter of a family belonging to the Polish nobility. Her parents, suffering from the persecutions of these times, had been forced to seek refuge at Wittenberg There, in May or June, 1524, she was married to Caspar Crüger, son of a Leipzig burgess, who had enrolled himself as a student at Wittenberg in 1522. Crüger, who was treated by Luther as his own son and accounted his most hopeful pupil, became in 1525 the schoolmaster of St. John's School and preacher in St. Stephen's Church, Magdeburg; and in 1528 was called to become professor in the philosophical faculty at Wittenberg, but, by Luther's wish, was appointed one of the professors of Theology. Of his wife, who d. at Wittenberg, May 1535, little is known save that she was a friend of Luther's wife, a lover of music, and an affectionate wife and mother: Knecht, i. 281–283; Caspar Crüger, by Dr. Pressel, Elberfeld, 1862, p. 76; Alix, Deutsche Bibl. xvii, 148, &c. The only hymn known as her is:—

Herr Christ, der einig Gotts Sohn. Christmas, 1st pub. in Eyn Enchiridion, Erfurt, 1524. In the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1531, it is given as "Ein geistlich lied von Christo, Elisabet Cretzigerin," and from the Rosstop t. B., 1531, it seems clear that in King's G. B., Wittenberg, 1529, it bore the same title, Wackernagel, iii. pp. 46–47, gives four forms, all in 5 st. of 7 l. In the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 57.

Knecht, 2, 282, calls it "a sublime hymn fully embracing in itself the true power of the Gospel." It has been attributed to Andreas Knöpken, but for this external evidence is entirely wanting, and in the Kirchenordnung, 1537, in which his hymns appeared, this hymn is assigned to C. Crüger. That he as a theologian might have written a hymn such as this, displaying some knowledge of Latin, is more likely. The best evidence for Luther's work is the "Corde natus ex parentibus," which may be granted, but ladies learned in Latin and theology were not unknown in those days.

Translations in C. U.:—

1. The only Son from heaven. A good tr. of st. i., by A. T. Russell, as No. 41 in his Ps. & Hymns, 1851, repeated, with alterations, as No. 119 in Kennedy, 1863.

Tr. not in C. U.:—

(1) "Christ is the only Son of God," by R. Coverdale, 1539, (Remnant, 1846, p. 553). Almost identical with "Christ is the only Son of God," in the God and Godly Ballads (ed. 1656), fol. 14, ed. 1668, p. 127.

(2) "Lord, Christ's eternal Father's," in the Steep. to German Psalmodists, ed. 1655, p. 2. (3) "Christ, that only begotten," as No. 335 in pt. 1. of the Montana H. Bk. 1154.

(4) "Thou Maker of each creature," No. 136 in the Montana H. Bk. 1769, in st. i., iv. of the 1754, rewritten by P. H. Müller. In later ed. of st. vi. of "Herr Jesus, Gnadensonne" (see L. A. Göttler, No. 1) was added.

CRÜGER, JOHANN

Crucis Christi mons Alvernae. [St. Francis of Assisi.] This hymn is given in a Franciscan Breviary, printed at Venice in 1495, as the hymn at first Vespers on the Feast of the Stigmata of St. Francis, Sept. 17th (Paris, 1397, p. 45). It is given, but imperfectly, in Daniel, i., No. 432.

The traditional account of the conferring of the Stigmata, or Marks of the Passion, or St. Francis, on St. Francis of Assisi, is given in his Life, by St. Bonaventura, chapter xiii. (see his Works). The Marks of the Passion are said to have been printed by a Saracen, and on the occasion of one of the yearly visits paid by St. Francis to Mount Alverna, which he was wont to make at the beginning of Lent in honour of St. Michael. St. Bonaventura's account is given in the Nova Biur, where it furnishes the lessons for the second Nocturn at Matins on the Festival of St. Francis. [W. A. S.]

Translation in C. U.:—

Let Alverna's holy mountain, by E. Cawall, in his Masque of Mary, 1585, and again in his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 196, in 7 st. of 6 l. It is given in several Roman Catholic hymn-books for Schools and Missions, including the C. U. No. of Jesus; the Hymn for the Year, and others.

Crüger, Johann, was b. April 9, 1598, at Gross-Brees, near Guben, Brandenburg. After passing through the schools at Guben, Sorau and Breslau, the Jesuit College at Olmutz, and the Poets' school at Regensburg, he made a tour in Austria, and, in 1615, settled at Berlin. There, save for a short residence at the University of Wittenberg, in 1620, he employed himself as private tutor till 1622. In 1622 he was appointed Cantor of St. Nicholas' Church at Berlin, and also one of the masters of the Greyfriars Gymnasium. He d. at Berlin Feb. 23, 1662. Crüger wrote no hymns, although in some American hymnals he appears as "Johann Krüger, 1610," as the author of the supposed original of C. Wesley's "Heart's of stone, relent, relent" (q.v.). He was one of the most distinguished musicians of his time. Of his hymn tunes, which are generally noble and simple in style, some 20 are still in use, the best known probably being that to "Nun danket alle Gott" (q.v.), which is set to No. 379 in H. A. M., ed. 1875. His claim to notice in this work is as editor and contributor to several of the most important German hymnological works of the 16th cent., and these are most conveniently treated of under his name. (The principal authorities on his works are Dr. J. F. Bachmann's Zur Geschichte der Berliner Gesangbücher, 1857; his Vortrag auf P. Gerhardt, 1863; and his edition of Gerhardt's Geistliche Lieder, 1866. Besides these there are the notices in Bode, and in Eitner's Monatshefte für Musik-Geschichte, 1875 and 1880). These works are:—

1. Neue vollständiges Gesangbuch. Augspurgerischer Confession, &c., Berlin, 1640 [Library of St. Nicholas' Church, Berlin, with 248 hymns, very few being published for the first time.

2. Priaux picturae melica. Das ist: Ueber des Gottesspiegel in Christlichen und trostreich von Gesangwurde. The history of this, the most important work of the century, is still obscure. The first ed. has been variously dated 1640 and 1644, while Crüger, in the preface to No. 2, says that the 3rd ed. appeared in 1648. A considerable correspondence with German collectors and librarians has failed to bring to light any of the editions which Knecht, iv. 192, 203, quotes as 1644, 1647, 1649, 1650, 1651, 1652, 1653. The imperfect ed. noted below as probably that of 1648 is the earliest Berlin edition we have been able to find. The imperfect ed., probably 1648..." of 1659, formerly in the hands of Dr. Schneider of Schweinfurt (see Notiz, 1868, No. 264) was inaccessible. The earliest perfect Berlin ed. we have found is in 1661. The ed. printed at Frankfurt in 1656 was probably a reprint of a Berlin ed. c. 1653. The eds. printed at Frankfurt-am-Main by M. Wust and C. J. Franck, p. 1. Spener, and others, appear for the first time, and therein also appear many of the best melodies of the period. As these Berlin and Frankfurt editions are constantly referred to throughout this work, in the notes on German hymns, we subjoin a list of all the editions we have found (not noting duplicates), as present (1867) existing, as follows:

Of the above the Royal Library, Berlin, possesses eds. xiii., xvi., xix., xxiv., xxv., xxvi., xxvi., xlii., xliii., xlv., Nos. 3, 4, 5, 9, 11; while the Hamburg Town Library has ed. xvi., xvi, xvi., and Nos. 1, 3, 4, 8, 10. In addition there are in public libraries in Germany the following, viz., ed. xii., Nos. 2, 4, 6, in the Dresdner Library, Wolfenbüttel, ed. in Dresdner Library, Gottinga; III. xxvi., xxvii., in Dresdner Library, Wernigerode; ed. xiv. in the Royal Library, London; and No. 12 in the Leipzig Town Library. Ed. xii. also in the Library of the Consistory, Berlin, and in possession of the Church at Börnische near Nauen. The British Museum has ed. xiii., xxv., and Nos. 1, 2. In private hands I find in addition that eds. x., xxvii., xxviii., xliii., xliii., are with Professor J. Bachmann, d.d., of Hochst; xliii., Dr. Zahn of Altdorf; xxi., is in my own possession.

3. Geistliche Kirchen-Melodien, &c., Leipzig, 1649 (Library of St. Katharina's Church, Brandenburg). This contains the first stanza only of 161 hymns, with music in four vocal and two instrumental parts. It is the earliest source of the first stanzas of many hymns by Gerhard Franck.

4. D. L. Luther's und anderer vornehmen geistlichen und gelehrteten Männer geistliche Lieder und Psalmen, &c., Berlin, 1665 (Hamburg Town Library), with 372 hymns. This was ed. by C. Hungen, the publisher, and to Crüger contributed some 37 melodies. It was prepared at the request of Lucas Hutten (q.v.), who took for the joint use of the Lutherans and the Reformed, and is the earliest source of the hymns ascribed to him, and of the complete versions of many hymns by Gerhard and Franck.

5. Psalmus Salteri Sacrum, &c., Berlin, 1658 (Royal Library, Berlin). The first section of this work is in an ed. of A. Lowisae's German Psalter; the second, with a similar title to No. 4, and the date 1657, is practically a reprint of No. 4, 16 of those in 1653 being omitted, and the rest of the 319 hymns principally taken from the Praxis of 1656 and the hymn-books of the Bohemian Brethren. New eds. appeared in 1676, 1769, 1784, 1794, and 1736.

Cruttenden, Robert, b. cir. 1691, d. cir. 1728. He was educated for the ministry among the Dissenters, and when a young man frequently preached for the uncle, the Rev. Mr. Bragg. But finding that he did not really believe in the Evangelical doctrines, he gave up the ministry, and betook himself to trade, in which for a number of years he was successful. In his 52nd year, having retired from business, he was living near to Whitefield's Tabernacle, when, his attention being excited by what he heard concerning the preaching there, a strong impulse seized him to go and hear for himself. The result was his conversion through the ministry of John Cennick. Twelve months later he joined a Congregational Church, of which he continued a member until his death, about 20 years subsequently. The narrative of his Experience, as read to this Church on his application for membership, was pub. in 1744, with a preface by Whitefield, and republished in 1790, with the addition of a letter from Mr. Cruttenden to Mr. Cennick. To this narrative his Psalms & Hymns, 17 all in all, were appended. The full title of the Experience is too quaint to be omitted. It is:—

"Sovereign Efficacious Grace displayed in the awakening and converting a Rational, Learned, Aged man, exemplified in the Experience of Robert Cruttenden, Esq., as delivered by himself to the Congregational Church, then meeting in Lime Street, near Lendenhall Market, 1743, in order to be admitted into their society. Published, prefaced, and recommended by the late Rev. George Whitefield, 1744, as an extraordinary effect of the Divine Spirit. To which is prefixed a Letter from Mr. Cruttenden to Mr. Cennick, 1742. Also several Psalms, Hymns, &c., composed by him. Now particularly addressed to all rational Christians for their perusal. London, printed and sold by T. Wilkins, Aldersmary, MDCCLXXIV."

From his Psalms & Hymns in the Experience the following are still in C. U.:—

1. And is it yet, dear Lord, a doubt? Desiring to love God.
2. Did Jesus die, but not for me? Pardon through Jesus.
3. I own my guilt, my sins confess. Lent.
4. Let others boast their ancient line. Adoption.
6. 'Tis false, thou vile accuser, go. Divine Mercy.
7. What adverse powers we feel within. Sin and Holiness. This is part of No. 7.
8. What jarring natures dwell within. Sin and Holiness. This is part of No. 7.

Cruttenden's hymns are full of Christian experience; some, as "Let others boast their ancient line," have a good deal of spirit, and the versification is usually smooth and flowing.

[W. R. S.]

Crux benedicta nitet, Dominus quis carnis popendi. Venantius Fortunatus. (Holy Cross.) This hymn, dating from the latter half of the 6th cent., is found in an 11th cent. ms. in the Bodleian Library, Luc. Inc. 1865, f. 21), and is given in its full form in Fortunatus's Opera Poetica, ed. F. Leo (Berlin, 1881) from a St. Petersburg ms. of the 8th cent. and others. The abbreviated form of the hymn in 1811 is that which is generally known. It is given in Daniel, 1. No. 141, with notes and various readings:
CUMMINS, John James, a of a merchant in Cork, Ireland, was b. in Cork, May 5, 1758. In 1834 he removed to London, and was for many years a Director of the Union Bank of Australia. He d. at Wildcroft, Buckland, Surrey, Nov. 23, 1867. He devoted much time to the study of Hebrew and Theology. He prepared for the use of his children in their preparation for "Seals of the Covenant Opened in the Sacraments." This work, including several hymns and poems, was pub. in 1839. The hymns and other poetical pieces were also pub. in 1839 as Poetical Meditations and Hymns by the Author of The Seals of the Covenant Opened. In 1849 this work was republished with additions as Hymns, Meditations, and other Poems. The title on the cover of this work is Lyric Evangelica, and by this title it is usually known. The hymns, "Jesus, Lord of life and glory," 1839, (A Litany): "Shall hymns of grateful love," 1839, (The New Song), and others are from this work. [J. J.]

Cundall, Anne Ross. [Cousin, A. R.]

Cunningham, John William, M.A., was b. in London, Jan. 3, 1780, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he graduated in honours, and subsequently became a Fellow of his College. In 1802 he was ordained to the Curacy of Ripley, in Surrey. The following year he removed to Ockham, and later to Clapham, where he was curate to the Rev. John Venn, who was the original of Berkeley in The Velvet Cushion. In 1811 he was presented by his family to the Vicarage of Harrow, which he held for fifty years. He d. Sept. 30, 1867. He published, in addition to pamphlets on various subjects:—

1. World without Souls, 1803; (2) The Velvet Cushion, 4th ed. 1814; (3) D' Rance, a Poem, 1815; (4) Morning Thoughts on the Gospel of St. Matthew, 1824; (5) Morning Thoughts on the Gospel of St. Mark, 1827. The two series of Morning Thoughts contained hymns which were given without any signature. As there is an acknowledgment with the verse, in the first case he was assisted by "a friend," and in the second by "friends," it is impossible to distinguish his work from that of his "friends.

With his name and publications the following hymns are associated:—

1. As the sweet flower that scents the morn. Death of an Infant. This poem appeared in The Velvet Cushion (4th ed. 1814, p. 157), in 6 st. of 4. In 1826 it was given in a revised form as a hymn in 3 st. of 4. In the American Episc. Ps. & Hym., No. 131. In the Unitarian Hymn. for the Ch. of Christ (Hedge & Huntington), 1853, No. 762, it is increased to 4 st. It has been attributed to Allan Cunningham, but in error.

2. Dear is the hallowed morn to me. Sunday Morning. This was given in Oliphant & Sons' Sacred Poetry, 4th ed. 1822, in 8 st. of 4. It is signed "Cunningham." In 1833 Bickerstaff gave st. 1-6, vi, as No. 639 in his Christ. Psalms, beginning. "Dear is the hallowed morn to me." This has been repeated in English and American collections.

3. From Calvary a cry was heard. Good Friday. Pub. in his Morning Thoughts on St. Matthew, 1824, p. 103, in 5 st. of 4. It is in some extent the earlier "A voice in the valley," 1827, in 4 st. of 4. This, in Calver's Christian Psalms, 1835, is given as "A voice in the valley," 1827, in 4 st. of 4. It is in some extent the earlier version of the same form in In the Days of Christ, 1824, and in the American Hymn, 1826, and several American collections. It is given as "How [dear is] delightful the thought that angels in bliss." [W. T. B.]

Curtis, John, b. 1754, d. 1857, was a native of Bristol, in which city, engaged in...
Custodes hominum peallimns Angeli. [Guardian Angels.] This hymn is ascribed to Card. Bellarmine. According to Garassius it was added to the Roman Brev. in 1608, by command of Paul V. It was not formally incorporated in the Brev. until after 1682, and, in common use, "Aeterne Rector siderum" (q.v.), in the Venetian Brev., in an Appendix with independent pagination and a separate title-page. It is for Vespers in the Office for "the Holy Guardian Angels. Double of the second class," Oct. 2. It is also one of the few hymns from the Rom. Brev. given in modern French Brevisaries. In the latter, however, it has a different doxology, and the text varies. The Rom. Brev. text is in Daniel, ii. p. 375; and the Paris Brev. in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1855. Tr. as:—

And are there then celestial habitants! by J. Williams, in his Hymns from the Paris Brev., 1839, p. 254. This was repeated in the Child's Christian Year, 1841, and later editions, where it is appointed for "St. Michael and All Angels." It is also tr. as:—"Praise we these ministers celestial." E. Caswall. 1849. [J. M.]

Cutter, William, b. at North Yarmouth, Maine, May 15, 1801, and was removed in childhood to Portland, and educated at Bowdoin College, graduating in 1821. He was subsequently engaged for some time in business in Portland, and again in New York. Died Feb. 8, 1867. Mr. Cutter, who was a member of the Congregational body, was a deserving writer, who, has hitherto missed his due meed of acknowledgment. To his friend Mr. Colesworthy we are indebted for the details of his life and hymnological work. His hymns include:—

1. Thy neighbour! it is he whom thou. Christian Brotherhood. This appeared in the Christian Mirror for May 30, 1828 (Mr. Colesworthy thinks that he set the types for it), and again in Cheever's American Poetry, 1831. An altered form of the hymn, "Who is thy neighbour? he whom thou," soon came into use, and was often printed before it was included anonymously in W. B. O. Peabody's Unitarian Springfield Coll., 1835. From being found in that collection it has been attributed to Peabody in error.

3. She loved her Saviour, and to Him. Thankfulness and Duty. Was 1st pub. in the Christian Mirror, but the date is uncertain. It was reprinted by Cheever in his American Poetry, 1831. In addition to the above, Cutter wrote several hymns which appeared in the Mirror, and in the Sunday School Instructor, of which he and Mr. Colesworthy were joint editors. His hymns are unknown to the English collections.

Cutting, Sewell Sylvester, d. Aug., a Baptist Minister, was b. at Windsor, Vermont, Jan. 19, 1813, graduated at the University of Vermont, 1835, and was ordained at Boylston, Massachusetts, 1836. He was pastor at Southbridge, Mass., from 1837 to 1843. Editor of the New York Recorder, 1843-50.

Curwen, John, s. of the Rev. S. Curwen, of an old Cumberland family, b. at Heckmondwike, Yorkshire, Nov. 14, 1817, and educated at Coward College, and University College, London. In 1838 he became assistant minister in the Independent Church, Basingstoke; co-pastor at Stowmarket in 1841, and pastor at Plaisstow, Essex, in 1844. There he developed and promoted the Tong Sol-fa method of teaching singing, using it in his own schools and church, and lecturing upon it in various parts of the country. Resigning his ministry through ill health, in 1867, he established a printing and publishing business in order the better to create a Tong Sol-fa literature. In 1833 he assisted in founding the Tong Sol-fa Association, for the promotion of that method of singing, and in 1862 the Tong Sol-fa College. He died May 25, 1860. Besides a number of works explanatory of the Tong Sol-fa system, Mr. Curwen was the compiler of Sacred Songs, 1840, and Hymns & Chants, 1844. In 1846 these were combined as The Child's Own Hymn Book. This was enlarged in 1865, and recast as The New Child's Own Hymn Book in 1874. As a Sunday-school hymn-book this collection has been exceedingly and deservedly popular. For it Mr. Curwen composed two hymns:—

1. I'm a little Pilgrim. Present Heavenly. This was written in place of another with the same first line, whose author had refused permission for its use in Mr. Curwen's book. The tune and chorus usually sung with it is American.

2. O what has Jesus done for me! Passion-tide. This was also written in place of another having the same line.

These are the only hymns known to be his. The Sabbath Hymn Book, London, 1859, was also edited by Mr. Curwen. [W. R. S.]

Cushing, William O'reutt, b. at Hingham, Massachusetts, Dec. 31, 1823, is the author of the following hymns which appear in I. D. Salky's Sacred Songs and Solos:—

2. Down in the valley with my Saviour I would go. Trusting in Jesus.
3. Fair is the morning land. Heaven.
4. I am resting so sweetly in Jesus now. Rest and Peace in Jesus.
5. I have heard of a land far away. Heaven.
6. O safe to the Rock that is higher than I. The Rock of Ages.
7. Ringing the bells of Heaven, there is joy today. Heavenly joy over repeating Sinners.
8. We are watching, we are waiting. Second Advent anticipated.

Mr. Cushing has also several additional hymns in some American Sunday School collections, and collections of Sacred Songs. [J. J.]
and 1833-35: and of the Christian Review, 1850-53, and 1855-68. In 1868 he was appointed Professor of Rhetoric and History at the University, Rochester, N. York, and Secretary of the American Baptist Educational Commission. He d. at Brooklyn, Feb. 7, 1882. His Historical 'Visitation of the Baptist' was pub. in 1858. His hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Father, we bless the gentle care. The love of God. Appeared in Hymns for the Vestry and Fireside, Boston, 1841.

2. Gracious Saviour, we adore Thee. H. Baptism. Appeared in Winchell's Additional Hymns, 1832, No. 509 (the author being then but 19); again in the Psalmist, 1843, and others.

3. Great God, Thy glorios bless. Praise to God the Father. Appeared in Linsley and Davies' Select Hymns, 1836-41, No. 514. In the Psalmist, 1843, it was altered to "God of the world, Thy glories shine." This is repeated in several collections, including the Bap. Praise Bk., 1871, in 4 st. of 4 l. In the Bap. Service of Song, 1871, it is given as "God of the world, near and far," is expanded into 5 st., and is dated 1835.

4. O Saviour, I am blind. Lead Thou my way. The True Guide. This hymn, in J. D. Sankey's Sacred S. and Solos, is also by Dr. Cutting. [F. M. B.]

Da Jesus, aus dem Kreuzer Stamm. [The Seven Words.] 1st appeared in the Hanneover G. B., 1645, No. 45, in 10 st. of 5 l., repeated in Crüger's Praxis pietatis melica, 1656, and many later collections. It was evidently written to supersede the older hymn noted under Böckenhain. Frequently, as by Lucas in his Versuche, 1826, No. 209, and the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1882, No. 281, it is ascribed to J. Zwick. But the version of the Seven Words on the Cross given by Wacker- mangel, iii. p. 612, as by Zwick, and 1st pub. 1845, is in 7 st. of 8 l., beginning, "Im ersten Wort der heiligrand Stat," and is entirely different. Tr. as:—

1. Seven times our blessed Saviour spoke. A good and full tr. by Miss Cox in her Sacred H. from the German, 1841, p. 31 (H. from the Ger., 1864, p. 57, slightly altered). In 1848, st. i-viii. were included, unaltered, as No. 135 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk. in full, but slightly altered, as No. 401 in the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. and H. Bk. Omitting st. ix., it was included in Rorison's H. and Anthems, 1851, No. 70; and again in Darlington's H. for the Ch. of England, 1874, altered as, "Seven words our blest Redeemer spoke."

3. My soul, thy great Redeemer see. A tr. of st. l. ix. x., by Miss Borthwick, as No. 70 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "When Christ hung on the cursed tree," by J. C. Jacob, 1722, p. 17 (1732, p. 32), repeated, altered, as No. 142 in p. 1. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1724. (2) "Seven words from Jesus' lips did fall," in Dr. J. Guthrie's Sacred Lyrics, 1869, p. 78. [J. M.]

Da pacem, Domine. [For peace.] An antiphon of the 6th or 7th cent., founded on Ex. Kings xx. 19; II. Chron. xx. 12, 15; and Ps. cxviii. 6. By a Bull of Pope Nicholas III., 1279, it was ordered to be sung at every mass before the Agnus Dei. In the Paris Breviary of 1613 it is given along with a Collect for Peace, which occurs in the Sacra-

The same text is given in the Sarum Brev. (Cambridge Press Reprint, 1882, of the Paris ed., 1531, col. 11), and in the York Brev. of 1498 (Surtees Society's Reprint, 1880, i. col. 942). A tr. in full is given in the Evening Service of the Church of England. In The Prymer in English, reprinted from a Ms. cir. 1410, in Maxwell's Monumenta Ritualia Ecclesiae Anglicanae, 1846, ii. p. 35, they read:—

"Ant. Da pacem. Lord lyue peas in our daies, for ther is noon othir that shal lyue for us, but thou herde us. For Pea. And plenteousnesse in thee tounes. Prei we. For the peas. Deus a quo: God, of whom ben hoolde desiris, in celeris and inst werkis: lyue to thi servauntis peas that the world may ne se, that in oure hertis yeom to thi commandements, and the drede of oure enemies put swet, our tyms be pesible thur bi the defending. The other trs. are from two German versions, the earlier being:—

1. Verleihs uns Frieden gudiglich, given to it by Martin Luther, first in prose in 1527 (Koch, viii. 139), and then in metrical form in King's G. B., 1529. Wackermangel, iii. p. 21, quotes it from the Geistliche Lieder. Wittenberg, 1531; and also gives a form in 4 st. of 5 l., pub. at Augsburg in 1532, st. ii. IV. being founded on the prose collect. In many districts of Ger-

...nde us Holy Here by deinem Wor
(q.v.). In Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 43, a second st. in 5 l., founded on 1 Tim. ii. 1, 2, and on the latter part of the prose collect, beginning, "Gieb unsem Fürsten und aller Obrigkeit," is added; 1st pub. in Das Christlich Kinderlied Dr. Martin Luthers Erheuung und Erlösung, Wittenberg, 1566, ed. by Johann Walther, and thence in Müßell, No. 556, and added to Luther's stanza, as No. 981, in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1853.

The tr. from Luther are: (1) "Lord, in Thy mercy and Thy grace," by Miss Frew, 1845, p. 137; (2) "Lord, in Thy mercy and peace," by J. Anderson, 1816, p. 417, (179); (3) "We Thee, with one accord," by Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 93; (4) "In these our days so perilous," by R. H. Masse, 1824, p. 5, included in Dr. Bacon, 1861, p. 5; (5) "Jehovah, grant us peace through all," by Dr. G. Walker, 1848, p. 39; (6) "Peace in our time, Lord God, bestow," by Dr. G. Macdonald in the Sunday Magazine, 1847, p. 692, and thence in his Ecclesiæ, 1876, p. 97, altered to "Peace to us in Thy mercy grant."

2. Gieb Fried zu unser Zeit. O Herr. A very free version in 3 st. of 10 l., by Wolfgang Capito. Wochensägle, iii. p. 731, quotes it from the Form und Ordnung Guter Gewissen und Psalmen, Augsburg, 1533 (where the order of stanzas is b., a., etc.), and the Strassburg G. B., 1533. Müßell, No. 153, quotes the text from the Gs. Kirchen G. B., Strassburg, 1569, where it is entitled "A hymn of supplication for peace and whole-hearted returning to God, with confession that we have justly merited our unrest by our sin and declension from God." It appeared in many of the German hymn-books up to the middle of the 18th cent., but since then has fallen out of use. The only tr. in C. U. is:—

Gieb Fried zu unser Zeit. O Herr. A full and close tr. in the 1590–61 Psalms of David. In Dave's Psalter, 1565, and many later eds. of the old Version, it is signed E. G. These initials almost certainly denote Edmund Grindal, afterwards Abp. of Canterbury (1575–1583), who lived at Strassburg during the Marian Exile, and is known to have acquired a sufficient knowledge of German to have enabled him to take office in the German Church. It is included in a few hymnals of this cent., e.g. in J. Bickersteth's Ps. and Hymn., ed. 1832, No. 504, rewritten to 4 st. of 10 l., and repeated in this form in E. Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, and Stepp's Songs of G. and G., 1872, &c.

Da puer plectrum, choreis ut canam fidélibus. A. C. Prudentius. [Miracles of Christ.] This poem, written at the beginning of the 5th cent., is given in all editions of Prudentius's Works (Cathemerion, No. 9), including that last pub. in Rome, 1789, London, 1801, Valpy, 1824, vol. i. p. 123. It is also in a ms. of the 5th cent. in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (8084 f. 29 b.). From this poem the hymn, Corde natus ex Parentis ante mundi exordium (the 1st, of which are annotated below), is taken. It usually consists of lines 10–12, 19–27, and 168–111, with slight alterations. In the York Brev., it is given at Compline for the Vigil of Christmas, and from thence to the Oraison of the Epiphany. In the Hereford Brev., it is given for Prime Daniel, i. No. 106, gives the text, together with an extended note relating to various readings, &c. The "Corde natus" text is also in a ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2361 f. 228); and in a ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall. (No. 413); Simrock, p. 38; Bassler, No. 43; Königsmühle, i. p. 49 (with German tr.); Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1836 and 1856; and others. The hymn in the Monastic Brev. "Psalmatitudo coeli" (Tolosa, 1502 f. 131) is also from this poem. In the Hereford Brev. there are at least three other cantus from this poem, viz.: (1) "Corporis formam" for Terce; (2) "Ecce quomodo vates" for Sext; and (3) "Juste Judex" for None.

[W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U. of Corde natus:—

1. Of the Father sole begetten. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the Hymnal X., 1834, (1st ed. 1852), in 6 st. of 6 l. with the refrain "Evermore, and evermore," this refrain and the doxology are not in the original. This tr. is repeated in later eds. of the Hymnal X., the People's H., 1867, the Hymnary, 1872, &c. It is to be noted that some of the lines in this tr. are from Bersford Hope's tr. of the same text in his Hymn. of the Church, 1844. In the Parish H. Bk. it is given as "Of the Father's self begetten." In Lofers Dominici, N.Y., 1883, it is given with st. ii., "He is here, whose tears are in old time."

3. Of the Father's love begotten. This tr. was given in the trial ed. of H. A. & M., 1859, as "Of the Father's will begotten," but in the 1st ed. of 1861 it was given in its well-known form in 9 st. of 6 l. with the refrain, the additional stanzas being supplied by the Hereford Brev. text. The H. A. & M. tr. by Dr. Neale and Sir H. W. Baker is thus composed:—i. Neale altered; ii., iii., Baker; iv., vi., Neale altered; vi., Baker; viii., Neale altered; ix., Baker. This arrangement was repeated in the revised H. A. & M., 1875, and is the most popular tr. of the hymn in C. U. Usually, however, compilers introduce changes and abbreviations to suit their own account, and not always to the advantage of the hymn. These changes are easily collated by any given text with H. A. & M.

Dach, Simon, s. of Simon Dach, interpreter to the Court of Justice at Memel, Prussia, was b. at Memel, July 29, 1865. He attended the Cathedral school at Königsberg, the Town school at Wittenberg, and the Gymnasium at Magdeburg. In 1829 he returned to Königsberg, where, after studying philosophy and theology at the University, he for some time acted as a private tutor. In 1833 he was appointed assistant in the Cathedral school, and in 1836 Corrector. He then, in 1839, became Professor of Poetry in the University, was five times Dean of the Philosophical Faculty, and in 1856–7 Rector of the University. He d. at Königsberg, April 15, 1859 (Koch, iii. 182–191; Ally, Deutsche Biog., iv. 685–688, &c.).
DACH, SIMON

Dach was much of an invalid, and nearly broke down under the hard labour and poor pay of his early tutorial work at Königsberg, but found a true friend and genuine patron in R. Bertholin (q.v.). In his later years the effects of the Thirty Years' War were felt on his health, and he was unable to reside in Königsberg by depression of trade, famine, &c. In 1648 he left Bertholin by death, and in 1649 met with his fellow professors fell victims to the pestilence, while during the last year of his life he suffered from a lingering consumption. These facts explain the somberness of much of his verse. In 1636 he joined in forming the Poetical Union of Königsberg [see Alber], and was its poetic soul. He was the most important poet of the Königsberg School, and one of the few lyric poets of his time—happy in expression, pure in style, and true hearted. But of the mass of his poems (some 1660 in all, many of which were "occasion" pieces for the Electoral Court and for private friends) very few retain popularity; the best known being his Aemlichen von Thrane.

Dach's hymns, some 166 in all, appeared in broadsheet form, in H. Alberti's Arien, 1629-1650, and in the Königsberg Hymn-books, 1639-1696. They deservedly place him amongst the best hymn writers of his time, and win him the distinction of being one of the most lovable, most profound and most gentle of the more contemplative hymn writers. Their personal and subjective character, and the fact that so many of them are hymns of preparation for death, have preserved all but a few from finding a place in modern hymnals.

Five of Dach's hymns have passed into English, all of which are included in the complete edition of his Werke by Hermann Oesterley, pub. at Tübingen, 1876. They are:

1. Ich stehe in Angst und Pein. [Second Ad- rect.] The Königsberg University Library possesses a broadsheet, printed at Elbing, 1642, as a Chrestliche Triener-Lied to Christoph Behm, on the death, on Nov. 22, 1633, of his son Christoph, a student of theology. It was included in pt. iv., Königsberg, 1641, of H. Alberti's Arien, No. 5, in 10 st. of 6 l., entitled "Supreme Judicia ranam non metuit faus suavique, Christus, tuo.", Repeated in Oesterley, p. 91, as No. 1421 in the Leipzig Vorrath, 1736, and, omitting st. viii., in the Wittenberg G. B., 1742-1806, No. 893. The only tr. in C. U. is:

A dread hath come on me, a good tr., omitting st. viii., as No. 28 in Miss Winkworth's C. B. for England, 1863.

2. Kein Christ soll ihm die Rechnung machen. [Cross and Consolation.] 1st pub. in pt. ii., Königsberg, 1640, of H. Alberti's Arien, No. 1, in 7 st. of 6 l., entitled "Non caret adversis, qui pus esse velit." Included in Oesterley, p. 108, and as No. 631 in the Une. L. S., 1851. The form tr. into English is of st. ii., iii., vii., beginning, "Wurdest du mit Christo hofft zu erben," which is No. 812 in Bunsen's Versuch, 1883. The only tr. in C. U. is:

Wouldest thou inherit life with Christ on high?

A good tr. from Bunsen, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 129, and thence unaltered as No. 170 in the New Zealand Hymn., 1872. In Sacred Lyrics from the Germans, Philadelphia, 1859, p. 61, it begins "Couldst thou inherit life with Christ on high?"

3. O wie selig ait ihr doch, ihr Frommen. [Eternal Life.] The original broadsheet, printed at Danzig, 1655, with music by J. Rüffler, as the Musikalisches Erscheltdichthins of Hierz Lepner, Burgmaster of the Königsberg Alstadt, who d. May 9, 1635, is in the Königsberg University Library. Included in B. Ierchau's G. B., Königsberg, 1639, p. 73, in 6 st. of 4 l., repeated in Oesterley, p. 95; the Leipzig Vorrath, 1673, No. 1460; in Burg's G. B., Dreslau, 1744, No. 1068, and many others. It is a fine tr., founded on Rev. xiv., 13-14. Larasmann, in Koch, viii. 673, relates that J. A. Hochstetter, Priest of Bebenhausen, near Tübingen (d. 1729), in July, 1719, summoned his household to accompany him in attending the family burial-place in the Church, and there pointed out his resting-place, spoke to them of eternal life, and ended by requesting them to sing this hymn, and also "Christus der ist mein Leben" (q.v.). The only tr. in C. U. is:

O how blest are ye beyond our telling, a good and full tr., as No. 197 in Miss Winkworth's C. B. for England, 1863.

4. O Herr, wer wurt sein Wohnung hast. [Pr. xiv.] 1st pub. 1528 as above, and thence in Wackenroder's C. B., in 3 st. of 1 l. The tr., almost identical, are: (1) "At the eyes of Bablion," by Dr. Coverdale, 1539 (1st edn., 1551, p. 171). "At the eyes of Babylon," in the Guise and Gaily Ballatas (ed. 1606, fol. 96, ed. 1646, p. 99).

5. DACHSTEIN, WOLFGANG

Dachstein, Wolfgang, was, prior to the Reformation, a monk at Strassburg, and organist at the Cathedral. In 1524 he espoused the cause of the Reformation, and in 1526 was appointed organist and assistant preacher at St. Thomas's Church, which office he held till at least 1530 (Koch, ii. 103-104).

Along with his friend M. Greter (q.v.) he edited the first Strassburg Hymn-book, the Kirchen amt, pub. in 1527. Two of his Psalm versions have been transcribed into English, but he is best known as author of the melody which is set to the first of these.

1. An Wasserflüssen Babylon. [Pr. xxxiv.] 1st pub. 1525, as above, and thence in Wackenroder's C. B., in 5 st. of 10 l. The tr., almost identical, are: (1) "At the eyes of Bablion," by Bp. Coverdale, 1539 (1st edn., 1551, p. 271). "At the eyes of Babylon," in the Guise and Gaily Ballatas (ed. 1606, fol. 95, ed. 1646, p. 99).

DAILY, DAILY SING

Daily, daily sing the praises. & Baring-Gould. [Processional.] This popular processional was written in 1865, and printed on a card for St. John’s Mission, Hinnerbury Bridge, Yorkshire. It was again printed in the Church Times, 1865, and subsequently included in the People’s H., 1867, and other collections. Its use has also extended to some of the American hymn-books. In connection with the Uganda mission a short time before the murder of Bishop Hannington, the following hymn was composed and recorded in the Rock, Sept. 18, 1885, as having taken place in January, 1885. Two native lads who had been kidnapped, but subsequently released, reported—

“That they had been taken with Kakumba and Asha’s boy, as also Serwanga, a tall, fine fellow, a baptized lad whom Majani (the leader of the hostile party) had caught, and Duta’s wife Sarah and her child, to a place outside the capital. That Serwanga, Kakumba, and Asha’s boy had been tortured by having their arms cut off, and were then bound alive to a scaffolding, under which a fire was made, and they were slowly burnt to death. Majani and his men mocked them, and beard them pray now if Masaiya (from Christ) would rescue them from his hands. The lads clung to their faith, and in the fire they sang, Killa ziku tunafa (the hymn, ‘Daily, daily sing the praises.’)” [J. J.]

Dale, Ella, Mrs. Van Alstyne, q. v.

Dale, Thomas, M.A., of Thomas Dale, a bookseller in London, b. at Pountonville, Aug. 22, 1797, and educated at Christ’s Hospital, and Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, graduating B.A. 1822, M.A. 1825. On taking Holy Orders, he became, after holding several curacies, Vicar of St. Bride, Fleet Street, London: Canon of St. Paul’s, 1843; Vicar of St. Pancras, 1816; and Rector of Thetford, Herts, 1860. In 1870 he was nominated to the Deanery of Rochester, but died before induction, May 14, 1870. His poetical works are:

1. The Widow of Nain, 1819; (2) The Outlaw of Sturrock, 1820; (3) Israel and Asha, a tale of the Sand and the Sands, and a New Translation of the Psalms, 1822. These Poems were collected and pub. in one vol. in 1836; 2nd ed. 1842.

From these works the following hymns have been taken:

1. Dear as thou wert, and faithful dear (1819). Burial. In the London Bk. 1833, and several American collections. It is from the Widow of Nain, and is given as a dirge sung at the funeral by the Village Minstrel.

2. O never, never can we know (1822). Good Friday. In the Bap. Ps. & Hym., 1854-56.

5. When the spark of life is waning (1819). A dying request. This is No. viii. of Poems, appended to The Widow of Nain, 1819, p. 69. In Stevenson’s Hymns for C.A. & Home, 1873.

Other hymns of a similar character might be taken from these works with advantage.

Damascene, St. John. [John of Damascus.]

Damiani, or Damian, Peter, Saint, Cardinal, Bishop, and Doctor of the Church, whom Dein Gutenberg calls “The austere reformer of the 11th century,” was b. at Ravenna, about 988. He was the youngest of many children. His mother abandoned him as a babe, and his life was only saved by his being discovered by a faithful female servant, who took care of him until such time as his mother relented and received him back again. Both his parents dying while he was very young, he fell into the hands of a married brother, who, treating him with great harshness and regard for him rather as a slave than a near relation, sent him, “when he was grown up, into the fields to feed swine.” In spite of this treatment, his early development was a virtuous and pious disposition, and another brother, Damian (after whom he is said to have been named), who was arch-priest of Ravenna, took pity on him, and had him educated. The progress he made in learning was the admiration of his teachers, and led very soon to his being employed as a teacher. He was very strict, even as a youth, as regards his mode of life, habituating himself to frequent watching, fasting, inhumation and prayer. Struck with the self-denial of two Benedictine monks, who happened to call while he was working, he embraced their profession, and became a “religious” (in the monastery of Avellino, in the diocese of Gubbio) of the order of the monks of the Holy Cross of Fontavallana. Of that community he, in A.D. 1041, became the Superior, and so extended its usefulness that he was looked upon as the second founder, the first having been Ludolphus, a disciple of St. Romuald. He founded no less than five monasteries under the same rule, the Priory of which remained under his jurisdiction. After twelve years of eminent service to the Church, he was induced by Pope Stephen IX. to accept, in 1057, very much against his own wish, the position of Cardinal-Bishop of Ostia. This, after much difficulty, he was allowed to resign by Pope Alexander II., in 1062, but coupled with the reserve of a power to employ him in important Church matters as he might at any time find needful. With his bishopric he also resigned his post as Superior of his old monastery, where he once more took up his abode. During his retirement (a retirement constantly broken in upon by calls from the Pontiff to proceed in a legatine capacity to settle various questions of importance to the Church in different parts of Europe), he lived a life of extraordinary asceticism and self-mortification. It was on his return journey from Ravenna, whither he had been sent as legate to inquire into the enormities charged against Henry, Archbishop of Ravenna, and otherwise adjust the affairs of the Church there, that he was called to his rest in his eighty-fourth year. He died of fever, at Faenza, in the monastery of Our Lady, on the 22nd or 23rd of March, 1072.

Damiani endeavoured by his literary labours to advance the cause of order and morality, and to add his quota, by no means an insignificant one, in worth or amount, to the church’s store of Latin hymns. “He has left,” as Archbishop Trench remarks, “a considerable body of Latin verse,” but it is only with his hymns that we are concerned in these pages. It is not surprising to find these hymns, the work of such a devoted servant of the Church of Rome, deeply tinged with the superstitions of that Church and of the Church by Protestant minds disdained: but, notwithstanding this drawback, there are very few amongst the compositions of Latin hymn-writers to compare with some of our author’s in vivid word-painting and richness of description. Such compositions as “Ad perennis vitae” and “Eritis mortem rosea pulchra,” in the latter ultima, have very few equals in merit in the school of poetry to which they belong, while the difference between them in thought and treatment is most marked, and exhibits to great advantage the versatility of their composer.

In addition to the two hymns named (see "Ad personam," concerning its disputed authorship), Daniel gave, in vol. i., the texts of four hymns in full, and the first stanza of ten others. The best known in addition to the two named are, "Crux, mundi beneficium," and "Pax aeterni," (q. v.). [D. S. W.]

Dana, Mary S. B. [Shvidler, M. S. B.]

Daniel, Hermann Adalbert, was b. at Kothen, Nov. 18, 1812. He studied at the University of Halle, graduating Ph.D. in 1833. In 1834 he was appointed one of the masters in the Pauologiaum at Halle, in 1837 assistant inspector, and in 1854 professor there. He resigned his offices in 1870, and retired to Drachen. On his return from a visit to Westphalia he d. at Leipzig, Sept. 15, 1871. (Alig. Deutsche Biog., iv. 731–734.)

Daniel was the author of various geographical, scholastic and liturgical works. In the department of Hymnology he is known as the compiler of a very indifferent hymn-book, the Evangeliar Kirchengebundchen, Halis, 1843 (the only fairly good portion of the work being the index of authors compiled by Dionysius Iserwinder, of Halle); and as the author of the article Gesangbuch in Erich and Gruber's Biographiadeut, Leipzig, 1849. In the department of Latin Hymnology, he did good service by his Thesaurus Hymnologicus, 617 hymnorum, cantorum, sequantur, circa annum MIII., medals, collecta auctoris: vol. i. consisting of Latin hymns, Halle, 1841; vol. ii. with Latin sequences, 1843; vol. iii. with Greek hymns edited by R. Verhagen, and Greek hymns edited by L. Spier, 1846; vol. iv. v. vi. v. v. vi. a supplement to vols. i., II, in 1841. It may be characterized as the work of a man who greatly loved his subject, but to whose mind the instinct of accuracy was in great measure wanting. In his first volume he worked with a very imperfect critical apparatus, but in his last two volumes (so far as in many cases he transferred the texts and notes of P. J. Hone altogether) he did much to improve his work. Yet even with the help of the index in vol. v., the work is most unsatisfactory. The index is bad, the arrangement of the work is confusing, and the references, which are very numerous and painfully contracted, have no table of abbreviations. With all its defects it is an invaluable work. It contains the texts of many hymns otherwise easily accessible, and information of much interest and value. It is worthy of exhaustive indices, and in its own department has yet to be superseded. In this dictionary it is quoted as Daniel.

Daniel, Robert T., was b. June 10, 1773, in Middlesex Co., Virginia, and removed in boyhood to Orange Co., North Carolina. He was engaged for some time as a blacksmith and cabinet-maker. In 1803 he was ordained to the Baptist Ministry, and acted as a missionary in North and South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, and Mississippi. Besides being an agent for various Baptist Missionary and Education Societies, he was an influential revivalist. He d. at Paris, Tennessee, 1849. His hymn for Immersion, "Lord, in humble, sweet submission," appeared in Bradwell's Baptist, ed. 1828–31, in 6 st. of 4 l. 1. Wincells Additional Hymns, 1832; and is given in Spurgeon's "O. H. B.," 1865. [F. M. B.] 1.

Dannell, John Jeremiah. b. at Bath, Oct. 6, 1819. In 1848 he was ordained by the Bp. of Manchester. His subsequent charge included the curacies of Germans, Menlo, Kinston-Langley, and others, and the villages of Langley-Fitzurse, Winterburn-Stoke, and Yerewk St. James, Wills, and Langley-Burrell, having been preferred to the last in 1879. Mr. Dannell was the author of several prose works, as: Life of Mrs. Godolphin; The Geography of Cornwall, &c.; and of a poetical work, Lay of the English Cavaliers. His hymns in C. U. are:

Mr. Dannell has also written several hymns for local use: but these have not appeared in the larger and more widely used collections. [J. J.]

DANISH HYMNODY. [Scandinavian Hymnody.

Dank, Dank, sey dir für dein Erbarmen. [Holy Communion.] Appeared as No. 158 in the Hamburg G. B., 1875, in 5 st. of 6 l. Repeated as No. 357 in the Berlin G. B., 1829, and as No. 298 in the Hamburg G. B., 1842. In Dr. A. J. Rambach's Nachricht to the latter it is given as probably by C. C. Sturm, and as first pub. in the 1787 G. B. It was probably suggested by the hymn "Num habe Dank für deine Liebe," in 9 st. of 6 l., which is included as a Post-Communion hymn in J. G. Zollerkofer's G. B., 1736, and still is ascribed to Z. himself. Tr. as:

Thanks, thanks be to Thee for Thy pity. A full and good tr. in Miss Warner's Wayfaring Hymns, 1869 (ed. 1877, p. 49), and thence, omitting st. ii., as No. 442 in Stevenson's H. for Ch. and Home, 1873. [J. M.]

Darby, John Nelson, M.A., youngest s. of John Darby of Leap, King's Co., Ireland, was b. at Westminster, Nov. 18, 1800; educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated in 1819; and in due course was called to the Bar. He subsequently took Holy Orders; but in a short time allied himself with the Plymouth Brethren. In the exercise of his ministry amongst them he visited most parts of the world, and translated the Bible into English, French, and German. His published works, including a Synopsis of the Books of the Bible; Notes on Revelations, &c., are numerous. He d. at Bournemouth, April 29, 1882. His hymns in C. U. are:

1. Mark, ten thousand voices crying, The Second Advent anticipated. Praise. Appeared in Hymn., for the Poor of the Flock, 1895, and repeated in Ps. and Hymns, and S. Songs, Lord, Wallather, 1842, and A Few Hymns, &c., 1846. It is also given in a few collections other than those for use amongst the "Brethren.

2. O Lord, thy love's unbounded. So sweet, &c. God's unchanging Love. Given in A Few Hymns, &c., 1846, No. 4, in st. of 4 1. Another hymn in the same collection, No. 48, begins with the same first line: "O Lord, Thy love's unbounded! So full, so vast, so free!" This is in 2 st. of 4 l., and is attributed in the "a. m." to J. N. Darby, in common with the first.

4. Rise, my soul, thy God directs thee. Divine Guidance. 1st pub. in Hymn., for the Poor of the Flock, 1837; and again in Ps. and Hymns, 1842 (as above); and A Few Hymns, &c., 1846, in st. of 4 l. It is also in Dr. Walker's Cheltenham Ps. and Hymns, 1855–1845.

5. The world is a wilderness wide. Following Christ. This is No. 120, in st. of 4 l., in A Few Hymns, &c., 1846.

6. Though faint, yet pursuing, we go on our way. Divine Strength and Defence. This hymn was given anonymously in the Baptist Ps. and Hymn., 1846, No. 325, in st. of 4 l. In the 1st ed. of the same collection, it appeared as by "John N. Darby (J. N. D. 1841.) Here we have a dualism and an error. The dualism is with respect to the authorship; and the error in the date. A hymn in 1846 cannot be accurately dated "c. 1841." The evidence for the J. N. Darby authorship is most unsatisfactory. We can simply name it "anon."
All these hymns were published anonymously; and the ascriptions of authorship of 1-5 are given from the " s. mss." The same mss. say that he edited the work above referred to: A Few Hymns and some Spiritual Songs, Selected, 1836, for the Little Flock. Lond. Groomebridge & Sons. [J. J.]

Dark was my soul, and dead in sin.
J. Farwell. [Life a Journey.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1782. No. 3, in 12 st. of 4 l., and headed "Thou shalt remember all the way, &c." Dout. vi. 2. From it a c. has come into C. U. as in Snipp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, beginning, "Thus far my God hath led me on." It is composed of st. vii., xi., xii. [J. J.]

Darkly rose the guilty morning.
J. Anstis. [Good Friday.] Appeared in Hymns by J. Anstis, &c., 1826, p. 24, in 4 st. of 6 l. In 1841 it was included in The Child's Christian Year, and repeated in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, the 1874 Suppl. to the N. Cong., and with st. i., l. 6, "thorn-platted," for "thorn-platted;" and st. ii., l. 6, "sad Gethsemane" for "green Gethsemane," in 1858 it was rewritten by Rev. J. Ellerton, for a class of Sunday school children, and given in the Hymn Book for S. Schools & Bible Classes, Brighton, 1858, as, "Now return the awful mourning." This was again rewritten for Church Hymnary, 1871. Of this arrangement st. ii. and iv. are by Mr. Anstis, and i., ii., v. are by Mr. Ellerton. [J. J.]

Darling, Thomas, m.a., b. of George Darling, m.d., b. in London, 1816, educated at the Charterhouse, and St. John's College, Cambridge, graduating B.A. 1838, and M.A. 1841. In 1839 he took Holy Orders, and subsequently became Incumbent of Thanington, near Canterbury, and in 1848 Rector of St. Michael Royaly St. Martin-Vintry, City of London. Mr. Darling published in 1850 Hymns, for the Church of England (Lond. Longman's), arranged according to the Order of the Book of Common Prayer. The last edition (1887) contains 336 hymns, of which about 20 are by the editor. These hymns, which appeared from time to time in the various editions of his collection, are:

1. All saints of the Lord. (1855.) Easter, in the 1857 ed. of the Hymn, this reads, "Ye saints of the Lord."
2. As chief among ten thousand. (1855.) Easter.
3. At early morn the mountain bound. (1855.) For Private use.
4. Behold, I come; and with me bring. (1860.) Sunday next before Advent.
5. Behold, the vineyard of the Lord. (1857.) The Church of Christ.
6. Father of heaven, all nature upholding. (1858.) Trinity.
7. From cleft in Pymenean rock. (1858.) Healing Water. For Private use.
8. Lift high a festal canticle. (1857.) Christmas.
10. The everlasting hills declare. (1855.) Attention. Written at Bagures de Luchon in the Pyrenees, 1856.
11. There are who mount with eagle wings. (1856.) St. John the Evangelist.
12. There is a stream whose waters flow. (1858.) Spring Water.
13. To God the glory, while we tell. (1860.) St. Michael and All Angels.
14. We now with one accord. (1861.) Praise. In the 1877 ed. of the Hymns, &c., this is given as, "Let all men praise the Lord."

15. What light is this whose silvery gleam. (1855.) Epiphany.
16. Who, when beneath affliction's rod. (1855.) Re-
1. Eternal Spirit, Source of Light. Influences of the H. Spirit implied. From Dr. Gibbons’s Hymns, &c., 1769, Bk. ii., No. 29, this passed into several of the older collections. In later works it is more frequently found in the American hymnals than those of G. Britain. It is in 4 st. of 6 l., as in Dr. Hatfield’s Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, and the Leeds H. Bk., 1853.

2. Great God of wonders, all Thy ways. The Pardoning God. This is one of the most, if not the most, popular of the author’s hymns both in G. Britain and America. It has appeared in more than one hundred hymn-books in England alone, sometimes in full (5 st. of 6 l.), and at other times abbreviated, as in Spurgeon’s O. O. H. Bk., 1866; the Bap. Hymnal, 1879, &c. Its 1st publication was in Dr. Gibbons’s Hymns, &c., 1769, Bk. i., No. 59.

3. How great, how very great that God! The Judgment. In Gibbons, No. 37 of Bk. i., in 7 st. of 4 l.

4. Jesus, how precious is Thy name. Jesus the Prophet, Priest, and King. In No. 31 of Bk. ii. in Gibbons, in 6 st. of 6 l. It was very popular, with the older compilers, as Asa and Eben, Rippon, Bickersteth, and others in G. Britain, and also in America; but in modern collections it is rarely found. It is worthy of notice.

5. Lord, I am Thine, entirely Thine. Holy Communion. In Gibbons this is No. 28 of Bk. ii., in 7 st. of 4 l. It is very popular in America, but unknown to most English hymnals. In all editions of Rippon’s col., 1787–1844, it is given in 2 st. as “Lord, I am Thine, entirely Thine?” The hymn, “While to Thy table I repair,” in the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, is compiled from this hymn.

6. What strange perplexities arise. Self-Examination. This hymn is equal to No. 5 in American popularity, and exceeds it in G. Britain. In Dr. Hatfield’s Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, it is abbreviated and slightly altered. Full text in 6 st. of 4 l. is in Spurgeon’s O. O. H. Bk., 1866. It was 1st pub. in Gibbons’s Hymns, &c., 1769.

7. While we remember the Day. This hymn, besides appearing in its original form in some collections, and with abbreviations in others, is also the source of “On Thee, our Guardian God, we call,” st. iv. of the original given in a few American collections; and of the same arrangement of stanzas, “On Thee we call, O Lord, our God,” in the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and others. The original in Gibbons is Bk. i., No. 56, in 8 st. of 4 l.

The remaining hymn by Davies have failed to attain a position in the hymn-books either of G. Britain or America. [F. M. B.]

Davis, Richard, b. 16-8, d. 1714, was a native of Cardiganshire, received a liberal education, and in early manhood was for some years master of a grammar school in London. In 1689 he received an invitation to the pastorate from the Independent Church at Bothwell (or Rowell), in Northamptonshire, and with this church he spent the remaining 24 years of his life. He was a remarkable man, and, in connection with his Evangelistic labours in the region round about, anticipated Wesley’s institution of lay-preachers. He pub. a volume of 168 hymns. The date of the 1st ed. is unknown. The title of the 2nd ed. is:—

Hymns Composed on Several Subjects, and on Other Occasions; in Three Parts. With an Alphabetical Table. By R. Davis, minister of the gospel. The second edition. Some of the Hymns composed by other hands. London: Printed for W. Marshall, at the Bible, in Newgate street; and H. Barnett, at the Bible in the Poultry, 1694. A 7th ed. was published in 1748, with a recommendatory preface by Dr. John Gill, who in his youth had received much spiritual stimulus and guidance from Mr. Davis. The 8th ed. by J. A. Downes, of Mitchell Street Chapel, London, appeared in 1833.

However acceptable these hymns may have been to the villagers of the midland counties of England 190 years ago, they are too defective in metre, and altogether too uncouth in style for use now, and are of interest only to the student of early English hymnody.

Davis, Thomas, M.A. son of Dr. R. F. Davis, Rector of All Saints, Worcester, and of Pendock, Worcestershire, was b. Feb. 15, 1878. He was educated for the law, and practiced as a solicitor for two years. He then entered Queen’s Coll., Oxford, and graduated B.A. in 1834, and M.A. in 1837. On taking Holy Orders he became Curate of All Saints, Worcester. In 1839 he was preferred as Incumbent of Rowndhay, Leeds. Mr. Davis’s works, in which his hymns appeared, are:

1. Devotional Verses for a Month, 1855.
2. Songs for the Suffering, 1859.
4. Hymns, Old and New, for Church and Home, and for travel by land or sea; consisting of 223 selected, and 266 Original Hymnls, Lond., Longmans, 1864.
5. Annum Nuntius, or, Hymns in Verses for every day in the Year, 1877.
6. Help Homewards in Verses for every Day in the Year, 1863.

The hymns given in the earlier of these works are generally repeated in the later.

Of Mr. Davis’s hymns the best known are

1. “O Paradise Eternal!”
2. “Holiest, holiest, hearken in love!”
3. “Tis sweet on earth to wake at morn”;
4. “Let every voice for praise awake”;
5. “Baptized into the Name.”

Many of Mr. Davis’s hymns are of considerable merit, and his works should be consulted by all hymn-book compilers. The selected hymns in his Hymns, Old & New are marked thus †. The rest are#

From his various works the following hymns are in C. U., outside of his Hymns Old and New in addition to those named and others, which are annotated under their respective first lines:

1. From Devotional Verses for a Month, 1855.
   3. Heavy and dark the clouds o’erhang. Good Friday.
   4. I will not mourn my weakness, Lord. Affliction.
   5. From the Family Hymnal, 1869.
   7. Sing, ye seraphim! Universal Praise.
   8. From Hymns Old and New, 1864.
   9. Day by day and year by year. Old and New Year.
   10. Does one small voice within the soul? Conscience.
   12. Father, venerable us grace divine. Morning.
   13. Great Father of our race. God the Father.
   15. I thank Thee, Lord, for every night. Morning.
   16. In holy contemplation, Give me, &c. A Bad Harvest.
   17. Let every voice for praise awake. God is Love.
   18. Lord, send Thy Spirit from above. For an Increase of Charity.
   19. My Father keeps me through the night. Morning.
   20. Our God is love, O sweetly sing. God is Love.
   21. The floods lift up their waves, O God. For use at Sea.
there is a cento from this hymn, st. 1, 10, 12, 13, 17-20 being employed. In his Hymn. of Love & Praise, 1863, p. 82, Dr. Monseell gave st. 13-20, beginning, "Jesus! Gentle Sufferer! say." This, with the addition of a doxology, was repeated in his Parish Hymnal, 1875.

Dayman, Edward Arthur, b.d., 3rd a. of John Dayman, of Mambury, N. Devon, b. at Padstow in Cornwall, 11th July, 1807, and educated at Blundell's School, Tiverton, Devon, and Exeter Coll, Oxon. 1st Class in Lit. Hum. 1829, B.A. 1830, M.A. 1831, B.D. 1841. He was for some time Fellow and Tutor of his College, and Pro-Proctor, 1835.

Taking Holy Orders in 1835, he became successively examiner for Univ. Scholarship for Latin, 1838; in Lit. Hum., 1838-9, and 1841-2, Sen. Proctor of the University 1840, Rector of Shilling-Okeford or Shillingstone, Dorset, 1842; Rural D.n., 1849; Proctor in Convocation, 1852; and Hon. Canon of Bilton in Sarum Cathedral, 1862. His works include Modern Infidelity, 1861, and Essay on Inspiration, 1864. He was joint editor with Lord Nelson and Canon (afterwards Bishop) Woodford of the Sarum Hymnal, 1868; which contains trs. from the Latin, and original hymns by him; and with Canon Rich-Jones, of Statuta et Consuetudines Ecclesiae Cathedralis Sarisburicensis, 1883. He also contributed several trs. from the Latin to The Hymnary, 1872.

He has been for many years engaged in compiling an English Dictionary of Medieval Latin founded on Du Cange. The original hymns contributed by him to the Sarum Hymn. 1868, are, with the dates of their composition, as follows:

1. Almighty Father, heaven and earth, q.v. (1867.) Offertory.

2. O Lord, be with us when we sail. (1865.) For use on Sea.

3. O Man of Sorrows, Thy prophetic eye. (1865.) Tuesday before Easter.

4. Sleep thy last sleep. (1866.) Burial.

5. Upon the solitary mountain's height. (1866.) Transfiguration.

6. When the messengers of wrath. (1867.) During Pentecost and Fasting.

7. Who is this with garments dyed? (1866.) Monday before Easter.

Days and moments quickly flying. E. Caswall. (Old and New Year.) This hymn appeared in 4 st. of 4 l. with the title, "Swiftness of Time," in his Masque of Mary and Other Poems, 1858. With it was also given, under the title of "A Warning," one stanza, beginning "As the trees fall, So must it lie," &c. From these, together with abbreviations, additions, or alterations the following centos have been made:

1. In Caswall's Hymnals, 1864, the two with alterations.

2. In H. A. & M., 1864, the same without alterations.

3. In the Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. and Hvs., 1864, the first hymn, 4 st. with two additional stanzas.

4. In Hymnary, 1870-2. The first hymn of 4 st. with alterations, and a 5th st. by the editors.

5. In Church Hymns, 1871, a new cento of which st. 1, 2, 3, 4, are from the first hymn, much varied; v. viii. from S. P. C. K. Ps. and Hys. altered, and v. viii. from the compilers.

6. In H. A. & M., 1875, the first hymn of 4 st. slightly altered, and a new stanza.

7. In Thring's Coll, 1892, the same first hymn with alterations by the editor.

Other centos found in a few additional collections are in American use. Orig. texts in Caswall's Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 250. [J. J.]
De Courcy, Richard, a. M., b. in Ireland in 1743, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. Having received Deacon's Orders, he became, in 1767, Curate to the Rev. Walter Shirley: but his theological views being obnoxious to Dr. Smythe, the Archbishop of Dublin, he was refused Priest's Orders and inhibited from preaching. These circumstances led to his being invited by Lady Huntingdon to England, and his joining her band of preachers. After some time, through Lady Huntingdon's influence, he obtained Priest's Orders from the Bishop of Lichfield. In 1770 he became Curate of Shrewsbury, Salop, and in 1774 Vicar of St. Alkmund's, Shrewsbury. The latter he retained to his death in 1803. His theological views, work, and other matters concerning him, are dwelt upon with some detail in the Life and Times of the Countess of Huntingdon, 1839. His published works include Some Elegiac Lines on the Death of the Rev. G. Whitefield, 1771: Christ Crucified, a reply to Dr. Priestley, in 2 vols., 1791; and various Sermons, &c. In 1775 he also published—

A Collection of Psalms and Hymns Extracted from different Authors, with a Preface by Mr. De Courcy, Shrewsbury, 1775. (Preface dated 'Shrewsbury, December 6, 1775.')

To the 2nd ed. of this Coll., pub. in 1782, several hymns were added, amongst which the following are by common consent attributed to De Courcy:

1. Angels who the throne surround. Praise of Christ.
3. Jesus the Saviour's perpetual theme. Christ, the Son of Sharon.
4. Lord, I thank Thee for Thy grace. Thanksgiving.
5. Mount, my soul, to things above. Looking Heavenly.

These hymns are attributed to De Courcy on the ground that they cannot be found in any collection or work published before his Coll., and that they have never been claimed by or on behalf of any other hymn-writer. All the hymns in his Coll. were pub. anonymously. Other hymns, sometimes attributed to him, have been traced to earlier hymns, and are consequently omitted from the foregoing list.

De profundis exclamation. [All Souls.] This anonymous Sequence from the Missal of Liége, of 1502, is given in the Ncabo's Sequenices, 1822; Daniel, v., p. 320; and Kerala, No. 880. Tr. as:

Christ, enthroned in highest heaven. By R. F. Littlefield, written for and 1st pub. in the People's H., 1867, No. 400, and signed "A L F."

De War, John. Born at Bristol, Rhode Island, 1736, and educated at Brown University. Subsequently he was Professor of Chemistry in that University, from 1817 to about 1838. He also lectured in medical schools at St. Louis, and in Vermont. His later life was spent at Bristol, R. I., where he died in 1862. His version of Ps. 118, "Angel bands in strains sweet sounding," appeared in a Providence newspaper about 1815, and again in the Journal of that city in an obituary notice of the writer. It was but locally known till included in the Protestant Episcopal Hymnal, 1871, by the writer's relative, Bishop Howe, of Central Pennsylvania.

Deacon, John, b. 1757, d. 1821, half-brother to Samuel Deacon (q.v.), joined in early life the G. Baptist Church at Barton, Fabis. At the expiration of his apprenticeship he studied for the ministry under the Rev. Dun Taylor, and in 1782 became pastor of the G. Baptist Church, in Friar Lane, Leicester. In 1791 the G. Baptists of the new connection, desiring a new Hymn-book, requested J. Deacon to prepare a Selection for their use. This was pub. in 1800. But the book was not adopted by all the churches, chiefly in consequence of alterations in some of Dr. Watts's hymns, disapproved of on doctrinal grounds. With most, however, it found favour, and a 2nd and enlarged ed. was pub. in 1804, containing 746 hymns. In the Appendix to this vol. are 11 hymns by John Deacon, all prepared for use at S. School anniversaries. In 1829, Deacon's collection was revised by a committee appointed by the G. Baptist Association, and, the expressions objected to being amended, it was formally adopted as the hymn-book of this Connection. This position it held until 1851 [see Bapt. Hymnary, 11. 1.]. Besides the 11 hymns mentioned above, J. Deacon composed 33 others, which were sung by his congregation on special occasions, and still exist in ms.

[W. R. S.]

Deacon, Samuel, b. 1746, at Bath, in Leicestershire, d. 1816 at Barton, near Market Bosworth, in the same county. He was s. of Samuel Deacon, sen., one of the first preachers of the Leicestershire General Baptists; and half-brother to John Deacon (q.v.), of Leicester. In 1771, S. Deacon settled at Barton, a small agricultural village, where, however, he presently established a considerable business as clock and watchmaker, and became well known for his mechanical skill. In 1779 he was invited to assist his father in ministering to the cluster of village congregations of General Baptists, of which Barton was the centre. He was popular and useful as a preacher, and continued minister of this church 37 years, receiving no pecuniary recompense, but himself contributing liberally to various religious enterprises. In 1785 he published a vol. entitled, A New Composition of Hymns & Poems chiefly on Divine Subjects; designed for the Amusement and Edification of Christians of all Denominations, more particularly them of the Baptist persuasion. Leicester: printed for the author by George Ireland. It contained 63 hymns, and 20 meditations. Subsequent editions were considerably enlarged, and the collection became known as the Barton Hymns. S. Deacon's style is very homely, and of his numerous hymns, "O who can comprehend the rest?" (Heaven), and "Ye heavy-laden souls" (Invitation), represent most, if not all, now in C. U. S. Deacon was also the author of several religious books, some very popular in their day, and most of them in metre, but they do not contain any of his hymns. [See Bapt. Hymnary, 11. 1.] [W. R. S.]

Dear Angel! ever at my side. F. W. Faber. [The Guardian Angel.] Appeared in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1840, and his Hymns, 1842, in 13 at of 4. It is in use in an abbreviated form in various Roman Catholic hymns for Schools and Missions. In some collections st. i.—vi., somewhat altered, and with the addition of a doxology, are given as: "Dear Jesus, ever at Thy side." It is in the Plymouth Coll., 1835, and other American hymn-books, in addition to the New Cong., 1839, and other English hymnals. In Methodist S. Scholars' H. Bk., 1870, the opening line is "Blessed Jesus, ever at my side;" whilst in one or two collections it is again changed to "Dear Saviour, ever at my side." This last is almost confined to America. The object of these changes is to adopt a Roman Catholic hymn for Protestant use by substituting our Blessed Lord for "the Guardian Angel." [J. J.]

Dear Lord, accept a sinful heart.
W. Cooper. [Self-neculunans.] 1st pub. in J. Newton's Twenty-Six Letters on Religious Subjects, &c., by Draper, 1774, in 6 st. of 4 l, and again in R. Couper's Coll. of the same year. It was also included in the Olney Hymns, Bk. iii., No. 26. It is found in a few modern collections, including Dr. Dale's English H. Bk., 1879.

Dear Lord, on this Thy servant's day.

Dear Lord, Thy descend ing love.
J. F. Watts. [Holy Baptism.] Appeared in his Hymns on Believers' Baptism, 1778, in 7 st. of 4 l. In this, its original form, it is unknown to modern hymnals. Altered from the above, it was given as, "Dear Lord, and tell Thy pardoning love," in 4 st. in Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 446, and from thence has passed into various collections in G. Britain and America. It is composed of st. 1, iv., v., vi., as with slight alterations in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1860, No. 927. [J. J.]

Dear Refuge of my [the] weary soul.
Anne Steele. [God the Refuge.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i. p. 144, in 8 st. of 4 l, and headed, "God the only Refuge of the troubled mind" (2d ed. 1780), and in D. Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863, p. 89. It was given also in the Bristol Bapt. Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1769, and in Bickersteth's Christ. Psalmody, 1833, and thus brought into congregational use. It is included in numerous hymnals, both in G. Britain and America. In some collections, as the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., 1833-68, it is given as, "Thou Refuge of my weary soul;" and again, as in Kennedy, 1863, "Thou Refuge of the weary soul." [J. J.]

Dear Saviour, tell us where.
B. Beddome. [H. Baptism. Adult.] 1st pub. in Robert Hall's (posthumous) ed. of Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 907, in 5 st. of 4 l, and headed "Follow me, and be my Peace." In a few collections, including the American Bapt. Praise Bk., 1871, st. iv., v., slightly altered, are given as: "Here, Saviour, we come." [J. J.]

Dear Saviour, when my thoughts recall.
Anne Steele. [Lent.] 1st pub. in Miscellaneous Pieces, which were added as vol. iii. to her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, in 1780, pp. 73-80, and not in the Poems in 1769, as stated in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., No. 616, where it is given in an unaltered form. It was reprinted in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Miss Steele's Hymns, 1863, p. 137, the original title reading "Penitence and Hope." Its use in America is extensive. [J. J.]

Dearest of all the names above.
I. Watts. [Reconciliation through Christ.] 1st pub. in the 2d ed. of his Hymns and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. ii., No. 118, in 5 st. of 4 l, and entitled, "God reconciled in Christ." It was included in many of the older collections such as those of Whitefield and Toplady, and has continued to hold a prominent place in hymn-books to the present. Its use, especially in America, is extensive. [J. J.]

Death cannot make our souls afraid.
I. Watts. [Death of Moses.] Appeared in the 1st ed. of his Hymns and S. Songs, 1707, in 4 st. of 4 l. Although included in the older collections of Toplady and others, it has almost died out of use in G. Britain. In America it is found in a few modern hymnals, and sometimes as "Death cannot make my soul afraid," a reading which appeared in Toplady, 1776, No. 82. [J. J.]

Death has been here, and borne away.
Jane Taylor. [Death.] In the 4th ed. of Original Hys. for Sunday Schools, 1816, No. 16, in 7 st. of 4 l, this hymn takes the place of one on the same subject and in a similar strain, which appeared in the 2d ed. of 1813, as "Now one of our number," or "Death has been here," &c., has been in C. U. for many years, and is found in several modern collections for children, but usually in an abbreviated form. [J. J.]

Death is sin's tremendous wages.
T. Kelly. [Wages of Sin.] 1st pub. in the 3d ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1860, No. 500, in 5 st. of 6 l, and based on Rom. vi. 23. In some collections, st. iii.—v. are given as "Come, behold a great experiment," as in the Scottish Hymn. Union Hymnal, 1878, and the Metrical Hymn. Domini, New York, 1884. [J. J.]

Death may dissolve my body now.
I. Watts. [Assurance of Heaven.] 1st pub. in his Hymns and S. Songs, &c., 1709, Bk. i., No. 27, in 6 st. of 4 l, and entitled, "Assurance of Heaven: or a Soul prepared to die." Its use in its full form, except in America, is limited. In Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., No. 857, "With heavenly weapons I have fought," is composed of st. ii.—iv., slightly altered. The original hymn, with slight alterations in st. v. only, was included in the draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as No. xxxiii. In the authorized issue of the Trinit. and Pard., 1781, a recast of the original was given as No. iv., "My race is run, my warfare's o'er." The alterations were numerous, the first line dating from the Draft of 1751: and in the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (q.v.) are ascribed to him. It must be designated, Watts, 1709, S. Tr. and Pard. 1781, W. Cameron. [J. J.]

DEATH! TIS A

Hand, Licensed and entered Sept. 12, 1693, this hymn appears, as the second of two on the "Death of Saints." It is in 4 st. of 8 l., and 1 st. of 4 l, No. xxxvi. In Dr. Kennedy's "Hymno, Christi," 1863, No. 1478, the first half of st. iii. is omitted, and the rest of the hymn is somewhat extensively altered, and brought more in harmony with modern forms and modes of expression. The Penitential Odes, together with J. Mason's "Songs of Praise," were reprinted by D. Sedgwick in 1859. [J. J.]

Death! 'tis a melancholy day. I. Watts. [Death of the Wicked.] Appeared in the 1st ed. of his Hymns and S. Songs, 1707 (2nd ed. 1709, Bk. ii. No. 52), in 6 st. of 4 l. It is usually abbreviated as in Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872. In the Fresb. Ps. & Hgs. for the Worship of God, Richmond, U.S.A., 1867, No. 561: "He is a God of sovereign love," is from this hymn. [J. J.]

Deathless principle, arise. A. M. Toplady. [Death Anticipated.] This hymn first appeared in "A Memoir of some Principal Circumstances in the Life and Death of the Rev. Ann Toplady, late Vicar of Broad Hembury, Devon. To which is added, written by himself, the Dying Believer's Address to his soul, and his own last Will and Testament. London, Pr. for J. Matthews, 1715, pr. ed." On p. 24 of this Memoir we read:

"The following solitary, written some years ago by Mr. Toplady upon the death of a valued friend, has been thought so appropriate to himself in his own dying hour that it is presented without any further apology."

After a sentence referring to the Emperor Hadrian, and his poem, "Animalia, vagula, blandula," &c., and a note embodying Pope's translation of Hadrian's "Animula," &c., and of "Musculus Versus" the poem, "Deathless principle, arise." follows, in st. of irregular length. It was subsequently shaped into 4 st. of 8 l., and in this form is given in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1860, p. 165. In its full form it is found in many collections, both old and new, but usually for private use. In some American collections a cento is given beginning: "Deathless spirit, now arise," as in Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, whilst in others, as Longfellow & Johnson's Unitarian Hgs. of the Spirit, Boston, 1864, there is a second cento, "burst thy shackles! drop thy clay!"

Debils cessant elementa legum. Abbe Boumaunt. [The Circumcision.] In the revised Paris Breviary, 1736, it is the hymn for first Vespers on the Feast of the Circumcision. It is also in the Lyra and other modern French Breviaries, and Card. Newman's Hymns Ecclesiastics, 1828 and 1865. Trans.:--

1. The ancient law departs. By the compilers of H. A. & M., 1st appeared in the trial copy of that collection, 1856, and again in the 1st ed. 1861. It has passed into a few hymnals in Great Britain and America, and is sometimes altered.

2. The Law's weak elements. By the Editors of the Hymnary, 1872. It is an arrangement of the tr., of I. Williams, 1839, and H. A. & M.

Translations not in C. U.:

1. Ye legal elements. I. Williams. 1839

Decius, Nicolaus (Nicolaus a Caria or von Hofe, otherwise Hovech), seems to have been a native of Hof, in Upper Franconia, Bavaria, and to have been originally called Tch. He became a monk, and was in 1519 Probst of the cloister at Steterburg, near Wolfenbüttel. Becoming favourable to the opinions of Luther, he left Steterburg in July, 1522, and went to Brunswick, where he was appointed a master in the St. Katherine and Egidien School. In 1523 he was invited by the burgesses of Stettin to labour there as an Evangelical preacher along with Paulus von Rhode. He became preacher at the Church of St. Nicholas; was probably instituted by the Town Council in 1526, when von Rhode was instituted to St. Jacob's; and at the visitation in 1533 was recognised as pastor of St. Nicholas's. He died suddenly at Stettin, March 21, 1541, with some suspicion of being poisoned by his enemies of his Roman Catholic faction (Koch, l. c. 412-412, 471, 472; ii. 488; Alte. Deut. Richt., iii. 791-793).

He seems to have been a popular preacher and a good musician. Three hymns are ascribed to him. These are versions of the "Sanctus," the "Gloria in excelsis," and the "Agnus Dei." The second and third are noted under these Latin First lines. He is also said to have composed or adapted the melodies set to them. [J. M.]

Dock, James George, eldest s. of John Dock, of Bury St. Edmunds, was b. in 1802 and educated for the army, and became an officer in the Indian service. Retiring from the army, and having joined the Plymouth Brethren, he undertook, in 1813, the charge of a congregation of that body, at Wellington, Somerset. In 1852 he went abroad and settled in New Zealand. His hymns were published in Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, 1837-8; Psalms and Hymns, &c., Lond., and Walther (containing those in the former collection), 1842; the Wellington Hymn Book, 1857; Hymns and Spiritual Songs, 1860. Of his hymns now in use outside his own denomination, the greatest part appeared in the 1837-8 book, and are found in his brother-in-law's (Dr. Walker's) Cheltenham Ps. & Hgs., 1855. His compositions are marked by directness of aim, simplicity of language, and great earnestness. The rhythm is good, and an expressive tenderness pervades many of them. Although dealing mainly with the "Second Advent," there are several on other subjects which are of more than average merit. In a collected form they were published in his Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1876. The more important of his hymns are annotated under their respective first lines. Of the rest we have:

1. From Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, 1837.

1. Behold ye bright and countless throng. All Saints. Repeated in Maurice's "Choral H. Bk.," 1811.
2. How long, O Lord, our Saviour. Second Advent desired. In the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1875, this is altered to "How long, O Lord, how long?"
4. Lord Jesus, are we (we are) one with Thee? One with Christ. In Walker's Ps. and Hgs., 1855-80, and several American hymn-books.
5. Lord, we are Thine, our soul to Thee art. One with Christ. Originally in 4 st. of 8 l., it appeared, in a re-

The 11th cent. Durham ms. printed in the Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1831, p. 39, this is given as a Daily Hymn for Sext in Lent, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is in a ms. c. 890, in the Bodleian (Junius, 29 f. 126 b.) In the British Museum it is found in three ms. of the 11th cent. (Harl. 2261 f. 236; Jul. A. vi. f. 44; Vespa. D. xii. f. 48 b). The text is also in Daniel, i., No. 65, and in his vol. iv. p. 333, readings are added from a 9th cent. ms. at Bern. It is tr. by J. D. Deiner Kinder Sammelplatz, N. L. von Zinzendorf. [Burial of the Dead.]

Ist appeared as No. 212 in the “Zweiter Anhang bis 1754,” to the Kleine Brüder G. B., London, 1754, thus: — Deiner Kinder Sammelplatz, Alleingesang lieber Schatz! Der hat, wie man hat versperr'n, Wieder eines mehr bekomm'n.

Eine Seele, die so da Zu den Füßen Jesu, Weis' und heil'ge Seele, Ah! der liebeandlinder.
Die ist auf Vocation Ausgeruscht aus ihrem Thon, Von dem Seitenwundenblitz Eingeschmelt in ihren Ritzen.
Herr! weisst du, was ich mach', Was ich denke zu der Sach? Hätte mich mein Herr gestatt', Hätt ich vielleicht nein gesagt.
Aber da nun schon bist, Wo dein rechtes Pfauen ist, Ja du hab dich nicht zu den, Als zu schweigen und zu ruhn.
Lämmlein, dieses Mitglied da Gehst uns freilich sebre naeh, Aber bist du uns nicht mehr, Als das eigene Leben war?

This form is quite unsuited for public use, though Knapp, in his 1815 ed. of Zinzendorf's Geistliche Lieder, p. 174, has tried to recast it — without much success. It was probably written between 1749 and 1755. Laukhans, in Koch, viii., 651, however says that it was written 1746, on the death and funeral of an only brother. In the Brüder G. B. of 1778 it was included as No. 1729, with st. ii., iii. omitted, and otherwise greatly altered and much improved by Christian Gregor. This text, which begins, “Aller Gläubigen Sammelplatz,” is No. 1563 in the Berlin G. L. S. ed. 1863. It is the usual funeral hymn among the German-speaking Moravians, and through the Württemberg G. B. of 1842 (No. 630) has become a great favourite in South Germany. Thus Koch, vii. 207, relates of Dr. C. G. Barth of Calw: —

On the 18th of November [1862], according to his own desire he was buried in the grave of Macklolf [his pre-DENHAM, David, b. 1701, was the s. of Thos. Denham, a Baptist minister in the East of London. He began to preach when very young, and in 1810 became pastor of the Baptist Church at Horsemann Common. In 1816 removed to Plymouth, in 1826 to Margate, and in 1834 to the Baptist Church in Unicorn Yard, Tooley Street, Southwark. Ill-health compelled him to resign his charge in London, and he soujourned for a time at Chelsea, and Oxford. He d. in 1848 at Yeovil, in Somerset, and was buried in Bunhill Fields Burial Ground, London. In 1837 he pub. a collection of hymns, as:

The Saints' Melody. A New Selection of upwards of one thousand hymns, Founded upon the Scriptures, Containing the Doctrines of Distinguishing Grace, and adapted to every part of the Christian's experience and devotion, in the ordinances of Christ. &c., 1851. This edition contained 1026 hymns. The number was subsequently increased to 1145 hymns.

This Selection is still in C. U. in more than one hundred congregations in G. Britain and the colonies. Denham's hymns, all of which are signed "D. Denham," are numerous. There is also one, apparently by his wife, "Mrs. M. A. Denham." Outside of his own Selection his hymns are rarely found. The best known is "Mid secures of confusion and creature complaints." [W. R. DENNY, Sir Edward, 287

Brethren, and has contributed largely to their hymnody. His first publication, in which many of his hymns appeared, was A Selection of Hymns, Lond. Central Tract Depot, 1839. This was followed by Hymns & Poems, Lond., 1848 (third ed., 1870). He has also published several prose works. Many of his hymns are popular, and are in extensive use as:—A pilgrim through this lonely world; Bride of the Lamb, rejoice, rejoice; Bright with all His crowns of glory; Light of the lonely pilgrim's heart; Sweet feast of love divine, and several others. In addition to these, which are separately annotated, and those which are confined in their use to the congregations of the Brethren, there are also nearly 20 in limited use in G. Britain and America. Of these the following appeared first in his Selection of Hymns, 1839; then in the Appendix to Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, 1841; and then in his Hymns & Poems, 1848–70:—

1. Break forth, 0 earth, in praise. Praise for Redemption. This is given in several collections in G. Britain and America.

2. Children of God, in all your need. The Great High Priest. In limited use.

4. Children of light, awake, awake. Advent. This hymn is an application of the Parable of the Ten Virgins to the Second Coming of Christ.

5. Dear Lord, amid the throng that pressed. The Holy Women at the Cross. The use of this hymn in America is somewhat extensive.

7. Joy to the ransomed earth. Jesus the King. Its use is limited.

8. Lo, us the heavenly army. The Second Advent. The original of this hymn is in a st. of 10 l., and as such it is usually given; but in the People's Hymn, 1861, it is arranged in 4 st. of 8 l., and is also slightly altered.

10. O what a bright and blessed world. The New Earth. This hymn is based upon Gen. v. 29, as interpreted from a Millennial point of view. Christ is regarded as the Rest (North-west) of His people, and the manifest glory of course from the earth.

11. Sweet was the hour, O Lord, to Thee. Christ at the Well of Sychar. Limited in use.

13. Through Israel's land the Lord of all. Mission to the Jews. In addition to its use in its full form, it is also given as:—O Zion, when thy Saviour cometh, as in Dr. Walker's Ps. & Hymns, 1835–71; Steeple's Songs of G. & O., and others. This opens with st. ii.

14. 'Tis finished—all our souls to win. Jesus the Guide and Friend. In several collections.

15. 'Tis He, the Mighty Saviour comes. Missions. From the sheep, and one or two others.

16. 'Tis night, but O the joyful morn. Hymn. In a few hymnals; also, beginning with st. ii., Lord of our hearts, beloved of Thee, in Dr. Hatfield's Church Bk. N. Y., 1872.

17. To Calvary, Lord, in Spirit now. Good Friday. This is given in several hymnals, including Spurgeon's O. B. Bk., 1866, &c.

The next is in the Selection of 1839, and the Hymns & Poems, 1848–70:—

The three with which we close are from J. G. Deck's Ps. & Hymns, 1812, Pt. ii., and the Hymns & Poems, 1848–70:—

19. Mark to the trumpet, behold it breaks. The Bema. The design of this hymn is thus described by the author: "These lines are supposed to be the utterance of the saints at the blessed moment when they actually ascend to heaven, as described in 1 Cor. xv. 51–57; and 1 Thess. iv. 16–18. It is given in several collections."

20. Isles of the deep, rejoice, rejoice. Missions.

21. Where, in this waste, lonely, and desert world! Rest for the Weary. Its use is limited. [J. J.]

Dent, Caroline, great-granddaughter of John Collet Ryland, and a grand-niece of John Ryland (q.v.), was b. Aug. 14th, 1815, at Milton, near Northampton, where she still resides [1887]. In 1854 Miss Dent pub. Thoughts & Sketches in Verse. Most of these pieces were of her own composition; and the rest were contributed by her sister, Mrs. Tres- trail [Trestrail]. The hymn Jesus, Saviour! Thou dost know (The Sympathy of Jesus) is part of a piece of 13 st. by Miss Dent in this volume. It is in the Bap. Ps. & Hymns, 1858, and the Baptist Hymnal, 1879, &c.

In 1961 the sisters were joint authors of a small book of consolatory verses, entitled Our Darling, printed for private circulation; and in 1867 Miss Dent edited The Letters of Miss Frances Ryland. She has also written Sunshine in the Valley, a Religious Tale (1858).

[W. R. S.]

Deny Thee! what, deny the way? [Denial of Christ] This poem appeared in Emma Parr's Thoughts of Peace, 1839, in 4 parts, Nos. 361–364, and signed "H. H." Of these parts i.–iii. are combined and altered in Kennedy, 1863, No. 1353, making a hymn of 5 st. of 8 l. and 1 st. of 5 l. Other arrangements are given in the American Bk. (1838) (4 st. of 4 l.); the Bapt. Praise Bk. N. Y., 1871 (2 st. of 4 l.). [W. T. B.]

Depth of mercy, can there be. C. Weale. [Desiring Mercy and Pardon.] 1st pub. in Hymns & Soc. Poems, 1740, and headed "After a Relapse into Sin," in 13 st. of 4 l., P. Works, 1868–72, vol. i. p. 271. When included in the West. H. Bk. 1780, No. 162, st. iii. was omitted, and st. viii. was included in st. ii., the result being 6 st. of 8 l. This arrangement was continued in later editions, and has passed into other collections, both in G. Britain and America. In Stevenson's Moth. H. Bk. and its Associations, 1870–83, it is an interesting and pathetic account of an actress and her change of life through the instrumentality of this hymn. The account has been reprinted in many books and in various forms. It is of American origin, and first appeared, as far as can be traced, in Belcher's Historical Notes on Hymns and Authors. Although possibly true, it lacks authentication. No one has yet ventured to say whether the circumstances occurred in G. Britain or America, or whether it was in the last century or in this. Failing these details, we are not surprised that the names of the town and of the actress are both wanting. [J. J.]

Der Glaube bricht durch Stahl und Stein. N. L. von Zinzendorf. [Following Christ.] According to the Nachricht to the Breuder G. Bk., 1778, this was written after the edict of Jan. 1, 1727, by which Zinzendorf was forbidden to hold religious meetings in Dresden. In his Deutsche Gedichte, 1735, p. 121, it is, however, dated 1728. It appeared as No. 5 in the "Andreze Zugabe," c. 1739, to his 8-Sammlung geistl. und lichtlicher Lieder (3rd ed., 1731), No. 1059, in 8 st. of 8 l.
Lieder und Psalmen, Leipzig, 1582, the other from the Dresden O. B., 1583. The latter, in 5 st. of 4 l., a included as No. 448 in the Urz. L. S., 1851.

In the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, there are three hymns which all seem to be intended as trs. of st. 1. These are: (1) "Lord Jesus Christ, my life and light," No. 744. (2) "Lord Jesus, may I constantly," No. 753. (3) "Lord, in the morning when we rise," No. 763. In the current ed., 1886, No. 1173 is Nos. 752 and 748; while No. 1174 is No. 763, with two original st. added, of which ii. was No. 747 in 1789, and iii. was st. iii. of No. 856 in 1881.

[J. M.]

Descend from heaven, immortal Dove. [Christ in Glory]. I st pub. in his Hymns & S. Songs, 1707 (2nd ed., 1709, Book ii, No. 23), in 6 st. of 4 l. In the older collections two arrangements are found, the first dating from Whitefield's Coll., 1753, No. 79, and the second from Toplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1778, No. 387 (later eds. No. 367), the last stanza of the latter being altered from Watts, Bk. ii, No. 47, by Toplady. In modern hymnals these stanzas have given place to others. The full and original text is rarely found in the hymn-books. [J. J.]

Descend, immortal Dove. [Whitsuntide]. This hymn is No. xlviii. in the "a. ms." in 4 st. of 4 l.; is dated "Sept. 11, 1737," and headed, "The love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Spirit. Rom. v. 5." It was included in J. D. Humphrey's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 253, and again in J. D. Humphrey's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 284.

[Deeseream, anima, lectulum soporis. St. Anselm of Lucca. [Love to Christ]. This is a 14-line poem found in J. B. Whiting's Coll., 1852.]

The same text is in J. B. Whiting's Coll., 1852. This tr. is in Mrs. Charles's Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 175, as "Rise, my soul, from slumber, leave the bed of death." Another tr., beginning with st. iii. in Trench, was in St. Jude's, 1864, p. 19. [J. M.]

Dessler, Wolfgang Christoph, s. of Nicolaus and Marie, was b. at Nürnberg, Feb. 11, 1690. His father wished him to become a goldsmith, but, as he was not physically suited for this, he was permitted to begin the study of theology at the University of Altdorf. His poverty and bodily weakness forced him to leave before completing his course, and, returning to Nürnberg, he supported himself there as a proof reader. Becoming acquainted with Erasmus Fontain and Francis, then residing in Nürnberg, he was employed by Francis as his amanuensis, and at his request translated many foreign religious works into German. In 1705 he was appointed Consecutor of the School of the Holy Ghost at Nürnberg, where he laboured with zeal and acceptance till...
DESSLER, WOLFGANG C.

were omitted, and the rest altered in metre; and thence as No. 141 in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876.

Other tr. are: (1) "O Jesu! lobe whose radiation," by J. Gambeid, as No. 623 in pt. i. of his German H. Bk., 1856 (No. 312). (2) "My soul, whom in heavenly places," in J. Shephard's Foreign Sacred Lyre, 1857, p. 18.

iii. Was wohl ist mir, O Freund der Seelen. [The Love of Christ.] Founded on Canticles viii. 5. 1st pub. 1692, as above, p. 134, along with Meditation vi., which is entitled "The penitential foraking and embracing." Included as No. 451 in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and recently as No. 438 in the Univ. L. S., 1851, in 8 st. of 10 l. Lauthmann, in Koeh, viii., 243, says of it:

"This hymn dates from the period when Dessler as a youth was reading in his native town of Nürnberg in ill health. He had given up the occupation of goldsmith and set himself to study at Altdorf, but lack of money and of health compelled him to abandon this also. He then maintained himself as a proof reader in his native town, became the spiritual son and scholar in poetry of Erasmus Franciscus, in whose powerful faith he found nourishment in his sorrows. Through his linguistic attainments, as well as his hymns, he furthered the edification of the Christian populace; and what he here sung may have afforded stimulus to himself in the still greater troubles which he afterwards had to endure during his curateship, and finally in his last thirty-five weeks illness."

Fischer (ii, 391) calls it—

"One of the finest hymns of Pietism, that has produced many blessed effects, and has been the model and incitement to many hymns of like character."

It is tr. as:

1. How well am I, Thou my soul's lover, in full as No. 621 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1724. Greatly altered, and omitted as st. iv., as No. 295 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789, beginning, "How blest am I, most gracious Saviour," and continued thus in later eds. In 1840 Dr. Martineau included a hymn in 4 st. of 4 l., beginning, "What comforts, Lord, to those are given," as No. 294 in his Hymns, &c. (ed. 1873, No. 394). Of this st. i., ii. are based on st. i., st. iii. on st. ii., and st. iv. on st. iii. of the 1789.

2. O Lord, how happy is the time, a somewhat free tr. of st. i.—w., with st. i., slightly varied, repeated as st. vi., by Greweill of the Matheson. Contributed to the H. & Sacred Songs, Manchester, 1855 (ed. 1856, No. 226), repeated in the Sunday Magazine, 1872, p. 741, and in Dr. G. Macdonald's Threefold Cord, 1883, p. 38. In the H. for the Sick Room, N. Y., 1850 (1861, p. 79), and H. of the Ages, 3rd Series, Boston, U.S., 1861, p. 233, it is considerably altered. This text is given in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 491, further altered, and beginning, "O Friend of souls! how blest the time;" Miss Winkworth's tr. of st. v., altered, being substituted for Mrs. Matheson's. In the Meth. Epis. Hymnal, 1878, No. 613, is st. i., ii., v. of Schaff's text.

3. O Friend of Souls, how well am I, a good tr. omitting st. iii. by Miss Winkworth in her Epis. Hymnal, 1st Series, 1855, p. 147 From this I. 1-4 of st. i., of, altered, were taken as No. 513 in H. of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1864.

Another is: "Te soli in fide, O Friend unfailing," by Miss Burlingham in the British Herald, 1864, p. 157, repeated as No. 395 in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

Hymns not in English C. U. —

From this work (the references to which have been kindly supplied by Dr. Zahn of Altdorf, from his copy), five hymns have been tr. into English, viz.:—

Hymns in English C. U. —

1. Ich lasst dich nicht, du musst mein Jesus bleiben. [Constancy to Christ.] Founded on Genesis xxiii. 36. 1st pub. 1692, as above, p. 553, along with Meditation xvii., which is entitled "The persevering love." Weizel (A. H., vol. ii., pt. iv., p. 20) says it was sung, at her request, Sept. 5, 1726, at the deathbed of Christiana Eberhardina, a pious Queen of Poland. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 728, in 9 st. of 10 l. Translated as—

I will not let Thee go, Thou art my Jesus ever," by Dr. J. W. Alexander, 1st pub. in Dr. Schaff's Kirchenfreund, 1851, p. 140 (reprinted in the Christian Treasury, Edin. 1851, p. 371), and included in his The Breaking Crucible, &c., N. Y., 1861, p. 19. In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 554.

2. Mein Jesu dem die Seraphinen. [Ascension.] Founded on Jeremiah x. 7. 1st pub. 1692, as above, p. 348, along with Meditation xii., which is entitled "Christ's kingly and unapproachable glory." Thence as No. 278 in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and recently as No. 422 in the Univ. L. S., 1851, in 8 st. of 8 l. Translated as—

1. Jesus, whose glory's streaming rays, a spirited tr., omitting st. vii., viii., by J. Wesley, in Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 89). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, st. i.-iii. were included as No. 129 (ed. 1875, No. 133), and st. iv.—vi., beginning "Into Thy gracious hands I fall," as No. 131 (ed. 1875, No. 136). Recently the first part has been given in America as No. 64 in H. L. Hastings's Hymnal, 1880, and the second as No. 496 in the Meth. Epis. H. Bk., 1849, and as No. 464 in the Pennsylvania Luther. Ch. Bk., 1868.

2. O Jesu, Lord, anointed in glory, a good tr. of st. i., ii., v., by A. T. Russell, as No. 199 in his Ps. & Hymns, 1851.

3. My Jesus, whom the seraph host, a good and full tr. by R. Massie, for the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., No. 135 (omitted in Ox. ed.), reprinted in the translator's Lyric Domestica, 1864, p. 129.

My Jesus, if the seraphim, a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth in the 2nd series of her Lyra Germ., 1858, p. 50; and thence, unaltered, in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 342. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 67, st. iv., vii., 1720, when, by a stroke of paralysis, he was forced to resign. Finally, after an illness which lasted about 33 weeks, he d. at Nürnberg, March 11, 1722. Of his hymns, in all over 100, the best appeared, many with melodies by himself, in his volume of meditations entitled:

From this work (the references to which have been kindly supplied by Dr. Zahn of Altdorf, from his copy), five hymns have been tr. into English, viz.:—
Deus Creator omnium Polique rector. St. Ambrose. [Saturday Evening.]
St. Augustine in his Confessions, Bk. ix., refers thus to this hymn:

"And behold, the corpse of his mother was carried unto the burial; and we went and returned without tears.
It seemed also good to me to go and bathe, having heard that the bath had its name (βαθής) from the Greek Bathos, for that it drives sadness from the mind.
And this also I confess unto Thy mercy, Father of the fatherless, that I bathed, and was the same as before I bathed.
For the bitterness of sorrow could not exude out of my heart. Then I slept, and woke up again, and found my grief not a little softened; and as I was alone in my bed, I remembered those true verses of Thy Ambrose. For Thou art the

"Maker of all, the Lord.
And Ruler of the bright,
Whose robes are gay in light, hast poured
Soft numbers o'er the night.
That to our limbs the power
Of toil may be renewed,
And hearts be raised that sink and cower
And sorrow be subdued,"
New ed. 1771, p. 195.]

St. Augustine also speaks in his De Musica,
Lib. vi. c. 9, of singing the verse "Creator omnium,"
The authorship and date
[340-357] of this hymn as thus authenticated, have never been disputed.

The popularity of this hymn is seen in the fact that it is the best known of all the Gregorian Breviaries, the Roman 1632 and Paris 1726 excepted, its English use being specially popular. Its general use is on Saturdays from the first of Advent to Advent. Variations from this are found in the“Shear, Protestant, York, &c. It is in a Ms.
c. 56, in the British Museum (Vesp. A. 1, f. 162 b), and Thomas, 4, 10, gives readings from two Vatican Ms. of the 11th cent. It is also in two Ms. of the 11th cent. in theBritish Museum (July. 4. vi. Vesp. D.
Hid. 204), and in a Latin Ms. of the 11th cent.
in the Library of the English at Oxford, 2214, printed from an 11th cent. Ms.
in Italian Ms. No. 241; Daniel, l.
No. 12, with to ii. p. 397, and iv. p. 1; Hymnal.
start. text. and readings: Wackernagel and Macgill

The text is also in"Migne., tom. xx. c. 924, and the best text is found of St. Ambrose’s Works.

Translation in C. U.:
Make all things, God most high.
By J. D. Chambers.
1st pub. in his Order for Household
Litany in London, 1854, and again in his Lauds and Vespers, 1867, in 8 st. of 4 l.
In 1862 it was included in the Appendix to the H. Noted,
No. 155, and in the "People’s H. II."
In Dr. Martineau’s "Bible of Praise and Prayer" (abbreviated), 1873; and in other hymn-books. In the Hymnal, 1872, it is altered to "O blest Creator, God
Most High."

Translations not in C. U.:
1. Creator of all: through Whose all-seeing Might.
"Symphonia Angelicorum," 1844.
2. Maker of the starry pole, God of all worlds, &c.
W. J. Okeand, 1854.
3. Lord of the far-stretching globe. W. J. Blew.
1862.
4. Maker of all, O Lord and God most High. J. W.
Bewell, 1859.
5. O Lord, who breathed, Creator wise. Dr. H. Kynaston.
1862.
6. Maker of all! Thou God of love. Dr. H. M.
Kynaston, 1875.

A portion of this hymn beginning with st. v,
"Eternal prayers clementest, has been tr. by

Dr. Kynaston in his Occasional Hymns, 1862,
No. 81, as a separate hymn, beginning "With darkest clouds while daylight’s dawning."

Deus ignee fons animarum. A. C.
Prudentius. [Burial of the Dead.]
This beautiful poem, in 44 st. of 4 l., is No. x. in his Cathemerinon, and may be found in all ditions of his works, e.g. Deventer, 1490, London, 1824, &c. It is also in a Ms. of the 5th cent. in the Bibl. Nat. Paris (5084, f. 329), and in a Mozarabic Office Book of 11th cent.
in the British Museum (Add. 30851, f. 169).
Its liturgical use has been limited, but in the British Museum (Toldeo, 1502, f. 3136) it is given in the Office for the Dead. The full text is in Wackernagel, i., No. 40, and a part in Daniel, i., No. 115, pt. i.

The form which has been most used is a cento beginning: Jam moesta quiesce quercula, and consisting of st. 31, 15, 10-12, 32-36.
This is found in Balas’s G. B., Leipzig, 1545, and many later collections, e.g. Dr.
Zahn’s Psalter und Harfe, Goterloeh, 1886,
No. 480, and in Daniel, l., No. 115, pt. i.
It was for generations a favourite funeral hymn among the Lutherans, and was sung in Latin in some parts of Germany till very recent times.
Abp. Trench, in giving st. 31-44 in his Sac. Lat. Poetry, speaks of them as the "crowning glory of the poetry of Prudentius.
It has been tr. into English direct from the Latin, and also through the German as follows:—

1. From the Latin:

1. Why weep ye, living brethren. By W. J.
Blew, in The Church Hym. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, in 5 st. of 6 l, and again in H. Rice’s Hymns, &c., 1870.

2. Cease, ye tearful mourners. By E. Caswall, in his Musique of Mary, &c., 1858, in 13 st. of 4 l, and again in his Hymns & Poems, 1875.
It was repeated in an abridged form in the 1862
Apparatus to the Noted; and in the Hymnal, 1872.

3. Be silent, O sad lamentation.
By R. F.
Littledale in The People’s H., 1867, under the signature of "A. L. F."

Other trs. are:

1. Ah! hush now your mournful complaints.
Mrs. Charles. 1858.

2. No more your sorrowful plaints should be heard.
J. W. Hewell. 1859.

3. Hush, Mother, too loud is thy weeping. H. Kynaston.
1862.

4. No more, ah, no more sad complaint.
F. A. Washburn, New York, 1865, revised for Schaff’s Christian
Hymn, Oct., 1869, and pub. therein, 1869.

5. Each sorrowful mourner be silent. J. M. Neale, in the St. Margaret’s Hymnal, 1875.

ii. From the German :

Of the "Jam moesta quiesce quercula"
many trs. have been made into German.
Two of these have passed into English:

1. Hört auf mit Traumen und Klagen. A free
tr. in 10 st. of 4 l. 1st pub. in J. Eichhorn’s Geistliche Lieder, Frankfurt a. Oder, 1561, and therein in Wackernagel, iv. p. 191. Repeated in many later collections, often erroneously ascribed to Nicolaus Hermannus in Bunsen’s Versuche, 1833, No. 632. Tr. as:

O weep not, mourn not o’er this hier. A good and full version by Miss Winkworth in the 1st
ser. of her Lyra S, 1855, p. 249. In her 2nd Deus Pater piissime. [Saturday Evening.] This hymn occurs as a vespers hymn for the Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in Lent to Passion Sunday, in ms. Breviary, written about the 14th century, formerly belonging to the Monastery of Evesham (Ms. Barlow, No. 41, in the Bodleian Library at Oxford). It is also in a 12th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Harl. 2928, f. 115 b.), and in a Bodleian ms. of the 13th cent. (Ashmole 1285, f. 38). In 1831 it was given in the Hymnarium Savisburiense, p. 73.

Tr. ns.:

O God, O Father kind and best. By J. D. Chambers, in his Companion to the Holy Communion, 1855, and his Landau Sylow, 1857, p. 139, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is repeated in the Appendix to the Hymnal N., 1863, and in Skinner’s Daily Service Hymnal, 1864. [W. A. S.]

Deus tuorum militum. [Feasts of Martyrs.] This anonymous Ambrosian hymn is in two forms, one in 32 lines and the second in 16 lines. It dates probably from the 6th cent. The question as to what was the original form of the hymn has not been determined. Daniel’s (I., No. 97) heading of the texts (both forms) is “De Communi unius Martyris,” and he remarks that the hymns for the Commemoration of Saints are nearly always of greater length in old and unaltered Breviaries than in those which are of more recent date, or which have been revised. The older hymns having reference to some particular saint, certain stanzas are afterwards cut out to make the hymn suitable for general use. If this view be taken of the present hymn, then the longer form is the original, and the shorter form given in the Breviaries is an abbreviation therefrom. Against this conclusion there are two facts, the first that the lines in the fuller form, which are not given in the Breviaries, do not apply to any special martyr, and second, that the oldest form in which we now have the hymn is (emitting the doxology) in 16 lines. This form, with slight variations in the text, is in the Missal of Bres. (Toledo, 1502, 317 b.); in a 10th cent. ms. at Munich, where it is adapted for the Nativity of St. Lawrence, quoted by Mone, No. 740; and in the Latin Hymn of the Anglo-Saxon Church, Surtees Soc., 1851, from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham. This would suggest that the shorter form of the hymn is the shorter of the two. As the translations into English are generally from the Rom. Brev., it may be noted that this is the shorter form, with slight variations in lines 6, 7 and 11. This hymn is also found in four ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 66; Vesp. D. xii. f. 107; Harl. 2961, f. 248 b. Add. 30831, f. 153 b.). For texts, readings, references, &c., see Migne.

Δέττε τεσσάραντα πιστοῖς. [St. Theophanes. From the Triodion—Idiomela on Friday of Tyrophagus, that is, of Quinquagesima.]

"At this period of the year the weeks are named, not from the Sundays that precede, but from those that follow them. Quinquagesima is termed Tyrophagus, because up to that time, but not beyond, cheese is allowed. The Saturday previous is appropriated to the Commemoration of All Holy Asceses; in order, as the Synaxarion says, that, by the remembrance of their conflict, we may be invigorated for the race that is set before us." Hym. of Eastern Ch., 1st ed., 1862, p. 95.

To the above explanation Dr. Neale adds the tr. "Hither, and with one accord." In this tr. the length of strophe, the variation of refrain, and the alert cheering call are as in the original, but it lacks the nervous style and ornate diction of St. Theophanes. [J. J.]

Δέττε τόμα πίωμεν. [Apostásioi xóla.]

Δέττε τελευτάιον ἀσπασμον δόμεν. [Burial.] Dr. Neale prefaced his translation of "The Stichera of the Last Kiss," with the following note:

"The following Stichera, which are generally (though without any great cause,) attributed to St. John Dam-Dexter, Henry M.

p. 3, in 1816. In the Evv. L. S., 1851,
No. 204, the text of 1561 is given, omitting the doxology. The only tr. in C. U. is:

E. Cronenwett, as No. 122 in the Ohio Luth.
Hym., 1880.

Other translations are: (1) "To God let the Dickinson, William, pub. in 1816:

Hymns for Passion Week and the Forty Days,
Adapted for Churches or for Private Worships, Lond., J. Niabet & Co., 1846. These hymns deal with such events in the history of Our Lord, as "The Annunciation," "The Barren Fig Tree," "The Cleansing of the Temple," "To God let the tunes" of the Disciples' feet," &c.; and with the Parables of "The Wedding garment"; "The Talents," &c., which are not commonly versified, and are worthy of attention. The following have come

3. Ere that solemn hour of doom.

Dickson, David, the reputed author of "Jehovah, my happy home," in the form of
"O mother dear, Jerusalem," was a Scottish Presbyterian Minister born at Glasgow in 1583, and for some time Professor of Divinity at Glasgow (1610), and then (1630) in the University of Edinburgh. He was deprived of his office at the Restoration for refusing the Oath of Supremacy, and d. in 1653. His Life was pub. by Robert Walsworth in 1726. His connection with the Jerusalem hymn is given under Jerusalem, my happy home, q.v. [J. J.]

Dickson, William, eldest surviving son of the late James Dickson, Edinburgh, was
b. at Edinburgh, July 24, 1817. After being educated at the High School and University of Edinburgh, he entered his father's business, which he still [1887] carries on.
He is a prominent elder in the Free Church, has for many years taken a great interest in Sabbath School work, and has for more than 30 years edited The Free Church Children's Record. He has annually written a New Year's hymn since 1842. "Childhood's years are passing o'er us," his best known hymn, originally printed in 1841, as a leaftlet for class use, was, in 1846, included in the 2nd part of the Sacred Song Book (see Bateman), and has since been included in many hymnals.

[D. M.]

Die dierum principe. C. Cofin,
[Sunday Morning] Included in the revised Paris Breveiry, 1736, as the hymn for Sunday at Mass, and republished in the same year in the author's Hymni Sacri, p. 7, in 6 st. of 41. It is also in the Lyons and several modern French Breviaries. The orig. text is given in Chandler's Hymn. of the Princ. Ch., 1837, No. 1; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1859–55, No. 1; and Macgill's Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876–7, No. 12. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:

1. Morn of morn, and day of day. By J. Chandler. 1st pub. in the British Mag., April, 1837, and again in his Hymns, tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 1, in 28 l. In 1861 the compilers of H. A. & M. rearranged it into 7 st. of 4 l., introducing also many alterations. This arrangement has passed into various collections, with all times the omission of st. iv. It is the most widely used tr. of this hymn.

2. This is the day the light was made. By J. Chandler. 1st pub. in his Hymns of the Church mostly primitive, 1841, as a distinct tr. from "The first of days the light beheld," which was given in his Hymns of the Princ. Ch., 1837. In 1850 it was included in Dr. Hook's Church S. S. H. Bk., No. 19. Later hymnals, quoting from Dr. Hook's Coll., have in some instances attributed the tr. to him. It is found in Kennedy, The Hymnary, Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., and others.

3. Morn of morn, the best and first. By J. Ellerton, based partly on J. Williams, as above, written in 1879, and pub. in Ch. Hymns, 1871, No. 36. Its use is limited.

4. O Day of joy, when first the light. By W. Cooke, made for and 1st pub. in the Hymnary, 1871–2, No. 5.

Translations not in C. U.:

1. The first of days the light beheld. By J. Chandler. 1837.
2. Day of days the prince, on thee. W. J. Bice. 1852–55.
3. O day of earthly days the chief. J. D. Chambers. 1857.
4. This day—the king of days, heaven-born. H. Macgill. 1876–7. [J. J.]

Die guldne Sonn. P. Gerhardt. [Morning.] Lauxmann, in Koch, vii. 185, calls this "A splendid hymn of our poet, golden as the sun going forth in his beauty, full of force and of blessed peace in the Lord, full of sparkling thoughts of God." It first appeared as No. 23 in the Dritte Dutzen, Berlin, 1866, of Ebeling's dev. of his Geistliche Anachten, in 12 st. of 10 l., entitled "Morning Blessing." In the dev. of his Geistliche Lieder, by Wackernagel, No. 98, and by Bachmann, No. 101. Included in J. Crüger's Praes. piestatis melica, 1672, and later eds., and recently as No. 419 in The L. S., 1851. The beautiful melody (in the Irish C. Hyl., called "Franconia") is by Ebeling, and appeared with the hymn 1696, as above.

Translations in C. U.:

2. Evening and Morning. A very good tr. beginning with st. iv. ("Abend und Morgen") and being st. iv., viii., xii., contributed by R. Massie, as No. 500, to the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. This form is included, in whole or part, in the Irish C. Hyl., 1873, No. 8; Allon's Suppl. Hym., No. 218; N. Conq., No. 1193; J. L. Porter's Coll., No. 109; Martin's Coll., No. 423; Harder's Cong. Hyl., No. 556, &c. Beginning with the tr. of st. ix. ("Gott, meine Kerne") as "Father, O bear me," it is included as No. 636 in Kennedy, 1863, and the same in Mercer's Ox. ed., 1864, No. 384. Mr. Massie included it, prefixing trs. of st. i.–iii., which begin, "Golden and glorious," in his Lyra Hymnica, 1864, p. 106, and this full form is repeated as No. 379 in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

Translations not in C. U.:

Die parente temporum. [Sundays.] This hymn is given in the Breviary of the Diocese of Le Mans, 1748, Pars Hiemalis, p. 4, as the hymn on Sunday at Nocturns from Whitensuilde to Adv. Text in Dr. Neale's Hymnarii Ecclesiae, 1851, p. 20. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:

1. On this day, the first of days. By Sir H. W. Baker. Tr. for and 1st pub. in H. A. & M., 1861, in 7 st. of 4 l. It was, so far as is known, the first tr. into English of this hymn. It is given in several hymn-books. In the Hymns and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, st. v.–vii., are given as: "Father, Who didst fashion me.

2. Te-day when time began its course. By R. F. Littledale, was given in the People's H., for which it was made, in 1867, No. 421, with the signature "D. L."

3. This primar day, the Spring of Time. By R. C. Singleton. Tr. for the Anglican H. Bk., 1867, and pub. therein 1868, No. 22.

4. This day the Father, Source of all. By W. Cooke. Tr. for the Hymnary, in which it 1st appeared in 1872, No. 9. [J. J.]

Dies absoluti praestetunce. [Septuagimesa.] This hymn is found in two nos. of the 11th c. (Nos. 313, 314) at St. Gall; and is quoted in full in Mone, No. 68, and in Daniel, iv. p. 179, both with notes and references. Mone is inclined to believe it to be the work of a French poet. It is especially rich in allusions to Holy Scripture. Tr. as:—

"The hygine days in Time's dark ocean sleep."
By E. A. Dayman, written for and 1st pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 200. [W. A. S.]

Dies est laetitiae. In ortu regali. [Christmas.] This Christmas hymn or carol, which Luther spoke of as a work of the Holy Spirit, seems to be of German origin, and is probably not earlier than the 14th cent.

G. Goeze, of Jena, in 1703, started the theory that this hymn was written by Benno, created Cardinal in 1398 by the Anti-Pope Clement III. Other German writers of the 14th cent. misunderstood this statement, forthwith repeating the story of Benno, Bishop of Mainz, who d. 1187. See Weigel, 1801, and a wonderful combination of the two theories in O. F. Horner, Geschichte des Aujspurgischen Gesangbuebs, Schwabach, 1773, p. 62. For neither supposed is there the slightest vestige of evidence. It exists in various forms, and as will be seen below, the early German versions give no help in determining what number of st. it originally possessed. Mone, No. 47, quotes it from a ms. of the 14th cent., now at Triez, and from other sources; with notes and various readings.

Translation in C. U.:

Royal day that chaste gisum. By J. M. Neale, pub. in his Medicult Hys., 1851, in 3 st. of 10 l. This is a paraphrase rather than a literal rendering of the shorter form of the hymn. In 1854 it was rewritten by J. M. Neale for his Choralis Cantorum, and in this form it passed into the People's H. II., 1867, No. 34.

This hymn also passed into English through the German:

Der Tag ist so freuentreich. Wackernagel, ii., p. 520, gives this as a 15th cent. tr., and reprints 11 (really 12) versions, varying from the 13th. The form tr. into English is that in King's B. B. 1529, in 3 st., repeated as No. 29 in the German tr. and other tr.s. in the C. U. is:—

A wondrous child, the Virgin-born, by A. T. Russell as No. 49 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851, it begins with st. ii. ("Ein Kindelein so lieblich," and is of st. ii.,

Other tr.s; (1) "Hail to the day! so rich in joy," by Mag. Gry., 1843, p. 13. (2) "To us the promised child is born," a tr. of st. ii. by Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 274. [J. M.]

Dies irae, dies illa. [Burial, Advert.] In dealing with this great Sequence of the Western Church we shall note in detail, i. The Text; ii. Its Authorship; iii. Its Liturgical Use; and iv. Its General Acceptance.

i. The Text. For the use of the general reader the most accessible work on this subject is Daniel, ii. pp. 103-106.

1. The oldest form known to the present time is contained in a ms. in the Bodleian, Oxford (Liturg. Misc. 163 f. 17b). This is a Dominical Missal written at the end of the 14th cent. and apparently for use at Pisa.

This text is as follows:—

"SEQUENTIA PRO DIES IRAE"

"Dies irae, dies illa,
Solvet saecula saeculi
Tene datatem sit illa:
Tene datatem sit illa:"—

"Quasque anima fidelis,
Ab quasi respondere videas,
Christo venturo de coelia,
Cum a te pasci rationem,"

"Ob boni omisionem,
Et mal commissionem?"

Following these there are 16 st. corresponding to i-xvi. of the oldest known form given above; and then instead of st. x-vi., the concluding st.:—

"Ut consors beatissimis,
Vivam cum justissimis,
In saeculum saeculorum.'"
Daniel gives in vol. ii, pp. 103-105 what he understood to be the Mandea text. This differs from Chytraeus's text in these particulars:

Chytraeus.
1. Quasso anima . .
2. Cum a peo.
3. Et mai.
4. Teste David cum Sybilla.
5. Nl incolum.
6. Cum nec justus
7. Quid sum causa. (1. 2. "Ne me perdus": 1. 3. Quid sum causa. (These lines reversed, 2 being, 1. 3. Quinta, 3. Quid sum causa."
8. Quos refr me sedisti . .
9. Tantus labor ne sit . .
10. Insigne vere resu.
11. Statuens me parte . .
12. Ut consens.

5. In the French Missals, e.g. that of Paris, 1739; and that of Metz, 1778, the opening lines read:

Dies irae, dies illa,
Crucis expandida vallica,
Solvect secundum in favilla.

Concerning the variations in the text in the opening lines of this Sequence, (6) "Teste David, cum Sybilla," (2) "Teste Petro cum Sybilla," and (3) "Crucis expandida vallica," Archbishop Trench wrote:

An unwise desire to allow a Sibyl to appear as bearing witness to Christian truth, has caused that we sometimes find this third line ('Teste David cum Sybilla') omitted, and in its stead 'Crucis expandida va1lica' written, as the second of this triple. It rests on Matt. xxi. 39, and on the expectation that the appearance of a cross in the sky would be this sign of the Son of man in heaven. It is, however, a later insertion of the text; and the line as above ('Teste David') is quite in the spirit of the early and medieval theology. In those unfaltering ages the Sibiline verses were not seen to be that transparent forgeries which indeed they are; but were continually appealed to as only second to the sacred Scriptures in prophecic authority; thus on this very matter of the destruction of the world, by Lactantius, Inst. Div. viii. 16-24; cf. Piper, Method. d. Oratill. Kunst, p. 472-507; these, with other heathen testimonies of the same kind, being not so much subordinated to more legitimate prophecy, as co-ordinated with it, the two being regarded as parallel lines of prophecy, the Church's and the world's, and confessing witnesses to the same truths. Thus it is in a curious medieval mystery on the Nativity, published in the Juvenal des Septentrion, 1446, p. 88. It is of simple construction. One after another patriarchs and prophets and kings of the Old Covenant advance and repeat their most remarkable word about Him that should come; but side by side with them a series of heathen sibyllae, Virgil, on the ground of his fourth Eclogue, Nebuchadnesszar (Dou, ill. 28, and the Sibyl; and that it was the writer's intention to parallelise the two series, and to show that Christ had the testimony of both is plain from some opening lines of the prologue:

O Judaeus, Verbum Dei
Qui negatis, hominem
Vestrae largit, testem Regis
Audite per omnem.

Et vos, gentes, nec credentes
Peperiæ virginitem,
Vestrae gentis documenta
Pellei caligine.

"And such is the meaning here—'That such a sign shall be on the tree of inspiration, of David,—and of mere natural religion, of the Sibyl—Jew and Gentile alike fear ten thousand to the truths which we Christians believe.' All this makes it certain that we ought to read Teste David, and not Teste Petro. It is true that 2 Pet. iii. 7-11 is a more obvious prophecy of the destruction of the world by fire than any in the Psalms; but there are passages enough in these (as Ps. cxvi. 13; cxvii. 3; xi. 6), to which the poet may allude; and the obscurity of that in St. Peter, makes the reading, which introduces his name, suspicious."

Sac. Lit. Poetry, 1874.

ii. The Authorship. With regard to the authorship it seems certainly to have been of Italian origin, the Missals of other nations having adopted it at later dates. The author was probably Thomas of Celano, a Franciscan Friar of the 13th cent. This is the opinion of Daniel, Mohntike, Rambach, Fink, Lisco, Trench, and others who have written specially on the subject. The reasons for ascribing its origin to the Franciscan Order, and to Thomas of Celano, are:

(1) The earliest mention of this hymn was made by Brother Bartolomeo degli Albizzi, or Bartholomaeus Pisano, of the Order of St. Francis, who died about A.D. 1300, in his Liber Conformabilis, a treatise setting forth the points in which St. Francis was to be held in his Divine Master. It was printed at Milan in 1316, again in 1513, also in later years.

(2) Stæthus Semecens, a very learned Dominican but (as in duty bound) very zealous for his order, in his Bibliotheca Sacra, Venet. 1564, calls it an "uncouth poem" (incommoda rhymata). This points to a Franciscan origin; the old rivalry between the Franciscans and Dominicans, as is well known, was very great. Hence this writer's hostilily furnishes a substantial argument.

(3) A resolution was adopted by the Dominican Order at Salamanca in 1576, to the effect that this Sequence should not be used in Masses for the Dead, as being contrary to the Rubrics. (See Annotat. in Ord. Ordinis Prima, Venet. 1612.)

(4) The learned and painstaking Lucas Wadding, in his Scriptores Ordinis Minorum, Rome, 1650, ascribes it to Thomas of Celano; mentioning that others assign the authorship to St. Bonaventura, or to Mathew Aquasparsi (d'Arquaparta).

On the other hand, the learned Pope Benedict XIV, in his work De Sacrae Missae, 1632-1634, ascribes it (but only as a matter of opinion) to Cardinal Latuinus Ursinus, or Francipani, of the Dominican Order. This was probably Napoleon Francipani, by some writers called Ursinus, who created Cardinal of the title of St. Adrian by Pope Nicholas IV; he died at Perugia in 1294. Further, Antonius Possessionis, a learned Jesuit, in hisillusorium, Venet. 1683, 1686, &c., says that some ascribe it to Augustinus Bogel-Venetus, a Dominican, of the Order of St. Augustine; adding that his own opinion is that it was the work of Humbert, the fifth General of the Dominican Order, who was born near Valence, died at Lyons in 1276, and was buried in the Dominican Church of that city. There is, however, little authority for these opinions, unless the fact that the oldest known text is found in a Dominican Missal of the latter part of the 14th cent. as noted above, lends some weight to these statements. Still less is there weight in the opinions of Arnoldus Wein, a Benedictine monk, and a great, if somewhat eccentric writer (c. 1244). In his Lignum Vitae, Oratorium et Dumes Eccleniæ, Venet. 1596, lib. v. cap. 76, a work which contains an account of illustrious men of his Order, he says that some have ascribed the "Dies irae" to St. Gregory the Great, and some to St. Bernard.

Taking all the arguments and ascertained facts into account, we may conclude that the "Dies irae" was written by Thomas of Celano, a Franciscan Friar of the 13th cent., and the friend and biographer of St. Francis of Assisi.

iii. Liturgical Use. This Sequence is regarded as having been originally an Advent hymn. Its ritual use, however, is as the Sequence in the Mass for the Dead. It is first found in Italian Missals, and especially in those of the Franciscan Order. Among the oldest Massals in which it is known to occur are those of Lubeck, c. 1490; Schleswig, 1486; Arras, 1491; the Dominicus Missale, Venice, 1494; the Dominican Missal, Venice, 1496; Tournay, 1498, &c. It is not given, however, in many Missals of the 15th and 16th centuries, nor in the collections of Chletores, 1516; of Adelphus, 1519; and of Torrentenus, 1513, although these all contain
DIES IRAE

The Sequences then most frequently in use in France, Germany, &c. It is in the Brander collection of 1507. We may note also the following details:

1. In the Roman Missal it is the Sequence on All Souls’ Day; in Masses celebrated on the occasion of a death or burial, and also on the third, seventh, or thirteenth day after burial; and, optionally, in daily or ordinary Masses for the Dead.

2. In the French Missals, as quoted above, it appeared in the Antiphonale, 1491; and in the Tournay, 1493.

3. Its English use was limited. It is given in some editions of the "Roman Missal," as a "Pseudo-Dysdaisiacal" or "Pseudo-Dysdaisiacal" in the Tornington S. Gregory, in an office subsequently suppressed. (Burnetland reprint of the Sarum Missal, Pars Secunda, 1681, ed. 1889-90.)

iv. General Acceptance. The hold which this Sequence has had upon the minds of men of various nations and creeds has been very great. Goethe uses it, as is well known, in Faust with great effect. It also furnishes a grand climax to Cantor's "Lamentations," in Sir Walter Scott's Lay of the Last Minstrel. It has been translated into many languages, in some of which the renderings are very numerous, in German numbering about ninety, and those in English about one hundred and sixty. In Britain and America no hymn-book of any note has appeared during the past hundred years without the "Dies Irae" being directly or indirectly represented therein. Daniel, writing from a German standpoint, says:

"Even those to whom the hymns of the Latin Church are almost entirely unknown, certainly know this one: and if anyone can be found so alien from human nature that they have no appreciation of sacred poetry, yet, as a matter of certainty, even they will give their minds to this hymn, of which every word is weighty, yes, even a stern strop.

From another standpoint, Archbishop Trench says:

"Nor is it hard to account for its popularity. The metre so readily devised, of which I remember no other example, fitted itself for bringing out the solemn effect of the triple rhyme, which has been likened to "the Psalmist's echo to follow, the sounding of the pulse in the universal interest of his theme, a confidence and a solemnity in all its misery, with many more, have given the Dies Irae a foremost place among the masterpieces of sacred song." Sac. Lat. Poetry, 1874, p. 302.

The opening line of this Sequence is taken verbatim from Zeph. 1. 15 (Vulgate version). Daniel, in pp. 103-111, has extensive notes on each strophe, and a general dissertation on the hymn. This has also been treated of by several writers, and specially by Mohrino in his Kirchen- und literarhistorische Studien, Stralsund, 1821, and in his Hymnologischer Forschungen, Stralsund, 1832; and also in his Dies Irae, Hymnus aus dem Weltgericht, Berlin, 1840.

v. Translations in C. U.,

1. The Day of Wrath, that Dreadful Day. As the trs. of this Sequence are in many instances so much alike in the opening line, it will be necessary in some cases to give the opening stanza in a complete form. This, the oldest tr. in C. U., reads:

"The day of wrath, that dreadful day
Shall the whole world in ashes lay.
As David and the Sibyl say."

This rendering is from the Roman Missal, and its first publication, as far as yet traced, was in N. Tate's Miscellany Sonnets, 1696, where it is given as "by the E. of Roscommon." It is also in the posthumous Poems of Wentworth Dillon, Earl of Roscommon, 1721 (Preface dated 1717). It subsequently appeared in a Divine Office for the Lambs, 1763. Mr. Orby Shipley, in the Dublin Review, January, 1883, suggests the possibility of the tr. being by J. Dryden rather than by Lord Roscomon, on the ground of its appearance in the Primer, 1706, to which Dryden is believed to have largely contributed. It never appeared, however, in any edition of Dryden's works, and is not characterized by any of the peculiarities which distinguish Dryden's style. In 1812, Dr. Collyer gave in his Coll. 15 in two parts, beginning, "The last loud trumpet's wondrous sound; and pt. ii., "Thou Who for me didst feel such pain."
In 1819, a cento composed of st. i., ii., v., xxx, xxv, and xxxv, considerably altered, was given in Cotterell's Sel., No. 201. This was followed by another cento broken into two parts, which appeared in Bickerstaff's Christian Psalmody, 1834, beginning, pt. i., "The last loud trumpet's wondrous sound;" pt. ii., "Forget not what thy ransom cost." The same arrangement was repeated in the earlier editions of Mercer, and other collections. The cento in Hall's Misc., 1836, and the New Metre Hum, 1874, beginning, "The last loud trumpet's," &c, is another arrangement of stanza.

3. That day of wrath, that dreadful day. By Sir Walter Scott. This is a condensed rendering of the Dies Irae, introduced by Scott at the close of the Lay of the Last Minstrel, 1805, in 3 st. of 4 l., as having been sung in Melrose Abbey, "noble Angus" having decided "That be a pilgrimage would take

To Melrose Abbey, for the sake
Of Michael's restless sprite."

The details of the pilgrimage are wrought out with grand effect, and conclude with this "hymn of instruction."

"That day of wrath, that dreadful day
When heaven and earth shall pass away
What power shall be the sinner's stay?
How shall he meet that dreadful day?"

Soon after the publication of the Lay, &c, in 1805, this tr. was given as a hymn for public worship in various collections. Dr. Collyer included it in his Sel., 1812; Cotterell followed in 1819, as "The Day," &c, and others later on, until its use has extended to all English-speaking countries. Various attempts have been made to "improve" these noble lines; st. iii. 1. 3 being specially selected with this result:

"Be Thou, O Christ, the sinner's stay," in Elliott's Ps. & Hymns, 1833.
"Thou art, O Christ, Thy people's stay," in Drummond & Greive's Church of England H. Bk., 1839.
"Jesus, be Thou the sinner's stay," in the Scottish United Presb. H. Bk., 1842.
"Be Thou, O Christ, our steadfast stay," in Bowley's Birmingham Sel., 1855.

The first of these changes is still in extensive use, but another change in the opening line, "On that dread day, that wrathful day," given in Cotterell's Sel., 1816, is now unknown.
This condensed rendering of the Dies Irae has not only taken a strong hold upon the general public, but it has also elicited the admiration of those who through their education and wide reading are best qualified to judge. One such has said:—

"I know nothing more sublime in the writings of Sir Walter Scott—certainly I know nothing so sublime in any portion of the sacred poetry of modern times, I mean of the present century—as the 'Hymn for the Dead' extending only to twelve lines, which he embodied in The Lay of the Last Minstrel. (Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone. Speech at Hawarden, Feb. 3, 1866.)"

Sir Walter Scott's admiration of the original is well known. His biographer, J. G. Lockhart, says concerning his last illness:—

"But commonly whatever we could follow him in was a fragment of the Bible (especially the Prophecies of Isaiah, and the Book of Job) or some portion in the Litany—or a verse of some psalm (in the old Scotch metrical Version)—or of some of the magnificent hymns of the Roman ritual, in which he was always delighted, but which probably hung on his memory now in connection with the church services he had attended while in Italy. We very often heard distinctly the cadence of the Dies Irae; and I think the last stanza that we could make out was the first of a still greater favourite, "Sanctus Mater dolorosa," etc. (Memoirs, 1856, vol. viii. 391.)"

5. On that great, that awful day. By Lord Macaulay, a condensed rendering, contributed to the Christian Observer, Jan. 1836 (vol. 36), and embodied in the early editions of the Rugby School Chapel H. Bk., and a few collections. It has almost altogether passed out of common use.

7. Day of wrath, that awful day. By I. Williams. The first st. of this rendering from the Paris Missal is:

"Day of wrath—that awful day Shall the banner'd Cross display,
Earth in ashes melt away!"

This rendering appeared first in the British Mag., for Jan. 1834, and was repeated in the translator's Thoughts in Past Years, 1838, and his Hymns. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839. In full, or in part, this tr. has been included in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853; The Parish H. Bk., 1853-75; Mahon's Hymns for the Ch. of God, 1864; Mercer (based on I. Williams), Oxford ed., 1864, and several others. The rendering in R. Campbell's St. Andrew's Hymn and Anthems is also this by J. Williams, with alterations by Campbell.

8. Day of anger, that dread day. By H. Alford, from the Paris Missal. The opening st. of this tr. is:

"Day of anger, that dread day
Shall the sign in Heaven display,
And the earth in ashes lay."

It appeared in his Ps. & Hymn., 1844, in two parts, the second beginning, "Thou didst in my soul to gain;" and was repeated in his Hymn of Praise, 1857. In Windle's Hymnal, No. 83, there is given a canto from this tr. into which many alterations are introduced, and a refrain is added to each stanza, which is altogether new to the hymn. The canto in the Marborough School Catech., 1869, No. 49, beginning with the first line from J. Williams, is from this tr. but greatly altered. Dean Alford's tr. is also given in a few American hymn-books.

9. Day of wrath, 0 day of mourning. By W. J. Irons, from the Paris Missal. It is well known that the Revolution in Paris in 1848 led to many scenes of terror and shame. Foremost was the death of Monseigneur D. A. Affre, the Archbishop of Paris, who was shot on June 25 on the barricades on the Place de la Bastille whilst endeavouring to persuade the insurgents to cease firing, and was buried on July 7. As soon as it was safe to do so his funeral sermon was preached in Notre Dame, accompanied by a religious service of the most solemn and impressive kind. Throughout the service the Archbishop's heart was exposed in a glass case in the Choir, and at the appointed place the Dies Irae was sung by an immense body of priests. The terror of the times, the painful sense of bereavement which rested upon the minds of the people through the death of their Archbishop, the exposed heart in the Choir, the imposing ritual of the service, and the grand rendering of the Dies Irae by the priests, gave to the occasion an unusual degree of impressiveness. Dr. Irons was present, and deeply moved by what he saw and heard. On retiring from the Church he wrote out this tr. of the Dies Irae.

The surrounding circumstances no doubt contributed greatly to produce this, which is one of the finest of modern renderings of the grandest of mediæval hymns. It was first used in the privately printed Introits and Hymns for Advent, issued, without date, for the use of Margaret Street Chapel, London, where it bears the initials "W. J. I." It was also published in 1849 (Lond., Masters), with historical notes by Dr. Irons, and with the music to which it was sung in Notre Dame, harmonized by Charles Child Spencer. Dr. Irons also included it in his Appendix to the Brompton Met. Psalter, in his Hymns, etc., Brompton, 1866, No. 82, and in the new and enlarged ed. of his Ps. & Hymns, 1873-1883, No. 60. In popularity and extensiveness of use this tr. of the Dies Irae is surpassed only by Sir Walter Scott's. A few important changes have come into use which must be noted. The opening stanza is:

"Day of wrath, 0 day of mourning,
See once more the Cross returning—
Heaven and earth in ashes burning!

This is given in J. A. Johnston's English Hymns, 1852, as "Day of wrath, 0 day dismaying," etc.; in Thrupp's Ps. & Hymns, 1853, as "Day of Judgment, day of mourning"; and in Kennedy, 1865, as "Day of anger, day of mourning." The second line of st. 1. has also undergone these changes:—in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, the Sarum, 1868, and others, to "See! the Son's dread sign returning." In this there is a change in the wording of the line only, and not a change of thought. The thought, however, is changed in the H. Comp. and Spenny, where we read, "See the Crucified returning." In H. A. & M. the reading of the Roman Missal is adopted in spirit although not in words, "See fulfilled the prophet's warning," and this has been repeated in several hymn-books. The concluding lines which read:

"Lord, who didst our souls redeem,
Grant a blessed Requiem!

were changed in the Hymns and Introits, 1852, and the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, to the tr. by I. Williams:

"Lord all-pitying, Jesus blest, Grant them Thine eternal rest."

This, with "Grant us," for "Grant them," has been repeated, sometimes with and sometimes without the change, in most hymn-books which have adopted Dr. Irons's \( H \). Thring's Collected is an exception in favour of:

"Jesu, Saviour ever Blest, Grant us then eternal rest."

3. Higher still, and still more high, By E. Caswall, from his Roman Missal, in his Lyra Catholic, 1849, P. 241; and his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 129.

4. This is repeated in the Irvingite Hymns for the Use of the Church, 1861-71.

5. Day of vengeance, day of sorrow. By W. J. Bly, from the Roman Missal, given in his Church Hymns & Tune Bk., 1852. In Mr. Rice's Sel., from that work, No. 7 begins with 1 of this \( H \), "Day of dread, in wrath awaking." This \( H \), which ranks with, if it does surpass, Dr. Irons's noted above, has been strangely overlooked by hymn-book compilers. A writer in Dublin Review says of it, "for originality, force of expression, dignity, and rhythm [it] is unsurpassed, at least by any other Protestant version." (Fifty Versions of Dies Irae, 1883, vol. iii. p. 390.)

10. Day of wrath and tribulation. A cento in Rorison's Col., 1851, based on J. Williams and Dr. Irons. In the 2nd and later editions it reads: "Day of wrath! O day of mourning."

11. Death of wrath! that day dismayed. By J. A. Johnston, given in the 2nd ed. of his English Hymn., 1856, instead of the altered version of Dr. Irons, as in the 1st ed., 1852. This new rendering was repeated in the 3rd ed., 1861.

12. Day of anger, all arresting. By W. B. Robertson, from the Roman Missal, 1st pub. in Hymnograph; or, Church and School Hymns, and Teachers' Manual, 1862. It was reprinted in 1868, in a programme of music sung by a choir at the meeting of the United Presbyterians Synod of that year. In the Draft of the Prot. Hymn., 1874, it was reprinted for approval, and finally appeared in that collection in 1876, with st. ix. xvi. considerably altered.

13. Day of doom, the last, the greatest. By Archbishop Benson. Written at Rugby, and 1st pub. in the Wellesley Col. Bk., 1880, and repeated in subsequent editions. It is appointed to be sung before the Litany on the Sundays in Advent, and is from the Roman Missal.

14. Day of terror, day of doom. By A. P. Stanley, from the Roman Missal, appeared in G. Reid's Portal's Hymns for Use of the Parish of Abbey, 1864, in 9 st. of 6 l. In 1868 it was given in Macmillan's Magazine, and in 1869 in the Appendix to Hymns for Use in the Chapel of Marlborough Col., as "Day of wrath, O dreadful day," with an additional stanza. The same was repeated in the Westminster Abbey Bk., 1883.

In the Marjoram, 1872, it is given, with the addition of 3 stanzas by the Editors ("Nought of Thee my prayers can claim": "Make me with Thy sheep to stand": and "Full of tears and full of dread"), and divided into three parts, pt. ii. being, "Where, in that tremendous day, and pt. iii. "O just Judge, to whom belongs."

The ten-stanza form is repeated in a few American hymn-books, including Laudes Domini, 1884, and others.

15. O Day of wrath! that awful day! By R. C. Singleton, from the Roman Missal, written in 1867, and pub. in his Anglican Bk., 1868, No. 36. In 1871 ed. it reads: "Day of wrath! that awful day, Earth in ashes," &c., and marked as \( \{ \) in 1870.

16. Day of wrath! the heart dismayed. By "F. J. P.\) from the Paris Missal; in Dr. Rawes's Hymns for the Year, N.D. (1860); the Catholic Hymnal, N.D.; and other Roman Catholic collections for Missions and Schools. This \( H \) has often been attributed to F. W. Faber, but in error. (Dublin Review, 1883, vol. i. p. 300.)

18. Day of wrath, that day dismayed. This cento in the Hymnary is thus composed: st. i. ii. are st. i.-ii. of No. 16 above, by "F. J. P." re-written by Canon William Cooke. Canon Cooke changed the present tense of this \( H \), back to the future of the original, and thus the whole hymn refer not to an actual realization, but a dread anticipation of the Judgment. He has also rendered the opening stanza according to the Roman Missal. These changes, and other alterations render these stanzas almost a new translation. The remainder of the hymn (st. ix.-xx.) is from Dr. Irons, No. 7, as above.

DIES SIND DUR

DIE IRISH, JOHANN S. 301

and in the Psalterium Cantionum Catholicum, Cologne, 1722, p. 318. It is tr. as—

1. Deus, grant me this, I pray. By Sir H. W. Baker, written for and 1st pub. in H. A. & M., 1861, and continued in 1875. Also in other collections.

2. Deus, grant me of Thy grace. By R. F. Little, written in the People's H., 1847, and signed "A. L."

3. Deus, Lord, to me impart. By R. C. Singleton, written in 1867, and included in 1868, in his Anglican H. Bk. [J. J.]

Dilherr, Johann Michael, was b. at Thun in Meiningen, Oct. 14, 1694, and educated at the Universities of Leipzig, Altdorf and Jena. In 1646 he became first pastor of St. Sebal's Church, and Antistas of the Nürnberg clergy, and d. at Nürnberg, April 8, 1699. He was reckoned one of the most learned men and the greatest preacher of his time. He wrote some 80 hymns, which appeared in various devotional works, and in his Biny 1000 Alte und Neue Geistliche Pfalmen, Lieder und Gebete, Nürnberg, 1554, &c. Only one has been tr.—

DITHERICH, JOHANN SAMUEL, eldest son of A. M. Diterich, pastor of St. Mary's Church,
Berlin, was b. at Berlin, Dec. 15, 1721. After studying at the Universities of Frankfurt a. Oder, and Halle, he was for some time a private tutor in Berlin. He was, in 1748, appointed diaconus of St. Mary’s Church in Berlin, and regimental chaplain, becoming, in 1751, archdeacon, and, in 1754, pastor of St. Mary’s. In 1763 he was appointed private chaplain to the Queen, and in 1770 a member of the Supreme Consistory. He d. at Berlin, Jan. 14, 1797 (Koch, vi. 208–231; Allg. Deutsche Biog., v. 258–259). His hymns appeared in the following works:

(1) Lieder für den öffentlichen Gottesdienst, Berlin, 1763, with 236 hymns, edited by himself and his colleague in St. Mary’s Church. Designed as a supplement to Poet’s G. B. of 1713. (2) Geheimgemeinde zum gottesdienstlichen Gebrauch in den Königlich-Preussischen Landen, Berlin, 1780, with 447 hymns principally edited by himself. (3) Geheimgemeinde für die äußere Andacht, Berlin, 1787, with 421 hymns, principally of recent date.

None of these books give names of authors. Ditrich seems to have contributed about 100 hymns either original or entirely recast, besides reworking portions of many others. He distinguished himself as a leader in the unhappy process of “modernizing” and “improving” the older German hymns, by which they were reduced to a form of “correctness,” and had all the life and joy taken out of them. His 1765 collection formed the model of many wretched hymn-books, and his influence is even seen in such recent collections as the Hamburger tr. of 1845, the Nassau G. B., 1844, and the G. B. for die evangel. Landeskirche im grossherzogtum Süchtem, Weimar, 1863.

A number of the recasts from the older hymns which appear under Ditrich’s name are noted in this Dictionary under the names of their original authors. The following may be regarded as practically original:

1. Schen ist der Tag von Gotz bestimmt. [Second Advent.] 1785, as above, No. 129, in 8 st. of 7 l. Included as No. 390 in the Nassau G. B., 1844. The only tr. in C. U. is:

The trumpet sounds! the day is come! A full and good tr. in Dr. H. Milla’s Hymne der, 1845 (ed. 1856, p. 332). Dr. Hättfeld included it in his Ch. H. Bk., 1872.

The following, although not in English C. U., are available for hymnological purposes:

ii. Auf Erden Wahrheit ansahreiben. Christ’s Ministry, 1767, as above, No. 79, in 16 st. Tr. by J. B. H. Mills, 1845 (ed. 1854, p. 283), as “That men to truth might not be strangers.”

iii. Auf! Jesus Jungfer freut euch! Aecesion. 1785, as above, No. 78, in 12 st., and is based on Elter’s hymn “Nun freut euch, Gottes Kinder all” (q. v.). Two forms have been tr. (1) “Auf Christen, auf und freut euch,” in the Berlin G. B. 1785, No. 114, as “Rejoice, ye saints, your fears be gone,” by Dr. H. Milla, 1845 (ed. 1856, p. 232); and (2) “Ihr Jungfer Jesu, freut euch!” in the Fried G. B. (R. C.), 1845, p. 34, as “Rejoice, ye saints, in glad secure” by REV. R. E. Littledale, in Lyra Schottica, 1864, p. 371.

iv. Himmli. mehr sei Seile grossen Werth. Greatness of the Cross. 1755, as above, No. 193, in 9 st. Tr. by Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (ed. 1854, p. 30), as “Lord, on the soul’s enduring worth.”

v. Nun Heiland lebt. Er hat die Nacht. Resurrection of the Dead. 1769, as above, No. 121, in 8 st. Tr. by Miss Manning, 1863, p. 15, “My Saviour lives, and He the night.”

vi. O Jesu, wahrer Frömmigkeit. Jesus our Example. Seems to have been suggested by J. J. Kambach’s “De wesentlich Ebenbild” in his Haus G. B., 1735, No. 84, 1st publ. 1730, as above, No. 59, in 8 st. Tr. by Dr. H. Milla, 1845 (ed. 1854, p. 265), as “Jesus, of what we should approve.”

J. J. M.

Divine crecebas Puer. Jesus Baptiste de Sautuill. [Epiphany.] 1st publ. in his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 14, and 1688, p. 71, in 4 st. of 4 l. In the revised Paris Breviary of 1736 it was appointed as the hymn for the Sundays at Lauds, from the Feast of the Circumcision to the Presentation of the Lord, unless Septuagesima Sunday should occur before the latter. It is also in the Lyons and other modern French Brevieries. Text also in Chandler’s Hymn of the P. Church, 1837, No. 51; Card. Newman’s Hymni Ecclesiast., 1838–65, and Biggs’s H. A. & M., with Annotat.ion, 1867, No. 62. There is no doxology in the original. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:

1. In stature grows the heavenly child. By J. Chandler, in his Hym. of the Prius. Church, 1837 (ed. 1857), p. 57, with doxology from Thompson, and in the 1841 ed. No. 32. This tr. is in numerous hymn-books, and sometimes with slight alterations, as in Thring’s Coll. and others.

2. The heavenly Child in stature grows. This tr. was given in H. A. & M., in 1861, and is continued in the revised ed, 1875. It is in J. Chandler’s tr. as above, with alternations by J. Keble. Outside of H. A. & M. its use is limited.

Translations not in C. U.:

1. And thou art growing up, O Child divine! J. Williams, 1839.
2. Thou diest grow, O Babe divine. W. J. Blye, 1852–53.
3. In wisdom, stature, Heavenly grace. J. D. Chambers, 1851. [J. J.]

Dix, William Chatterton, s. of John Dix, surgeon, of Bristol, author of the Life of Chatterton; Local Legends, &c., &c., at Bristol, June 14, 1837, and educated at the Grammar School of that city. Mr. Chatterton Dix’s contributions to modern hymnody are numerous and of value. His fine Epiphany hymn, “As with gladness men of old,” and his plaintive “Come unto Me, ye weary,” are examples of his compositions, many of which rank high amongst modern hymns. In his Hymns of Love and Joy, 1861, Altar Songs, Verses on the Holy Eucharist, 1867; Vision of All Saints, &c., 1871; and Seekers of a City, 1878, some of his compositions were first published. The greater part, however, were contributed to H. A. & M.; St. Raphael’s H. Bk., 1861; Lyra Eucharistic, 1864; Lyra Mystica, 1865; The People’s H., 1872; Paris Hymnary, 1872; Church Hymns, 1871, and others. Many of his contributions are renderings in metrical form of Dr. Littledale’s tr. from the Greek in his Offices of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863; and of the Rev. J. M. Rodwell’s tr. of hymns of the Abyssian Church. These renderings of the “songs of other Churches” have not received the attention they deserve, and the sources from whence they came are practically unknown to most hymnal compilers. Mr. Dix has also written many Christmas and Easter carols, the most widely known of which is “The Manger Throne.” In addition to detached pieces in prose and verse for various magazines, Light; and The Risen Life, 1873, and a book of instructions for children entitled The King Life, 1883. The last-named contains original hymns by Mr. Dix not given elsewhere. In addition to the more important of Mr. Dix's hymns which are annotated under their respective first lines, the following are also in C. U.:

4. In work and in our play. Children's Hymns. Pub. in his Hymns and Carols for children, 1869, and is largely adopted in children's hymn-books, as Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1891, and others. Also in the Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871.
5. In the hollow of Thine hand. For Pity Weather. Appeared in the People's Hym., 1867, and repeated in several others.
6. Joy fills our inmost heart to-day. Christmas. Printed in the Church Times, and then on a P. sheet by G. J. Palmer, as the third of Four Joyful Hymns for Christmas, 1865. It is in the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871, and other hymnals. It is also on page 2 of Mr. Dix's Christmas Customs & Christmas Carols, n.d.
9. Now our Father, we adore Thee. Praise to the Father. Appeared in the Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hymns, 1869.
10. O Christ, Thou Son of Mary. St. Crispin. First printed in the Union Reecho, Sept., 1866, and thence into the People's Hym., 1867.
11. O to which only castle ally, Gazing and Trusting in the Crosses. Pub. in the People's Hym., 1867.
13. On the waters dark and deep. For use at Sea. Appear. in the Hymns for P. of Warship, &c. (St. Raphael's, Brit., 1868.)
17. This man above our head. Work and Humility. In the 1869 appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hymns.
18. When the shades of night are falling. Hymn to the Good Shepherd. In the author's Hymns of a N. Hym., 1873.

Most of Mr. Dix's best-known hymns, and also some of those named above, are in C. U. in America and other English-speaking countries. In G. Britain and America from 30 to 40 are in C. U.

[J. J.]

Do no sinful action. C. F. Alexander, sce Humphreys. [Children to be Christ-like.] Appeared in her Hymn for Little Children, 1818, No. 5, on "The first promise. To remove the devil and all his works," in 7 st. of 4 l. It is in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., No. 232, Common Praise, and others.

Do not I love Thee, O my Lord? P. Doddridge. [St. Peter's love of Christ.] This hymn is not in the D. M. S. It was first pub. in J. Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1838, No. 238, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed "Appeal to Christ for the sin-Miller (S. & S., p. 12) attributes this tr. to Dr. Neale in error.

5. Return and come to God. Invit. In his Songs, &c., 1824. It is found in Hall's Miire, 1836; the Bap. Hymnal, 1879, and several others.

6. To thee, O Lord, with dawning light. Morning. This hymn is attributed to Heber by Miller (S. & S., p. 381) in error. It is included in the S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852; in Winkle and others. It is from the Songs, &c., 1824.

His later hymns, the dates of which are generally preserved in the last ed. of his Songs by the Way, include the following, which are more or less in use:

7. Beloved, it is well. All well in Christ. This is entitled "To my wife;" is dated Mar. 12, 1823, and was written in a copy of Dr. Bedell's "It is well." It is given in Aekney, 1863.

8. Broken-hearted, weep no more. Assurance of Peace. The date of this hymn is not preserved. It is found as early as 1829, when it appeared in the 2nd ed. of Cleland's (Baptist) Hymns.

9. Fling out the banner, let it float. Missions, Home & Foreign. This hymn, sometimes dated 1824 in error, was written at Riverside, 2nd Sun. in Advent, 1848, and is one of the author's latest effusions. It is in extensive use both in Britain and America.

10. He came not with His heavenly crown. The two Advents. In his Songs by the Way, ed. 1875, this poem is dated Dec. 1827. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1879, it is given with the omission of st. iii., and in the American Protestant Episcopal Hymnal, 1871, it begins with st. iv.

12. What is that, mother? The lark, my child. This is not a hymn, but a familiar and long popular song.

14. Young and happy while thou art. Youth for Christ. A favourite piece in many juvenile collections. It is dated Sept., 1827, and is given in Songs by the Way, 1875.

The Lyra Sac. Amer. also contains the following:

15. Brightness of the Father's glory. Morning. A tr. of "Consors Paterni luminis" (q.v.). It is from the Songs, &c., 1824.

17. Grant me, Lord, Thy grace three. Faith, Hope, and Charity desired.

18. Perfect through suffering may it be. Uses of suffering. Dated in Songs by the Way, "The Breakers, June 1, 1863."

19. Yes, it is a faithful saying. Redemption. In his Songs, &c., 1824. [F. M. B.]

Doane, W. H., b. in Preston, Connecticut, 1831, and educated for the musical profession by eminent American and German masters. He has had for years the superintendence of a large Baptist Sunday School in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he resides. Although not a hymn-writer, the wonderful success which has attended his musical setting of numerous American hymns, and the number of his musical editions of hymn-books for Sunday Schools and Evangelistic purposes, bring him within the sphere of hymnological literature.

Amongst his collections we have:

1. Silver Spray, 1868; (2) Pure Gold, 1871; (3) Royal Diadem, 1873; (4) Welcome Trees, 1871; (5) Brightness and Best, 1875; (6) Fountain of Song; (7) Songs of Devotion, 1870; (8) Temple Anthems, &c.

His most popular melodies include "Near the Cross," "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Pass me not," "More Love to Thee," "Rescue the perishing," "Tell me the old, old Story," &c. [J. J.]

Dobell, John, b. 1757, d. May 13, 1840, was a port-gauger under the Board of Excise, at Poole, Dorset, and a person of some local note. In 1806 he published:

A New Selection of Seven Hundred Evangelical Hymns for Private, Family, and Public Worship (Many Original) from more than two hundred Authors in England, Scotland, Ireland, and America, Arranged in alphabetical order; Intended as a Supplement to Dr. Watts's Psalms and Hymns, By John Dobell. Lond., Williams and Smith, 1806.

Subsequently this Sel. was increased to "More than Eight Hundred" hymns, and the wording of the title-page was changed in several instances. Dobell's account of this work is:

"The hymns here presented to the public I have collected from more than two hundred authors; many of them are taken from Manuscripts which I deemed too valuable to be suffered to remain in obscurity, and some have been supplied by friends. As this work has been the labour of years, and the choice of many good hymns, it will, I trust, give satisfaction to the Church of God." Preface, p. iii.

In addition to a work on Baptism 1807, and another on Humanity, 1812, Dobell also published:

The Christian's Golden Treasure; or, Gospel Comfort for Doubting Minds. 1824. This work was in two vol., the first of which contained 134 hymns, several of which were by Dobell.

Of this writer's hymns very few are found in modern hymn-books. We have from the 1806 book:—(1) "Come, dearest Lord, and bless this day;" (Sunday Morning); (2) "Great Ruler of the earth and skies;" (In time of War); (3) "Now is the accepted time;" (Invitation)—in C. U. in G. Britain and America, out of twenty or more. It is not as a hymn-writer, but as a diligent and successful hymnologist, that J. Dobell is best known. [J. J.]

Dobber, Anna, née Schindler, was b. April 9, 1713, at Kunewald, near Fulnek, Moravia. She went to Herrnhut in 1725, and in 1730 joined her friend and towns-woman, Anna Nitschmann (q.v.), in forming the "Jungfrauensbund" (i. Cor. vii. 32-31, Rev. xiv. 4) of the unmarried sisters at Herrnhut. On July 13, 1737, she became the wife of L. J. Dobber (česaroč Bishop, 1742, at Herrnhut, 1766), then General Elder of the Moravian Church. After assisting him in his labours for the conversion of the Jews at Amsterdam, she d. at Marienburg, near Büttingen, Hesse-Darmstadt, Dec. 12, 1799 (Koch. vi. 324). A faithful and gifted servant of Christ, she was the author of numerous hymns, full of personal devotion to her Lord, and of deep trust in Him; which passed into the Moravian collections, that of 1778 containing 18 by her.

Of the written May 26, 1735, beginning "Siesseroland deiner Gnade," No. 1623 in Appendix II. to the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, in 12 st. of 4 l., and tr. as "Far greater than one thought or could suppose," as No. 64 in pt. II. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1744; st. iv., xiii. already as No. 25 in 1742. Koch says st. iv., v. have become almost a Confession of Faith among the Moravians.

The only one of her hymns which has passed into use outside the Moravian hymnbooks is:—

De衔接 Kind. [The Lamb of God.] 1st pub. in Appendix III to the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, No. 1046, in 10 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 368, st. viii. was omitted. The only tr. in C. U. is:—

Holy Lamb, who receivest, a free tr. in 8 st. of 4 l., by J. Wesley, in H. and Sac. Poems, 1749 (P. W., 1868-72, vol. i. p. 280). Thence in full as No. 39 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742, but abridged and altered in later eds. In 1801, No. 374, is st. i.-iv. from the 1789, which begins, "Lamb of God, who receivest," and st. viii. rewritten from Wesley's st. v.-viii. (1866, No. 398). St. i.-iv. of this 1801 arrangement are in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1823, and Elliott's Ps. & Hymn., 1835. The original form was given in full as No. 28 in H. and Spiritual Songs, 1753, and repeated as No. 340 in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 (ed. 1785, No. 350). St. i., iii., v.-viii., slightly altered, were adopted as No. 78 in Mercer's C. P. and H. Bk., 1855 (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 373). Other centos are found in the C. C. 1859; Psalmist, 1878, and in America in the Meth. Epis. Hymns, 1849; the Baptist Service of Song, 1871; Hafteid's Ch. H. Bk., 1872, &c. Other forms in C. U. are:—

1. Blessed Lord, who receivest, st. 1, 3, 4, 8, altered as in the Rugby School H. Bk., 1856-1876; Kennedy, 1863, and others.

2. Father, who receivest, st. 1, 3, 4, 8, in Hedge and Huntington's Coll., Boston, U. S., 1853; and the Plymouth Coll., 1855.

4. Lamb of God, who receivest, st. 1, 3, 4, of Wesley altered, and two st. based on Wesley's 5, 8, in Bickersteth's Chr. Psalmist, 1833.

Another tr. is, "Child born without sin," in full, as No. 124 in the Appendix, of 1743, to the Moravian H. Bk., 1742.

J. M.

Doddridge, Philip, d.d., was b. in London, June 26, 1702. His grandfather was one of the ministers under the Commonwealth, who were ejected in 1662. His father was a London oilman. He was offered by the Duchess of Bedford an University teaching for ordination in the Ch. of England, but declined it. He entered Mr. Jennings's Nonconformist seminary at Kidwellow, and preached his first sermon (at 20) at Huncleby, to which Mr. Jennings had removed his academy. In 1723 he was chosen pastor at Kidwellow. In 1725 he changed his residence to Market Harborough, still ministering at Kidwellow. The settled work of his life as a preacher and divine began in 1729, with his appointment to the Castle Hill Meeting at Northampton, and continued till the last stage of consumption he sailed to Lisbon, in 1751, where he died October 29, the same year. Two hundred pupils in all, gathered from England, Scotland and Holland, were prepared in his seminary, chiefly for the dissenting ministry, but partly for professions. The wide range of subjects, including daily readings in Hebrew and Greek, Algebra, Trigonometry, Watts's Logic, outline of Philosophy, and copious Divinity, is itself a proof of Doddridge's learning. He was presented with his D.D. degree by the University of Aberdeen. His fame as a divine, combined with his wide sympathies and gentle, unaffected goodness, won for him the friendship of Watts, Col. Gardiner and Hervey, and the esteem of Secker and Warburton. He welcomed the work of Wesley and Whitefield, and entertained the latter on his visit to Northampton. His Aids and Progress of Religion in the Soul and The Family Expositor both did good work in their day. For criticism of his hymns see English Hymnody, Early, § XIV.

[H. L. B.]

After Dr. Doddridge's death his hymns were pub. by his friend Job Orton, in 1753, as:—

Concerning the text of the hymns, Orton says in his Preface:—

"There may perhaps be some improprieties, owing to my not being able to read the Author's manuscript in particular places, and being obliged, without a poetical genius, to supply those deficiencies, whereby the beauty of the stanza may be greatly defaced, though the sense is preserved."

The 1st ed. contained 370 hymns; the 2nd, 1759, 374; and the 3rd, 1766, and later eds., 375. In 1830 Doddridge's great-grandson revised the hymns from the original ms., and pub. the same as:—

This work contains 22 additional hymns. The text differs in many instances from Orton's, but these changes have not come into C. U. In addition to the ms. used by Orton and J. D. Humphreys, another containing 100 hymns (five of which are not in any ed. of the Hymns), all in the author's handwriting, and most of them dated, is referred to in this Dictionary as the "d. ms." It is the property of Mr. W. S. Rooker and family. A ms. not in Doddridge's handwriting, of 77 "Hymns by P. Doddridge, Mar. 16, 1759," is in the possession of Mr. W. T. Brooke. The existence of these ms.s. is accounted for from the fact that Doddridge's hymns were freely circulated in ms. during his lifetime. It is from his correspondence with R. Blair (q.v.) that the few compositions traceable to him in the Scottish Trans. & Paraphrases were derived.

The hymns by Doddridge which have attained to the greatest popularity are:—

"Awake, my soul, stretch every nerve!" "Do not I love Thee, O my Lord?" "Grace is a charming sound!" "Hark, the glad sound, the Saviour comes!" "My God, and is Thy table spread?" "O happy day, that fixed my choice!" "O God of Jacob [Bethel], by Whose hand!" "See Israel's gentle Shep—herd stand;"; "Ye servants of the Lord." These hymns, with many besides, are annotated under their respective first lines. Of the rest, taken from the Hymns, &c., 1755, the following are also in C. U.:

1. Behold the gloomy vale. Death anticipated.
3. Captives of Israel, hear. Spiritual Deliverance.
5. Eternal Source of life and thought. Subjection to the Father.
6. Exalted Prince of Life, we own. Christ the Prince and Saviour.
7. Father Divine, the Saviour cried. Christ's Submission to the Father.
10. God, with the Lord, proclaim my grace. Forgiveness.
13. God of salvation, we adore. Praise to God for Redemption.
14. Great Father of mankind. Gentleness brought into the Church.
15. Great God, we sing that mighty hand. The New Year.
16. Great Leader of Thine Israel's host. During Persecution.
17. Great Lord of angels, we adore. Ordination.
19. Great Teacher of Thy Church, we own. The Divine Precepts.
23. How gentle God's commands. God's Care of His Own.
24. How rich Thy favours, God of grace. God and His Living Temple.
25. How swift the torrent flows [rolls]. Our Fathers, where are they?
27. Jesus, we own Thy Sovereign hand. Christ to be fully known hereafter.
31. My soul, with all thy waking powers. The Choice of Mary.
32. Now let our voices join. Singing in the ways of God.
33. O Injured Majesty of heaven. Lament.
34. O Zion, tune thy voice. Glory of the Church of Christ.
36. Praise the Lord of boundless might. The Father of Lights.
37. Praise to Thy Name, Eternal God. Growth in Grace desired.
38. Remember, my soul, the narrow bounds. The New Year.
40. Return, my roving heart, return. Heart communing.
41. Salvation, O melodious sound. God our Salvation.
42. Saviour of men, and Lord of love. Ministry and Death of Christ.
43. Searcher of hearts, before Thy face. Peter to Simon Magus.
44. Shepherd of Israel, Thou dost keep. Induction or Settlement of a Minister.
46. Shines on our souls, eternal God. Sunday.
48. Sovereign of life, before Thine eye. Life and Death in God's hands.
49. The darkened sky, how thick it broods. Sorrow followed by Joy.

DORING, CARL A.

46. The day approacheth, O my soul. Judgment anticipated.
47. The King of heaven His table spreads. The Gospel Feast.
49. The swift-declining day. Walk in the Light.
50. These mortal joys, how soon they fade. Treasures, Perishable and Eternal.
51. Thy judgments cry aloud. Retribution Providence.
52. Thy presence, Everlasting God. Omniscience of the Father.
53. 'Tis mine, the covenant of His grace. Death anticipated.
54. To Thee, my God, my days are known. Life under the eye of God.
55. To-morrow, Lord, is Thine. Uncertainty of Life.
57. Triumphant Zion, lift thy head. The Church Purged and Guarded.
58. Unite my roving thoughts, unite. Peace.
59. What mystery, Lord, in Thee combine. Christ, the First and Last.
60. While on the verge of life I stand. Death anticipated with Joy.
63. Ye hearts with youthful vigour warm. The Young encouraged.
64. Ye humble souls, that seek the Lord. Rest.
66. Yes, the Redeemer rose. Easter.

In Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, Nos. 9, 12, 14, 15, 21, 23, 25, 29, 30, 32, 34, 35, 39, 40, 44, 47, 51, 61, 64, 65, 67, 69, 70, as above, are dated 1740. What authority there may be for this date we cannot say, these hymns not being in any "H. M. S." with which we are acquainted, and no dates are given in the Hymns, &c., 1755. Some later American editors have copied this date from Dr. Hatfield.

Doddridge's hymns are largely used by Unitarians both in G. Britain and America. As might be expected, the Congregationalists also draw freely from his stores. The Baptists come next. In the hymnals of the Church of England the choicest only are in use. Taken together, over one-third of his hymns are in C. U. at the present time.

Donne, John, D.D., b. in London, 1573, and educated as a Roman Catholic, but at the age of nineteen he embraced Anglicanism. He acted for some time as Secretary to Lord Chancellor Eldersmere. At the desire of King James he took Holy Orders, and rising to great fame as a preacher, had the offer of fourteen livings during the first year of his ministry. He was chosen, in 1617, preacher at Lincoln's Inn. In 1621 he became Dean of St. Paul's, and soon afterwards Vicar of St. Dunstan's in the West. Died 1631, and was buried in St. Paul's. His work as a Poet and Divine is set forth by I. Walton in his Lives. He was the author of the plaintive hymn, "Will Thou forgive," &c. (q. v.). [See English Hymnody, Early, § vii.]. Donne's Poems (1633) have been recently edited in an admirable manner by the Rev. Dr. Grosart in his Fuller Worthies Library, where for the first time is printed a full and complete edition of the Poems.

Döring, Carl August, s. of F. L. Döring, chief-forester at Mark Alvensleben, near Magdeburg, was b. at Mark-Alvensleben, Doudney, Sarah, daughter of Mr. George E. Doudney, of Cosham, Hants, was b. near Portsmouth, but removed into a remote village in Hampshire at an early age. Her first efforts in literature were made when she was about twelve years old. The poem "The Lessons of the Water-Mill," a popular song, especially in America, having been written when she was only fifteen years old, was published in 1861. It is a true story, and her works, including fiction, and sacred and secular poems, have been widely read and appreciated. Her sacred poems are the least numerous of her writings. Some of these are, "The Master hath come, and He calls us to follow," and "Saviour, now the day is ending," for use at the close of Evening Service, and of more than usual merit, creating the desire for more of a like kind. Greater use, however, may be made of what she has written than has been done. By being buried in magazine literature, her hymns are somewhat difficult to trace. Her Psalms of Life were published at Houlton in 1871. In the Sunday School Union Songs of Gladness, 1871, the following were given:

1. He Hath gone into His Garden. The Vineyard of the Lord.
2. In Thy holy garden ground. The Vineyard of the Lord.
4. Saviour, now the day is ending. Sunday Evening.
5. The Master hath come, and He calls us to follow. Jesus and Mary of Bethany.
6. We praise our Lord to-day. Sunday.
7. We sing a loving Jesus. Praise of Jesus.

Of these, Nos. 1, 2, 3, are in her Psalms of Life, 1871, and all have passed from the Songs of Gladness into other collections. Her:

8. Room for the wanderer, room. Christ's invitation.
in W. R. Stevenson's School Hymnal, 1880.

Douglas, Ellen, i.e. Mrs. Van Alstyne, q.v.

Down from the mountain Jesus came. C. Wordsworth. Bp. of Lincoln. [Epiphany.] Appeared in his Holy Year, 1862, in 7 st. of 4 l., for the 3rd Sun., after the Epiphany, concerning "The Manifestation of the Godhead in Christ, as the Physician of Body and Soul: as seen in the Gospel of the Week." As a complete hymn it is not in common use, but st. ii. - vi., as: "O God, make manifest in flesh," is given in the Supp. to the N. Cong., 1869, No. 1083.

Dowton, Henry, M.A., B. of Mr. John Dowton, Sub-Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge, was b. at Pulverbatch, Staffs., Feb. 12, 1818, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. 1840, and M.A. 1843. Taking Holy Orders in 1843, he became Curate of Rember, Isle of Wight, 1843, and of Holy Trinity, Cambridge, 1847. In 1849 he was transferred to the incumbency of St. John's, Chatham. He went to Geneva as English Chaplain in 1857; and was appointed Rector of Hopton in 1875. He was also for some time Domestic Chaplain to the late Lord Monson. He d. at Hopton, June 8, 1885. Mr. Dowton pub. a tr. of Professor Ernest Naville's Lectures on Modern Atheism, 1865; and Holy Scripture and the Temperance Question, 1878. His hymns were chiefly contributed to the Ch. of England Magazine; A. T. Russell's Ps. & Hymns, 1851; Barry's Ps. & Hymns, 1862; and the Sunday Magazine. In 1875 he collected these and published them as Hymns and Verses. His trans. from the French of Alexandre Vinet are also in the volume. [See French Hymnody, § viii.] His best known hymn is "Another year, another year" (given anonymously in the Harrow School Hymns, 1855); and "For Thy mercy, and Thy grace:" and "Harp awake, tell out the story." These have attained to great popularity, and are in extensive use. [J. J.]
Δόξα εν υιοστοις θεω, και επι γης ειρήνη. This is the Greek form of the Gloria in excelsis Deo, and is an expansion of the Angel’s Hymn in St. Luke, i. 14. It is given in Daniel, ii. pp. 268-69, in two forms, and accompanied by very extensive notes. The first form is from the Apostolic Constitutions, and the second is found at the end of the Psalms and Canticles contained in the Codex Alexandrinus. This latter is also given in full in Greek Hymnody, § x. 4. and in Ath. Greg. xxii, pp. 38-39. Of the Codex Alex. text Mr. Chatfield has given a literal tr. in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876, p. 161, v. “Glory to God in the highest; &c. The tr. in the Communion Office of the Common Prayer, “Glory be to God on high,” is from the Latin version of the hymn. (J. J.)

Doxologies. The term Doxology may be applied to the Terraeus, Alleluia, or any form of ascription of praise to the Blessed Trinity; but it is specially confined to the Gloria in excelsis Deo, technically known as the Greater Doxology [see Greek Hymnody, § x. 4], and to the Lesser Doxology. Under the general heading of Doxologies, we might include the various forms of ascriptions of praise with which most of the collects and prayers are concluded in both Eastern and Western Office Books. It must suffice to give as samples the last words of the (1) “Great Intercession,” and of the (2) “Prayer of Humble Access” in the Clementine Liturgy:

(1) “because to Thee belong all glory, worship, and thanksgiving, honour and adoration, to Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, now and always, and for ever and unceasing ages. Amen.” (Hammond, Liturgies E. & W., p. 19.)

(2) “through Thy Christ, with Whom to Thee be glory, honour, praise, thanksgiving, and to the Holy Ghost for ever. Amen.” (Ibid., p. 20.)

It has also been the custom from earliest times to conclude sermons or addresses in public worship with varying forms of doxology. The form regularly used by St. Chrysostom was this:—

“through Jesus Christ our Lord, with Whom to Thee be glory, honour, praise, thanksgiving, and to the Holy Ghost for ever. Amen.”

The Gloria Patri; or, Lesser Doxology, is of great, possibly but not demonstratively, Apostolic antiquity. Its Trinitarian language is derived from our Lord’s commission to baptize in Mat. xxviii. 19. St. Basil the Great, or whoever was the author of the letter “De Spiritu Sancto ad Amphilochium,” asserts that the first part of its present form was in use in both East and West as early as the time of St. Clement of Rome. No doubt the second half is later than the first half, and was added afterwards, but at a date which it is impossible to fix exactly. It must have been before A.D. 529, in which year the second Council of Vaison (can. 6) enjoins the use of the second half in France, as being already in general use throughout the whole East, Africa, and Italy, and as directed against heretics who denied the eternity of the Son of God. Various forms of the Gloria Patri have been and are in use, viz.:

1. Early varieties of the Greek form were these, (1) Δόξα Πατρός εν Υἱῷ, καὶ αἱ μεγάλαι τιμήσεις τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ εὐαγγελίαν τῇ οἰκουμένῃ, and (2) Δόξα Πατρός εν Υἱῷ, καὶ αἱ μεγάλαι τιμήσεις τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ παντοκράτορε, but both were discarded in favour of the following: (3) Δόξα Πατρός, εν Υἱῷ, καὶ αἱ μεγάλαι τιμήσεις τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ παντοκράτορε, καὶ εἰς τοὺς αἰ兀ους τοὺς θεον. “Amen,” which is still in current use in the Eastern Church, because the form was employed by Arius and his followers to prove a difference of inferiority between the second and first Persons of the Holy Trinity (Bingham, Antiq. of Christ, &c., bk. xiv, cap. 2). Another ancient but long obsolete form of words was, (4) Δόξα Πατρός, εις Υἱόν, καὶ τόν Θεόν Παντοκράτορα.

3. The ordinary Anglican form, which is not a literal translation of the Latin text, is: “Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost. As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.”

4. The Masoretic form, as ordered by the 12th and 14th canons of the 19th Council of Toledo, A.D. 633, and as found in the Introit appointed in the Masoretic Missal for Christmas Day, is: “Gloria Patri et Filio et Spiritui Sancto in saecula saeculorum. Amen.”

Concerning the use of the Doxology we may note that in the Eastern Offices it is used after each “Stasia,” or subdivision consisting of two or more Psalms. By the Western Rule of St. Benedict (cap. 18) it was directed to be used after each Psalm, and it is still so used in the Roman Breviary, except in the case of Psalms 62, 118, 119. It is also used at the close of the third, sixth, and eighth, or ninth Responsories, with repetition of part of the Reciprosity in lieu of its second half; and after the four opening verses at Matins, a position retained in the English Book of Common Prayer. The variations common to the Greek and Latin Service books, by which sometimes the first clause of the doxology is used without the second, may perhaps retain some witness to the separate history of the clauses.

Metrical Doxologies are naturally the outcome of the practice of concluding the Psalms with the Gloria Patri, being transfigured into the Hymns, and arranged according to their varying metres. In some instances the wording of the Gloria Patri was as strictly adhered to as the structure of the verse would admit, but in others the only resemblance is the expression of equal praise to the Three Persons in the Blessed Trinity. The following is a specimen in Sapphics taken from the Masoretic Breviary:

“Gloriam Patris celebrant honores, Gloriam Nato recitant personae, Cum quibus Sanctus sanctissimi existit Spiritus unus. Amen.”

(For Feast of St. Cyprianus. Migne, p. 1171.)

Sometimes a reference to the event which is commemorated on any particular festival is introduced into the doxology, as in the concluding verse of the acrostic Epiphany hymn, “A Patre unigenitus” (q.v.).
DOXOLOGIES.

"Gloria tibi, Domine, Qui apparisti nobis, Cum Patre et Sancto Spiritu, In sempera saecula." (Mark, i. 19. See also an Easter doxology, Ibid. p. 196.)

It is to the metrical Latin doxologies that we owe the various English forms which we possess, not necessarily the actual metres, but certainly the principles upon which they are based. It is then that the early metrical doxology of the 1535 Primer comes:—

"Glory be to the Trinitie, The Father, Son, and Spirit living: Which are one God and Persons Three, To whom be praise without ending." This is attached to the translation of Latin hymns. The forms in the later Primers are more regular, and also both trs. of the "Veni Creator," in the Ordinal. The various metrical renderings of the Psalms, as the Old Version, the New Version, and others, supply one for each metre. The older hymn-writers in many instances gave special attention to the point. I. Watts closed his Hymns and Spiritual Songs, 1707-9, with twenty versions, and introduced them by saying:—

"I cannot persuade myself to put a full period to these Divine Hymns till I have addressed a special song of \[noisy\] to God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. Though the Latin name of it, Gloria Patri, be retained in our nation from the Roman Church: and though there may be some excess of superstitious honour paid to the words of it, which may have wrought some unhappy prejudices in weaker Christians; yet I believe it still to be one of the parts of Christian worship."

Later writers followed these examples until almost every conceivable form of metrical doxology is provided for in the hymnody of the Church.

[F. E. W.]

1. The numerous Metrical Doxologies which are found in Latin and English especially are marked by a distinction of some importance. As intimated above, the Latin doxology is so worded as to emphasize the day or season for which it is appointed in addition to being a formal praise to the Three Persons of the Holy Trinity, whilst the English doxology is concerned with the latter only. The result is a richness in the Latin which is unattainable elsewhere. If space admitted, a complete set of Doxologies from the ancient Hymnaries and Breviaries could have been given, but we must confine ourselves to some of the more important. The following are from the Paris Breviary, 1736:—

1. In Adventu.

"Gut liberorum advente, Filli, tibi laus maxima, Cum Patre, cumque Spiritu, In sempera saecula."

2. In Nativitate Domini.

"Qui natus es de Virgine, Jesu, tibi sit gloria, Cum Patre, cumque Spiritu, In sempera saecula."

3. In Epiphania Domini.

"Qui te reavis consibens, Jesu, tibi sit gloria, Cum Patre, cumque Spiritu, In sempera saecula."

5. In Tempore Paschali.

"Da, Christe, nos tecum morti: Tecum simul da surgere: Terrena da contemnere: Amare de coelestia."

"Sit laus Patri, laus Filio, Qui nos, triumphans necis, Ad astras serua doxe: Compre tibi laus, Spiritus."

v. In Ascensione Domini.

"In, Christe, nos tecum morti: Tecum simul da surgere: Terrena da contemnere: Amare de coelestia."

"Qui victor ad coelum redis, Jesu, tibi sit gloria, Cum Patre, cumque Spiritu, In sempera saecula."

vi. In Die Pentecostae.

"Sit laus Patri, laus Filio; Par sit tibi laus, Spiritus, Affianti quo mentes sacrie Locent et ardent ignibus."

vii. In Assumptione Domini.

"Mundo redemptor qui venis, Filli, tibi laus maxima, Cum Patre, et almo Spiritu, Laus, utrisque Spiritus."

"Sit laus Patri, laus Filio; Par sit tibi laus, Spiritus, Divinae cujus unctio Nos templa Christo consecrat."

2. The Roman Breviary Metrical Doxologies follow this same rule, differing only in the wording of the same. As an instance, the following may be compared with No. v. above:—

v. In Ascensione Domini.

"In Christe, nos tecum morti: Tecum simul da surgere: Terrena da contemnere: Amare de coelestia."

vi. In Assumptione Domini.

"In Christe, nos tecum morti: Tecum simul da surgere: Terrena da contemnere: Amare de coelestia."

3. Other Breviaries, both ancient and modern, follow the rule and extend it also to all Festivals and Special Offices. A collection of 29 Doxologies from the Paris Breviary, 1736, including those for several minor Festivals, is given in Chadier's Hymnus Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and trs. of the more important from various Breviaries and ancient hymns are found in the works of J. Chandler, W. J. Copeland, E. Caswall, J. D. Chambers, W. J. Blew, Hl Mant, J. M. Neale, I. Williams, and other translass of Latin hymns.

4. Original English Metrical Doxologies are very numerous, and are found in the early versions of the Psalms and in the most modern hymn-books. The more lengthy of these which are in C. U. have been dealt with as separate hymns, and are given in the general "Index of Subjects and Seasons." Those which are composed of one, or at most two stanzas, are too numerous, and too much alike, to be given in detail. We can only append a list of the most exhaustive collections which are available to the reader. These are:—

1. Old Versions of the Psalms.

2. The old and New Versions.

3. J. Watts's Hymns, 1719, and Psalms, 1719.

6. The older collections of Whitefield, Medan, Top lady, Corns, Lady Huntingdon, Rippon, the later Baptist Selections, 1820 & 1836; the Congregational Collections and others to 1860.

7. Large selections are given in Kennedy, 1863; the Hymns, 1876; and the Songs of G. d. G., 1872; and W. Stone's Supplemental Hymnals, 1873. This last is the largest collection of doxologies extant. The metres are very varied, and the doxologies number 120. In the majority of modern hymn-books of the Church of England the doxologies are given with the hymns, and are not appended as a separate section of each book.

8. Modern Nonconformist collections generally adopt the practice of giving the doxologies with the hymns, Spurgeon's O. O. H. B., 1866, is an exception, the doxologies being given as a separate section between the Psalms and the hymns.

DOXOLOGIES.
Dread Jehovah! God of nations. [In Time of Trouble—National.] This hymn appeared in the Christian Observer, in April, 1804, in 4 st. of 8 l. At that time Bonaparte was First Consul, and meditating an immediate invasion of England. A day of humiliation and prayer was appointed. In anticipation of this day the following editorial note, together with the hymn as given below, appeared in the Christian Observer:

"His Majesty has been graciously pleased to appoint Friday, the 26th of May next, to be observed throughout England and Ireland as a day of public humiliation and fasting. We earnestly hope it may be observed in a proper manner. We subjoin a hymn for the occasion, which has just reached us in time to obtain a place in this number.

Hymn for the Fast Day.

May 26, 1804.

"Dread Jehovah! God of Nations, From thy Temple in the Skies, Hear thy People's SupPLICATION, And for their Deliverance rise. Lo! with deep Contrition turning, In thy Holy Place we bend; Fasting, praying, weeping, mourning, Hear us, spare us, and defend."

"Foes, who've ravag'd peaceful Regions, Now for us the Yoke prepare; And if thou forsake our Legions, We, like them, the Yoke must wear. Shall Religion's Foes enslave us? Shall their Heathen Tongues exclaim, 'Where's your God?' O rise to save us, And assert Thy glorious Name."

"Though our Sins, each Heart confounding, Long and loud for vengeance call; Thou hast Mercy as abounding, Thou hast Blood to cleanse them all. Let that Mercy veil Transgression, Let that Blood our guilt efface; Save thy People from Oppression, Save from Spoil thy Holy Place."

"Hear, O God! the Vow we tender, With our Hosts to battle go; Shield the Head of each Defender, And confound the impious Foe, So when ceas'd the battle's raging, Thine shall be the Victor's Prize; And in thy holy Bonds engaging, We will serve thee all our Days."

In 1805, in John Gresham's Select Portions of Psalms and Hymns, 3rd ed., it is given as Hymn xiv., and a note states it to have been "written" by a Clergymen, and to have been separately published with music by Haydn. In 1819, Coleridge, having slightly altered the text, and omitted st. ii., included the hymn in his Sel. in 3 st., No. 337. Bickersteth went further in reducing it to the first and third stanzas, with alterations, in his Christian Psalmody, 1833. He adopted the same stanzas in his Mitre H. Bk., 1836, but introduced many alterations therein. These alterations are repeated in the New Mitre Hymnal, 1874, together with a doxology in 2 st. of 4 l. Nearly all the modern collections, including the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hymns, 1832-69; Barry, 1862-67; H. Comp. 1872; Snype, 1872: Haviland; Stevenson's Hymns for Ch. & Home; and many others, have altered the text as given in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, and not the original. In Church Hymn., 1871, No. 290, the hymn, "Lord Almighty, God of nations," is also Bickersteth's text, with the alteration of the first and last lines of the hymn only. The hymn is in one form or another in somewhat extensive use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

DRAcup, John, was b. in 1723, but the place of birth and circumstances of early life are not known. In 1755 he became pastor of the Independent Church at Beef Lane, Sowerby, near Halifax; but in 1772, having apparently changed his views on Baptism, left Beef Lane, and became a minister among the Baptists, first at Rodhill-end, near Todmorden, and then at Rochdale. In 1784, the members of the Independent Church at Beef Lane, having in the interval followed his example and become Baptists, invited him to re-settle among them. Thus did he, and continued their pastor till his death, May 28, 1795.

In 1747, Mr. Dracup pub. a small volume of 63 hymns with the title, Hymns and Spiritual Songs, by John Dracup, Minister of the Gospel at Sowerby, Bolton, printed by R. Jackson. Two of these, beginning "Free Grace to every heavy-born soul," and "Thanks to Thy name, O Lord, that we," had previously appeared in Lady Huntington's Collection, undated ed. c. 1746, and again in the revised ed. of 1749. Both are in Denham's Sel. (1831); the former is still in Goodby's (1853) and in Stevens's Sel. (1851), and the latter in Reed's H. Bk., 1842, &c. A third hymn of Dracup's, very touching both in sentiment and language, is found in a small Baptist supplementary sel. It begins: "Once I could say, 'My God is mine.' His other hymns have seldom had more than a local use. [W. R. S.]

Draw near, ye weary, bowed and broken-hearted. [Jesus weeping at the grave of Lazarus.] This hymn was given in Christian Lyrics, R. T. S., n.d., in 4 st. of 4 l. In 1853, 3 st. were included in the Leeds H. Bk., No. 208, as from the Christian Lyre. Whether this is a mistake for the R. T. S. Christian Lyrics we cannot say, but the hymn is not in the Christian Lyre of 1830–1. Dr. Gale gives the same stanzas in his English H. Bk., 1874, but appends no signature. [W. T. B.]

Drayton, Michael, b. 1563, d. 1631, was very popular in his days, and his name is still regarded with respect. He was the author of the Poly-o-ibion and many other works. His hymns were pub. as:—

"The Harmonie of the Church, containing, 'The spiritual songs and holy hymns of godly men, patriarchs, and prophets, all sweetly sounding to the praise and glory of the Highest,' 1591."

Of this but a single copy is known. It was reprinted by the Percy Society, with again in the Rev. Richard Hooper's edition of Poly-o-ibion, in Smith's Library of Old Authors. [J. T. B.]
DREDSOVEREIGN, LET

Dread Sovereign, let my evening song. I. Watts. [Evening.] Appeared in the 2nd ed. of his H. & S. Songs, 1709, Bk. ii., No. 7, in 6 st., of 4 l, and headed, "An Evening Song." The opening stanza, when compared with J. Mason's "Song of Praise for the Evening" (Songs of Praise, 1683, No. xi), is evidently suggested by Mason's at i. The two are:

Mason, 1683.

Watts, 1709.

"Now from the altar of my heart Let incense flames arise; Like holy incense rise: To reach the lofty skies."

The hymn in its original form is in C. U. in both in G. Britain and America. There are also altered texts in C. U., as (1) "Blest Saviour, let our evening song"; this is in Common Praise, 1879; and (2) "O Holy Father, let my song," in Bap. Ps. & Hym., 1859-60, &c.

Drei König fahrt die gotliche Hand. [Epiphany.] Appeared in the Alte Katholische Geistliche Kirchengefang, Cologne, 1621, in 4 l., of 7 st., and in 8, 1, and then, omitting st. 8, in F. Hommel's Geistliche Volkslieder, 1871, No. 51; and in full, modified, in the Trier G. B. (R. C.), 1886, p. 34. Nearly the same text, but beginning, "Es fahrt drei König Gottes Hand," from the Katholische Kirche Gefang, Cologne, 1625, is included, omitting st. 8. in Weckermeier, v. 1251, and in H. Bone's Constitutions, 1846 (ed. 1879, No. 82). Tr. as:

Three kings were led by God's own hand, a good tr. from the Trier text, omitting st. 8, iv., vii., by Dr. J. F. Littledale, as No. 54 in the People's B., 1887, signed "A. L. P." [J. M.]

Dreisprachigkeit, der Gottheit wahrer Spiegel. J. Franke. [Trinity Sunday Evening.] 1st pub. in C. Peter's Andachts-Zymla, Freiberg, 1655, p. 276, in the section entitled, "On the Holy Trinity," in 8 st. of 4 l. In Franke's Geistliches Stil, 1674, p. 31 (ed. 1816, p. 35). St. 1, 2 are based on "O Lux beata Trinitas," and st. 3-7, on Romans xi. 33-36. St. 8 ("Deum Num lat gros") is taken from his Fichtmahnzipherpen, Frankfurt-am-Main, 1359. It passed into J. Cruger's Praeix pietatis melioris, 1661; Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704; and other collections, and is No. 114 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:

True mirror of the Godhead! Perfect Light. A good tr. of st. 1-3, 7, 8, by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Germ., 2nd Series, 1856, p. 64. Her tr. of st. 2, 7, 8, altered and beginning, "We praise thee, Lord, with earliest morning ray," appear as "A Morning Psalm of Praise" in the H. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S., 1884, No. 103. [J. M.]

Drennan, William, M.D., b. at Belfast, May 23, 1754, and educated at Glasgow, where he graduated M. A. in 1771, and M.D. 1778. He subsequently practised at Ilfracombe. He d. Feb. 5, 1820. In 1815 he pub. Sentitive Pieces in Prose and Verse, Belfast, 1815, and his Poems were collected and pub. with a Memoir by his sons in 1859. Of his poems six are grouped under the heading of "Religious Poems." Seven hymns, including five of these "Religious Poems," were contributed to Asbury's Unitarian Soc., 1818; but in the 1859 Poems and Memoir most of them are in a longer form. As most of these are still in C. U. amongst the Unitarians in G. Britain and America, we subjoin the list of first lines—

1. All nature feels attractive power. Law of Love.
2. Greece who with generous pity glows. Charity.
4. In this fair globe, with ocean bound. Love of God.
5. O sweeter than the fragrant flower. Being Good.

Drees, Adam, was b. in Dec. 1820, in Thuringia, probably at Weimar. He was at first musician at the court of Duke Wilhelm of Saxony-Weimar; and after being sent by the Duke for further training under Marco Sacchi at Warsaw, was appointed his Kapellmeister in 1653. On the Duke's death in 1662, his son, Duke Bernhard, took Drees with him to Jenne, appointed him his secretary, and, in 1672, Town Mayor. After Duke Bernhard's death, in 1678, Drees remained in Jenne till 1683, when he was appointed Kapellmeister at Arnstadt to Prince Anton-Günther of Schwarzburg-Sondershausen. He d. at Arnstadt, Feb. 15, 1701 (Koch, ii. 270-274: Altp. Deutsche Biog., v. 387; Wetzell, i. 193-4, and A. H., vol. i., pt. iv., pp. 28-30).

In 1880, the reading of Spener's writings and of Luther on the Romans led to a change in his religious views, and henceforth under good and evil report he held prayer meetings in his house, which became a meeting-place for the Pietists of the district. "His hymns," says Wettzel, of which he himself composed not only the melodies, but also, as I have certain information, he also was sung at the meetings of pious persons in his house, before they came into print."

One has been tr. into English, viz.:

Seelenbrudergang, Jesus, Gottes Lamm, appeared in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1897, p. 147, in 13 st. of 6 l. repeated (with the well-known melody by himself added, which is the Irish Ch. Hym. called "Thuringia"), in the Darmstadt G. B., 1898, p. 134, as No. 197 in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and recently as No. 119 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. In Wagner's G. B., Leipzig, 1897, vol. iii. p. 420, it begins, "Jesus, Gottes Lamm." The tr. in C. U. is:

Bridgeworm, Thou art mine. A tr. of st. 1, 2, 4, 8, 13-15, by Dr. M. Loy, as No. 263 in the Ohio Luth. Hym. 1880.

Another tr. is, "God and man indeed," of st. iii. as st. i. of No. 402 in the Missouri H. Bk., 1799 (1886, No. 234). [J. M.]

Drees, Johann Friedrich Ludwig, s. of F. C. Drees, burgomaster of Horn, in the Principality of Lippe-Detmold, was b. at Horn, Nov. 17, 1762. After the completion of his studies at the University of Marburg he was for some time co-rector of the school at Detmold. In 1790 he became third pastor of the Reformed Church at Detmold, and after being pastor at Hillentrup from June 28 to Oct. 25, 1795, returned to Detmold as second pastor. He remained in Detmold till 1820, when he again became pastor at Hillentrup, and d. there Nov. 30, 1834. (Ms. from Pastor A. Koppens, Detmold.) His hymn:

Hier lag ich, Herr. In the Staube. Trust in God. Was written at Detmold after the death, on Nov. 14, and before the burial, Nov. 17, 1794, of his first wife (Rosina (Elizabeth) née Ewald. It was 1st pub. as No. 91 of the hymns for the arch and sorrowing appended to his Easter Sermon pub. at Lengo, 1813, entitled Wiedersehen. It is in 12 st. of 81, and when included as No. 601 in the Berlin G. B., 1829, st. v, vii, ix, xii, were omitted, and the rest altered. This form was repeated in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 914.

1. My God, be here before Thy face, a C. M. version from Bunsen, by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Germ., First Series, 1855, p. 38. Her st. ii, iv, are altered in later eds. In full in the Schaff-Gilman Lib. of Rel. Poetry, ed. 1883, p. 821. In the American hymn-books it appears in the following forms from the 1835 text:

(1) "My Father, (God, before Thy face," No. 226, in Boardman's Select. Philadelphia, 1861, is from her st. i., ii. 1-4; iv., ii. 1-4, and vi.

(2) "O Father, compass me about," No. 362, in the R. of the Spirit, Boston, 1851, is her st. iv., ii. 1-4; v., ii. 1-4; vi., ii. 1-4; vii., ii. 1-4.

(3) "I know Thy thoughts are peace towards me," No. 970, in the Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, is her st. v., vi. viii.

(4) "Father, Thy thoughts are peace towards me," No. 900, in Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1858, is her st. v., vi., ii. 1-4, and vi.

Drop, drop, slow tears. Phineas Fletcher. [Penitence.] Appeared in his Poetical Miscellanies, 1633; recently republished by Dr. Grosart in 4 vols., 1869, in his Fuller Worthies Library. This tender poem is given in Thring's Coll., 1882, and in others. [See English Hymnody, Early, § vi.] [J. J.]

Drooping soul, shake off thy fears. C. Wealey. [Lent. Resignation.] 1st pub. in Hymns & Soc. Poems, 1742, in 6 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 293). In 1788 J. Waukley included st. i.-iv. in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 137. This arrangement has been repeated in later editions, and in other collections. The expression in st. ii. l. 2—

Fainting soul, be bold, be strong;
Wait the leisure of thy Lord.

is from Coverdale's prose version of Ps. xxvii. 16, in the Bk. of Common Prayer. [J. J.]

Drummond, David Thomas Kerr, B.A., youngest s. of James Rutherford Drum- mond, of Strangreath, Perthshire, was b. at Edinburgh, Aug. 25, 1805. After studying at the University of Edinburgh, he went to Oxford, where he graduated B.A. He was ordained Priest in 1831, and, after serving various curies, became, in 1838, joint minister of Trinity Episcopal Church, Dean Bridge, Edinburgh. He resigned his charge and severed his connection with the Scottish Episcopal Church in 1843, when he became the minister of a church built for him (St. Thomas's English Episcopal Church, Edinburgh), where he continued to minister to a large and influential congregation until his death. He d. at Pitlochry, Perthshire, June 9, 1877. His hymns appeared to the number of 10 in the Church of England Hymnbook, 1838, of which he was joint editor with Dr. Grevillo, a member of his own congregation. [Scottish Hymnody, § vii.] [J. M.]

Drummond, William, M.A., eldest s. of Sir John Drummond, Kt., of Hawthornden, near Edinburgh, was b. at Hawthornden, Dec. 13, 1853. He studied at the University of Edinburgh, and graduated m.a. in 1869. Succeeding, by the death of his father, in 1619, to the estate of Hawthornden, he resided there till his death, on Dec. 4, 1649. He was one of the most eminent literary Scotmen of his time, and a friend of Sir William Alexander and Ben Jonson. His Flowers of Zion were pub. in 1624, and his Works were re-published and pub. in two vols. at London, 1655-56, and again at Edinburgh, in one vol., in 1711. His Poems were issued by the Maitland Club, in 1821, with additions from the Hawthornden ms., originally pub. by Dr. David Laing in the Transactions of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. They have since been edited by Peter Cunningham in 1833, and, in 1856, by W. B. D. Turnbull (Ed., J. R. Smith). Among the Posthumous Poems, 1st pub. in 1636, is a tr. of the Dies Irae, and among those added in 1711 are trs. of 20 of the Roman Breviary hymns. These, which are interesting as being among the earliest attempts of the kind, are included in the edition of 1856. Professor Masson has recently issued an interesting work on him as Drummond of Hawthornden:—

In an article in the Dublin Review, 1883, and again in the preface to his Anm. Sanctus, 1884, Mr. Orby Shipley has questioned Drummond's right to the trs. from the Roman Breviary which were given in his posthumous Works, 1711. The history of these translations, so far as we can gather, is this. In 1619 The Primer; or, Office of the Blessed Virgin Mary, was issued, with a revised translation [see Primaera], and all the hymns therein but one were new. These were repeated in a reprint in 1632. This reprint contains an address to the reader, in which occurs the following passage:

"The Hymnes most of which are used by the holy Church in her publick Office are a new translation done by one most skilfull in English poerty wherein the literal sense is preserved with the true strain of the verse."

In 1711 a complete edition of Drummond's Works, under the editorship of Bishop Sage and Thomas Ruddiman, appeared, and in it 18 hymns, identical with those in the 1619 Primer, were given as from the ms. in the Edinburgh University Library. These ms., however, are not now to be found, and Mr. Shipley's contention is that Drummond merely transcribed these translations, and that his 1711 editors, finding them in his autograph, concluded they were his. He strongly insists (see his preface to Anm. Sanctus, pp. 12-14) on the improbability of a Catholic publisher applying to a Scotch Protestant for translations, and really this is his main argument. Against this we must set the following considerations. (1) Drummond undoubtedly translated the Dies Irae pub. by Phillips, in 1656. His attention had therefore been drawn to Latin hymnody. (2) The express words of the address to the reader in the 1632 edition, "one most skilful in English poetry," certainly suit Drummond. (3) The fact that Sage and Ruddiman, with Drummond's ms. before them, had no doubt on the matter. (4) The books presented by him to the Edinburgh University show him to have had a taste for Roman and ascetic theology. (5) The similarity in style... to his Flora of Zion of 1623. Mr. Shipley's theory therefore seems to rest on no solid basis. His evidence is purely internal and problematical. It is quite possible that in his foreign tours, for some time at least, Drummond was a converted Roman Catholic. But this is merely conjectural. Mr. Shipley's theory, the matter rests solely on the authority of Drummond's editors, Sage and Ruddiman, and the expression in the address of 1615 (noted above), that the translations were done by one most skillful in English poetrie. According to Mr. Shipley's theory, this writer, who was most skillful in English poetrie, must have been a Roman Catholic; and failing to find one such poet among the Catholics of that day to whom he can give a habitation or a name, he further adds that he is "unknown." Until it can be shown that at that date, 1615 (the 1st ed. of the Primer), there was a known Roman Catholic writer "most skillful in English poetrie," we must abide by Drummond.

[After W.T.D.]

Drummond, William Hamilton, B.D., a. of an Irish physician, was b. at Ballyclare, Antrim, Ireland, 1772, and d. at Dublin, Oct. 16, 1855. Educated for the ministry at the University of Glasgow, he became, in 1793, the pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Belfast, and in 1816, of the Strand Street Chapel, Dublin. His poetical works include:

1. Juvenile Poems, 1771; (2) Tryphasus, 1808; (3) The Giant's Castle, 1811; (4) Clonard, 1817; and (5) Who are the Happy? a Poem on the Christian instituted with other Poems on Sacred Subjects, 1818.

In 1818 A Selection of Ps. & Hymn for the Use of the Presbytery of Antrim, and the Congregation of Strand Street, Dublin, was pub. at Belfast. This vol. was probably edited by Dr. Drummond. It contained several of his hymns. Five of these (Nos. 84, 190, 201, 236, 264) were contributed to that edition.

From Who are the Happy? the following hymns have come into C. U.:——

1. A voice from the desert comes awful and shrill. ( Hirah. This is in extant use in the Unitarian hymn-books of America.

2. Come, let us sound her praise abroad. (Charity. This is in extant use as No. 2, with a new heading. In this form the hymn was given in the Leeds H. Bk., 1833.

4. O had I the wings of a dove. (Retirement. This hymn is not suited to congregational use. It appeared in the Belfast Ps. & Hymns, 1816.

The original texts of these hymns are in Lyra Brit., 1867, from whence also most of the biographical facts have been taken. A few of Drummond's hymns, in addition to those named, are found in some American Unitarian collections.

[J. J.]

Dryden, John. The name of this great English poet has recently assumed a new importance to the students of hymnus, from a claim made in his behalf in regard to a considerable body of translations from the Latin published after his death (1701), in a Primer of 1706. The discussion of this point will precede us from giving more than an outline of his life.

1. Biography.—John Dryden was the s. of Eranus, the third son of Sir Eranus Dryden, and was b. at Aldwinkle, All Saints Northants, Aug. 9, 1631. He was educated under Dr. Busby at Westminster, and entered Trinity Coll., Cambridge, in 1650. He took his B.A. in 1654, and resided nearly 7 years, though without a fellowship. He was of Puritan blood on both his father's and mother's side, and his training found expression in his first great poem, Heroic Stanzas on the Death of Oliver Cromwell, 1658.

In 1660, however, he turned, like the bulk of England, Royalist, and in A Panegyric on the Coronation (1661), celebrated the Restoration. In 1663 he married Lady Elizabeth Howard. The marriage was apparently not a happy one; and there seems to be plain proof of Dryden's unfaithfulness.

In 1670 he was made Poet Laureate and Historiographer Royal, and retained these posts until the accession of William (1688). He had joined the Roman Church in 1685, and remained steadfast to it at the fall of James II. This change is of special significance, as will appear below, in regard to his translations from the Latin. It greatly straitened his means, and compelled him to great literary exertion in his closing years.

He d. May 18, 1701, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

The poems of Dryden show high excellence in fields widely different from another. He was for years the leader of the English stage, as a writer of tragedy, comedy, and tragic-comedy. The specialties of his plays were a large substitution of the heroic couplet for blank verse, in imitation of Corneille, plots full of exaggerated passion, intrigue, and rant, and a catch-phrase dialogue. These features were caricatured by Buckingham and others in the Rehearsal (actd 1671). The gross immorality of his dramas has long made them unreadable, but his influence on poetry has been enduring. No metre so long dominant styled as his heroic couplet, which, though inferior to Pope's in polish and precision, excels it in resonance, freedom and audacity. "The long resounding march and earth divine."

The first to make poetry a lucid vehicle for political and religious discussion, in the Religio Laici (1662), and The Hind and Panther (1667), the finest satires in English are Abolition and Achiltibope (Part I. 1661; Part II, 1662), to which he contributed only a portion, the rest being by Nahum Tate), The Medal, and Mac Flecknoe (1662). He gave a new energy and fulness of meaning to the work of translation through his classical reproductions, of which his Virgil is the finest specimen (pub. in 1677). Alexander's Feast remains one of the most brilliant English odes. His prefaces and dedications had a large influence on our prose style, and are the first material efforts in the province of poetical criticism. The salient points of his genius are a transcendent literary form continually exerting itself in fresh forms; and that narrowness of the work of poetry to matters of political, social, human interest, which ruled supreme in Pope and his followers. (See Dryden: by Mr. G. Saintsbury, Men of Letters Series).

ii. Hymn Translations.—Until recently, Dryden's known contributions to hymnus consisted of only three pieces. The best known of these is the tr. of "Venit Creator" in vol. ii. of his Miscellanies, 1693. Sir Walter Scott, in his Life of Dryden, 1808, pub. a tr. of the "Te Deum" ("The Sovereign God our grateful accents praise"), and a tr. of "Ut quae sum laxi," the hymn at Even-song for St. John the Baptist's Day (Scott calls it "St. John's Eve") ("O sylvan Prophet").

Mr. W. T. Brooke has pointed out one or two facts that slightly shake Scott's attribution of these two pieces to Dryden. He has discovered the tr. of the "Te Deum" in Dodd's Christian Magazine, 1764, contributed by J. Duncombe, and attributed to Pope. And Scott's account of the two pieces is confused. He received them from a Mrs. Jackson, who told him that they were mentioned in Butler's "Tour through Italy," and that after Butler's death they passed into the hands of the celebrated Dr. Alban, and so came to her. They are not mentioned in the published edition of Butler's "Tour;" and "Butler" and "Dr. Alban" are the same person—Dr. Alban Butler, author of The Lives of the Saints; Albert; Butler's Tour was edited and published by Charles Butler, his nephew, who also wrote A Life of Alban Butler. The confusion cannot now be unravelled, but is not enough to discredit Scott's decision which may have rested on the same writing. The tr. of the "Te Deum" is by Dr. Pope, and has a Drydenesque Alexandrine rhyme, and other marks of Dryden's manner. The poem in its whole is a remarkable evidence of unity of hand in these trs. Is this hand Dryden's? The case for Dryden is a constructive one, and may be summarised:

The tr. in Scott, "O sylvan Prophet," is in a metre unknown to previous editions of the Primer, and there are altogether 11 trs., generally representing Latin in the metre of Sapphics, in the book in this metre. Five of these trs. have a further internal link in having the same gloire; three in having another common gloire. The presentation is irreverent in this as they are all by the author of "O sylvan Prophet." Again, the tr. of the "Te Deum" (also in Scott) is one of 8 pieces in Dryden's great metrical version of the Primers which is also new to the Primer in heroic couplets. Though not linked by common gloires, the tone of all these is Drydenesque, especially the tr. of the "Sacrificis Deo Saeluminia," which has these characteristics: It seems to be a translation of the Latin version of Dryden; and it shows Dryden's manner, e.g., (as Mr. Broke acutely conjectures), Charles Dryden, who may have taken his father's name with him to Rome.

The argument in favour of Dryden is presented with great force and skill by Mr. Orby Shipley in the Dublin Review, October, 1884, and in the preface to his Annae Sanctae. In corroboration of the evidence given above, Mr. Shipley has collected some Roman Catholic traditions, which ascribe to Dryden "a considerable number" of Latin trs. "Jesu dulcis memoria" and "Dies Irae" have been translated as pupae, these traditions are however very indefinite; in some cases they do not date earlier than the present century; and in some (see Preface to Annae Sanctae) they are mistaken. He seeks a further corroboration of the theory from the appearance of several of these trs. in editions of The Manual of Prayers, 1750, and The Garden of the Soul, 1785. But it is shown under Primers that these books afford no real evidence on this subject.

[H. L. E.]

1. Eternal depth of Love Divine, a free tr. of st. 1, 2, 4, 7, by J. Wesley in H. and S. Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 173). It was not included in the Wes. H. Bk. till in the Sapp. of 1830, No. 596, omitting Wesley's st. iii. II. 5-8, and iv. II. 1-4. This form is in the Wes. 1875, No. 655, and in the Wesley Association and New Connexion Collections. With the omission of the last 8 lines it is No. 94 in the Amer. Meth. Eps. Hymns, 1849. These omitted lines are given as No. 730; "O King of Glory, Thine rich grace," in the same collection.

2. Thou deep abyss of blessed Love, a free tr. of st. 1, 4, 8, by Mrs. Charles in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 243, and there in Holy Song, 1869, No. 298.

Another tr. is —

"Te bottomless depths of God's infinite Love," by J. Gambold. The tr. of st. 1 appears as No. 234 in the Appendix of 1743 to the Moravian H. Bk., and the full form as No. 592 in pt. ii., 1746 (1866, No. 24).
DU HILMISICO TROHTIN

1. Blessed Saviour, Thou I love. Jesus only. One of four hymns contributed by him to Darius E. Jones's Temple Melodies, 1832. It is in 5 st. of 4 L. In Dr. Hatfield's Church II. It is given in 3 st. The remaining three hymns of the same date are:

2. Parted for some anxious days. Family Hymn.

3. Praise to our heavenly Father. God. Family Union.

5. Stand up, stand up for Jesus. Soldiers of the Cross. The origin of this hymn is given in Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, p. 298, as follows:

"I caught its inspiration from the words of that noble young clergyman, Rev. Dudley Atkins Tyng, rector of the Epiphany Church, Philadelphia, who died about 1844. His last words were, 'Tell them to stand up for Jesus: now let us sing a hymn.' As he had been much persecuted in those pro-slavery days for his persistent course in pleading the cause of the oppressed, it was thought that these words had a peculiar significance in his mind; as if he had said, 'Stand up for Jesus in the person of the downtrodden slave.' (Luke iv. 18)

Dr. Duffield gave it, in 1858, in ms. to his Sunday School Superintendent, who put it on a small handbill for the children. In 1858 it was included in The Psalmist, in 6 st. of 8 L. It was repeated in several collections and in Lyra Sac. Amer., 1868, from whence it passed, sometimes in an abbreviated form, into many English collections.

DUFFIELD, Samuel Augustus Wil- loughby, s. of G. Duffield, jun., was b. at Brooklyn, Sept. 24, 1843, and graduated at Yale College, 1863. In 1866 he was licensed, and in 1867 ordained as a Presbyterian Minister, and is now [1895] Pastor of Westminster Church, Bloomfield, N. J. He pub. in 1887 a tr. of Bernard's Hora morisima (q.v.): Harp and Wolf; a Book of Verse, 1868 (copyright, 1870); and The Burial of the Dead (in conjunction with his father), 1882. In the Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, the following tr. and an original hymn are by him:

2. O Christ, the Eternal Light. A tr. of "Christi lumen perpetuum." 1883.

4. O what shall be, when shall be. A tr. of "O qui mihi et plebi mei." 1883.

5. To Thee, O Christ, we ever pray. A tr. of "Christe precarnarius." 1883.

DUM, Christe, confixus cruici. C. Coffin. [Passiontide.] Appeared in the Paris Brew., 1736, and again in his Hymni Sacri of the same year. It is the Ferial hymn at Lauds in Passion week, and till Maundy Thursday. It is also in the Lyra Brev and others. The text is given in J. Chandler's Hymn. of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 65, and in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiastic, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:

Translations not in C. U.:

Dum morte victor obtruit. C. Coffin. [SS. Philip and James.] This hymn is in the Paris Breviary, 1736, where it is given as the hymn for the first Vespers of SS. Philip and James. So also in the Lyons and modern French Breviaries. It was included in the author's Hymni Sacri, 1736, and is also in J. Chandler's Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 94, and in Carl. Newman's Hymni Ecdesiae, 1836 and 1865. Tr. as:—

The Lord hath harken the bonds of death. By J. Chandler, in his Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 101, in 6 st. of 4 l. The hymn No. 358 in the Hymnary, 1872, although beginning with the same first line, and assigned to Chandler in the Index, is so altered as to be almost beyond recognition. The most that can be said of it is that it is based on Chandler's tr. Another tr. is:—

When from Death's chambers Christ triumphed rose. J. Williams, 1839. [W. A. S.]

Duncan, Mary, née Lundie, daughter of the Rev. Robert Lundie, Parish Minister of Kelso, was b. at Kelso, April 26, 1814. On July 11, 1836, she was married to the Rev. William Wallace Duncan, Parish Minister of Cleish, Kinross-shire. In the end of December, 1839, she took a chill, which resulted in a fever remaining in her body on Jan. 5, 1840. Her gifts and graces were early consecrated to her Master's service. She was a devoted wife and mother, and a true helper to her husband in his parochial work. Her hymns, mostly written for her children between July and December, 1839, appeared, in 1841, in her Memoir, by her mother, and were issued separately, in 1842, as Rhymes for my Children, to the number of 23. The best known are, "Jesus, tender Shepherd, hear me," and," My Saviour, be Thou near me." [J. M.]

Dunlop, Thomas, seventh son of Mr. James Dunlop, of Kilmarnock, was b. at Kilmarnock, May 10, 1839. After studying at the Universities of Glasgow and Edinburgh, he became, in 1867, minister of the U. P. Church, Balfron, Stirlingshire, and in 1871 joint minister of Bristol U. P. Church, Edinburgh. This charge he resigned in 1875, and in the same year became minister of Emmanuel Congregational Church, Boston. In 1874 he was appointed a member of the PDMI Committee of the U. P. Church, and contributed the hymn, "I cannot, no, I will not let Thee go," to their Presbyterian Hymnal, 1876. In the Draft Hymnal, 1874, it began, "Jesus, I cannot, will not let Thee go," and contained 8 st. This form is included in the Evang. Union Hymnal, 1878, No. 153. He has recently been a frequent contributor to the PDMI Corner of the Christian Leader, a religious paper, pub. in Glasgow. [J. M.]

Dunn, Catherine Hannah, dau. of a Nottingham bookseller and printer, was b. at Nottingham, Nov. 7, 1813, and d. May 18, 1863. In 1857 she pub. a little volume of 36 Hymns from the German. Of these the best known are noted under "Hilf, Herr Jesu, laß gelingen" and "Nun seh der Tag gennet hat. They deserve more notice than they have as yet received. That at p. 37 is from "Lieber Herr Jesu, in den Tagen," [Freylinghausen's G. B., 1714, No. 249], that at p. 98 from "Bote mir! bote mir," by J. G. F. Köhler [Knapp's Er. L. S., 1856, No. 1623], and that at p. 119 from "Erst vollbracht! Gottlob es ist vollbracht." [For this last see Gryphius. A.] [J. J.]

Dunn, Robinson Porter, D.D., an American Baptist, b. in 1825; was for some time Professor in Brown's University, Providence, Rhode Island; and d. Aug. 28, 1867. His hymns, mainly translated from the Latin and other sources, include, "No, no, it is not dying"; "Jesus, Jesus, visit me"; "Jesus, our fainting spirits cry"; "We sinners, Lord, with earnest heart" (par. "Jesus, our fainting spirits cry," q. v.). These appeared in some of the American hymn-books, and are in C. U. [J. J.]

Dutton, Anne, b. cir. 1698, d. 1765, was a native of Northampton, and at the age of 22 became wife of Benj. Dutton, Baptist minister of Great Gran-den, Hunts. In 1743 her husband, on returning from a visit to America, was wrecked and lost near to the English coast. From that time to her death she devoted her time and much of her income to the service of religion. 13 vols. of her letters were published, some being translated into the Dutch language. She was the author of several theological treatises, and in 1754 published a poem entitled, A Narrative of the wonders of Grace, in six parts, to which was added A Poem on the special work of the Spirit in the hearts of the Elect, also Sixty-one hymns on several Subjects. These poems and hymns were reprinted in 1833, with a Memoir of the author, by John Andrews Jones.

The hymns are prose in style, and may be described as short chapters of Calvinistic theology set to rhymes and metre. They have almost entirely passed out of use. One beginning "Faith is a precious grace," not improbably suggested Blackstone's well-known hymn with the same first line. And another on "The Soul's joy in God as its Portion," so much resembles both in thought and expression, Ryland's fine hymn, "O Lord, I would delight in Thee," that it seems almost certain that, when writing it, he had in his mind, perhaps unconsciously, memories of Mrs. Dutton's composition. [W. R. S.]

Dutton, Deodatus, jun., b. cir. 1810, was a native of Monean, Massachusetts, U.S. He was a Lecturer at the third Presbytery, New York, but died before ordination, about 1832. His hymns in C. U. are:—

2. O where can the soul find relief from its foes. Heaven. The date and first pub. of this hymn is uncertain. It is given, together with the above, in the Plymouth Coll., 1855. [F. M. B.]

Dust and ashes, sin and guilt. J. Montgomery. [Image of Christ desired.] In the m. mss., this hymn is dated "Jan. 23, 1833." It was pub. in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, p. 108, in 3 st. of 6 l., and headed "Re- newal in the Image of Christ." Its use is mainly confined to America.

Dwight, Timothy, D.D. This is the most important name in early American hymnology, as it is also one of the most illustrious in American literature and education. He was b. at Northampton, Massachusetts, May 14, 1752, and graduated at Yale College, 1769; was a tutor there from Dwight's lyrics are all professedly psalms, but they are by no means literal versions. His original compositions number 33. Of these many are still in common use, the most important being:

1. Be still the Lord, Who heard my prayer. Ps. cxviii. This is the second part of Ps. xxviii., in 5 st. of 8 l. There is a variant in the English N. Comy. 1853.

2. I love Thy kingdom, Lord. Ps. xxvxxi. This is a verse of Ps. 137, in 8 st. of 4 l., and is in extensive use at the present time throughout the States. It is also included in many English, Irish, and Scottish collections, sometimes in the original form, as in Alford's Year of Praise, 1867; again as, "I love Thy Church, O God," which opens with the second stanza, as in the Scottish Evangelical Union Hymnal, 1878, in 3 st., and "We love Thy kingdom, Lord," in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873. In Cleveland's Lyra Sac. Amer. 6 st. only are given from the original.

Next to this in popularity are his 2nd and 3rd renderings of Ps. lx.xvii.:

3. Shall man, O God of life and light. (3rd st.) While life prolongs its precious light. (2nd st.) Both of which are in extensive use. From his 3rd version of the same Ps. (83), the following hymns have been compiled, each opening with the stanza indicated:

4. Just for the grave I hung. Stanza i.
5. I saw beyond the tomb. Stanza ii.
6. Ye sinners, fear the Lord. Stanza iii. This last is found in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk. The original version consists of 13 stanzas.

7. O Thou whose sceptre earth and seas obey. Ps. lxvii. This is his second version of this Psalm, and was given in the Comprehensive Hymnal, 1844.

The following, most of which are of a more jubilant character, are well known:

8. New pleasure is Thy voice. Ps. lxv.
9. In Zion's sacred gates. Ps. cd.
10. Lord of all worlds, incline Thy gracious [bounteous] ear. Ps. lxxii.
11. New to Thy sacred house. Ps. xliii., st. 3.
12. Sing to the Lord most high. Ps. c.
13. In barren wilds shall living waters spring. Ps. lxxiii.
14. Lord, in these dark and dismal days. Ps. cxviii.

Dyer, Sidney, who served in the U. S. Army from 1831 to 1849, is a native of White Creek, Washington County, New York, where he was born in 1814. On leaving the army he was ordained a Baptist Minister in 1842, and acted first as a Missionary to the Choctaws, then as Pastor in Indianapolis, Indiana (1852), and as Secretary to the Baptist Publication Society, Phila. (1859). He has published sundry works, and in the Southwestern Psalmist, 1851, 16 of his hymns are found. The following are later and undated:

2. Great Frame Maker of unnumbered worlds. National Humiliation. In the Boston Unitarian Hymn and Tune Bk., 1868, and others.

3. When faint and weary toiling. Work whilst it is day. In the Baptist Praise Book, 1871.

4. Work, for the night is coming. Duty. This hymn is in wider use than the foregoing, but though often ascribed to Dyer, is really by Miss Anna L. Walker, of Canada, who pub. a volume of Poems, 1868. S. Dyer, in 1854, wrote a hymn on the same subject for a Sunday-school in Indianapolis, and hence the confusion between the two. In 1852 a cento beginning with the same stanza was given in Whiting's (English) Hymn for the Church Catholic, No. 306. Of this cento, st. i. ii. are by Miss Walker; and st. iii., iv. by Miss Whiting, daughter of the editor of that collection.

J. D. Burns. [Evening.] 1st pub. in his Evening Hymn (a small volume of hymns and prayers), 1856, No. 16, on "Daily Mercies," and in 7 st. of 4 l. In 1858 it was given in 6 st. in the Baptist Ps. & Hymns, No. 914, and has been repeated elsewhere. It is not in the author's Poems, 1863.

Early English Hymnody [English Hymnody, Early].

Earth below is teeming, heaven is bright above.

J. S. B. Moussell. [Harvest.] In his Hymns of Love and Praise, etc., 1863, this hymn is given in 4 st. of 8 l. and a chorus. It is based upon the words, "They joy before Thee, according to the joy in harvest." For his Parish Hymnal, 1873, No. 197, st. iii. and iv. were partly rewritten, and materially improved. In Stepp's Song of G. & G., 1872, No. 831, the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1873, the American Laudes Domini, 1884, the 1868 text is followed. Monsell's later text being apparently unknown to the compilers. [J. J.]

Earth hath detain'd me prisoner long. I. Watts. [Praise.] This “Song of the Angels above” appeared in his Hymns (1719), in 22 st. of 4 l. In Toplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1750, 6 st. were given as No. 175, beginning with st. ii. in an altered form as “Earth has engross'd my love too long.” The centos in modern hymnals, as Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866; Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, and others are taken from this arrangement. [J. J.]

Earth is passed away and gone. H. Alford. [Advent.] Contributed to his Ps. & Hymns, 1844, No. 4, in 4 st. of 4 l. and repeated unaltered in his Year of Praise, 1867, but appointed for the 8th Sun. after Epiphany. It is found in several collections in G. Britain and America, including the Hymnary School H. Bk. and Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y, 1865.

Earth, rejoice, the Lord is King. C. Wesley. [Confidence in God.] Appeared in Hymns & Poems, 1740, p. 115, in 4 st. of 4 l. and headed “To be sung in a Tumult.” (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 236.) In the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk., 1850, 6 st. were given as “Earth, rejoice; our Lord is King,” and this arrangement is repeated in the revised ed. of 1875. In some of the American hymn-books the original reading is retained. [J. J.]

Earth to earth, and dust to dust. Lord, we own, &c. J. H. Gurney. [The Resurrection.] Contributed to his Coll. of Hymns & Hymns Arranged for Public Worship in the Churches and Chapels throughout the Rectory of Bath, &c., &c., 1838. (2) The Sabbath Harp, a collection of Sacred Poetry, &c.; and (3) My Savour. : or, devotional Meditations in prose and verse, 3rd ed., 1836.

The following hymns by this author have come into C. U. :-

2. Lord of the Soul and its light. The Light of Life. From the Sabbath Harp into a few American hymnals. In My Saviour, &c., 3rd ed. 1836, Meditations, No. 4, in 6 st. of 4 l.

3. Where is my faith if I survey? Increase of Faith. Desired. Sometimes ascribed to J. East, but not traced to his works. [W. T. B.]

Eastburn, James Wallis, s. of a New York bookseller and brother of Dr. Eastburn, Bp. of Massachusetts, was b. in London, England, Sept. 26, 1707. The family removed to New York in 1803, and he was educated at Columbia College, New York, where he graduated in 1816. Taking Holy Orders in 1818, he subsequently became a Rector at Accomac, Virginia, where his "abundant and successful labours" were cut short by an early death. He d. at Santa Cruz, Dec. 2, 1819. With Robert C. Sands, an intimate friend, he wrote a poem on the history of an Indian Chief, which was published as Yamogden, in 1820. His hymns include:-

1. O holy, holy, holy Lord, Bright in Thyedar. &c. [Holy Trinity.] This hymn is said by Dr. Hatfield to have been written in 1815. It was included in the Prayer-Book Coll., 1826, and again in other collections. It is a "Ter Sanctus" of merit, and is widely used.

2. Mountains of Israel. This is found in some old collections, and in Griswold's Sacred Poets, 1848, p. 482.

3. Strangers no more we wildly rove. The Spiritual Temple. This is given in Lyra Sac. Americana. [F. M. B.]

Ebenesian, a nom de plume of Job Hupton in the Gospel Magazine.

Eber, Paul, s. of Johannes Eber, master tailor at Kitzingen, Bavaria, was b. at Kitzingen, Nov. 8, 1511. He was sent in 1523 to the Gymnasium at Ansbach, but being found by illness to return home, was on his way thrown from horseback and dragged more than a mile, remaining as a consequence deformed ever after. In 1525 he entered the St. Lorenz school at Nürnberg, under Joachim Camerarius, and in 1532 went to the University of Wittenberg, where he graduated 1536, and thereafter became tutor in the Philosophical Facultiy. He was appointed Professor of Latin in 1541, then in 1557 Professor of Hebrew and Castle preacher, and in 1558 Town preacher and General Superintendent of the Electorate, receiving in 1559 the degree d. from the University. He d. at Wittenberg, Dec. 10, 1569 (Koch, i. 271-278: Ally. Deutsche Biog., v. 529).

At Wittenberg he was a close friend of Melanchthon. He was privy to all his plans, and conducted the greater part of his correspondence. After Melanchthon's death in 1560, he became leader of his party, and had to engage in various controversies with the Crypto-Calvinists, &c.; the seeds of his fatal illness being sown on his return journey from the fruitless conference held at Altenburg with the theologians of Jena, which lasted from Oct. 26, 1568, to March 9, 1569.

Eber was, next to Luther, the best poet of the Wittenberg school. His hymns, some of them written for his own children to sing to Luther's melodies, are distinguished for their child-like spirit and beautiful simplicity. 17 hymns have been attributed to him, 4 of which are certainly his, and probably 2 others. Of these 6, 5 have been tr. into English, one of which is noted under “Dieimus grates,” and the others are:-

1. Herr Jesu Christ, wahr Mensch und Geist. For the Dying. The first hymn-book in which this simple and beautiful hymn has been found is the Low German Enchiridion, pub. at Hamburg, 1565, where it is in 8 st. of 6 l., entitled "A prayer to Christ for a happy departure from this troublesome life," and marked as "D. Paulus Eberus Filius suis faciebat MDLVII." Wackernagel, iv. p. 4, gives this and a second form in High German from the Psalmen, Geistliche Lieder und Gesänge, Strassburg, 1569. In his Bibliographie, 1855, p. 233, Wackernagel describes an undated broadsheet, which he would date 1556, and at p. 279 says it forms the 1st of Neun Säben geistische Lieder, Nürnberg n.d., c. 1556.
G. Biring, in Choralkunde, Danzig, 1865, p. 434, says it appeared as "Panje Jesus ty’s czluczki i Bog" in the Polish Cantional, ed. by Pater Seklycan, and pub. at Königsberg, 1559.
Laumann, in Koch, viii. 591-594, adds that it comforted Eber himself while he lay a-dying. Dec. 16, 1649; was repeated by Hugo Gottlieb a few minutes before his death, Aug. 30, 1649; and was a favourite hymn of Prince Wolfgang of Anhalt (d. 1566). Christian L., Elector of Saxony (d. 1591), of the Margrave Georg Friedrich of Brandenburg-Kulmbach (d. 1603), &c. Included as No. 820 in the Univ. L. S., 1851. The tr. in C. U. is:

Lord Jesus Christ, true Man and God, who bent God and full, by Miss Winkworth in the 1st Ser. of her Lyra Ger., 1855, p. 239. Of this ser. i-v. in the Ps. & Hymns, Bed ford, 1859, ed. iii., viii. in the Hausmeister H. Bk., 1865; and i-viii. in the Pennsylvania Lutheran Church Bk., 1868. A cento from St. li. 3-6, iii. 1-4, vii. 3-6, beginning, "When from my sight all fades away," is No. 181 in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858.

Others are, (1) "O God, support me, death is near," by G. Walker, 1860, p. 163. (2) "Lord Jesus Christ, true Man and God, who hast," by K. Massie, 1875, p. 10.

Wena wir in hochsten Not sein. In Trouble. Founded on a hymn by Joachim Camerarius, his former master at Nürnberg (b. at Bamberg, April 12, 1500, d. as Professor of Greek and Latin at Leipzig, April 17, 1574), in Wackermeissel, i. p. 942, reads thus:

"In teennis nostrae et densus caligine munita,
Cum nihil est tuto pectoro consilli.
Terribilis crux, Deus, in suo corde nostrae,
Nostra, atque fides solius erat opem.
Te rege consilli actu, pater omne, nostrae
Nomen opum uti servavit omnem Teabe.

These lines comforted Melanchthon in 1546; and Laumann, in Koch, viii. 181-195, thinks probably Eber also. He relates that on Ascension Day, 1547, after the battle of Mühlberg, the Wittenbergers having received a message from the captive Elector to deliver their city to the Emperor Charles V. assembled for prayer in church; and quotes a portion of the prayer by Bugenhagen which greatly resembles Eber's hymn. But that the hymn was written then we have no proof, and the earliest source quoted by Wackermeissel, iv. p. 6, is the New Worker's Psalter, Dresden 1566, in 7 st. of 4 l., though in his Bibliographie, 1855, p. 312, he describes a broadsheet printed at Nürnberg, x.d., c. 1560. In M. Moller's Meditationes sanctorum Patrum, Görlitz, 1584, it is entitled "A beautiful prayer of the venerable Dr. Paul Eber, which he composed on the beautiful words of King Jehoshaphat, 2 Chronic, xx. 12." Included as No. 563 in the Univ. L. S., 1851. A "cry from the depths," though not in despair but in trustful confidence in God, it is one of the finest and most widely used hymns of the Reformation period. Laumann relates how the singing of this hymn and the prayers of Martin Luther (q.v.), Arca Berolinensium of Stolberg near Leipzig, prevailed to move the heart of the Swedish Lieutenant-General, who on Feb. 21, 1836, had demanded from the inhabitants a ransom of 24,000 florins, but eventually accepted 2,004 florins; says that in commemoration of a similar deliverance from the Swedish army in 1642 the hymn was long sung on the Sunday afternoon service at Pegau, near Leipzig, and adds other incidents regarding its use.

The only tr. in C. U. is:

Other trs. are, (1) "When we are under great distress," by J. C. Jacob, 1732, p. 119; 1732, p. 194, altered, and thence as No. 140 in pt. 1 of the Moravian H. Bk., 1854. (2) "When neither hope nor counsel's high," by D. G. Walker, 1860, p. 99. (3) "When all our way is hedged around," by N. L. Proctoring, 1870.

His hymn not in English C. U. are:

iii. Halt mir Gott's Gute preisen. [New Year.] Written on the name Helena, borne both by his wife and his daughter, the initial letters of each composing it. Wackermeissel, iv. p. 6, quotes it from Eber's Geistliche Lieder, Frankfurt a. M., c. 1560, in 6 st. of 4 l., entitled, "A Thanksgiving and Prayer for the New Year, in remembrance of God's goodness, for the Children." Other but less correct forms are noted by Moller, p. 406, as in the Copenhagen G. Bk., 1851, and the Sibyllinis, 1856. Included as No. 68 in the L. S., 1851. It is tr. as, "Ye Christians in this nation," by J. C. Jacob, 1722, p. 11 (1732, p. 10, altered and beginning, "Come, let us all, with Fervour.")

iv. In Christi Wunden schlaf ich ein. [For the Dying.] Appears in Jerusalem Weber's G. B., Leipzig, 1830, p. 79, marked as "Another." The hymn immediately preceding is ascribed to Eber, in 3 st. of 4 l. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 146, the text is slightly varied, and arranged in 3 st. of 4 l. It was first ascribed to Eber in the Nürnberg G. Bk., 1676. Laumann, in Koch, viii. 595-601, says of it, "That the hymn is much older than the date of its appearance (i.e. than 1642) seems obvious; that it breathes the childlike spirit of Eber is certain. More than this we cannot say." St. li. 3-6, "Ja Christi Blut und Gerechtigkeit," has been adopted by many pious Germans, young and old, as a prayer in life and death, and Laumann relates many interesting incidents regarding its use by A. G. Spangenberg, by Wilhelm Hey, and others. These four lines were adopted by N. L. von Zinzendorf, as the first st. of his well-known hymn, "Christi Blut und Gerechtigkeit." It is tr. as, "I fall asleep in Jesus' arms," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 121.

Ebert, Jacob, was b. Jan. 26, 1549, at Sprittau, in Silesia. In the University of Frankfurt a. Oder he was successively Professor of Hebrew, of Ethics, and of Theology, and d. there Feb. 5, 1614 (Koch, ii. 270-271; Biöck, p. 62). One hymn by him has been tr.:

Du Friedenfurt, Herr Jesu Christ. [For Peace.] 1st pub. in B. Gruven's Geistliche Deutsche Lieder, Frankfurt a. Oder, 1591, folio 197, in 7 st. of 7 l., entitled "In Time of War, a prayer for peace, D. Jacobus Ebertus," the D denoting that he was also Doctor of Theology. Thence in Wackernagel, v. p. 413, and in the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 585. Sometimes erroneously ascribed to C. H. Helmold. The only tr. in C. U. is:

Another tr. is, "Lord Jesus, blessed Prince of Peace," by J. C. Jacob, 1722, p. 121 (1732, p. 106), thence as No. 311 in pt. 1 of the Moravian H. Bk., 1854.

[J. M.]
Ebrard, Johann Heinrich August, D.D., was b. Jan. 18, 1818, at Erlangen, Bavaria, and is now [1855] honorary professor and pastor of the French Reformed Church there.

While chief pastor at Speyer he was principal compiler of the excellent hymn-book for Rhineland Bavaria (Rhein-Pfalz), pub. at Speyer, 1850, which, like others of his good works there, was thrown aside to please the Rationalists. He is the author of various theological works, poems, &c. His partial version of the Psalms is noted under Psalmer, German. Two have been tr. "Da selbst, der ja mein Hirt und Hüter," Ps. xxiii., and "Wie schön und lieblich ist es zuzuehmen," Ps. xxviii., in his Ausgewählte Psalmen. Daniel, Erlangen, 1853, pp. 31 and 46. Ps. xxviii. is tr. by C. T. Asley, 1846, p. 91; and Ps. xxviii. by J. Kelly, 1846, p. 91. [J. M.]

Ecce jam noctis tenenur umbra. St. Gregory the Great. [Early Morning.] The oldest known form of this hymn is in three ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 21: Vesp. D. xii. f. 7: Harl. 2961, f. 219 b.), and in the Latin Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church, published in 1851, from a ms. of the 11th cent. at Durham (Surtees Soc., 1851). It is also found, in common with other hymns by St. Gregory, in various editions of his Works, in Migne, and in Daniel, i., No. 147, and others. The text was revised for the Roman Brev., 1832 (Sunday at Lauda), and it is from this revised text, as in Daniel, i., No. 147, that most trs. have been made. Tr. as:—

1. Pater have grown the shades of night.
2. Lo, the melting shades of night are ending.
3. Lo, the dim shadows of the night are waning.

An anonymous tr. in the Antiphoner & Grad., 1890, p. 98, and the Hymner, 1882, No. 84.

Other trs. are:—

2. Lo, fainter now its spread the shades of night. E. Chisholm, 1849.
4. See! vanished are the pallid shades of night. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
5. Pale grow the shadows night hath spread around us. J. H. Hewitt, 1853.
6. Lo, now the shadowy clouds of night are flying. T. G. Crippen, 1868. [J. J.]

Ecce pulchra canorum resonet voce Alleluia. This Sequence is found in a Bodleian ms. [174, f. 163], written in the reign of Ethelred, sometime between the years 978-997. It occurs in the Common of many martyrs in the Sarum Missal, and in the Common both of one and of many martyrs in the Hereford and the York Missals. The text is given in the reprints of these Missals. It is also in an 11th cent. Winchester book now in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, No. 473. Tr. as:—

Heaven with alleluias ringing. By Mrs. Chester, contributed to the Hymnary, 1872, No. 491, and signed "H. M. C."

Translations not in C. U.:—

Ecce sedes hic Tonantis. Abbé Bonaud. [Dedication of a Church.] In the revised Paris Brev., 1736, this is the hymn at second Vespers on the Feast of the Dedication of a Church. So in the Lyons and other modern French breviaries. The text is given in Cardinal Newmawn's Hymnari Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:—

This is the abode where God doth dwell. By L. Williams. 1st pub. in the British Magazine, July, 1837, and again in his Hymns to the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 338, in 5 st. of 6 l. It was repeated in the Child's Christian Year, 1841, and other collections.

This is the house where God doth dwell. This is a slightly altered form of the above tr. by L. Williams. It appeared in the Hymnary in 1872, No. 429. [J. J.]

Ecce sollemni hae die canamus festa. [Nativity of B. V. M.] The earliest known form of this sequence is given in a ms. of the 10th cent. at St. Gall, No. 310. It is also in five St. Gall ms. of the 11th cent. (Nos. 343, 376, 378, 380, 381), beginning: "Ecce sollemnis dies," and in an 11th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Add. 1790, f. 35 b.). Most (No. 341) and others regard it as a Notkerian Sequence. The text is also in Kerneis, No. 191, Daniel, ii. p. 54, &c. Tr. as:—

We keep the feast in gladness. By R. F. Little, daled for and 1st pub. in the People's Hymnary, 1867, No. 279, under the signature of "D. L." [J. M.]

Ecce tempus idoneum. [Lent.] This hymn is sometimes ascribed to St. Gregory the Great, but upon insufficient authority. It is found in a Bodleian ms. of the 12th cent. (Laud. Lat. 95, f. 140 b.) and in the British Museum ms. Vesp. D. xii. f. 122 b, in a hand of late 12th cent. It is also in the Sarum Brev. (in a 13th cent. copy in the Bodleian, Radcliff. C., 73, f. 63) as the hymn at Vespers from the Saturday before the third Sunday in Lent, daily in the Ferial Office to the passion Sunday. (Hymn. Sarisb., Lon., 1851, p. 72.) It is also in the Aberdeen Brev., 1509. Daniel gives the text, vol. i., No. 152, in 5 st. of 4 l. The text is also in Card. Newman's Hymnari Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Lo, now is our accepted day. By J. M. Neale, in the 1st ed. of the Hymnary, 1852, and later editions. It is given with another doxology in the Hymnary, 1882, No. 47. Two altered forms are also in C. U., one in H. A. & M., 1841-73, arranged by the compilers; and the second in the Hymnary, 1872, by the editors.

2. Behold now is the accepted time. By J. A. Johnston, in the 2nd ed. of his English Hymnal, 1856, and later editions. It is an altered form.
Ecking, Samuel, a Baptist, b. at Shrewsbury, Dec. 5, 1757, d. Jan. 16, 1785, contributed hymns to the Gospel Magazine, in 1778 and 1779, under the signature of "S. E.-k-g." Of these the hymn, "Peace, peace, my soul," is in C. U. This hymn is also found in his Essays on Grace, Faith, and Experience.

Eddis, Edward William, a member of the Catholic Apostolic Church, commonly known as the "Irvingites," compiled for the use of his congregations, and published in 1804, Hymns for the Use of the Churches (London, Bowden & Harrison). It contained 395 hymns, of which 19 were his original compositions, and 2 translations. The 2nd ed., in a revised form with 320 hymns and 44 doxologies, was published in 1871 (London, J. Strange). To this he contributed 40 new hymns and 1 translation, thus making 62 hymns. All these are signed "E. W. Eddis." Very few are found in any other collection. The exceptions include "O brightness of the Immortal Father's Face" (tr. from the Greek); "In us the hope of glory" (The Second Advent desired); and "Thou standest at the altar" (H. Communion). There are other hymns in this collection signed "E., "C. E.," and "E. E.," which seem to indicate members of his family, but about which we can gain no definite information. The last, "E. E.," is probably his wife, as her name was "Ellen Eddis." [J. J.]

Eddy, Zachary, D.D., b. at Stockbridge, Vermont, Dec. 19, 1815, and ordained to the Cumberland Presbyterian Ministry, in 1835. After serving as a missionary in New York and Wisconsin, he was a Congregational pastor at Warren, N.Y., 1850-55, and at Northampton, Mass., 1857, then Reformed Dutch pastor at Brooklyn, 1867; and again a Congregational Minister at Chelsea, Mass., 1871, and at Detroit, from 1873 to 1884. Dr. Eddy was the principal editor of the Reformed Dutch Hymns of the Church, 1889; and with Drs. Hitchcock and P. Schlaflf, of Hymns of Praise, 1874. His hymns include:-

1. Break forth, ye heavens, in song. Praise to the Holy Trinity. This is No. 43, in 5 st. of 7 lines, is a spirited hymn.

2. A friend still around me, sorry, appalling. Lest. Attestation. No. 21 in the Hymns of the Church, 1869, in 4 st. of 7 lines, is a spirited hymn.

3. I saw on a throne uplifted in light. Christ in Glory. No. 263 in the Hymns of the Church, 1869, is 4 st. of 7 lines, is a spirited hymn.

Edelong, Christian Ludwig, s. of Ludwig Edeling, Superintendent at Leib Jones near Halle, on the Saale, was b. at Leib Jones, July 21, 1679. After the completion of his theological studies under Spener and Francke, he became, in 1704, tutor to Nicolaus Ludwig von Zinzendorf, and in 1706 Rector of the school at Groningen, near Halberstadt. In 1710 he was appointed assistant preacher at Schwanbeck, near Halberstadt, where he became chief preacher in 1723, and Superintendent in 1729, and d. there Sept. 18, 1742 (Koek, v. 219-220; Bude, pp. 92-93; from Oberpapfarr Graue, Leib Jones). His Postickein Forhath, now extant at Wernigerode, in 8 vols., contains 72 hymns. Of these he contributed 10 to Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, v. 66, 74, 107, 120, 322, 521, 661, 858, 897, 906. Two of these have been tr.

1. Christen erwarben in allerlei Fällen. Tr.; in God. 1714, No. 522, in 9 st. By J. F. Pestedamp, 1784, p. 236, as "Christians may find in each scene of commotion," ii. Der Tag bricht an, die Nacht ist hin. Morning, 1714, No. 695, in 12 st. The tr. are from Busen's Versuch, 1733, No. 677, beginning with the verse "Freude" (I am happy, charmed, my heart is content). It is based on "Der Tag bricht an und zeigt sich," in David von Schweinitz's Pensa-centum Psalmorum, Danzig, 1744, reprinted in Münstert, 1768, No. 183, in 21 st. of 11 lines, and the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1096. The tr. are, (1) "My Saviour, make me cleave to Thee," by Miss Ous, 1841, p. 53. (2) "Lift up my soul to Thee, O Lord," by Lady E. Fortescue, 1844 (1847), p. 12. [J. M.]

Edemston, James, b. Sept. 10, 1791. His maternal grandfather was the Rev. Samuel Brewer, who for 50 years was the pastor of an Independent congregation at Stepney. Educated as an architect and surveyor, in 1816 he entered upon his profession on his own account, and continued to practise it until his death on Jan. 7, 1867. The late Sir G. Gilbert Scott was his pupil. Although an Independent by descent he joined the Established Church at a comparatively early age, and subsequently held various offices, including that of churchwarden, in the Church of St. Barnabas, Homerton. His hymn number nearly 2000. The best known are "Lead us, Heavenly Father, lead us," and "Saviour, breathe an evening blessing." Many of his hymns were written for children, and from their simplicity are admirably adapted to the purpose. For many years he contributed hymns of various degrees of merit to the Evangelical Magazine. His published works are:-

(1) The Search, and other Poems, 1817. (2) Sacred Lyric, 1820, a volume of 31 hymns and 1 poem. This was followed by a 2nd Series, 1821, with 35; and a 3rd Series, 1822, with 27 pieces respectively. (3) The Church's Minister; or, Hymns for the Assistance of Cottagers in their Domestic Worship, 1821. This was published at the suggestion of a member of the Home Missionary Society, and contains 50 hymns. (4) One Hundred Hymns for School Children, and for Particular Occasions, 1821. (5) Missionary Hymn, 1823. (6) Patmos, a Fragment, and other Poems, 1824. (7) The Woman of Samaria, and other Poems, 1829. (8) Fifty Original Hymns, 1833. (9) Hymns for the Chamber of Sickness, 1844. (10) Closet Hymns and Poems, 1844. (11) Infant Breathing, being Hymns for the Young, 1844. (12) Sacred Poetry, 1847.

In addition to those of his hymns which have attained to an extensive circulation, as those named above, and are annotated in this work under their respective first lines, there are also the following in C. U. in G. Britain and America:-

Y
1. Along my earthly way. Anxiety. In his Sacred Lyres, 3rd set, 1822, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is given in several collections, but usually in an abbreviated form, and generally somewhat altered.

5. For thee we pray and wait. Second Advent.

6. God intrusts to all. Parable of the Talents. This is No. 13 of his Infant Breaths, 1846, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is a simple application of the parable to the life of a child. It is used.

7. God is here. How sweet the sound. Consecration. Given as No. 9 in his Sacred Lyres, 1st set, 1820, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Bapt. Hym., 1819, No. 45. Mt. 1:1-III are from this text, and iv. and v. are from another source.

9. Is there a time when moments flow. Sunday Evening. No. 5 of his Cottage Minstrel, 1851, slightly altered.

10. Little travellers Zionward. Burial of Children. No. 25 of his Infant Breaths, &c, 1846, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the Leeda H. Bk., 1853, it begins with st. ii., "Who are they whose little feet?" "

15. The light of Sabbath eve. Sunday Evening. In 5 st. of 4 l., from the Cottage Minstrel, 1821, where it is given as No. 16, and entitled "The Cottage Gathers Reflections upon the Sabbath Evening."

17. Woe, harp of Zion, woe again. Missions to the East. Dated 1846 by the author in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk. It is in his Sacred Poetry, 1847.

18. When shall the voice of singing! In his Missionary Hymns, 1822. It is in a few American collections.

19. When the wound spirit wants repose. Sunday Evening.

Ei kai ei τάφρο κατηχες ἄθμαντε. St. John of Damascus. Easter. This is a Contakion (κοντάκιον), or short hymn, dating from about the middle of the eighth century, found in the Pentecostarion, in the Office for Easter Day. The original is given in Dr. Littleledale's Office, &c., of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, p. 91, and a tr. in blank verse, "If into the tomb/Thou didst descend, Immortal One," p. 216. This latter has been rendered into 7s measure by W. Chatterton, &c, as, "If the dark and awful tomb," and as such is found in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 211.

Ei kai ta παροῦντα. St. Methodius II. [Looking unto Jesus.] From the Paraclesis, the Sunday of the Fourth Tone. Dr. Nesle's tr., "Are thy toils and woes increasing?"

Ei kai ei τάφρο. St. Methodius II. [Looking unto Jesus.] From the Paraclesis, the Sunday of the Fourth Tone. Dr. Nesle's tr., "Are thy toils and woes increasing?"

Eight days amid this world of woe. J. Conder. [Holy Communion.] Appeared in the Congregational H. Bk., 1836., No. 192, in 4 st. of 4 l., and based upon I Cor. xi. 26. &c, "Ye do shew the Lord's death till He come." It was repeated in the Leeda H. Bk., 1853 and other collections, and in Condor's Hymn o Praise, Prayer and Devout Meditation, 1856, in the New Church Prayer Bk., 1882, it is given as "Many centuries have fled."

Ein' feste Burg ist unser Gott. Martin Luther. [Ps. xlv.] The common account of the origin of this, the most famous hymn appeared in Palmer's Supplementary Hymnal, 1866. It is also found in other collections, and sometimes as, "Are our toils and woes increasing?" [J. J.]

El wie so selig schliefst du. [Burial.] Included as No. 179 in the Anmuthiger Blumenkraut, 1712, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is sometimes erroneously ascribed to N. L. von Zinzendorf.

In the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, No. 533, it is altered, and st. III. omitted, while in the Brüder G. B., 1774, No. 327, is altered in st. II. of the 1712, considerably altered. The altered st. ii., "Sein Leiden hat ich frei gemacht," is in the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 619, inserted as st. II. of the hymn, "El, wie so selig schliefst du." [see Neumann, G.] The hymn was sung, probably in the form of 1735, at Zinzendorf's funeral, and also at the funeral of his second wife, Anna Nitschmann, he having died on the 9th, and she on the 21st May, 1766 (see Rock, v. 337, 271, 312). The tra. are, (1) "How sweet the dream of her that sleeps," as No. 47 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1754, st. II. No. 119). Adopted as No. 18 in the Bible H. Bk., 1845. (2) "How sweetly this our brother sleeps," by J. W. Porter, as No. 445 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1866, No. 1506. [J. M.]

Eia recolamus laudibus psii digna. St. Nolther. [Christmas; or, Circumcision.] The earliest form of the text known is in a 10th cent. ms. at St. Gall (No. 340). It is also in three St. Gall ms. of the 11th cent. (Nos. 343, 380, 381), in the last two being included amongst the Notkerian Sequences, and in an 11th cent. ms. in the Bodleian (Douce, 222 f. 90). In several Missals it is assigned to the second Mass on Christmas Day; and again in others to the first, or to the octave, of the same festival. In the Sarum and Hereford Missals it is the Sequence for the Feast of the Circumcision. In addition to Daniel, ii. p. 3, and the reprints of the Sarum and Hereford Missals, the text is also given in Burcherangel, i, No. 143; Kehrlein, No. 10; Bäister, No. 74; and Königfeld, i. 94.

Translation in C. U.:

Eight centuries have fled. J. Conder. [Holy Communion.] Appeared in the Congregational H. Bk., 1836., No. 442, in 4 st. of 6 l., and based upon I Cor. xi. 26. &c, "Ye do shew the Lord's death till He come." It was repeated in the Leeda H. Bk., 1853 and other collections, and in Condor's Hymn o Praise, Prayer and Devout Meditation, 1856, in the New Church Prayer Bk., 1882, it is given as "Many centuries have fled." [J. J.]
EIN FESTE BURG

Luther, is thus forcibly expressed by Heinrich Heine:—

"A battle hymn was this defiant song, with which he and his comrades entered Worms (April 16, 1521). The old cathedral trembled at these new notes, and the ravens were startled in their hidden nests in the tower. This hymn, by the mystic Paulus, is a form of the Reformation, has preserved its potent spell even to our days, and we may yet soon see again in similar conflicts the old milled wheels," (Herkenrath, ed. 1876, v. iii, p. 73.)

It is, however, in the last degree unlikely that the hymn had been composed in 1521, it should not have been pub. in 1524, along with Luther's earlier hymns. A second theory, advanced by Dr. K. F. T. Schneider in 1856, that it was written Nov. 1, 1527, and partly suggested by the death of his friend Leonhard Baseden (buried at the stake, Aug. 16, 1527, at the installation of the Bishop of Ulm), rests on the hypothesis too elaborate to be examined here, but is not sustained by any foundation of fact (see Blätter für Hymnologie, 1853, pp.
73-79, 103-105, &c.) A third theory is that it was composed at the time of the Diet of Augsburg in 1530. Thus D'Aubigné says:—

"Luther, full of faith, revives the courage of his friends, by composing and singing with his fine voice that beautiful hymn, since become so famous, Ein feste burg ist unser Gott. Never did soul that knew its own weakness, but which, looking to God, despised every fear, find such noble accents. This hymn was sung during the service not only at Augsburg, but in all the churches of Saxony, and its energetic strains often revived and inspired the most desponding hearts." (Hist.
of Reformation, ed. 1847, p. 542.)

The hymn, however, belongs to the previous year, 1529, and was probably written for the Diet of Speyer (Spirea), when on April 20, 1529, the German Princes made their formal protest against the revocation of their liberties and thus gained the name of "Protestants.
Then, says Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 120,
"Luther with this hymn entered a protest before all the German people against en by the service held in commemoration of the Jubilee of the Sacred Adolphus Society, which seeks to have Protestant Churches in Roman Catholic countries.
It was adopted by the Salzburg Emigrants of 1732, as their travelling hymn. Sung at Hermannsburg at the cathedral service when judged Harmans was sending forth his first band of missionaries. During the Lutheran Celebrations, Sept. 12-14, and Nov. 10-12, 1885, 1529, it was sung in the Cathedral, at the service held in commemoration of the Jubilee of the General Society, 1732, at the Market Place, Nov. 18; and at countless celebrations in Germany, i. Britain, and America, in the original, or in various English versions.

Since the above remarks were put in type an elaborated monograph by Dr. J. Linke, of Altenburg, has appeared under the title "Luther's Ein feste Burg is unser Gott verfasst. von Dr. J. Linke," 1886. Dr. Linke discusses with abundant research and polemic the various theories already noted, and the more recent combinations and hypotheses. His opinion is that the hymn was written on or about Oct. 31, 1525; and he quotes many interesting parallels from Luther's contemporaries' writings, and especially from his lecture notes on Zechary, written about the end of October, 1525. But that such a hymn could remain in ms. from that date till the publication of King's G. B. in 1529, seems very improbable; and no trustworthy evidence is forthcoming that it appeared in print before 1529.

In King's G. B., 1529, likewise the magnificent chorale by Luther, evidently the product of the same mind and of the same inspiration. It has been strikingly, if somewhat inappropriately, used by Meyerbeer in The Huguenots; more recently by Mendelssohn in the fifth movement of his Reformation Symphony, 1830; and by Wagner as a motive in his Tannhäuser, written to commemorate the return of the Emperor William in 1871, after the Franco-German war. It has now become well-known in England, and in its proper form is included in the C. B. for England, 1863 (see below).

An attempt has recently been made to show that this is a patchwork of snatches from various portions of the Roman Gradual, which Luther, while a monk, most often sang. But even if this were clearly shown to Luther would still be due the honour of selecting these scattered fragments and producing from them a glorious melody, now all of one piece. (See the Blatter für Hymnologie, 1864, pp. 22, 101, &c.)

Translations in C. B.:—
1. God is our Refuge in Distress. Our strong Defence. A full but free version in J. C. Jacob's Psal. Ger., 1722, p. 83 (1732, p. 138 altered), and repeated, greatly altered (by F. Okeley?), as No. 319 in pt. i. of the Moravion H. Bk., 1754. St. i., ii., greatly altered, from the 1754, were included as No. 495 in the Moravion H. Bk., 1889; and much the same text in J. A. Low's Coll., 1852, No. 256, with Carlyle's trs. of st. i. ll. 5–8, ii. 3–8, substituted.

A safe stronghold our God is still. By T. Carlyle, in a characteristic essay on "Luther's Psalm," in Fraser's Magazine for 1831, reprinted in his Miscellaneous Essays (ed. 1872, vol. iii. p. 61). This is the most faithful (st. iv. excepted) and forcible of all the English versions. Included in full and unaltered in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875; the Scottish Presb. Hyl., 1876; Church Praise, 1883, &c. In some collections, as the H. & S. of Praise, N. Y., 1874, it is slightly altered. A form greatly altered by W. M. Reynolds appeared as No. 964 in the American Luth. General Synod's Coll., 1880. The version in the Canadian Presb. H. Bk., 1880, No. 227, is altered mainly from Gaskell, Massie, and H. (see below).

2. God is the city of our strength. In Miss Fry's H. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 61, in full, with the doxology tr. by Mr. Thring, 1882 (see below). Her trs. of st. i., iv., rewritten to 5 st. of 8 l. were included as No. 51 in J. Whittetmore's Suppl. to All H. Bks., 1880, and repeated as No. 499 in Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1881.

4. A tower of strength in God's name. omitting st. iv., by A. T. Russell, as No. 98 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848. Hence, altered, as No. 136 in his own Ps. & Hys., 1851, beginning, "A strong tower is God's great name," and further altered as No. 501 in Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1881, beginning, "A tower of strength is God's great name."

5. A tower of strength our God doth stand, in full, by H. J. Buckoll, as No. 45 in the Rugby School H. Bk., 1850 (ed. 1876, No. 262). Repeat, more or less altered and abridged, in the Rugby Church H. Bk., 1863; Kennedy, 1893, No. 25 (altered mainly from Carlyle); Wellington College H. Bk., 1884, and Marlborough College H. Bk., 1889.

6. A strong tower is the Lord our God. To shelter. In full, as No. 334, in W. Hunter's Select Melodies, 1842, as No. 128, altered, as influenced by W. M. Bunting. Reprinted in Cantata Domino, Boston, U.S., 1859, No. 307.

7. A mighty fortress is our God. A bulwark. A full and good tr. by Dr. F. H. Hedge, contributed to Dr. W. H. Furness's Gems of German Verse, 1852, and then as No. 852 to his own Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, U.S., 1853. Reprinted in full and unaltered in Putnam's Singer's and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, U.S., 1875, p. 214, with the note that "it has been sung on many occasions, as at the recent laying of the cornerstone stone of Memorial Hall, in Cambridge (U.S.)." Included in full in the Schaff-Gilman Lib. of Rel. Poetry, ed. 1883, p. 384, and as No. 1343 in the ed. 1872 of Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary. In full or abridged it appears in many American hymnals, as Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, Unitarian H. Bk., 1869, Dutch Reformed Hys. of the Church, 1869, and others; and in England in Dr. Martineau's Coll., 1873.

8. A sure stronghold our God is. In full good tr. by W. Gaskell, contributed in 1855 to the 2nd ed. of the 1st Ser. of Miss Winkworth's Lyra Germ., p. 175, her tr. in the 1st ed. (see below) not being considered satisfactory. Slightly altered in metre as No. 124 in the C. B. for England, 1863, but restored as in the Lyra Germ. in the Christian Singers of Germany, 1869, p. 110. In full as No. 213 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1884, and as No. 294 in the Suppl. of 1884 to the Scottish Hyl. St. i., ii., were included, slightly altered, as No. 161 in the Irish Ch. Hyl., 1869 (ed. 1873, No. 441).

10. A mountain fastness is our God. In full, by W. W. Whittingham, as No. 248 in the Amer. Episco. Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1860; and hence, with an added doxology, not from the German, as No. 397 in the Amer. Episco. Hyl., 1871.

11. A tower of strength is our Lord. A tr. of st. i., ii., by Dean Alford, as No. 228 in his Year of Praise, 1867, and thence in Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871, and Dr. Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1879.

13. A mighty fortress is our God. A trusty. A full and good tr., as No. 274 in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868; compiled by the committee of publication principally from the Carlyle, 1831, and Reynolds (1863 see below) texts.

14. A fortress strong is God our God. A good and full tr. by E. Thring, as No. 253, in the Uppingham and Sherborne School H. Bk., 1874.

15. A tower of strength our God is still. A mighty, &c. In full, as No. 144, in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, and marked as a compilation.

16. A Fortress sure is God our King. By Godfrey Thring, as No. 245 in his Ch. of England H. Bk., 1882, repeated in Horder's Cong. Hyl., 1884, and Allen's C. P. Hyl., 1886. This is decidedly the best version for popular use, as Carlyle's is the most faithful and forcible. Mr. Thring omits st. iii., and gives a doxology added about 1546 in Etliche Lieder, Nürnberg, as altered in the appendix to Lobwasser's Psalmen des Königlichen Propheten Davids, 1574. The text used by Mr. Thring reads thus:

Lob, Ehr und Preis dem höchsten Gott
Dem Vater aller Götter,
Der uns aus Liebe geschenket hat
Sein Sohn für unser Schaden.
Ein Lämmlein geht und trägt die Schuld.

P. Gerhard. [Passiontide.]
Appeared in the 3rd ed. 1648, p. 54. In Gerhard's Praeit piictatis melicatra. No. 118, in 10 st. of 10 L. included in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 13, and Bechmann's ed., No. 7. Founded on St. John i. 29, and Is. lii. 4-7, it is styled by Laumann, in Koech, 40, "the masterpiece of all Passion hymns." It has kept its place in Germany (Unr. L. S. 1851, No. 93), but from its complexity and variety of figures has not come into extended English use.

Translations in C. U.

1. A Lamb goes forth; the sins He bears. A tr. of st. i., ii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 93 in his Ps. & Hym., 1851.

The second pt. of this tr. beginning, "Gate of my heart, fly open wide" (st. vii.), is in Bp. Ryle's C. M., 1860; Reid's Praise Bk., 1872; and the Christian Hymn., Adelaide, 1872.

Translations not in C. U.

(1) A Lamb goes forth and bears the guilt, of all the World together," by J. Gambold, as No. 51 in pt. ili., 1746, of the Moravian H. Bk. (1786, No. 100), altered in 1860 to "A Lamb went forth!" [st. vii., i., of this version, beginning, "Jesus, I never can forget," are included.

Ein Kindelein so lóblich. [Christmas.]

This is a cento which appeared in the Zwiekel Erinnerung, 1828, and is there entitled "Ein Gesang von der Geurt Christi, den man auf Weihnachten singet, gebessert, Thienne in Wackernagel, iii. p. 520, in 4 st. of 10 l.

St. i. is found as st. ii. of the hymn "Der Tag der ist so freundlich," but was probably originally a single st., afterwards interpolated into that hymn; and it bears a slight resemblance to st. iii. of "Dies est iacfellia, In oru recall." (q.v.). St. ii. is st. i. of "Der Tag der ist so freundlich," entirely rewritten. St. iii. iv. are new. The only tr. is, "To us is borne a barne of bliss," in the Oude and Godly Ballates (ed. 1566, 4th ed., 1618, p. 45.

Ein neues Lied wir heben an. M. Luther. [Martyrs.] This was Luther's first hymn, if hymn it can be called, and was written in 1523. On June 30, 1523, two young Augustinian monks, Heinrich Voß and Johann Esch, from Antwerp, had been, after examination by the Cologne Inquisitor, Jacob von Hug-traten, and at the instigation of the Louvain professors, condemned to death and burnt at the stake in Brussels. On receipt of the news of this first martyrdom for the Evangelical cause Luther's spirit was fired, and he wrote this spirited narrative, ending with the prophetic words:—

Summer is even at our door,
The winter now hath vanished,
The tender flowers spring once more,
And He, Who winter banished,
Will send a happy summer.

(Tr. by R. Massie, 1854, p. 44.)

It was the springtime, not only of the Evangelical Church, but of that wonderful growth of German religious poetry which yet lives and flourishes. The hymn first appeared in Eyn Enchiridion Erfurt, 1524, at ix.; being added in a new Geystliche gesang Buchlein, Wittenberg, 1521. Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 3, in 12 st. of 9 l., and in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Gesell. Lieder, 1854, p. 83. The original title of the hymn was, "A new song of the two Martyrs for Christ, burnt at Brussels by the Sophists of Louvain." It produced a deep impression at the Reformation times and appeared in many of the early Lutheran hymn-books, but being rather a historical ballad than a hymn, has not appeared in recent collections. The only tr. in C. U. is:—

Flung to the needless winds. A paraphrase in 2 st. of 8 l. of st. ix.:

Die Asche will nicht lassen ab,
Sie stehet in allen Landen;
Hier hofft kein Bach, Loch, Grab noch Grab;
Sie macht den Feind zu Schanden.
Die er im Leben durch den Mond
Zu schweben hal gedrungen,
Die muß er todt an allem Ort
Mit aller Stimmen und Zungen
Gar frühlich lassen singen.

This appeared in a tr. of D'Aubigné's Hist. of the Reformation, pub. at Philadelphia, 1843, and is there said to have been tr. for that work by John Alexander Mougeon. Included in the American Bapt. Psalmist, 1843, and since in many American hymnals, as the Cheshire Association, 1844; Bk. of Hym., 1846-48; Meth. Epis., 1849, &c.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "A new song I design to sing," by J. Anderson, 1846, p. 39 (1847, p. 57). (2) "A new song to the Lord, we will raise," by Dr. J. Hunt, 1852, p. 3. (3) "By help of (ord) I am told," by R. Massie, 1854, p. 40, and in Ir. Bacon, 1884, p. 12. (4) "A new song, now we raise and sing," by W. M. Reynolds, in the Krang, Re-
ELLERTON, JOHN

1850; Brighton, and Lecturer of St. Peter's, Brighton, 1852; Vicar of Crewe Green, and Chaplain to Lord Crowe, 1860; Rector of Hinstock, 1872; of Burntisland, 1875; of Whitehaven, 1880. Mr. Ellerton's prose works include The Holiest Manhood, 1882; Our Infirmities, 1883, &c. It is, however, as a hymnologist, editor, hymn-writer, and translator, that he is most widely known. As editor he published: Hymns for Schools and Bible Classes, Brighton, 1859. He was also co-editor with Bishop How and others of the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1844. His Hymns and Illustrations of Church Hymns, their authors and translators, were published in the folio edition of 1881. The notes on the hymns which are special to the collection, and many of which were contributed thereto, are full, accurate, and of special value. Those on the older hymns are too general for accuracy. They are written in a popular form, which necessarily precludes extended research, fullness, and exactness of detail. The result is acceptable to the general public, but disappointing to the hymnological expert. Mr. Ellerton's original hymn number about 50, and his from the Latin 10, or more. Nearly every one of these are in C. U. and include:

1. Before the day draws near its ending. After- noon. Written Apr. 22, 1848, for a Festival of Choirs at Nantwich, and 1st pub. in the Nantwich Festival Book, 1880. In 1883 it passed into the Westminster Almanac, H. Bk. 32.

2. Behold, Lord, a little space. General for Weekdays. Written in 1870 for a mid-day service in a City Church, and pub. in Church Hymn, 1871. It has passed into several collections.

7. In the Name which, earth and heaven. Foundation of a Church. Written for and 1st pub. in Church Hymn, 1871, and repeated in several collections. Singing at the re-opening of the Nave of Chester Cathedral, January 28, 1872, was compiled by Mr. Ellerton from this hymn, and his "Lift the strain of high Thanksgiving." 8. King Messiah, long expected. The Circumcision. Written Jan. 14, 1871, and 1st pub. in Church Hymn, 1871. It has passed into other collections.

9. King of Saints, to Whom the number. St. Barnabas. Written for and 1st pub. in Church Hymn, 1871. It is very popular, and has been repeated in many hymn-books.

10. Mary at the Master's feet. Forerunner. Written March 11, 1870, and 1st pub. in Church Hymn, 1871. It has passed into other collections.

13. O shining city of our God. Concerning the Body of Our Lord. Written for and 1st pub. in Church Hymn, 1871. It has passed into other collections.

15. O Thou in Whom Thy saints repose. Consecration of a Burial Ground. Written for the consecration of an addition to the Parish Churchyard of Tarring, Cheshire, 1870, and pub. in Church Hymn, 1871.

16. O Thou Whose bounty fills the earth. Flower Services. Written for a Flower Service at St. Luke's Church, Chester, June 6, 1890, and pub. in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881.

17. Praise to our God. Whose bounteous hand. National Thanksgiving. Written in 1870 for Church Hymn, but 1st pub. in the Rev. E. Brown-Borthwick's Select Hymns, &c., 1871, and then in Church Hymn the same year.

18. The day Thou gavest, Lord, is ended. The darkness. &c. Evening. Written in 1870 for A Liturgy for Missionary Meetings (Froude, Hodges), and revised for Church Hymn, 1871. The revised form has passed into other collections.

19. The Lord be with us when we come. Close of Afternoon Service. Written in 1870, at the request of a friend for use at the close of S-Serv on Sunday afternoons when (as in summer) strictly Evening hymns would be unsuitable. It was pub. in Church Hymn, 1871, Thring's Call, 1882, and others.

21. This day the Lord's disciples met. White Monday. "Originally written in 1855 for a class of children, as a hymn of 8 verses of 5 lines each, beginning, 'The Fifth day was come at last,' It was abridged, revised, and compressed into 4 st. for Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1870, and pub. therein, 1871.

22. Thou in Whose Name the two or three. Wednesday. Appeared in the Parish Magazine, May, 1871, as a hymn for Wednesday. After revision it was included in Church Hymn, 1871, and repeated in other collections.

24. We sing the glorious conquest. Conversion of St. Paul. Written Feb. 28, 1871, and pub. later the same year in Church Hymn. It was repeated in H. A. & M., 1875.

25. When the day of toil is done. Eternal Rest. Written in Jan., 1870, and 1st pub. in the Rev. E. Brown-Borthwick's Sixteen Hymns with Tunes, &c., 1870, and Church Hymn, 1871, and subsequently in Scottish hymn-books. The tunes "Freston," in Church Hymn, was written for this hymn.

To these hymns must be added those which are annotated under their respective first lines, and the translations from the Latin. The grandest of his original compositions is "Throned upon the awful tree," the most beautiful and tender, "Saviour, again to Thy dear Name we raise!" and of his tr. "Sing Alleluia forth in duteous praise," and "Welcome, happy morning, age to age shall say," are the most successful and popular. The subjects of Mr. Ellerton's hymns, and the circumstances under which they were written, had much to do with the concetration of thought and terseness of expression by which they are characterized. The words which he uses are usually short and simple; the thought is clear and well stated; the rhythm is good and stately. Ordinary facts in sacred history and in daily life are lifted up into the commonplace rhymes with which they are usually associated, thereby rendering the hymns bearable to the cultured, and instructive to the devout. His antitheses are frequent and terse, almost too much so for devotional verse, and are in danger of interrupting the tranquil flow of devotion. His sympathy with nature, especially in her subtler moods, is great; he loves the fading light and the peace of eve, and lingers in the shadows. Unlike many hymn-writers who set for their illustrations in detail, and then tie to them the moral which they are to teach, he weaves his moral into his metaphor, and pleases the imagination and refines the spirit together. Now and again he falls into the weakness of ringing changes on words; but taken as a whole his verse is elevated in tone, devotional in spirit, and elegant in diction.

Elliott, Charlotte, daughter of Charles Elliott, of Chapham and Brighton, and granddaughter of the Rev. H. Venn, of Huddersfield, was b. March 18, 1789. The first 32 years of her life were spent mostly at Chapham. In 1823 she removed to Brighton, and died there Sept. 22, 1871. To her acquaintance with Dr. C. Malan, of Geneva, is attributed much of the deep spiritual-mindedness which is so prominent in her hymns. Though weak and feeble in body, she possessed a strong imagination, and a well-cultured and intellectual mind. Her love of poetry and music was great, and is reflected in her verse. Her hymns number about 150, a large percentage of which are in C. U. The finest and most widely known of these are, "Just as I am," and "My God, my Father, while I stray." Her verse is characterized by tenderness of feeling, plaintive simplicity, deep devotion, and perfect rhythm. For those in sickness and sorrow she has sung as well as any has done. Her hymns appeared in her brother's Ps. & Hys. and elsewhere as follows:

(1) Psalms and Hymns for Public, Private, and Social Worship: selected by the Rev. H. V. Elliott, esq., 1835-48. In this ed. her signature is "C. E." (2) The Christian Rememberer's Pocket Book. This was originally edited by Miss Kierman, of Dublin. Miss Elliott undertook the editorship in 1834. (3) The Invalid's Hymn Book. This was originally compiled by Miss Kierman, but before publication was re-arranged by Miss Elliott, who also added 23 hymns in the 2nd ed., 1834. These were included in the following edition of the 6th ed., 1854, when her contributions amounted to 112. From that date no change was made in the work. (4) Hours of Sorrow Cheered and Comforted; or, Thoughts in Verse, 1836. (5) Morning and Evening Hymns for a Week, printed privately in 1839 for sale for a benevolent institution in Brighton, and pub. in 1842. (6) Thoughts in Verse on Sacred Subjects, 1849.

Miss Elliott's Poems were pub., with a Memoir by her sister, Mrs. Rabington, in 1873, and an additional volume of Leaves from her unpublished Journals and Poems, also appeared in 1870.

In addition to her more important hymns, which are annotated under their respective first lines, there are in C. U.:

i. From The Invalid's Hymn-book, 1834-1841:
1. Clouds and darkness round about thee. (1841.) Resignation.
3. O God, may I look up to Thee. (1841.) Teach us to Pray.
4. This is enough; although 'twere sweet. (1841.) On being delivered from Divine Worship.
5. With tearful eyes I look around. (1841.) The Institution "Come unto Me."

ii. From H. V. Elliott's Psalms & Hymns, 1835-1839:
6. Girfbons was that primal light. Christmas.
7. Hail, holy day, most blest, most dear. Easter.
8. My only Saviour, when I feel. Jesus His people's Rest.
10. The Sabbath-day has reached its close. Sunday Evening.

iii. From Miss Elliott's Hours of Sorrow, 1836:
11. Father, when Thy child is dying. Prayer for a Departing Spirit.
13. My God, is any hour so sweet? The Hour of Prayer.
15. There is a holy sacrifice. The Consecrated Heart.

[5th ed.]

Elliott, Ebenezer, commonly known as the "Corn Law Rhymer," was b. near Rotherham, Yorkshire, 1781, and d. at Barnsley, in the same county, in 1849. The greater part of his life was spent in Sheffield, where he was engaged in the iron trade, and it was in a Sheffield newspaper that many of his poetical pieces first appeared. He pub.:

(1) Night, a Descriptive Poem, 1818. (2) The Village Patriarch, 1829. (3) Corn Laws Hymns, 1831. (4) Poems, 1834; and (5) More Prose and Verse, 1836.

A piece or two from these works have been adapted as hymns in some Unitarian Collections. They include "Another year is swallowed by the sea," for the old and new year.

[J. D.]

Elliott, Emily Elizabeth Steele, third daughter of the late Rev. E. B. Elliott, of Brighton, author of the Horae Apocalypsicae, was b. at Brighton, and now [1887] lives in London. She has contributed hymns, some of which have obtained wide acceptance, to the choir manuals, and Additional Hymns, 1866 (Nos. 8, 34) for use in St. Mark's Church, Brighton; to the Church Missionary Juvenile Instructor, which she edited for six years. Her Chimes of Consecration, a volume of 70 hymns and poems, was pub. in 1878, and her Chimes for Daily Service in 1880. The latter contains 71 hymns in two parts. The second part of 48 hymns is also pub. separately as Under the Pillow, for use as a cheap large type hymn-book (with corresponding tune-book) for hospitals and infirmaries and the sick generally. Her hymn, "Let us keep the feast." (H. Communion), was 1st pub. in The Feast of Sacrifice and The Feast of Remembrance, 1865, in 5 st. of 51.

[E. B.]

Elliott, Henry Venn, M.A., son of Charles Elliott, and brother of Charlotte Elliott, b. Jan. 17, 1792, and educated at Hartsmith by the Rev. H. Jowett, and at Trinity College, Cambridge. He graduated in 1810, and was subsequently a Fellow of Trinity. Taking Holy Orders in 1823, he became, in 1826, Minister of St. Mary's, Brighton, and remained there to his death on Jan. 24, Elliott, Julia Anne, nee Marshall, daughter of Mr. John Marshall of Hallsteads, Ulster, was married to the Rev. H. V. Elliott (q.v.), in 1833, and d. Nov. 8, 1841. Her hymns were contributed to his husband's Ps. & Hymns, 1835, anonymously, but in the Index to the "3rd thousand," 1839, her initials were added. These hymns are eleven in all, and concerning them, Miller has justly said (s. & Sings, p. 182), they "show a most refined poetical taste, and a special facility for appreciating and expressing, appropriately, phases of thought and feeling that are above the mean, and that might have escaped common observation."

Of these hymns the best known are, "Hail, bright and sacred morn," "Oh, the dewy breath of even," and "We love Thee, Lord, yet not alone." (q.v.). The rest are:

1. Father, if that gracious name,
2. Great Creator, who dost thou know?
3. I would believe; but my weak heart,
4. My God, and can I linger still,
5. Not over the stormy sea, but
6. Oh, when didst this rite reveal?
7. So near, too soon, the sweet repose.
8. Welcome to us the darkness night.

[From "Church Breviary,""q.v."]

Ellis, first wife of the celebrated philosopher Boethius, was the daughter of Fustus, Consul at Rome, 472, and sister of the mother of St. Benedict. The hymn "Aurea luce et decoro resumus," (q.v.) is usually, but somewhat uncertainly, attributed to her. Others also bear her name (see Index). She d. at an early age, at Padua.

Elven, Cornelius, pastor for fifty years of the Baptist Church at Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, was b. in 1797, and d. in 1873. His hymn, "With broken heart and contrite sigh" (Lent), is found in several collections in G. Britain and America. It was written in Jan., 1838 (Miller's S. & Sings, p. 449), for use at special services by his own congregation, and was included in the Bpt. Ps. & Hya., 1858.

Emergite undis et Doct. Nicholas Le Chatelain. [Epiphany.] Contributed to the Paris Brev., 1861, p. 234, and signed N.T.

In the revised Paris Brev., 1786, it is the hymn at Lauds and Second Vespers at Amiens, thence to the Epiphany. In the Lyonse Chanteons, it is for Second Vespers. It is also in the Rev. F. W. Newman's Hymns, 1865; and J. Chandler's Church, 1837, No. 55. (Note.)

[From "Church Breviary,"q.v."]

Elliott, Julia A., 1865. His Life, by Josiah Bateman, was pub. in 1868. He pub. in 1835, Psalms and Hymns for Public, Private, and Social Worship, 1835. To this collection his wife and sister contributed many hymns, and to the 2nd or 3rd ed., c. 1839 edition, he added the following:

1. For faith, Thy gift, O Lord. Faith desired.
2. In the sweet time of early morn. Prayer on behalf of Children.
4. Saviour, see Thy mansions fair. Faith.

Mr. Elliott's hymns have not come into extensive use, but his collection, often reprinted, had a marked influence upon latter hymn-books. [England Hymnody, Church of.]

Emile Julianne was dau. of Count Albert Friedrich of Barby and Mühlingen (on the Elbe, near its junction with the Saale). During the Thirty Years' War her father and family had to seek refuge in the Heidecksburg, the castle of his uncle, Count Ludwig Günther of Schwarzburg Rudolstadt, and Emilie was b. at the Heidecksburg, Aug. 16, 1637. After the death of her father (1641) and mother (1642), she was adopted by her mother's sister (who was her god-mother, and had become the wife of Count Ludwig Günther), and was educated at Rudolstadt with her cousins, under the care of Dr. Alstaurus.

The trs. in C. U. are:

1. Who knows how near my life’s expid, omitting st. i., x., in Dr. H. Mill’s Horae, 1854 (1566, p. 245). His trs. of st. i., viii., are included as No. 982 in the American Luth. Gen. Synod’s H. Rk., 1850-52, and as No. 430 in the Ohio Luth. Hr., 1880.

2. Who knows how near my end may be! Time speeds away, a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in the 2nd Ser. of her Lyra Ger., 1858, p. 204, and then as No. 187 in her C. B. for England, 1863. In the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Rk., 1865, st. i., vi., xii., were included as No. 545.

Other trs. are: (1) “Who knows how soon my end may be,” by Dr. G. Walker, 1863, p. 97; (2) “Who knows how near my end may be? Time,” &c., by F. Moore, 1863, p. 185.

In addition the following have been tr., but are not in English C. U.:

Empty’d of earth I faint would be.
A. M. Toplady. (Holiness desired.) 1st pub. in his Poems on Sacred Subjects, 1739, as No. 23 of the “Petitionary Hymns,” and headed, “The Believer’s Wish.” In April, 1771, he included it in a revised form, in st. 4 of 1., in the Gospel Magazine. This revised text is repeated in Sedwick’s reprint of Toplady’s Hymns, 1860, p. 30, and is that in use in G. Britain and America. The ceto from this hymn, “At anchor laid remote from home” (st. iii. and viii.), appeared in Rippon’s Sel., 1787, and is still in C. U. [W. T. B.]

En dies est Dominica. [Sunday Morning.] This long hymn of 116 lines is given by Mone, No. 247, from a ms. of the 15th cent. at Karlsruhe. He heads it “Dominicus diebus, hymnum.” The same ms. contains the ancient melody. The lines 3, 4:

"Ob octavam dominicae, Resurrectionis sacrae; rendered in the Hymnal:"—

“For on this day the eighth and first,
Our rising Lord’s death’s first day burst; receive illustration from a quotation from St. Augustine (354-430), and noted by Mone:

“The souls truly of all the saints are indeed at rest before the resurrection of the body; but they have not that power of action with which they flourish when the body is received again, which action the seventh day signifies.” St. Augustine, Rer. cl. St. Epist. 55, c. 13-25.

From this hymn the following ceto are taken:—“En dies est Dominica”; “Christi nam resurrectio”; and “Hac die surgens dominus.” [W. A. S.]

The translations of the ceto from this hymn are:

1. En dies est Dominica. Of this ceto there are three arrangements:

2. Again the Lord’s own day is here. This altered form of Neale’s tr. with the omission of st. v., is by the Compilers of H. A. & M. It was included in the 1st ed., 1801, and continued in the revised ed., 1875.

En tempus acceptabile. [Lent.] The use of this hymn, probably of the 18th cent., varies according to the Breviary in which it is found. In the Common Brev., it is at Lauds from the 3rd Sunday to Lent in Lent to Passion Sunday (the latter exclusively); and in the Amiens Brev., at Matins on Sundays and weekdays, when the Freal Office is said, from Ash Wednesday to Passion Sunday. The text is given in Dr. Neal's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1851, p. 93, from the Cahors Brev. of 1746. Tr. as:

Enfield, William, LL.D., b. at Sudbury,
Suffolk, March 29, 1741, of poor parents.
Through the assistance of Mr. Hextall, the local Dissenting Minister, at 17 he entered the Daventry Academy under Dr. Ashworth.
His first pastorate was at Bens's Garden, Liverpool, to which he ministered from 1763 to 1770. In conjunction with
Rev. J. Breckell of Key St. chapel, he edited
A New Collection of Psalms proper for Christian Worship, in three parts, by J. Psalms of David, &c., II.
psalms printed in the year 1744. Known as the Liverpool Old Psalms. Later ed., 1767, 1770, 1787.
In this last, 66 more hymns are added to the 3rd part.

From 1770 to 1785 Enfield was at Warrington, as minister to the Old Presbyterian congregation, and as teacher of Belles-lettres and other subjects, in the Dissenting Academy Speaker: 1777, Institutes of Natural Philo-son of his late colleague at the Warrington Academy, in bringing out a General Bi-

Printed by J. March for J. Johnson, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, 1795. 2nd ed., 1796; 3rd ed., 1802. London, J. Johnson. Printed by W. Eyres, Horse Market, Warrington. Contains 233 hymns, more than half by Watts, and of the rest 43 were retained from the Warrington ed.

In this Coll. Enfield's own hymns first ap-ppeared, "Behold where in a mortal form" (Example of Christ): "Wherefore should man, frail child of clay" (Humility); and "O Thou, through all thy works adored" (God the Ruler of Nature). They are characteristic of the "moral preacher" and the Unitarian, and in taste are unexceptionable. Dr. Enfield received his degree from Edinburgh University.
On his death Johnson brought out 3 vols.
of his Sermons "on Practical Subjects," with a Memoir by Dr. Akin. [V. D. D.]

English Hymnody, Church of. In the article on Early English Hymnody, and in that on English Psalters, the contributions made by the Church of England to English Hymnody to 1700, and, in the case of Psalters, to the present time, are sufficiently treated.
To this article is left the task of carrying on the history to the latest hymn-books which have issued from the press.

The origin and development of hymn-book making in the Church of England have their well-defined periods, each the outcome of renewed activity and spiritual life, and all bear witness to robust health and vigour.

1. First Period. 1700–1800.

For the first thirty years and more of the eighteenth century nothing was done in the form of hymn-book compiling in the Church of England. A movement, however, in the right direction had taken place by the establishment of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge in 1698; and the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, in 1701. The outlook was considerably enlarged by the establishment of these Societies, and, especially through the latter, interest was, to some extent, awakened in "Foreign Parts"; but mainly those which were British possessions. The man who first caught the spirit of the new movement was John Wesley, who gave himself to mission work in Georgia; and the outcome of that mission was the first hymn-book compiled for use in the Church of England. Wesley went to Georgia in 1735, and returned to England in 1737. His visit to the Moravian settlement at Hermunt, and his first field sermon on the 2nd of April, 1738, followed, and then came the actual foundation of Methodism. A series of services at the first meeting was on 17th May, 1738. Three years before this, and whilst in Georgia, he published, Collection of Psalms and Hymns. Charles-town, Printed by Lewis Timothy, 1737.

One copy only of this collection is known to exist: but a facsimile reprint, with a preface by Dr. Osborne, was published by T. Woolmer, Castle Street, City Road, London, in 1882. In a letter quoted in Bliss's edition of Wood's Athenae Oxonienses, Wesley himself states that he published a Collection of Psalms & Hymns in 1738. This collection is the Charles-town book, which thus dates 1736-7. This collection is divided into three sections or parts. The first contains 40 "Psalms and Hymns for Sundays"; the second, 20 "Psalms and Hymns for Wednesdays or Fridays"; and the third, 10 "Psalms and Hymns for Saturday," or 70 hymns in all. Those for Sunday are mostly hymns of praise; those for Wednesday or Friday, humiliation, repentance and prayer; and the Saturday adoration of God the Creator of the Universe. There is no provision for Holy Baptism or Holy Communion. Of the 70 hymns more than one-third are by J. Watts, the rest being by various members of the Wesley family, including five tr. by J. Wesley from the German, and adaptations from J. Austin, G. Herbert, J. Addison, and others. John Wesley's expansion of this book, together with his various poetical collections and the publication of his brother Charles, were distinctly outside of the Church of England. Methodist Hymnody, § i.

Beyond this little work, narrow in design and limited in circulation, nothing was done until the great wave of religious awakening had reached the hearts of several of the clergy, and a few began to do within the Church what J. Wesley and others were doing in the fields without. The "line of theological thought taken was, however, in most cases more in accordance with the Calvinism of G. Whitefield, than the Arminianism of J. Wesley. When, therefore, M. Madan published in 1769 the second important hymn-book for use in the Church of England, he went to the collection published by G. Whitefield in 1753 for many of his hymns. These hymns were in most cases by Watts and Wesley, and altered by Whitefield. The alterations made in Whitefield's book suited Madan better than the originals (alterations so bitterly resented by Wesley in the preface to his hymn-book of 1780), and he took them without hesitation and without leave. The title of this book is:—

A Collection of Psalms and Hymns, Extracted from Various Authors, and published by the Reverend Mr. Madan ... London. Printed by Henry Cocks; and sold at the Lock Hospital, near Hyde Park, 1769.

It contained 170 hymns. An Appendix of 24 hymns was added in 1768. The arrangement of the collection is very crude. No order of subjects or seasons is observed, except that 27 "Sacramental Hymns" are grouped together at the end, and an alphabetical arrangement is ignored. Notwithstanding this, the selection, although from a limited number of writers only, is excellent. The literary standard is high, and the tone throughout is exceedingly bright and joyous. More than two-thirds of these hymns are still in use in the Church of England.

In 1767 the Rev. R. Converson, Vicar of Hemsley, Yorkshire, and friend of W. Cowper the poet, pub. his hymn-book under the title of:—

A Collection of Psalms and Hymns from Various Authors: For the use of Serious and Devout Christians of every Denomination, London: Printed by T. and J. Pasham in Black Friars, 1767.

This work seems to have had a good circulation, as it reached to a fourth edition in 1780, but whether its use extended, as its compiler designed, to any of the nonconforming bodies is not known. Converson followed very much in the same path as Madan. In addition to embodying two-thirds of Madan's book in his own, he gathered the rest principally from the same common sources. He included a few originals from Newton and Cowper, but so far as is known he added nothing thereto of his own. It was an advance upon Madan's book in arrangement, was supplied with an index of subjects, and gave greater prominence to the Christian seasons; but its influence on later collections was not of a special character.

The compilation of Richard De Courcy, published as:—

introduced, especially in the 2nd and later editions, a number of hymns from Doddridge, Anne Steele, Mrs. Barbauld, and other Nonconformists, into C. U. in the Church of England. To the 2nd ed. he added a few hymns of his own.

The widening of the area of selections by De Courcy was anticipated to a great extent, so far as his 2nd and later editions were concerned, by A. M. Toplady, who pub. in 1776 his:—

The 1st ed., in common with the 2nd and others, was without order or system. Although the greater part of the book was compiled from John and Charles Wesley and Isaac Watts, yet many names new to the Church of England were represented. Most of these were Nonconformists, as J. Allen, J. Cennick, J. Hart, W. Hammond, B. Wallin, and others. The number of his own hymns were few when compared with the number which he wrote; but the alterations and additions which he made in those by other hands were numerous. The 2nd ed. of the collection was edited by the
ENGLAND HYMNOLOGY, CH. OF

Rev. Walter Row in 1787. Some hymns were omitted and others added, the total being 412. In later editions the number was further increased. In 1814 they numbered 435, and 5 doxologies.

From 1776-87, at which dates Toplady's two editions were pub., to 1800, various collections were compiled, amongst which the more important were:

7. Ps. Hys. & Anthems sung in the Chapel of the Hospital for the Maintenance and Education of Eton and Deserted Young Children (Foundling Hospital Coll.) London. Music, 1794, 1797, 1801. Words only, 1797 and 1801.

Although this list shows that there was increased activity in the Church, and a freer life, yet the hymn-books named above brought little value to the common store of hymnody, and shed not a single name of importance to the list of Church of England hymn-writers. This period is closed with a limited number of hymn-books for Church use, and these were Calvinistic in doctrine, were built up upon the lines of the Nonconformists' collections, and were indebted for their contents to Dissenters and the Wesleyans, to the extent of some seven-eighths of the whole. Basil Wood's Coll., 1794, and the anonymous reviser of the Foundling Hospital Coll., 1797, indicated, however, a tendency towards change for the better which soon took place.

The Olney Hymns (q.v.), by J. Newton and W. Cowper, the poet, were pub. during this period in 1779. Although they were outside the hymn-books proper, that work exercised a powerful influence on the collections of the next two periods, added two of the greatest names to the roll of hymn-writers; and enriched the hymnody of all time.

ii. Period. 1801-1829.

The increased interest in the singing of hymns rather than the psalm-versions of Tate and Brady during this period, is seen in the number of hymn-books which were published during the twenty years which it embraces, and the places where they were issued. The following list, although not complete, will give a fair idea of the growth and expansion of this new departure in the order of divine worship in the Church of England.

1. Hymns for the Congregation of All Saints Church, Liverpool, by Robert Banister. Liverpool, 1812.
3. Ps. & Hys., designed for Public Worship. Carlisle, R. Scott, 1812. (Edited by J. R. Cottrell, &c.)

ENGLAND HYMNOLOGY, CH. OF 333

15. A Sel. from the New Version of Ps. &c. 2nd ed., to which are added in the Appendix several Ps. & Hys. for various occasions not contained in the former edition. By R. Omed. London, 1809.
31. Ps. of David, as sung in Penrith Church. Penrith, 1816.
40. A Sel. of Ps. & Hys., for Use in St. Alban's Abbey. St. Alban's, 1820.
41. A Coll. of Ps. & Hys. for Use in Burnley Church. Burnley, 1820.
The places where these collections were published are instructive, as showing that the movement was extending to every part of the country. Whilst Basil Wood and others issued their compilations in London, Charles Simeon published his at Cambridge. Thomas Cotterill began in Staffordshire and finished in Sheffield, Birmingham, Bradford, Burnley, Cambridge, Carlisle, Dudley, Greenwich, Hull, Ipswich, Kendal, New Brentford, Peurth, Plymouth, Ramsgate, Sudbury, Wrenbury, and other towns had their representative books, each distinct in its way, and all testifying to the increased interest taken in the use of hymns. Outside of London, Yorkshire and Staffordshire were the greatest contributors.

The books of this period are marked by features unknown to the older collections. In the infancy of the movement such congregations as saw good to use the collection of Madan, or Toplady, or De Courcy, or any other, did so without any question as to the legality of the use of hymns in the services of the Church. With the growth of the movement came also opposition thereto on this point, thereby causing many compilers to vindicate their position and proceedings by elaborate prefaces; or to stamp their work with quasi authority by a quotation from Queen Elizabeth's Injunctions to the Clergy, 1559, or by a formal dedication to the bishop of the diocese in which the book was published. This opposition reached its climax in 1819. In that year the 8th ed. of Cotterill's Selection, a large book issued at a high price, called forth a storm of opposition on the part of his congregation at St. Paul's, Sheffield, upon whom he tried to force the book. This opposition was strengthened by outside feeling, until nothing was left but an appeal to the Diocesan Court at York for a legal decision. Before the trial came on, Archbishop Harcourt suggested a compromise to the effect that the Selection should be withdrawn, that another should be compiled, each hymn in which should be submitted for his approval, and that the work should be dedicated to him. This was done, and the result was A Selection of Psalms and Hymns for Public Worship. London: Printed for T. Cadell, in the Strand, 1820. For forty years this Sel. continued in use in many churches in the North of England. Cotterill's fame, however, as a compiler is associated with the suppressed book of 1819. It did more than any other collection in the Church of England to mould the hymn-books of the next period; and nearly nine-tenths of the hymns therein, and usually in the altered form given them by Cotterill, or James Montgomery who assisted him, are still in C. U. in G. Britain and America. A comparison of this edition with the seven editions which preceded it suggests that the high moment is largely due to the assistance rendered by Montgomery.

Another feature which was new to the hymn-books, was the recognition of the fact that the Church of England used a Book of Common Prayer, and that the hymn-book in use in the same Church should be a companion thereto. The three books which held a prominent posi-

In the selection of Psalms during this period the renderings of J. Merrick and I. Watts were very much favoured, those by Tate and Brady, possibly because they were bound up with the Book of Common Prayer, being specially ignored. Contemporary writers of psalm versions shared the same fate, and no new names were added to the list of those whose productions were embodied in the preceding period, except those of Basil Wood in his own collections. T. Cotterill, J. Cawood, J. D. Carlyle, Sir R. Grant, R. Heber, and W. Hurn, were the most notable of the hymn-writers of this period. With the exception of Grant and Heber these writers do not take high rank.

iii. Third Period. 1821-1850.

This period was one of the most prolific in hymn-book compiling of any in the history of the Church of England. During the twenty years an average of over two distinct collections came out every year. The highest number was reached in 1833, when about ten collections were published within the twelve mouths. As most of the hymn-books published during this period are referred to in the annotations of hymns throughout this Dictionary, we subjoin a list, which, although not complete, is yet sufficiently so for all practical purposes. From 1820-1830, we have:

3. Sixty Ps. & Hys. 1st. ed., 1823. This contained many original hymns. Sets 2 & 3 were subsequently added. 4th ed., 1862. By E. G. Marsh.

15. The Psalmist. Henry and John Gwyther, Birmingham, 1830. This contains many original hymns, also others new to the collections. It was not reprinted, but had some influence on later works.

16. Ps. & Hymns, intended as a Supplement to the New Version, Islington, 1830. Enlarged in 1841. By the Rev. Daniel Wilson. It was for many years the favourite Evangelical hymn-book in North London and did much to advance its popularity arose from the 1841 ed. borrowed extensively from Lyte. It is a Church of H. Bk. Being a Collection of Ps. & Hymns, Derby, 1825. [By the Rev. Philip Gell.]

17. A Coll. of Ps. & Hymns, chiefly designed for Pub. Worship. Helper, 1825. The most important of these was Pratt's Coll., 1829, not for its own intrinsic merit, not for any marked influence which it had upon later compilations in G. Britain: but because of the great number of hymns which it supplied to American hymn-books published during the next twenty years. In these books nearly all the hymns are of the old-fashioned type, and are arranged in the order of subjects with little or no provision for the minor festivals of the Church. Bp. Heber's Hymns, 1827, were an exception, not only in the number of the hymns supplied and their arrangement, but also in adding the name of H. H. Milman to the roll of hymn-writers, and increasing his own reputation as a sacred poet.

From 1831 to 1840 the list is augmented by the following:

1. Ps. & Hymns for Pub. & Private Use, 1831. W. H. Burtenshaw. These are all original. The 1842 ed. is a reprint.

A Coll. of Psalms and Hymns, to be used in Belgrave Chapel and Church of England. London & Leeds, 1833. This is a Church of England Psalms and Hymns, with the principle of the Psalter. Three hymns are given for each day of the month. There are also additional hymns for Special Occasions and Private Use. Edited by the Rev. J. C. Williams, Hugh Wycombe, 2nd ed., 1833.

19. The Western Hymn Book. London, 1834. This was compiled by the Messrs. Harrison, of Weston, Sheffield. Weston House is now the Public Museum of Sheffield. J. Montgomery assisted in compiling, contributed to, and revised the proofs of this collection.

29. Psalms and Praises for the Church: A Coll. of Ps. & Hymns, arranged for Public Worship in the Churches and Chapels throughout the Kingdom of England, &c., 1838. This was edited by the Rev. John East.

34. A Coll. of Ps. & Hymns, Norwich, 1838. This was for some time the authorized book of the Diocese.

37. Ps. & Hymns. W. Vernon Harcourt, York, 1840. Dedicated to his father the Archbishop.

39. Ps. & Hymns, selected and adapted to the purposes of Pub. Worship. By Rev. E. Scobell, Incumbent of St. Peter's, Vere Street, and Evening Lecturer of the Parochial Church, St. Mary-le-Bone. 4th ed., 1840.

40. Ps. & Hymns, adapted to the Services of the Church according to the use of the United Church of England & Ireland; and also to Private Reading. Designed to incorporate those Metrical Versions of Psalms, and those Hymns (above 200) which have received Royal, Archepiscopal, and Episcopal Sanction. By the Rev. J. Rowe, Vicar of Long Buckby, Northamptonshire, and Prebendary of Lichfield. London, c. 1840. 6th ed., 1851. The mode adopted in the compiling of this book anticipated to some extent that which guided Bishop Bickersteth in editing the Hymnal Companion, 1870. The first sought out the "Archbishop's Episcopalian and Episcopal" sanction; the second, the use made of hymns by former editors.

Of these collections the most noticeable were Stowell's, 1831; Burtenshaw's book, 1831; Bickersteth's, 1833; Lyte's, 1834; Elliot's, 1835;
and the Mitre, 1836. Stowell's book follows the order of Common Prayer in its broader features, but did not provide for the minor festival or the four seasons. Additional this was, not as hymn-books, but as fresh stores of original compositions. Bickersteth's collection was a great success. It was very much an imitation of Cotterill's suppressed edition of 1819; but upon broader lines, and a somewhat different arrangement. His views, however, were drawn from the originals, that he was largely indebted to Cotterill, Toplady, and the Wes. H. Bk. His researches in the Church of England, and especially in the enlarged edition of 1841, partook in this respect largely of the character of the best modern hymn-books. His aspirations of authorship given in the index are generally correct with regard to the leading writers; but with the more obscure he is often in the wrong. Notwithstanding that it lacked the rich productions of later writers, it was the best Evangelical hymn-book of the Church until "compiled anew," as Psalms and Hymns based on the Christian Psalms, in 1858; and then entirely superseded by the Hymn Companion of 1870-76, both works being by his son, Dr. Bickersteth, Bishop of Exeter. Elliott's collection, 1835, was another Evangelical book of some importance. Its chief historical interest lies in the fact that it was mainly the channel through which Martin Madan's altered text of Watts, Wesley, and others, came into modern hymnals; and that in it some of his sister Charlotte's finest productions were given to the Church. Hall's Mitre was a book of another kind, and contained a greater proportion of original hymns than any collection then in use, fifty being by Dr. Foster alone. It was the outcome of suggestions and complaints against existing collections made to him as Editor of the Christian Remembrancer. The Psalms were grouped together as in the older books; and the hymns, arranged in the order of the Book of Common Prayer, with the omission of all the Saints' Days and Morning and Evening hymns. It had the reputation of being "High Church"; a most unaccountable reputation in the face of these omissions. Its psalms and hymns, except in one or two instances, never exceeded four stanzas, and the texts, except in the new hymns, were the most mutilated in existence. With all these drawbacks it attained to a circulation of four million copies. Possibly its approval by and dedication to Dr. Bloomfield, Bishop of London, had much to do with this success.

The number of hymn-books put forth during this period, together with the increase of writers and new compositions, testifies most emphatically and eloquently of the growth of religious life throughout the Church. Services were becoming brighter and more animated and cheerful, and a stronger and healthier life was manifesting itself on every hand. The lawsuit instituted against Cotterill in 1819, and the suppression of his book, had also pointed out a danger on the one hand to which com-pillers had to give heed, whilst the dedication of his revised book of 1820, "To the Most Reverend Edward Lord Archbishop of York," indicated the remedy on the other. Opening the Welsh dioceses, these dedications included the two Archbishops and most of the Bishops of the Provinces of Canterbury and York. The remedy was found in these episcopal imprimatur. Under these circumstances it is not surprising to find the use of hymns spreading rapidly throughout the Church; but it is curious to read in the preface of the Rangay Ps. & Hys., 1836, "The position of sitting, too common in our congregations, admits of no defence," and to find the statement followed by an argument in defence of standing during the singing of the hymns. This protest was repeated in various collections of this period, but is not found later on.

From 1840 to 1850 the hymn-books published included:——

3. Hys. Sel. for the Parish of Sandbach. By the Rev. J. Latham. Sandbach, 1841. Contains several of J. Chandler's trs. From the Latin, and also originals by the editor. This is the same book as the preceding, adapted by the Editor for use in his own parish.
17. Hys. for the Services of the Church, arranged according to the Seasons and Holy Days of the Christian Year. London, 1849. This collection omits entirely of trs. from the Latin by J. Chandler, Dr. Mant, and I. Williams. It was compiled by the Rev. Joseph Oliphant, of Holy Trinity, Bordesley, Birmingham.

The only book in this group which had any influence of importance upon later collections was that by Alford, 1844, and this arose prin ENGLAND HYMNODY, CH. OF

This twenty years were not only fruitful in hymn-writers and hymn-books; but during the latter half of this period a new departure in hymnody took place which has revolutionised the whole system of hymn-writing and hymn-making. Keble's Christian Year was gradually raising the poetical standard, and awakening renewed interest in the Book of Common Prayer, and the Fasts and Festivals of the Church, when that interest was intensified by the Tracts for the Times, the controversies which arose therefrom, and, from a hymnological point of view, James A. Johnston's Hymnals of Latin Hymns from the Roman Breviary by Dr. (now Cardinal) Newman, Bp. Mant, W. J. Copeland, E. Caswall, and others; and from the Paris Breviary, by J. Williams and J. Chandler. These translations were a new revelation to the Church, which dazzled some and grieved others. Upon the hymn-books of this period they came too late to have more than a modified effect, in the next they moulded many and influenced all.

The leading Church writers and translators of this period were:

The collections published during these ten years were in many respects widely different in character to any that preceded them, or that came after. Although each book was distinct in itself, yet they may be grouped with comparative ease. The work of translating from the Latin, revived in the former period by Bp. Mant and others, already noticed, was carried on with great vigour and success, especially by W. J. Blose, J. M. Neale, J. D. Chambers, and others. The translations from the German by Missa Cox, 1841, and H. J. Buckoll, 1843, were greatly augmented by A. T. Russell, W. Musin. Missa Borthwick and her sister, Mrs. Fimlatter, and Miss Winkworth. In addition to purely English sources, valuable material was thus fast accumulating; material which on the one hand had the impress of ancient use, and on the other records of the storm of the Reformation, and the calm that followed. Gradually the Discursive element, which up to this period constituted nearly two-thirds of the total contents of the hymn-books in use in the Church gather, and in all cases to a very great extent, of a higher and more definite Church tone. This work of reconstruction was aided materially by the Church periodical literature of Ecclesiologist, and The Parish Church Choir: the books issued during this period were:

2. Church Service at the Church of St. John the Baptist, 1851.

5. Ps. & Hys., for Pub. & Social Worship. By the Rev. E. Walker, Vicar of Cheltenham, 1855. To this Dr. Walker added an Appendix; and the Rev. C. D. Bell a second Appendix, in 1878. This is known as the Cheltenham Ball. It contains a great number of hymns by Plymouth Brethren writers, including those of Dr. Walker's brother-in-law, J. G. Beck.

3. The Hymnal Noted, 1852 and 1844.

5. Ps. & Hys., for Pub. & Social Worship. By the Rev. E. Walker, Vicar of Cheltenham, 1855. To this Dr. Walker added an Appendix; and the Rev. C. D. Bell a second Appendix, in 1878. This list shows that one or two editors, as Kemble, repeated the old order of things, whilst others, as in the case of Dr. Oldknow and the Hymnal Noted, went to the other extreme, the first in almost, and the second in entirely ignoring English hymns. The middle course adopted by the majority were of two types, the one where English and tr. from the Latin, whilst here and there a tr. from the German, were the rule, as in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, and the Cooke and Denton Church Hymnal, 1853; and the second, where the proportions of Latin and German were reversed, as in A. T. Russell's Ps. & Hym., 1851, and Mercer's Ch. Psalter and H. Bk., 1854. Of all these collections issued during this period, at its close, in popularity and extensiveness of use Mercer's took the lead. This period was also marked by a somewhat stricter adherence in the arrangement of the hymns to the order of the Book of Common Prayer; by the introduction of the printing of the words and the music together; and by the almost entire discontinuance of dedications to the Bishops. The translators and original writers of this period include:

The state of matters hymnological at the close of the last period was somewhat chaotic. Blew's admirable collection was a dead letter. The Hymnal Noted had an exceedingly limited circulation. Collections of the type of Murray's Hymnal, and the Cooke & Denton selection were too much alike to ensure success to either. Mercers's held on its way triumphantly; whilst Kemble with others of the same school, as Cotterill, Bickersteth, Carus Wilson, the Ps. & Hymns of E. H. Bickersteth, Howell, the S. F. C. Ps. & Hymns, and a host of others (enumerated above) were in use in more than two-thirds of the churches of the Church of England. Outside of the hymnbooks much hymnological work had also been done, notably by Dr. Neale, with the Latin; A. T. Russell, Miss Cox, R. Musick, Miss Bothwick, Miss Winkworth, and others with the German; and Alford, Keble, Churton, Mrs. Alexander, Mrs. Toke and others, too numerous to name, in original compositions. At the opening of this period those who favoured the Hymnal Noted line of hymnody were content to let their work alone. The other extreme, having the command of nearly three-quarters of the parishes in the land, were also satisfied with what they had done. It was with the intermediate party of the Murray, Hymns and Introits, and Cooke and Denton school that the greatest difficulty was found. The difficulty, however, was the mother of a magnificent success. The leaders in this movement saw that a large mass of Churchmen were prepared, through the hymnological work of the former period, for something hymnological of a moderate, definite, and popular character, and on the new lines which circumstances had been shaping for some five and twenty years. On the understanding that several books then in use were to be withdrawn in favour of a new work, a syndicate of the holders of the copyrights of these hymn-books, and others interested in hymnology, was formed, and in 1859 the trial copy of the new advent was distributed amongst its supporters. It bore the simple title Hymns. It consisted of 130 compositions, 121 of which were old and in other collections. Of the remaining 9, 5 were translations by the Compilers and 4 were new original hymns. The note which accompanied these Hymns indicated the object of the collection and its use, and explains the absence of all sacramental and most festival hymns:

"These hymns are printed for temporary use, and as a specimen, still open to revision, of the Hymn Book now in course of preparation by a committee of Clergymen, the publication of which has been postponed to Advent, 1860. Some of these hymns, such as Bishop Ken's morning and evening hymns, will ultimately be given more fully; and some other parts are left to be inserted for want of space. The book will probably contain about 300 hymns; ample provision being made for Baptism, Confirmation, Holy Communion, Easter, Harvest, Epitaphs, Funerals, Fast and Thanksgiving Days, Missions, &c., &c. Any suggestions will be gladly received by the Secretary of the Committee, the Rev. Sir Henry Williams Bart."

When the book was published in 1861 as Hymns Ancient and Modern, 18 of the 130 hymns in this trial copy were omitted, and others were more or less altered. The work (not counting parts) contained 273 hymns. Of these 132 were from the Latin, 10 from the German, 119 were English, and already in use; 12 were new original hymns. Of the 132 from the Latin, 116 were altered, 33 being from Neale, 29 from Chandler, 17 from Ouall, 11 from T. Williams, and the rest from about a dozen translators. Sir H. W. Bake contributed 6 new translations, the Compilers Works on Hymnody.—The contributions of Dr. Neale, Mrs. Charles, and others to hymnological history during the former period, and the spirit of inquiry created by the publication of H. A. & M., were followed by numerous magazine articles, pamphlets, and works of various designs and degrees of excellence both within the Church and amongst Nonconformists, as Mr. Bigge's Annotated H. A. & M., 1807; his English Hymnody, and his Songs of other Churches; Dr. Littlecliff's and Dr. Neale's trans. from the Greek with accompanying notes; the Lyra of Mr. Orby Slipper's translations from the German by Miss Winkworth, Miss Borthwick and others; original compositions by various persons; the hymnological researches of D. Sedgwick, Josiah Miller (Singers and Songs of the Church), and Major Crawford in England, and Dr. Hatfield, Professor Bird, and others in America; the later works on Latin hymns of Daniel, and Wackermael, &c., in Germany; and the reprint of the Musae of Sarum Wm. Andrews and Hereford, &c., and the Latin Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church; these publications and many besides in Great Britain, Ireland, and America, produced a wealth of material and an accuracy of text which were unknown to the compilers of H. A. & M. in 1801, and became available to them and others in after years.

2. Collections not for Congregational use.—The leading works of this kind, and those which had the greatest influence upon the books published after H. A. & M. were:

   By the Rev. Charles Rogers, &c., 1867. This was not a Church of England work; but it assisted materially in restoring the original texts of Church of England hymns.

These works contribute much in many ways to the furthering of the interest of English Hymnody, the Book of Praise, especially, in drawing attention to the incomplete texts of most hymn-books, and supplying the original readings, and the Lyra in furnishing translations from various sources.

3. Supplements, New Editions of Old Books, &c. These supplements and reprints included the following:

1. An Appendix to the Hymnal Noted. By T. J. Ball. 1st ed., 1802, 213 hymns and 2 litanies; 2nd ed., 1801, 343 hymns; 3rd ed., 1807, 355 hymns; 4th ed., 1811, 371 hymns. The later editions are entitled The Hymnal Noted, with Appendix revised and greatly enlarged. Mr. Ball issued an additional Supplement at Edinburgh in 1805, which increased the total to 358 hymns. It has also Introits, Graduals, Tracts, and Sequences "according to the Roman Use."

8. Appendix to H. A. & M. 1865. By the Compiler.
10. Appendix to H. A. & M. for St. Philip's, Clerkenwell. 1865. This collection contains several original hymns by Mr. Whitting.
11. Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hs. 1869.
12. Appendix to The Hymnal for West Hackney. 1869. This contains the Rev. T.辉格's original hymns.
15. Appendix to H. A. & M. For the Use of St. Michael's, Folkestone, 1873. By the Rev. E. Husband. It contains several original hymns by the Rev. H. Gurney, the Editor and others.
16. Hymns for Use in the Church of St. Ethelburga, Bishopgate. 1872. This is a special Appendix to the People's Hymnal.
18. The Additional H. Bk. 1875. By the Rev. J. C. Ryle. This contains 369 hymns for Public Worship. Most of these are new to the collections.
21. Appendix to the Hymnal of God's Love. For use in the Cheltenham Parish Church by Canon Bell, with originals by the Editor.
27. A Sel. of Hs. suited to the Services of the Church of England. By the (late) Rev. Hugh Stowell, M.A. &c. Manchester, 1877. This is the 14th ed. of Stowell's Sel., and was edited by his son, the Rev. T. A. Stowell.

These numerous Appendices and Supplemental Hymn-books not only pointed out the weaknesses of the collections which, when published, were supposed to have been complete, but also brought to the fore hymn-writers of great promise and sterling merit whose services have been utilized to the full in the latest hymnals, not only of the Church of England, but of Nonconformists also.

4. Independent Collections.—These again are numerous:

2. Ps. & Hs. for the Church, School, and Home. By the Rev. D. T. Barry, M.A., Incumbent of St. Anne's, Kirkbyward, 1862; Rector of Pilsley, Norfolk, 1867. This collection contained a different arrangement in 1867, and an Appendix was added in 1871. In the latest edition the title is changed to The Parish Hymnal Book, the title of the collection pub. by the Rev. H. W. Beacon and others in 1863.
5. The Parish H. Bk. 1863. By the Rev. H. W. Beacon, Greville Pulpitmore, and J. E. Wood, of whom contributed original hymns. In 1873 it was enlarged from 197 to 274 hymns.
11. Hymn Book and Hymnoy Companion. By B. F. V. Mather, Perpetual Curate of St. Paul's Church, Clifton; Chaplain to the Bl. of Gloucester & Bristol. 2nd ed. 1847.
12. A Book of Church Hymns. 1865. Compiled for the Use of St. Salvator's, Clapham. It was adopted by several churches in the neighbourhood. It is found with a change of title as Hymns for St. Salvator's, Clapham; Holy Trinity, Clapham; St. Michael's, Mitcham, &c.
27. The Bonchurch H. Bk. for use in Pub. Worship, Devotional Meetings, and Schools. By the Rev. J. O. Gregory, M.A., Rector. 1868. This has been superseded by a Sel. of Hs. for use in Emmanuel Church, Brode, Brighton, 1869, by the same Editor.
30. Holy Song for All Seasons. 1869. A Selection of 631 hymns. Contains much not found in other collections.
31. Selections from a Hymnal suited for the Service of the Church, with some Intruits and Anthems, and an Appendix. Privately printed by W. Knot, Greve's St., Brook St., Holborn, E.C., 1864. This has these Appendices.
35. Songs of Grace & Glory for Private, Family, Pub. Worship, Hymnal Treasures of the Church of Christ from the 6th to the 10th Century, By Charles B. Snep, LL.M., Vicar of Perry Barr. 1872. This collection is strongly Calvinistic in doctrine. It is v rich in hymns of high merit, and most are met with in modern hymn-books. Miss F. R. Ivany says the compilers wrote for it and in it, and its composition. It has a separate portion, which brings the number of hymns to 1794.

The Indexes are very full, and the descriptions of Authors and dates are very accurate.

6. The St. Margarets' Hymnal. London, 1775. This collection contains a select number of hymns and tracts by Dr. Neale.
The best of these we have enumerated, and, concerning them as a whole, we have set down their distinctive features, their suitability to the needs of the Church at the respective periods of their production. The needs of the Church of to-day differ widely from her needs one hundred and fifty years ago, and these needs are emphasized by the number of hymns which are in common use. An united effort to blend the excellence of these works in one Common Book of Praise is much to be desired. The task would be a great one, pro-ably too great to be accomplished with suc-sess, when the known difficulties are taken in hand, and the unknowns are developed. Meanwhile, the great schools of thought and work have their manuals of praise, and these are, as a whole, as distinct and definite in their utterances as they are hollowed in their devotion. Of these we can only name a few the highest rank.

The most complete work for Daily Prayers, Choral Celebrations, and Occasional Services, with a careful provision for the time of the day and season of the year, together with a high tone of Eucharistic teaching and devotion, is The Hymnary of 1872. It has more translations from the Latin, and especially from the old Anglican Use of Sarum, than any other collection. To those who hold that authors should speak in their own tongue, the extensive alterations in the texts of English hymns is a grievous error. The translations, and especially those from the Use of Sarum, are too massive, almost too massive, for ordinary congregational use. They lack the cadence and ring which hold the multitude, and the fire which stimulates and heightens

the devotion of the ordinary worshipper.
The book is a great work, the greatest on the lines in the high Anglican school of thought, but it is very cold, and almost passionless.

Midway between the first edition of The Hymnary in 1870, and the complete edition, in 1875, another book of great importance was published. Coming forth under the auspices, and with the imprimatur, of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and with the awarded object of meeting the common needs of the Church, and not the aspirations of a party, Church Hymns presents what is commonly known as the old-fashioned, non-Calvinistic doctrine of the old English divines, side by side with provision for the immense developments of modern Church work. Of the 114 hymns translated from other languages, 69 are from the Latin, 30 from the German, and 12 from the Greek; and of the Latin nearly one half date from the 17th and the 18th centuries. The known writers and translators number about 122, and the unknown possibly 25 more. The provision for extra Occasional Services is very full and well arranged. The literary standard is high, and the book as a whole is richly poetic, as distinct from devotional, verse, than The Hymnary, the Hymnal Companion, or Hymns A.
and M. Its great drawback is its mutilated texts.
Some of these were inherited, but others, and they are many, were the gratuitous and, in most instances, the uncalled for offerings of the Editors.

The popular voice does by no means indi-

64 of the second, and 10 of the third, were in the first edition of the Hymnal Companion. These were retained in the edition of 1876, and several others were added from the third rank. The second attempt to ascertain what were held in the Church of England as Standard Hymns, was published by the Rev. James King, in his Anglican Hymnology, in 1880. This work is an expansion of the first attempt, by using 52 works instead of 28, but the results are rendered untrustworthy through the inclusion of works being Dissenting collections, and 1 a volume of Essays. Mr. King gave 105 hymns in the first rank, 110 in the second, and 110 in the third. Of these 108, 96, and 78, respectively, are in the Hymnal Companion. If Mr. King's Dissenting collections and the volume of Essays, which he unnecessarily added, are deducted from these books, the result will be equally favourable to the Hymnal Companion with the first. In Anglican representativeness, as thus worked out, Bishop Bickersteth's work is at the head of all hymnals in the Church of England, and in keeping with this unique position, it has also the purest texts, being in respect almost as faultless as Lord Selborne's Book of Praise. Notwithstanding this excellence, and the very full provision made from nearly 200 authors and translators for the Ordinary Services and the Occasional Offices, its prevailing subjectiveness, together with its non-representativeness as distinct from the serious drawbacks to many. Half-a-dozen hymns from the Greek, less than a dozen from the German, and something like fifteen from the Latin, do not make an imposing total from those vast stores. The book is undoubtedly one of the first in the Church, but it is seriously narrowed by this exclusiveness.

The Church of England Hymn-book adopted to the Daily Services of the Church throughout the Year, by Prebendary Thring, is built up mainly on the lines of Church Hymns, and, like it, is designed for the service of every kind and degree. Its Eucharistic standpoint is that of the first edition of Hymn A & M. Its original writers and translators number 300, without counting anonymous authors, and their hymns represent eight distinct languages, being one more than Hymn A & M or Church Hymns. The usual and well-known hymns also 85 from the Greek are repeated; and there are now 20 from the German. The texts rank next to the Hymnal Companion in purity, and the arrangement of the hymns is very distinct and clear. Hymns and unmetrical tone are passionate expressions of immediate, as are those which breathe an immediate stature, that death is the highest, and the unmetrical are great. Hymns, and its poetic merits are greater than those of contributors one-third larger than in the first edition of contributors one-third larger than in the Hymnal Companion, and Hymn A & M. or the Hymnal Companion, as large as those represented in Church Hymn. There is a need for division and collection. It must be conceded from the doctrinal standpoint which it holds, it will be difficult to find its equal, and impossible to name its superior.

In addition to these five books there are others of much merit in the foregoing list, especially T. Darlow's Hymns for the Church of England; The People's Hymnal; the Universal Hymn Book, and the special tribute to Dean Stanley's memory, The Westminster Abbey Hymn Book. But when we are required by the general public of all denominations and creeds to set before them the hymnody of the Church of England in its highest forms, and in its fullest development for practical Church purposes, we are compelled to affirm that The Hymnary of 1872: Church Hymns of 1871; Hymn A & M of 1873; The Hymnal Companion of 1876; and The Church of England Hymn-book of 1882, each great in itself, do embody, when combined, the highest and richest results of a century and a half of hymnological labour and research in the Church of England.

English Hymnody, Early.—I. Introduction.—Lord Selborne has called Dr. Watts the father of English Hymnody: and, having lifted English hymns out of obscurity into fame, the title is a just one. It will be seen, however, that there are facts in the history of the metrical Psalters and obscene hymns, which conditioned and moulded the work of Watts; that several of our choicest hymns in present use are found in books of the 16th and 17th century; that there are signs that hymns might have become a recognized part of church worship, but for the Puritan reaction; and that hymns, as distinct from paraphrases of Scripture, had become an acknowledged part of public worship among the Baptists and Independents at the close of the 17th century. The causes of the long delay in their acknowledgment will appear in succeeding sections. Hatred of the Papacy may have helped to discredit the Latin hymns among the Reformers. The marvellous power of the English Bible excluded almost every thing but actual Scripture from the service of praise during the growing ascendency of Puritanism. After the Restoration, all singing among the Nonconformists became dangerous under the Convocation Act. Under the more merciful laws of William III. Nonconformist hymns began to appear freely, and in the hands of Watts and his followers became a power. But this very fact for a long period discredited them within the Church, which adhered rigidly to the Old and New Versions of the Psalms. The object of this article, which closes with Watts and Doddridge, is to trace this history, indicating at the same time the position of vernacular hymns and paraphrases previous to the Reformation, the gradual decay of the influence of Latin hymns, and the transient reflection in England of the hymns of Germany.

II. Hymn-singing before the Reformation.

There is every reason to believe that sacred songs would form part of the repertory of the old English gleemen. One of the plans of Bishop Aldhelm for the evangelisation of his countrymen was to stand on the bridge as a. gleeman, and mix sacred and secular songs together. The account of Cadmon, the old English Milton, who embraced the monastic habit for the express object of devoting himself to religious poetry (see Bede, B. 4, c. 24) points in the same direction. Scarcely anything however remains to us. The earliest piece of Anglo-Saxon poetry in the hymn which Cadmon composed in his sleep while watching in the stable at night, and which led him to make poetry his vocation. It is given in Sharon Turner's Hist. of the Anglo-Saxons (Bk. 12, cap. 1). In Cuthbert's letter, recounting the death of Bede, there is a short hymn sung by him in his last illness. (Trs. in Sharon Turner, ibid., Bk. 12, cap. 4, and Bede's Eccl. Hist., p. xix., Bohn Series.) In the Latin Hymn of the Anglo-Saxon Church (Surtis Society), there are interlinear glosses of the Latin Hymns. Bp. Aldhelm's Festival is mentioned elsewhere. [Psalms, English, § 111.]

In Grein's Bibliothek der Anglistischen Poesie, there are paraphrases of the Lord's Prayer and Gloria Patri, which are translated in Professor Rawson Lumb's Be Domes Doece (Early Eng. Text Society). These, however, are not hymns, but meditations on the separate clauses for purposes of instruction. It would extend the scope of this article too widely in this and succeeding paragraphs to attempt to indicate hymn material in religious and devotional poetry (e.g. Cadmon's Paraphrase).

No collection of medieval English hymns has yet been published; but the number of ancient Carols, and Hymnus to the B. V. Mary, indicates a practice, which must have been more widely exemplified. (See Preface to Choppe's Carols and Carols of H. V. Mary; Our Lady's Dovery, by Rev. T. E. Bridgett; a hymn to her in Chaucer; and an alliterative hymn in Warton's History of English Poetry.) Mr. Furnivall, in Hymns to the Virgin and Christ (circa 1430), has published some Poems of Christ of great sweetness, especially a "Prayer to Jesus" and "The Love of Jesus," from which copies might be made. In this volume are also metrical renderings of the Creed and Ten Commandments. In Myres Instructions for Parish Priests, and in Canon Simons's Lay-Folks Mass Book, are similar renderings of Pater Noster and Credo. In the latter is also a metrical version of Gloria in Excelsis; and there are metrical devotions that under other circumstances might well be used as hymns. The object of them as they stand is, however, silent devotion during the celebration of Mass. If the medieval literature could be explored, and many more number of vernacular hymns brought together, they would throw additional light on the devotions of the laity of England in those days, to that revealed in these volumes.

III. The Influence of the Latin Hymns

It is not easy to account for the entire omission by our Reformers of those Latin Hymns, which formed an integral part of the Offices which they reproduced in the Book of Common Prayer. They were freely used by Luther, to whom they were endeared in the monastery; and Coverdale, following his precedent, has three pieces formed on "Veni Creator," and another on lux," in his Goostly Psalmes Songs (1539?). There is a letter of Cranmer to Henry VI Works, p. 412, Parker Society, sends a translation of "Salve fe he has made in the same met so that the Latin tune may be kept separation that the king should be to undertake the task of translating pleasant English" than his some reason nothing was done rendering of "Veni Creator." (T. M. rendering by Cosin (see 1) are the only traces of the Latin successive editions of the Book of Prayer. The omission is the n because they were admitted in private devotion, as appears from the Primers. The Primers at the Reformation contain rude tr the Latin hymns: so also do the of the Gospellers and those of But in 1553, just at Edward V new Primer was issued, based on Common Prayer. Both this be immediate predecessors must th through Cranmer's hands; but he to see the change of policy in the Latin hymns, perhaps the result of the influence of Calvin. This Primer has They reappear, however, in Elizabeth (1559), which is a revision of Her books, the original Latin being Horarium (1560); some of the by Praise Praise (1564). The permission to use a "hymn or song" in the Injunctions (1539) contain the introduction of naturalised Latin among other things. But the psalm-singing was masterful the people in the Liturgical Forms put forth for occasions as the reign went on Stern chem is almost an authorized psal The except in a few isolated instances is church party, and in the Romes of devotion, the Latin hymns entered to affect the history for whole period of this article. A notable book in the of England of this sort is A Choice Private Devotions, called The Hum Prayer, &c., by Bp. Cosin (1627), found Horarium of Queen Elizabeth, hymns are new. Some are original; are fresh translations from the Latin, all at time of Holy Communion part of "I Sion." It is in this book that the Veni Creator," after Psalms of 1662 in the Ordinal, first appears. The translation of "Jam lucis" ("Now that the star doth arise") was afterwards taken in Playford's musical edition of Stern and Hopkins. There is something of feeling of Ken's great hymn in some of phrases of the translations from the Missal and Vesper hymns. In Cranmer's Pr (circa 1546-52) will be found translations of hymns in the Office for the Holy Communion, and of "Vexilla Regis." "Lauda Sion," "D Ilse," and others. Whether these pieces were composed before or after his entrance into the Roman communion seems uncertain.
IV. German Influence at Reformation.

The English hymn-singing at the Reformation was the echo of that which roused the enthusiasm of Germany under Luther. The most notable proof of this is found in Coverdale’s Goodly Psalms and Spiritual Songs, and in his own translation of the psalms, which has been the base of all subsequent English psalm settings. He did not attempt to translate the psalms literally, but rather to render the sentiment of the original in words that were as suitable to the English tongue as possible. The result was a very musical and expressive version of the psalms, which was eagerly adopted by the English people. It is still in use today, and is considered one of the finest examples of early English poetry.

V. Liturgical Paraphrases.

The origin of liturgical paraphrases is lost in the fog of early history. They were not used in the Church until the 17th century, and the first attempts were made in England. The work of William Tyndale was the first important attempt to translate the Bible into English. His translation of the New Testament was published in 1526, and was immediately adopted by the English Church. It was the first time that the English people had seen the words of the Bible in their own language. The result was a revolution in religious thought, and a revolution in English literature. The Tyndale translation was rapidly adopted by the people, and it was soon followed by other translations, including those of John Wycliffe and John Hus.

The first attempt to translate the psalms into English was made by Thomas Cranmer, the Archbishop of Canterbury. His translation was published in 1549, and it was the first attempt to render the psalms into English in a way that was suitable for use in worship. Cranmer’s translation was followed by many others, including those of John Bale, John Calvin, and John Foxe.

The most important attempt to translate the psalms into English was made by John Chrysostom. His translation was published in 1551, and it was the first attempt to render the psalms into English in a way that was suitable for use in worship. Chrysostom’s translation was followed by many others, including those of John Foxe, John Bale, and John Calvin.

The first attempt to render the Bible into English in a way that was suitable for use in worship was made by John Wycliffe. His translation was published in 1382, and it was the first attempt to render the Bible into English in a way that was suitable for use in worship. Wycliffe’s translation was followed by many others, including those of John Bale, John Calvin, and John Foxe.

VIII. The first Hymn Book. George Wither.

A great interest attaches to Hymns and Songs of the Church (1623), by George Wither. It is the earliest attempt at an English hymn-book, and we might almost think that, but for the Puritan reaction that set in immediately afterwards, the development of original hymns might have begun in the time of the Stuarts, within the Church, instead of being delayed a century, to originate among the Nonconformists. Wither obtained a patent from the King, that his book should be bound up with every copy of the Metrical Psalms, and he evidently hoped that it would be used concurrently with them after morning and evening prayer, though "not as part of the Church's Liturgy." But the history of the book proved just the same as that of his subsequent version of the Psalms (1632). [Psalms, English.] Instead of fame and profit, it brought him persecution and loss, notwithstanding the approval of the book by many members of Convocation. The first part of this book consists of the usual paraphrases of Scripture, including the Song of Solomon; the second is a series of hymns for all the Festivals, Holy Days (St. George's Day among them), Public Deliverances, Holy Communion, Ember Weeks, Seasonable Weather, Plenty, Peace, Victory, Deliverance from Public Sickness, and the King. Some of the poems in it were set to music by Orlando Gibbons. In 1641, many of these hymns were republished, with a few alterations, in the Hallelujah, Britain's Second Remembrance, which was dedicated to the Long Parliament. No music is attached, but tunes are indicated at the head of the pieces, where they diverge from the usual metres of the Old Version. It is a book of Hymns for all sorts of times, states, and seasons, embracing a great circle of incidents, some of a minute character (e.g., when washing; On a boat; Sheep-shearing; House-warming; For lovers, Tailors, Jailor, Prisoner, Member of Parliament). Signs of the time, when the balance of power between King and Parliament hung so even and the great struggle was opening, will be easily seen in many hints and allusions. It is the work of a wanderer on the border of the two camps. The general tone of it is one of simple practical piety, the language is of studied simplicity, and often of melodious grace; but much of it is not above the doggerel level of the Old Version, especially in the hymns peculiar to the Hallelujah itself. A list of Wither's best pieces:

Hymns: Eusebius Brittan, 3rd ed., and some choice specimens (Book of Praise) are given by Lord Selborne. There is too great a preponderance of meditation and meditative for general use. The very tender and sweet "Rocking Hymn" is only a lullaby. The Saint's Hymn is found in Thring's Coll. (Hy. 21), "Behold the sun that seemed but now." For the finest—a noble lyric—is "Come, oh come, with pious lays" (Hallel, Bk. 1, Hy. 1). Wither suffered as a poet, first from his political misfortunes, and afterwards from his rustic simplicity. His place in poetry is like that of Cowper, a reaction from the fantastic and artificial style to that of natural expression, singing of the wooded-land, the country and the home. As such, it earned the contempt of Pope (“wretched Withers”) and Swift (Wither and Dryden are “Bavius and Merrin”) and the sympathy of Southey and others. The first to do him justice was Percy. (See Percy’s Reliques, “Shall I, wasting in despair?”) [Wither George.]

IX. Hymns of Herrick, Henry Vaughan, Jeremy Taylor, &c.

The attention of the Puritans was engrossed in the Metrical Psalms. The so-called Hymns of Milton do not come under the definition of this work. The few hymns that were composed are consequently for the most part from royalist pens. Crashaw’s belong more to the hymns of Latin origin, and are useless in their present shape. Herrick’s Noble Numbers (pub. 1647, see Grosart’s edition of Robert Herrick) contain hymns or hymn material. The carols for Christmas, The New Year, and the Circumcision, and a Star Song—all sung before Charles at Whitehall—are examples. His “Litanies to the Holy Ghost”—“In the hour of my distress,” several verses of which are found in some of his hymn books (e.g. Ch. H. 299), is full of tenderness; but the jocund humour of the man oddly intrudes on even his gravest thoughts in some of the stanzas (e.g. “When the artless doctor sees, No one hopes but of his fees.” &c., “When his death and his pill. . . . meet for nothing but to kill.” &c.). In Henry Vaughan’s Silex Scintillans (1650–55, see Grosart’s edition) there are many stanzas which might be adapted to personal hymns for private use, and may be pressed by freer and higher music. Two are admitted by Mr. Thring in his Coll. “Beyond the veil” is of etheeral beauty. Jeremy Taylor’s Festival and Pentiemtial Hymns, 1654–5 (see Grosart’s edition), are praised by Heber, and are characteristic of his genius; but it can scarcely be said that the poetic form adds anything to their eloquence, and they are otiose rather than hymns, probably not intended for public use. The Advent Hymn—“Lord, come away, Why dost Thou stay?”—and that on Charity, “Full of mercy, full of love,” are however admitted in Heber’s Hymns, 1827. The Hymn on The Purification is one of the most regular and the best, and might perhaps be remodelled without losing its crystal lustre.

[Persons in search of the grotesque may be amused by the 3 three hymns composed by John Goodwin, William Barton, and others. Barton paraphrased Debret’s Song as a Thanksgiving for the battle of Worcester, and gives the congregation the alternative of singing Fairfax or Cromwell instead of Barak. “Gunmen” instead of “archers,” &c.]

X. Hymns of Crossman, Austin, Ken, &c.

The Restoration was not favourable to the production of Nonconformist hymns. The Quaker and the Baptist held even psalm-singing a carnal ordination; the raising of a tune among other congregations is mentioned by the Convocation Act was a signal to the constables. In 1664 was published a series of nine poems by Samuel Crossman. Prebendary and afterwards Dean of Bristol, entitled “The Young Man’s Meditation” (reprinted by D. Sedgwick), which is worth attention. The 5th poem is good, the 7th, on Resurrection, “My life’s a shade” (see of Praise, e. l.), is equally so. Then beautiful is the 8th, in two parts, on “Heaven,” from which two well-known hymns, “Sweet place, sweet place alone,” and “J.” salem on high” (see Ch. H. 394, J. H. Bk. 942, have been taken. The view of the Heavenly City and the delight sadness which it inspires are portrayed with equal delicacy; and the crisp rhythm, longing refrain, and a trace of Puritan feel add to its charm. In Henry More’s Dis Dialogues (1667) are seven long hymns the doctrines of the Great Festivals, written on the same plan—a narrative port succeeded by a practical application. We made subsequent use of them; though not void of devotion, they are rather coldly didactic. In 1668 appeared The Devotions in the Anti-Way of Offices, by that saintly son of Roman Church, John Austin, which afterwards edited for Anglican use by Hiel Dorrington, and others. Besides one or adaptations of Latin Hymns from Crashaw, they contain original hymns appended to offices; and few compositions of this kind can exhibit a nobler sense of simple love to the Saviour and a bird-like praise. The 6th Hymn, “Hark, soul, how everything” (Bk. of Praise, 26), the 82nd, “Lord, now the time returns” (51 in Bk. of Praise, 189), are perhaps the choicest. But the rest in the Book of Praise are in the same gentle strain, and the selection could be enlarged. At least as early as 1674 were composed by Ken’s three unique hymns, which perfectly represent his strong, and hardy music. The pieces verses of our hymn-books contain little conception of the originals. In matter of form, the harmonious strengths familiar stanzas scarcely prepare us for the abruptness and even weakness of the omitted. As regards substance, “The Midnight Hymn,” with its Light of God illuminating the darkness (ento in Thring’s Coll. it has scarcely a place in our books; it is yet in “The Morning Hymn” that the manly piety, the inviolate science and energy of duty, which George Eliot accentuates in Adam Bede, and little from “The Evening Hymn” the spirit of serene humility and trust; but in Ken this is but the lower side of a realization, which his praise is mingling with the signs of heaven, and life is only because overset by the presence of God. It is the intensity of this spiritual imagination—and not the thoughts, which are found in many similar hymns, as the natural suggestion of the time, and even less the language which is bare of imagery, and only distinguished by the restraint of rhyme for direct massive prose—that lifts these hymns to an angel level reached by no other English hymns. The four volumes of Ken’s poetical Works have many passages full of pathos, and breathe his habitual spirit of his devotion. The Annals and Preparations for Death are very touching, read with the context of the sufferings they solved; and we turn eagerly in search of one to The Hymns for the Festivals. But they are the poems of old age: the natural force is abating; th
XI. Mason's Songs of Praise.

Attention has been drawn late, partly through their republication by Mr. Sedgwick, to the Songs of Praise by John Mason (1683). They ran through many editions in their day, and influenced Watts and the Wesleys, who grafted some of the verses into their stanzas. Beneath the crudity and sameness of the verse there is a robust thought and great vigour of praise. There is an ancient quaintness about his "horsess" phrases, and yet his familiarity with the Platonic school of Divinity, and one or two classical quotations, point to a scholarly training. They can seldom be used as they stand, not only from their length and want of unity, but from their unequal merit. But the punning dexterity of single verses is the temptation to selection and combination; more over for admission into a collection of religious poetry than hymnals. His lines in the 11th Song, "Man's life is a book of history, The leaves thereof are days," are an instance. His 24th Song supplies the base of the 117th hymn in the Sarum Hymnal (1587), adapted probably by Keble; "A living stream as crystal clear." A revision of the 16th Song (excepting the first and the 8th Psalms, by his friend Mason) were attached to the Songs of Praise in 1693 and subsequent editions. They are of much lower merit than the original, which has a feeling of the dependence and of the withdrawing of God's favour, which characterizes them with the other Hymns; and there seem to be echoes of his 13th Hymn, "Ah! Lord. Ah! Lord, what have I done," in Mason, "Ah! Lord, what have I done." (See Mason, John.)

XII. The first Baptist Hymn Book. Hymns adopted in Non-conformist Worship.

At the close of the 17th century, the 18th century was the Baptist Congregation of Benjamin Keach, the Seeker, a man of considerable knowledge of the Scriptures and the Bible. He had written and published many books, and was the publisher of several sermons. His book was called "The Seeker's Treasury of Spiritual Food," which was a collection of sermons and other religious writings. The book was very popular, and was widely read by Christians of all denominations. It contains a wealth of scriptural quotations and practical advice, and is still read by many as a valuable resource for spiritual growth.

The Breach Reconciled. The breach between the two congregations had been healed, and the book was published.

XIII. Isaac Watts.

Notwithstanding the contempt with which his name is often mentioned, and the faint praise of his hymns by Dr. Johnson, few have left such a solid contribution to our best hymns as Isaac Watts (see Book of Praise, and Lord Selborne's article in the Encyc. Brit., 9th ed. Hymns), and none has so deeply impressed himself on their structure. Approaching him from the past, his advance beyond Keach, Barton, and Mason is immense. Inheriting from the tradition of the metrical Psalms a healthy strength of thought and a habit of broad and judicious praise, impressed through the paraphrases with the necessity of a rich Scripture groundwork, and supplied with a wide range of subjects by his immediate predecessors, he is in his best pieces gifted with a soft richness of diction, and a few vigorous rhythm (especially in his l.m.); the distinctive characteristic of his unaffected piety—a very remarkable one in such a suffering life—being a pervading joyousness and buoyant faith, lighting up even his saddest hymns. His faults are boulается and doggrel. Turgid epithets and tawdry ornaments were the fashion of the time; and they probably advertise the time. In literary circles, as they Still is, in a parallel case, The New Version. No one that has studied the hymns that preceded him, will wonder that Watts was indifferent about doggrel. The Metrical Versions of the Psalms, from Sternhold to Tate and Brady, were full of it; so were Mason, Keach, and the rest: and the ignorance of the people, the decay of music, the slow singing, the habit of giving out the verses line by line, were almost insuperable obstacles to continuous grace of expression. It is due to Watts to point out how frequently in his preface he speaks of the "fetter" of "the old narrow metres," the necessity of giving each line by itself a complete sense, and of "sinking it to the level of a whole congregation," as the accepted restraints under which he wrote; nor, though he strove to catch the ear of the world of letters, did he ever sacrifice to this object the edification of the people, to whom he ministered. It will be found that just in those pieces, where he is conscious of a refined audience on the one side and the unlettered congregation on the other, Watts's best work appears. With one or two exceptions (e.g. "He dies, the Friend of Sinners dies," Hor. Lyr.); neither the Horae Lyricae (1705), addressed to the literary world alone, nor, on the other hand, the sermoniclike hymns attached to his London Sermons (1721-24), which are tamed down to the congregational level, and least of all the Divine and Moral Songs for Children (1715), contain his finest pieces; but his Hymns (1707-9) and Psalms (1719. See Psalms. English, § xv.), both of which were composed for the primary use of the people, yet with some hope that they might allure a finer taste.

But Watts's place in this history is to be estimated not only by the pieces he has left us, but by his enduring influence on the structure of our hymns. This influence is exhibited not in the use of the old metres, which are a heritage of the metrical Psalms, but in that compact and balanced form—what Montgomery calls "having a beginning, middle, and end"—which characterizes a large section of our hymns, and which, though an English specialty not greatly regarded in the hymns of antiquity, Montgomery lays down as essential. There is very little of this sense of proportion of parts and central unity in the hymns that precede Watts: but it is very perceptible in him; and the demand for it has steadily grown in strength since. It is curious to note that it originated probably not so much from artistic requirements as from the slow singing, which limited the number of verses, the clerk's practice of skipping and combining verses in the metrical Psalms, and the preacher's habit of condensing into a hymn, given out at the close, the substance or application of his sermon. (See also Watts, Isaac.)

The fullest representation of Watts is naturally found in The New Congregational Hymn Book. But that in The Book of Praise is also large. We can only note "Come we that love the Lord" (Hymns, Bk. 2, 30), "Why should the children of a King" (ibid., Bk. 1, 144), as examples of simplicity; the well-known "Come let us join our cheerful songs" (ibid., Bk. 1, 82), and the fine hymn of evangelical praise, "Join all the glorious Names" (ibid., Bk. 1, 130), as specimen of Scriptural richness; several hymns of Death, the finest, spite of its ruggedness, being, "Do flesh and nature dread to die" (Sermons, 43): "My God, how endless is Thy love!" (Hymns, Bk. 1, 81), as a specimen of warmth and softness; and the masterpiece of impassioned contemplation, "When I survey the wondrous cross" (Hymns, Bk. 3, 7. [For Psalms see Psalms. English, § xv.]

XIV. P. Doddridge.

The hymns of Philip Doddridge were so plainly the immediate progeny of Watts, that a short notice of them may be given as the close of this article. His hymns were sung as the enforcement of his sermons, given out probably from the pulpit line by line. They were first published (1755), after his death, by his pupil, Job Orton. They have not the power or the richness of Watts, and a deficiency of ear gives them thickness of tone. But they excel Watts in simplicity, serenity, and tenderness; there is a sweetness in his c.m. which Watts rarely equals, while his l.m. is often cold and artificial. His 43rd, however, "Eternal Source of every joy," and 310th, "Lord of the Sabbath," have much of the melody of Watts: nor has Watts any hymn so perfect in the combined qualities of feeling, structure, melody, and diction as Doddridge's 171st, "My God, and is Thy table spread." The 363rd, "Interval of grateful shade," has a lustrous delicacy, but is a lyric rather than a hymn. His 219th, "Hark! I the glad sound," which is in every hymn-book, is one of the purest examples of his style. The exquisitely tender 246th, "Do nor I love Thee, oh my Lord," is too spiritual for common use. A full selection of Doddridge's hymns will be found in the New Cong. H. Bk., and in the Book of Praise. [See also Doddridge, Philip.] [H. L. B.]

Ennodius, Magnus Felix, was b. at Arles, circa 478, and was connected with several Romans of distinction. Losing his property at an early age through the invasion of the Visigoths, he went to Milan, where he ENQUIRE, YE PILGRIMS. P. Doddridge. [Invitation.] This is No. 137 of his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1755, in 6 st. of 4 1., and No. 133 in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839. It is based on Jer. 1. 5. In most American hymnals it is given as "Enquire, ye pilgrims," &c. In the Church Pastoral, Boston, U.S., 1864, 4th ed., it is given only as "Enquire, ye pilgrims," and for use in the order named as "Come, let us join our souls to God," for the admission of Church members. [J. J.]

Enthroned on high, Almighty Lord. [C. Wesley. [1744.] This hymn, although of a penitential character, was once sung as a "Triple Amen" in Hymns, and Sacred Psalms, 1739, 32. In the W. Bk., 1780, it was given as a "Triple Amen," section II. (No. 104), and as such it was used as a penitential hymn in several places. In the Church of England, and America, it is entitled "Day of Rest," in various places. In some of the hymnals of America, it is entitled "A Penitential Hymn," in the British, and American, hymn.

Ephesians, St. John of Damascus. [St. Paul.] This is the 14th Ode in the Canon of St. Paul in the office of SS. Peter and Paul, June 30, in the Menologium. It is given in Pitra's Hymn, Grec., 1877. Dr. Little- dale's tr., "Against the Church of Jesus," is good, and close to the original with the omission of the Theotokion (address to the B.V.M.). The tr. was 1st pub. in the People's H., 1867, No. 237, and signed "F." It is appointed for the "Conversion of St. Paul." [J. J.]

Ephrem the Syrian. [Syriae Hymn.] "Epi τύς θείας φύλαξι." [Anastasius Hymn.]

Epiphanius Domino canamus gloriam. [Epiphany.] This Sequence occurs in a ms. of Sequences (circa 1000) in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, No. 775, f. 140. It is also in a Winchester ms. of the 13th century, now at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and an 11th century ms. in the British Museum (Harl. 1061, f. 251 b). In the Sarum Missal it is the Sequence for the Feast of the Epiphany only. In the Hereford Missal it is appointed for the Sunday in the Octave of the Epiphany, and for the Sunday in the Octave of the Epiphany. In the York Missal it is divided into three parts: (1) "Epiphanius Domini," (2) "Balaam de quo vaticinavit," and (3) "Magi sibi stella." The first is to be said on the Feast of the Epiphany, the second on the first day after; the third on the second day after, and so on, to the Octave, when the entire Sequence has to be sung. If however the 2nd or 3rd part should fall upon a Sunday, then it gave place to the proper Sequence for the "Translation of St. William the Archbishop," the Festival of that day. Text in reprints of the Sarum, Hereford, and York Missals, and kneeling, No. 27. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Sing we in triumphal gladness. By R. F. Littledale, written for and 1st pub. in the People's H., 1867, No. 45, and signed "A. L. P." It is in 7 st. of 6 1.

2. O come and praise with chant and song. By E. H. Plumptre, contributed to the Hymnary, 1872, in 6 st. of 1., and appointed for use at the Holy Communion during the Epiphany.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. All glory to the Lord's Epiphany. C. B. Pearson. The Sarum Missal in English, 1868.

Ephesians, St. Gregory of Nazianzus. "A hymn at night, after failure to keep vow," found in various editions of his Works, and in the Anth. Grec. Car. Christ., p. 28, 1871. From this latter work Mr. Chatfield made his tr., "O Thou, the Word of truth divine," and pub. the same in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876, p. 121, in 3 st. of 4 1. The original dates 324-382. Ere another Sabbath's close. [Sunday.] We have traced this popular hymn to the Missionary Minstrel, a little 8vo col., edited by Dr. P. M. and pub. by Nutt, Nov. 5, 1824, a much enlarged edition being issued a few years later. It reads:—

1. Ere another Sabbath's close,
   Ere again we seek repose,
   Lord, our song ascends to Thee,
   At Thy feet we bow the knee.

2. For the mercies of the day,
   For this rest upon our way,
   Thanks to Thee alone be given,
   Lord of earth and King of heaven.

3. Cold our services have been,
   Mingled every prayer with sin;
   But Thee canst and wilt forgive,
   By Thy grace alone we live.

4. One there is at Thy right hand,
   Angels bow at His command;
   Yet He suffered in our stead,
   And His wounds our pardon plead.

5. By the merits of Thy Son,
   By the victory He won,
   Pardoning grace and peace bestow,
   Whilst we journey here below.

6. Whilst this thorny path we tread,
   May Thy love our footsteps lead;
   As we strain our hearts to God,
   May we rest with Thee at last.

7. Let these earthen Sabbaths prove Sweet constancy of joys above;
   While their steps Thy pilgrims bend
   To that rest, which knows no end.

It has the initials appended, "O. P.,” in common with about half of the hymns in the volume. One of the first, if not the first, to adopt it for congregational use was Baptist W. Noel, who included it with the omission of st. iv. and v. in his Selection, in 1832 (sometimes dated 1833 in error). From this fact arose the mistake of attributing it, at one time, to Baptist W. Noel, and at another, to his brother, Gerard T. Noel. In 1833 the same stanza was repeated in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, and subsequently in other collections. Its use in all English-speaking countries is most extensive. From this hymn a cento beginning with st. i., “For the mercies of the day,” has come into extensive use in America, which is sometimes ascribed to "J. Montgomery, 1853,” as in Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872. Its correct designation is "O. P., Missionary Minstrel, 1826.”

Ere Christ ascended to His throne. B. Beddome. [Adult Baptism.] Pub. in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1817-18, No. 596, in 5 st. of 4 L, and headed "The Commission." In addition to its limited use in its full form, it is also abbreviated in some American collections. In the Psalmist, 1843, Bapt Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, st. iii.-v. are given as "Blest Saviour, how we love the day"; and in the Sabbath H. & Tane Bk., N. Y., 1838 (Bapt. edition), the same stanza as "Dear Saviour, we Thy will obey." These arrangements are not in use in G. Britain. [J. J.]

Ere God had built the mountains. W. Cooper. [Divine Wisdom.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 52, in 4 st. of 8 L, and based on Prov. viii. 22-31. It is found in several collections, both old and new, in G. Britain, and is also in use in America. A rendering into Latin, "Præsanum Deus altos montes," by R. Bingham, was given in his Hymno. Christ. Lat., 1871, p. 251. [J. J.]

ERHALT UNS, HERR

Ere I [we] sleep, for every favour. J. Cennick. [Evening.] Pub. in his Sacred Hys. for the Children of God, &c., 1741, No. 14, in 7 st. of 4 L, as the second of two hymns for evening. It was repeated in later editions of the same work, in Whitefield's Coll., 1754; in M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760; the early editions of Lady Huntingdon's Coll., and others of the old collections, and is also well known to modern hymnals, but usually in an abbreviated form, and sometimes as "Ere we sleep," &c. Orig. text in Stevenson's Hys. for the Ch. & Home, 1873, with the omission of st. vii., which reads:—

"So whosoever in death or sorrow,
   Let me raise With the wise,
   Counted in their number." [J. J.]

Ere mountains reared their forms sublime. Harriet Auber. [God eternal—Man passing away.] Appeared in her Spirit of the Psalms, 1829, in 4 st. of 4 L. In the American hymn-books it is given in its original L. M. form, as in Hedge and Huntington's Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, 1835, and several later Hymnals; and in a peculiar form to suit the music adopted in Church Pastoral, Boston, 1864. From Miss Auber and H. F. Lyte having both pub. works with the title The Spirit of the Psalms, this hymn has sometimes been attributed to Lyte in error. [J. J.]

Ere the blue heavens were stretch'd abroad. J. Watts. [Divinity and Humanity of Christ.] 1st pub. in his H. & S. Songs, 1709, Bk. i. No. 2, in 6 st. of 4 L. In addition to its somewhat extensive use in its original form in G. Britain and America, it is also given in an altered form as, "Before the heavens were spread abroad," in Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865-72, and others. [J. J.]

Ere the words of peace and love. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Holy Matrimony.] Written in 1869, and pub. in his H. Companion, 1870. It is also in his The Two Brothers, and Other Poems, 1871, and appointed to be sung after the blessing, "At the beginning," &c. From Bp. Bickersteth's Notes to the H. Comp. we gather that it was written for that collection. [J. J.]

Erhalt uns, Herr, bei demem Wort. M. Luther. [Peace and Orthodoxy.] This hymn was probably written 1541. In that year a service of prayer against the Turks was held at Wittenberg, for which Luther prepared a special office, in which most of the music was arranged for the boys of the choir. It was printed in broadsheet form at Wittenberg, 1542; appeared in Low German, in the Magdeburg G. B., 1542; and then in High German in Klug's Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1548. In Klug it was entitled "A hymn for the children to sing against the two archenemies of Christ, and His Holy Church, the Pope and the Turks." Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 26, in 3 st. of 4 L, and Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geist. Lieder, 1854, p. 44. Additional stanzas from various sources have often been appended to this hymn, the most popular being those by Justus Jonas, probably written in 1545, against the Council of Trent. These are:—iv. "Ihr Anschlag, Herr, zu nichts mach"; v. "So werden wir Erskine, Ralph, was a. of Henry Erskine, who was Rector of Cornhill, Northumberland, before the Act of Uniformity in 1662, and after the Revolution of 1688 was Parish minister of Chirnside, Berwickshire. He was b. at Moneylaws, Northumberland, March 15, 1683, his father being then in exile from Scotland for taking part in conventicles. He entered the University of Edinburgh in 1699, was licensed to preach in 1709, in 1711 ordained second minister of the Abbey Church, Dunfermline, and became first minister in 1716. Joining in 1737 with the "Four Brethren," who, protesting against the action of the General Assembly on Patronymics, had been loosed from their charges by the Commission in 1735 and had formed themselves into a people to pray for at Garnie Bridge, near Kinross, Dec. 5, 1733, thus founding the Associate Church, he was with them and three others cited to, and deposed by, the General Assembly of 1740. In 1740 the majority of his congregation seceded with him and built him a church in Queen Anne Street, Dunfermline, in which he continued to minister till his death. He died, however, cease to preach in his turn in the Abbey Church till after May 6, 1746. He d. at Dunfermline, Nov. 6, 1752. His published works are included in his Sermons and other Practical Works (Glas., 1764-1765), the complete folio ed. in 2. vol. ed. by John Newlands (his son-in-law), contains a short memoir, 141 sermons, and (1) Gospel Sentences, or, Spiritual Songs. These Gospel Sentences, of which the 2nd and complete ed. appeared in Edinburgh, 1736, and the 4th finally revised, in London, 1741, though homely, enjoyed great popularity, and did much good in Scotland in the last century. (2) A Paraphrase upon the Song of Solomon. In this, first pub. in Edinburgh, 1736, the "Song" is spiritualized at great length. (3) Scripture Songs. These are in 2 Books. The Old Testament Songs are (1) 14 Songs from Genesis to Job; (2) Job's Hymns, 168; (3) The Song of Solomon, complete; (iv.) 21 Songs from Ecclesiastes, Isaiah, and Jeremiah; (v.) Lamentations, complete; (vi.) 6 Songs from the Minor Prophets. The New Testament Songs are (1.) 17 Songs from the Gospels; (ii.) 24 Songs from the Epistles; (iii.) 16 Songs from the Revelation. Of these parts the 2nd (Glas., 1783), the 3rd (Edinb., 1783), and the 4th (Edinb., 1789), the Old Testament, were the first pub. separately. The remainder, pub. at Glasgow, in 1784 as Scripture Songs, in 3 Books, were undertaken by request of the Associate Synod, in 1784, but not being pub. before Erskine's death never came into Church use. Many are altered from Watts, and some from the Psalms and Paraph. of 1714. (4) Miscellanea Poetica. These are 3 English and 2 Latin elegies, a poem on the Civil Magistrate and Religion, and a Epistle. Smothing Spiritualized is given at the end of the Gospel Sentences (see Scottish Hymnody, v.)

A number of pieces by Erskine were included, more or less altered, in the Mosanavian hymnbooks. The only one found in a modern hymnal which is well known is an amended, "As a mother's care, what can afford," and another not now in C. L. under: "Aurora veils her toy face."

Ea giengen trew frewlach also fr6. [Easter.] A 13th cent. Easter carol on the visit of the Holy Women to the Sepulchre on Easter morning. It is given by Wackernagel, ii. p 390, in 10 st. of 4 l. with "Alleluia" from a paper ms. of 1516 now at Heidelberg. Hoffmann von Fallersleben, 1861, p. 84, has a text reading "Es gingen drei frühlings," and in 13 st. The only tr. is "There went three damsel before my day," by Miss Winckworth, 1869, p. 85.

Es ist ein Ros (Rosa) entsprungen.

[Christmas.] Wackernagel, ii. p. 925, gives two forms, the first in 25 st. of 7 l. from the Spieler G. B. (R. C.), 1600 (Baun.16, i. p. 156, cites it as in the ed. of 1599), the second in 6 st. from the Andernach G. B. (R. C.), 1608. In his Kleine G. B., 1890, No. 8, he gives at st. v., xxxi, from the Spieler, with the fine melody found there. He thinks it was originally a 15th or 16th cent. Christmas or Twelfth Night Carol in the diocese of Trier.

It is founded on St. Luke 1, ii, and on Isaiah 1, 2. It interprets Isaiah's "Shout out of the stock of Jesse" not as our Lord Jesus Christ, but as the Virgin Mary. The only tr. is "A spotless Rose is blowing," a tr. of st. i, ii, of the Spieler, by Miss Winckworth, 1869, p. 85.

Es ist nicht schwer ein Christ zu sein. C. F. Richr. [Christianity.] Ist appeared as No. 228 in Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, in 8st. of 4 l.

It is a companion to his earlier hymn, "Es kostet viel ein Christ zu sein" (1st pub. as No. 659 in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704; but not tr. into English), and with it was republished in his Erbauende Betrachtungen vom Ursprung und Adel der Seele, Halle, 1718, where the earlier is entitled "On the seriousness and difficulty of True Christianity," and the later "On the Easiness and Lovableness of True Christianity. They are given as companion hymns in the U. S. L. S., 1851, Nos. 305, 306, both in 8 st. The only tr. is in C. U. of "Es ist nicht schwer," is:

Tis not a [too] hard, too high an aim. By Moses Browne. Included in The Excellency of the Knowledge of Jesus Christ, ec., Lond., 1772. This work is a tr. of a treatise by J. L. Zimmermann (Die allgemeine Erkenntniss Jesu Christi), pub. at Halle in 1732, in which the hymn is introduced with a Latin version by Zimmermann. Browne's tr. of this hymn is very free, and is in 8 st.; st. i, vi, vii, being of 12, ii, v., of 8, and viii. of 4 1. It had previously been contributed to the Christian's Magazine, April, 1782, p. 182, where it is given as "Luther's Hymn, in eight regular rules," and begins "Tis not too much an essay, the text of 1762 was repeated, with variations, as No. 369, in A Coll. of Ps. & Hymns, York, R. Spencer, 1780, and in the 8th ed., 1806, of Moses Browne's Sunday Thoughts. The text of 1772, however, is that which has come down, mainly in cantos, to modern hymnals. It is given in full in Miss Warner's H. for the Ch. Multuid, N. Y., 1856 (ed. 1861, p. 568), and in Collyer's Coll., 1812, Nos. 853-855. Besides appearing under its original first line, it is also found as follows:

1. The promis'd part in Christ to claim (st. 1, altered), in J. Bickersteth's Ps. and Hymns, 1832, No. 490; E. Bickersteth's Christ. Psal., 1833, and E. H. Bickersteth's Ps. and Hymns, 1845.

2. Be strong, my heart; be thou thy aim (st. 1, alt.) in Moody's Ch. H. Bk., 1826, No. 314.

3. Nature will raise up all her fair (st. 1, 1, 8), in Nettheim's American Village Hymns, 1826, No. 395.

4. Act but the infant's gentle part (st. 1), in J. Cowen's Bible H. Bk., 1845, No. 83.

5. The sovereign Father, good and kind (st. 1, altered), in Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 854.

6. The gentle sire, the best of friends (st. 1, 1), in Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 855.

Thy gracious God, thy best of friends (st. 1, 1, alt.), in Moody's Ch. H. Bk., 1826, No. 314.

Other trs. are: (1) "To be a Christian is not hard," by R. Massie, 1862. (2) "Give me, my child, the Father's grace, thy heart," this begins with st. ii, as No. 351, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1886.

Es kennt der Herr die Seelen. C. F. Richr. [Christ's Own.] In the 2nd Series, 1843, of his Psalter und Harfe, p. 75, in 6 st. of 8 l., founded on ii. Tim. ii, 19, and entitled, "The Lord knoweth with His Own." Included as No. 1496 in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1890 (1865, No. 1561). The tr. in C. U. is:

Knoweth all His people. A good and full tr. by Mrs. Findlater, in the 4th Series, 1862, of the H. L. L., p. 25 (1884, p. 196), entitled, "The Little Flock." It was given in full as No. 439, in the New App., 1869, to the S. C. K. Ps. & Hymns. Included in Hellico's Coll., 1867, omitting st. v., and in the Uppingham and Sherborne School H. Bk., 1874, omitting st. ii, iii; in Stevenson's H. for Ch. and Home, 1873, st. i., iv, v, form No. 75, slightly altered after, "God knoweth all His people."

Another tr. is, "The Lord His people all," by R. Massie, 1864, p. 63.

Es reden und träumen die Menschen viel. [Hope.] By Johann Christoph Friedrich von Schiller, b. Nov. 10, 1759, at Marbach, Württemberg, d. May 9, 1805, at Weimar. This little poem, hardly to be called a hymn, is one of his "Gedichte der dritten Periode," is entitled Hoffnung and is included in his Werke, Cotta, 1874, vol. i, p. 22, in 3 st. of 6 l.

The only tr. in C. U. is:

The world may change from old to new, a free tr. in 3 st. of 8 l., included as No. 127 in W. J. Fox's Hymns & Anthems, 1841, marked as "Sarah F. Adams," but in later eds. as paraphrased from Schiller. This is repeated in E. Contrauld's Coll., 1860, G. Griffilien's Selections, 1875, and in America, in the Book of Hymns, 1846-48, Hedge & Huntington's Coll., 1853, &c.

Among the trs. not in C. U. we note (1) "We children of men, we speak and dream," in Sparrow Lea, Lond., 1877, p. 57. (2) "We speak with our lips, and dream in the soul," in Lord Lytton's Poems & Ballads of Schiller, 1844, vol. i, p. 74. (3) "Of better and brighter days to come," in E. Bickersteth's Psalms of Schiller, 1851, p. 322. (4) "Men speak much and dream of a better time," in W. W. de la Priest's German Lyrical, 1854, p. 32. (5) "All men to speak and to dream are prone," in Dr. H. W. Dulcken's Book of German Songs, 1856, p. 376. (6) "Man talks and dreams that Time will unroll," in Specimens of Schiller's Minor Poems, Lond., 1861. (7) "Men talk with their lips and dream with their soul," in Dr. G. Macdonald's Exquisites, 1854, p. 122. (8) "Of brighter and happier days to come," by J. D. Kellwell, in English Lyrics of German Song, 1857, p. 116.

Es spricht der Unweisen Mund wohl. M. Luther. [Ps. xiv.] 1st pub. as No. 6 in the Ellicott's ed. of 1854, in 6 st. of 7 l., entitled "The Thirteenth Psalm." Wackernagel, iii. p. 6, quotes it from Rym Enchiridion, Erfurt, 1524, in Schirck's ed. of Luther's Gesam. Lieder, 1854, p. 7, and in the U. S. L. S., 1851, No. 221. The only tr. is in C. U. is:

The mouth of fools saith God confessest. In full in E. Massie's M. Luther's Spiritual Songs, 1854, p. 29, repeated as No. 146 in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880, and adopted by Dr. Bacon, 1884, p. 8.
In his Poetical Works, Lond., Macmillan & Co., 1874, p. 121, it is correctly described as "A Free Paraphrase from the German" which has been included in full in The South Place Coll., 1873, Dr. Martinæus' H. of Praise and Prayer, 1873, and Herder's Cond. Hymn, 1884; and in America, omitting st. ii., in Hedge & Huntington's Coll., 1858, Plymouth Coll., 1855, and Bapt. Bk., 1871.

"Εσωτερικά Λαοῦ, θαυματουργία Εσωτερικής Ἑστίας." John the Monk, commonly regarded as the same as St. John of Damascus (q. v.) According to it as a Canon by St. John it would date from about the middle of the 8th cent. It is a Canon for Christmas Day, and the Odes are sung in service alternatively with those of St. Cosmas's χρυσός γεννάται διδάσκαλος ("Christ is born, Tell forth His fame," q. v.) In common with all festival Canons, Ode ii. is omitted. [See Greek Hymnody, vii. 11.] The remaining eight are—:

Ode i. "Εσωτερικά Λαοῦ, θαυματουργία Εσωτερικής." "The Wonder-working Master saved His race." This is a rendering in blank verse by Dr. Littledale, and was published in his Poems of H. E. Church, 1883, pp. 188-9. W. Chatterton Dix's version in the Lyra Messiahetica, 1864, pp. 57-8, is Dr. Littledale's blank verse turned into 7-6 measure.

Ode iii. Ναίων ὁ τότε ὄρος, ὀνείρων μεταφράσσεσθαι. "Bend to our hymns, Redeemer of Thine own." Blank verse by Dr. Littledale's Office, p. 190, W. Chatterton Dix, the same tr. in 7-6 measure, Lyra Messiahetica, pp. 74-5.

Ode v. Ἐκ μυκτῶν ἱμάτων ἐκπομπής κήρυγμα. "From the night toils of darkened wandering." Littledale's Office, &c., pp. 194-5.

Ode ix. Στρογγύλῳ μὲν ἡμῖν ἐν κατεδρυμαι δομῇ. "Easy it is for us, as free from risk." Littledale's Office, &c., pp. 294-5.

The original Greek text is given in Anth. Græc. Carp. Christ, p. 265, in Daniel, accompanied with a short note; and in Littledale's Office, &c., pp. 53-5. This Canon, 2 A 2.
Eternal and immortal King. P. Doddridge. [Faith.] 1st pub in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 321, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 317. It is based on Heb. xi. 17. In several American collections it is altered to: "Almighty and immortal King," and reduced to 3 st. [J. J.]

Eternal Beam of Light Divine. C. Wesley. [In Affliction.] Appeared in Hymns & Sac. Poems, 1754, p. 144, in 6 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i, p. 128; and again in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 328. It has passed into several collections in G. Britain, America, and other English-speaking countries. In the Boston (U.S.) Unitarian Hymn & Tune Bk. for the Ch. & Home, 1868, it is altered to: "Eternal Son, Thou Light Divine!"

Eternal Lord, from land to land. [Missions.] Appeared in The Missionary Minstrel, London, Nisbet, 1826, edited by "O. P." It is No. 78 in 8 st. of 4 l., and is signed by the Editor. It came early into congregational use, and is still found in several collections, especially in America; the text varying from 4 stanzas in some hymnals to 6 stanzas in others. [J. J.]

Eternal Power, Whose high abode. L. Watte. [Praise to God.] This hymn supplies what the author called "The Conclusion," to his Horæ Lyricæ, 1705. It is in 6 st. of 4 l., and is entitled "God exalted above all Praise." In 1743, J. Wesley included it, with the omission of st. ii., and the alteration of st. i., l. 3, of "length" to "number," and of st. iii., l. 1, from "Thy dazzling beauties whilst he sings," to: "Thee, while the first archangel sings" (a change necessitated by the omission) in Ps. & Hymns, 1743, p. 66. In 1780 this version of the text was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 307, and from the Wes. H. Bk. has passed into numerous collections in all English-speaking countries. According to Methodist usage Dr. J. Beaumont read the lines:

"Thee, while the first archangel sings,
He hides his face behind his wings," to the congregation in Waltham Street Chapel, Hull, on Sunday, Jan. 23, 1853; and during the singing of the second line he fell dead in the pulpit. The incident is given in detail in Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk. and its Associations, 1883, p. 225. [J. J.]

Eternal Source of every joy. P. Doddridge. [New Year.] Dated in the n. m. S. Jan. 1, 1736, and 1st pub. by Job Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 43, in 7 st. of 4 l., and in J. D. Humphrey's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 55. In the n. m. the title is: "God crowning the Year with His goodness:" and in the Hymn, "The Year crowned with the divine goodness." It is usually given in an abbreviated form, the number of stanzas varying in the various hymn-books. Its use in G. Britain is much less extensive than in America. The text was usually adopted from the 1755 book, as in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 193; that, however, in the Methodist S. S. H. Bk. is from the Brooke ed. of Doddridge's Hymns. [See English Hymnology, Early, § ix.] [J. J.]
ETERNAL SPIRIT, BY WHOSE

W. H. Bathurst. [Whitefield.] Appeared in Ps. & Hymns for Public & Private Use, 1831 (3rd ed., 1842), Hs. 57, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "O, the Spirit." Since its introduction into the Bapts. Ps. & Hymns., 1858-80, it has attained to a good position in modern hymn-books in G. Britain. It is also in use in America. Dr. Hattle gives in his Church H. Bk., 1872, the original text, with the date of the Preface [Nov. 13], 1830, and not the date of the publication of the Ps. & Hymns.

J. J.

ETERNAL SPIRIT,come. C. Wesley. [Whitefield.] Appeared in Hymns of Petition and Thanksgiving, for the Promise of the Father, 1760, as No. 4 of the "Hymns for Whitusunday" in 4 st. of 6 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 167). It is in C. U. in two forms:

1. The first form is in 5 st., the additional st. being from No. 16 of the "Hymns for Whitusunday" as above. This arrangement was given in Topcs's Ps. & Hymns, 1776. No. 246.

2. The second form is that in the Wes. Bk. revised ed., 1785, No. 162. It was included in the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk., 1830, in 3 st. The stanzas omitted in 1775 are still in v. J. J.

ETERNAL SPIRIT,Source of truth. T. Cotterill. [Announcement of Salvation desired.] Appeared in his Sel. of Ps. & Hymns, &c., 1810, No. 66, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "For a well-grounded hope of Salvation," st. ii. being based on J. Hat's "Bless'd Spirit of truth, Eternal God" (1759), st. ii. It was repeated in all subsequent editions of his Sel. In modern hymn-books it usually reads, "Eternal Spirit, God of truth," as in Dr. Hattle's Church H. Bk. of N. Y., 1872. In this form it is in extensive use in America. Its use in G. Britain is limited. Stanzas iv. of this hymn is in st. iv. of the cento "Spirit of truth, Thy grace impart," q. v.

J. J.

Eternal Wisdom, Thee we praise, in his Hymns, 1705, as A Song to create into five parts, and repeated in later editions. Centered from this hymn, all beginning with the American hymn-books, are numerous, especially in the example by choosing 12 stanzas in his Ps. & Hymns, &c., 1765, No. 72, and in several other collections. This arrangement was republ. (revised ed. 1785, No. 226), and in several other collections. Usually, however, the stanzas being much shorter than this, from 4 to 6 stanzas being the rule.

J. J.

Eternity, Eternity! How vast and yet how near eternity! How vast and yet how near eternity! (Life contemplated) appeared in his Ps. & Hymns, 1851, No. 259, in 5 st. of 7 l. In the index it is marked as original, but it is in the metre and set to the melody of "O, the Spirit" (q. v.). It is suggested by the German but cannot be called a "tr. of it. It is included (generally from the altered text in Kennedy, 1863, No. 163 in the Hymns & Psalms of G. & C., 1872, No. 1021 (where the accretion to "Daniel Wullfier, 1669, (tr) F. C. Cox, 1841," is an error), J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, &c.; and in America in the Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, College Hymn, 1876, &c. [J. M.]

Eternity, Eternity, That boundless, &c. J. Montgomery. [Eternity.] In the ms., this hymn is dated, "The Mount, December 20, 1836." ("The Mount" was his Sheffield residence), but it did not appear in print, so far as has been traced, until his Original Hymns, 1853, where it is given as No. 238 in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed with a line of one of his most popular hymns, "For ever with the Lord." [J. J.]

Etheridge, Elizabeth Ayton. [Goddin, E. A.]

Euphronios οίς οὐρανός. John the Monk. [Annunciation.] In the Greek Office of the Annunciation of B. V. M., in the Mena. It dates from the middle of the eighth century. The only tr. into English is that in Dr. Littledale's: "Let heaven rejoice and earth be glad." which was 1st pub. in the Church Times, July 2, 1804, as a "Hymn for Lady-Day," and again in the People's Hymn, 1867, No. 244, signed "J. L.," and appointed for the Annunciation of B. V. M. This is one of Dr. Littledale's best trs. from the Greek, and is very close to the original. [J. J.]

Evans, Albert Eubule, B.A., was educated at St. Mary Hall, Oxford (a. 1811), and took Holy Orders in 1814. He held successively the Curacies of Slough, New Windsor, and Walmer; was an Organising Secretary of the S. P. G., Secretary to the South American Missionary Society, and Assistant Examiner to the Civil Service Commissioners; and became Rector of Kirkham, Ilkton, in 1875. Mr. Evans pub. Vistas Pueriles, 1865; The Fourfold Message of Advent, 1870; and some tales. His hymns appeared in the Rev. R. Brown-Bowleik's Sixteen Hymns, &c., 1870; his Select Hymns for Church & Home, 1871; Dr. Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873; and the S. P. C. K. Church Hymn, 1871. These collections include the following:

1. Lo! the voice of Jesus. Voice of Jesus.
2. Look up, look up, my soul, till higher. Upward and onward.
3. Lord, to Thee alone we turn. Lent.
5. O tender thoughts, unomb." S. P. C. K.
6. There is a road that all may tread. Christian Life a Pilgrim's Way.
7. Trust in God and God alone. Trust. [J. J.]

Evans, James Harrington, M.A., s. of the Rev. Dr. Evans, priest-rector of Salisbury Cathedral, was b. April 15, 1798, and educated at Wadham College, Oxford, where he graduated in 1823, and became a Fellow in 1839. Taking Holy Orders in 1808, he remained in the Church of England until 1815, when he succeeded, and became a Baptist minister. He was the minister of John Street Baptist Chapel, Gray's Inn Road, London, for many years. He d. at Stonehaven, Scotland, Dec. 1, 1849. His Memoir and Remains were pub. in 1852. In addition to various prose works, Dialogues on Important Subjects, 1819; Checks to Infidelity, 1840; and others, he also pub.:—

_Hymns, Selected Chiefly for Public Worship_, London, printed by E. Justins, 1818. This ed. contained 179 hymns—several of which he wrote. This ed. was enlarged from time to time; the 2nd ed., 1822, contained 211 hymns; and the last, 1843, 451 hymns. Of his hymns, "Change our portion here," and "Fain not, Christian, though the road," are the best known. Mr. Evans contributed to Carus Wilson's Friendly Visitor of 1827, &c., under the signature of "Alix." [W. R. S.]

_Evans, Evan_ [Glangeirionydd.] Born at Treffire in Caernarvonshire. He is considered the chief Welsh hymn-writer of this century, as Williams was of the last century. He published two books of hymns and tunes between 1829 and 1841. He was Vicar of Rhyl, and d. in 1850. Although his hymn-books and tunes are not in use now, yet many of his hymns are found in every collection in Wales. [W. G. T.]

_Evans, Jonathan_, b. at Coventry in 1748 or 1749. He was the son of a working man, and as a youth was employed in a ribbon manufactory. About 1778 he joined the congregation at Coventry, over which the Rev. G. Burder was pastor. He began preaching at Foleshill, near Coventry, in 1782, and in 1795 he began his stated ministry there, retaining the same to his death on Aug. 31, 1809. Two biographical notices of him appeared in the Evangelical Magazine (Oct. 1809 and March 1847), and also several of his hymns. Two of his hymns appeared in Burder's _Coll._, 1784, and another in the 2nd ed. the same year. His best known hymns are: "Come, Thou soul-transforming Spirit," and "Hark! the voice of love and mercy," q.v. He published no poetical work or collection of hymns. [J. J.]

_Ever fainting with desire._ C. Wesley. _Holiness desired._ Appeared in _Hys. and Sec. Poems_, 1783, &c., in 18 st. of 8 l., and headed, "A Prayer for Holiness." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 274). In 1780 it was included in the _Wes. H. Bk._, No. 344, with the omission of st. iii., vi., and in this form it has been repeated in several hymn-books. The omitted stanzas contain expressions concerning entire holiness, which gave rise to much controversy, and caused J. Wesley to mark them for omission in later editions of the _H. & Sec. Poems._ (P. Works, vol. x. p. 397; and _P. Works_, vol. ii. p. 274). [J. J.]

_Ever patient, gentle [loving], meek._ Charlotte Elliott. _Resolution._ Contributed to _The Invidid a H. Bk._, 1834, No. 97, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus," Phil. ii. 5. It was repeated in subsequent editions of the same. In Longfellow and Johnson's _Book of Hys._, Boston, U. S., 1846, it was given with the omission of st. ii., anonymously, and with the opening line as "Ever patient, loving, meek." The original text was restored in the _Andover Sabbath H. Bk._, 1858. [J. J.]

_Ever round Thy glorious throne._ J. S. B. Monsef. [St. Michael and All Angels] Appeared in his _Spiritual Songs, &c., 1857 (People's ed., 1873, p. 190), in 33 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words: "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation." Heb. i. 14. In 1861, the Rev. F. Pott included it in stanzas in his _Hymns, &c._, No. 221, and divided it into three parts:—i. as above; ii. "From the world's remotest prime"; and iii. "Anchored with wondering gaze." A very effective cento of 6 stanzas might be compiled from this poem. [J. J.]

_Everett, Charles William, M.A._, b. at East Windsor, Connecticut, May 27, 1814, graduated at Trinity College, Hartford, 1838, and took Holy Orders in 1842. He was rector at Hamden, Connecticut, from 1842 to 1875, and also agent for the Society for the Increase of the Ministry. He d. at Waterbury, Connecticut, Jan. 11, 1877 (See _Poets of Connecticut_, 1843). In 1833 he pub. _Visions of Death, and Other Poems_; from this work his popular hymn is taken:—

_Take up thy cross, the Saviour said._ Following Jesus. The original text of this hymn differs very materially from that which is usually found in the hymn-books. The most widely known form of the text is that in _F. A. & M._, where it appeared in 1861. It was copied by the compilers from another collection, but by whom the alterations were made is unknown. The nearest approach to the original is in _H. W._, 1834. Orig. text in Biggs's _English Hymnology_, 1873, p. 24. [F. M. B.]

_Everett, James_, b. at Alnwick, Northumberland, May 16, 1794. His early education was of a very elementary character, and gave little promise of the literary position which he subsequently attained. In his 19th year he underwent a great spiritual change, which led him to become a member of the Wesleyan Society, and subsequently a local preacher and minister of that connection. His work in the ministry, his controversy with the Wesleyans, his eloquence from their pulpit in 1849, and his part in founding the Wesleyan Reform Connection, which, by amalgamation with the Wesleyan Methodist Association in 1857, constituted the United Methodist Free Churches, were matters of Methodist history. Although deeply involved in Methodist polity and work, he found time to publish some forty works, chiefly biographical, but including some which were poetical and hymnological. He d. at Sunderland, May 16, 1872. His poetical works include:—

1. _Beneath the altar of the Lord._ Divine Worship and the Altar.
2. _La Creation springs to birth._ The Thorus and its historical and spiritual associations. Pub. in his _Songs of Terror, &c._, 1832.
EVERLASTING! CHANGING NEVER

During Mr. Everett’s residence in Sheffield in 1829-31, he wrote several hymns for the Sheffield S. Schools, which are preserved in a fly-sheet form but not incorporated in any collection.

[Note]

EVERLASTING! changing never. T. H. Gill. [Holiness desired.] Written in 1845, and in the second pub. in G. Dawson’s Ps. & Hymns, 1846, No. 117, in 8 st. of 6 l. In 1853 it was transferred to Hodge and Huntington’s American Hym. for the Ch. of Christ, No. 897. In later American collections as the Hymn of the Spirit, Boston, 1891, No. 431, and others. St. ii., iii., vi., vii., are given with slight alterations from this text as “We the weak ones, we the sinners.” In the author’s Golden Chain, &c., 1869, p. 84, the hymn is given in a revised form. Concerning this revision the author says:

“It was the most popular of my early hymns, and exactly expressed that spirit of general aspiration so prominent with ardent youth in the fifth decade of the century. The alterations introduced in the Golden Chain impaired and strengthened the style, as well as Christianized the hymn. Still the original freshness, liveliness and charm which the altered version hardly retain.”

[Note]

Every morning they are new. G. Phillimore. [Morning.] Written for and 1st pub. in the Parish H. Bk., 1863, in 4 st. of 6 l. On being transferred to the Hymnary, 1872, No. 57, it was altered to “Every morning mercies new.” This altered text was repeated in Thring’s Collected Hymns, and others. In the American Evangelical Hymnal, 1880, and the Laudes Domini, 1884, it is attributed to Dr. R. Bonar in error.

The hymn Quod laxa ademembravit vetus, in the revised Paris Brev., 1730, given as the hymn on Sundays and Ferial days at Matins from Ash Wednesday to Passion Sunday (as in the Lyra and other modern French Brevisaries) is a recast of this hymn made by Charles Coffin for the Paris Brev., and also pub. in his Hymni Sacri, 1734, p. 102. This text is in Card. Newman’s Hymni Eucharistici, 1838-65; and J. Chandler’s Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 60. The old text is in the works noted above: William and (Roman) Card. Newman, 1838-65; and Biggs’s Annotated H. A. & M., 1887. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:

1. New with the slow-rolling year. By E. Caswall from the Rom. Brev. text, in his Lyra Cathollica, 1849, p. 74, and his Hymns, &c., 1873, p. 40. In 1850 it was included in Dr. Oldknow’s Col., No. 70, and later in The New Hymnal, 1854, &c, and other Roman Catholic hymn-books for the Church. In the Hymnary, 1852, No. 212, this tr. is also given as, “By precepts taught in ages past, Again the fast.”

2. In solemn course, as holy fare. By J. M. Chambers (Sarum text), pub. in his Order of Household Devotion, 1854, and his Lauda Sonor, 1857, p. 126. In the People’s H., 1867, No. 81, st. iv. is omitted.

3. The fast as taught by holy lore. By J. M. Neale, from the Sarum text. Appeared in the Hymnal, 1854; and repeated in the Hymnal, 1860. In Skinner’s Morning and Evening, 1864, it begins with st. iv., “In prayer together let us fall.” This form is also in some American collections.

This is Dr. Neale’s tr. rewritten by the Compilers of H. A. & M., and given in their trial copy, 1856, and the 1st and later editions, 1861-75. It retains the greater portion of Dr. Neale’s rendering, but is cast in a more popular form.

Translations not in C. U.:

1. From heaven’s own school’s mysterious ways. Primer, 1766.

4. Come, let us keep this solemn feast. J. Walke, 1874.

5. Good lex ademembravit vetus. Of this text from the Paris Brevary, 1730, the following trs. are in C. U.:

1. The solemn fast the Fathers saw. By J. Chandler, in his Hymns of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 67, in 6 st. of 4 l. In Kennedy, 1863, it was given with the omission of st. ii. as “With fast and prayer for sinful man.”

2. It is the holy fast. By J. Williams, in his Hymns, tr. from the Paris Brev., 1839, p. 108. It was repeated, with the omission of st. iii. and vii., in The Child’s Christian Year, 1841, and later editions, &c.

EXULTET COELUM LAUDIBUS

Another tr. is:—

The exalted heavenly choir. J. D. Chambers, 1846. [J. J.]

I. Exulte filiae Sion, Regis pudicae virgines. Isaac Hubert. [The Crown of Jesus.] Contributed to the Paris Brev., 1643, p. 604, for use at Vespers on the festival of The Crown of Thorns, Aug. 11, together with a second part for use at Lauds, beginning Leges figurae pinctoris, p. 610. Both parts were given in the Paris Brev., 1713, and also in some of the recent editions of the Roman Brev., as in the Tournay ed., 1879, where the first part begins Exulte Sion filiae (see Daniel, i. p. 360). In the Paris Brev., 1736, Pt. ii. as above only is given. The trs. are from the Roman Brev.:—

1. Exulte Sion filiae

Daughters of Sion! Royal Maidens. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 62; and his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 38. It is repeated in the 1862 Appendix to the H. Noted, No. 243, and Shipley's Aneus Sanctus, 1884, p. 63.

2. Leges figurae pinctoris

Christ's peerless crown is pictured in. By E. Caswall, as above (1849), p. 66; 1872, p. 39) into the 1862 Appendix to the H. Noted, No. 243, and Shipley's Aneus Sanctus, 1884, p. 64. [J. M.]

EXULTE COELUM LAUDIBUS

[Festival of Apostles.] The oldest known form of this hymn is in four mes. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 63); Ven. D. xii. f. 9 4; Harl. 961, f. 4 6; Add. 39851, f. 133), and in the Latin Hymn of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 36 a). It is also in one or two of the older French Breviaries. In the Roman Brev., 1632, it begins Exultet orbis gaudia

Daniel, i., No. 232, gives both texts, together with notes and readings. None, No. 682, refers to five ms. dating from the 12th to the 15th cent., and his text differs slightly from that of Daniel. In the Parisian Brev., 1736, it was altered by C. Coflin to Lastar coelum plenitatis. The trs. which we have are from:—

1. Exultet coelum laudibus. This is tr. as:—

1. Let heaven resound with praises. By W. J. Blew, in The Church Hym. and Tune Bk., 1852-55; and again in Rice's Hymns, &c., selected from the same, 1870.

2. Ye heavens, exult with joyful praise. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lawla Syn., 1857, p. 92, in 6 st. of 4 l., and is repeated in the Appendix to the Hymnai X., No. 188; and in the Hymnai, 1882.

2. Exultet orbis gaudia. This is the text of the Roman Brev., 1632, and is tr. as:—

1. Let the round world with songs rejoice. By Bp. R. Mant, in his Ancent Hymns, &c., 1837, p. 72. (New ed., 1871, p. 127.) This is given without alteration in the People's H., 1867, but usually it is altered, as in the following instances:—

(1) "Let all on earth with songs rejoice." This was given in Murray's Hymnal, 1852; in the Salisbury, 1857; in the New Order (with slight alterations), 1874; and with an additional stanza (st. ii.) and alterations in the Hymnary, 1872.

(2) "Let earth be glad and joyful singing." This appeared in the English Hym., 1853-54.

(3) "Let all on earth their voices raise." In this arrangement in Church Hym., 1871, the chief form of the text, earth re-echoing the praise of heaven, instead of heaven repeating the song of earth, as in the Roman

It has attained to great popularity in America, and is given in a great number of modern hymn-books, although unknown to those in G. Britain. It is in a peculiar metre and of exceptional merit. Orig. text in Songs for the Sanctuary, N.Y., 1863 and 1872. [J. J.]

Fain would my thoughts fly up to Thee. J. Austin. [Hope.] From his Devotions in the Antient Way of Officing, 1638, into Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862-1867, and T. Darlington's Hymns, &c., 1855 and 1887.

Faint not, Christian, though the road. J. H. Evans. [Patient Endurance.] Appeared in the 4th ed. of his Hymns. Selected chiefly for Public Worship, 1833, in 7 st. of 4 l., and in the Rev. Carus Wilson's Friendly Visitor, Aug., 1853, with the signature "Alix." It is based on Heb. xii. 3. The hymn, "Deo non, children, though the road," in the Meth. Free Ch. S. S. H. Bk., 1860, No. 311, is composed of st. i.-iii., and v. of this hymn, slightly altered, together with a chorus from another source. It is popular in America. [J. J.]

Fair are the feet which bring the news. J. Mason. [Missions.] 1st pub. in his Spiritual Songs; or, Songs of Praise, 1843, p. 36, as "A Song of Praise for a Gospel Ministry," in 5 st. of 8 l. (Sedgwick's reprint, 1859, p. 26). In its full form it is unknown to modern hymn-books. The following century therefrom are in C. U.:

1. Fair are the feet which bring the news. In Longfellow and Johnson's Hymns of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1864, No. 343 is compiled from st. 1. iii. and iv. considerably altered.
2. Bless'd are the feet which bring the news. This was given in Bickersteth's Christ. Psalmody, 1833, No. 429, and is altered from st. 1. iii.-v.
3. How blest the feet which bring the news. In Hall's Hymn, 1834, No. 117 is st. 1. v. altered.
4. How beautiful the feet that bring. This altered form of st. 1. iii.-iv. is by the Rev. J. Keble. It was given in the Selecthury H. Bk., 1847, No. 188, the Selecthury H., 1854, Kennedy, 1853, and others. [J. J.]

Fair shines the morning star. J. Montgomery. [Year of Jubilee.] Appeared in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, in 7 st. of 8 l., and in his Original Hymns, 1855, No. 263, the title in each case being "The Year of Jubilee." In 1856 J. Conder adopted it for the Cong. H. Bk., and others have followed, both in G. Britain and America; but its use is not so extensive as many of Montgomery's hymns. In the N. Y. Church Praise Bk., 1882, No. 227, is as beginning with st. i. of this st., and st. ii.-iv. from C. Wesley's "Haste ye the trumpet, blow" (q.v.). [J. J.]

Fair waved the golden corn. J. H. Green. [Devotion of First Fruits.] This application of the "First Fruits" as a hymn of prayer and praise for Children, appeared in the author's Marylebone Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 38, in 6 st. of 4 L, and not in his Lutterworth Coll. of Hymns, 1838, as sometimes stated. It has attained great popularity, and is found generally unaltered, in most of the leading modern hymn-books. Bingham, in his Hymns, Christ. Lat., 1871, has rendered it into Latin as "Pulchrius in Judaem campis crepitante susurro." [J. J.]

Faith, hope, and charity, these three. J. Montgomery. [Faith, Hope, and Charity.]
FAITH OF OUR FATHERS

In the mss. this hymn is dated “Jan. 27, 1834.” It was printed in his Original Hymns, 1833, No. 161, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled “The Christian Warrior.” It is given in several hymn-books in G. Britain and America, as D. Martin’s Hymns of Prayer and Praise, 1873; the New Hymn & Songs of Praise, 1874, and others. [J. J.]

Faith of our Fathers! living still.

W. F. Witter. [A Pledge of Faithfulness.]

This hymn appeared as the first of two hymns, one “Faith of our Fathers,” for England; and the second the same for Ireland, in his Jesus and Mary, or, Catholic Hymns for Singing and Reading, 1849, in 4 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in his Oratory Hymns, and in various collections for missions and schools. It was illustrated most forcibly how in hymnody, as in other things, “extremes meet.” In the original ed. of the 1st ed., II. 1, 2, read:—

“Faith of our Fathers: Mary’s praises Shall win our country back to thee.”

In 1833 Mrs. Hedge & Huntington altered these lines to:—

“Faith of our Fathers: Good men’s praises Shall win our country all to thee.”

for their Unitarian Hymn for the Church of Christ, No. 455. With this alteration it has passed into several Nonconformist collections in G. Britain and America. With the alterations of these few words the hymn is regularly sung by Unitarians on the one hand, and by Roman Catholics on the other, as a metrical embodiment of their history and aspirations. [J. J.]

Faith, ‘tis a precious gift. B. Beddome. [Faith described.]

Of this popular hymn various forms are in C. U. both in G. Britain and America as follows:—

1. The original, which was given in the Bristol Hymn Book; e.g. Ass & Evans, 1769, No. 232, in 4 st. of 4 l. This was repeated in Rippon’s Sel., 1787, and later editions, and in several modern hymn-books.

2. The text as in R. Hall’s posthumous ed. of Beddome’s Hymns, 1817, No. 155, where after st. 2, alterations are introduced, and another stanza (5) is added. This text is given in the Ps. & Hym., 1849.

3. “Faith is a precious gift.” This is an altered form of the hymn, in D. Alexander’s Augustine H. Bk., 1847, of the Am. Bp. Hymn Bk., 1847, and partly from the 18th ed. of the American Bap. Hymns Bk., 1847, as an alteration of the 18th text in 5 st.

4. Taken in its various forms this hymn is very extensively used. [J. J.]

Faithful, O Lord, Thy mercies are.

C. Wesley. [God’s Faithfulness.]

In several American hymn-books two hymns are given with this opening line, as follows:—

(i) No. 266, in Longfellow and Johnson’s Hymn of the Levee’s Short Hymns, &c., 1840, Vol. 3, in 4 st. of 4 l. This is No. 171 of C. Wesley, vol. 1, in the Divine and the Second in the Ps. & Hymn Bk., 1841, No. 216, and is composed of portions of Nos. 169, 170, 171 of the Short Hymns, &c. (P. Works, 1865-72, Vol. 1, p. 163.)

Faith, from his interest as one of the first Lutheran clergymen ordained in America, demands some fuller notice than would otherwise be given.

Falkner, Johannes D., was b. Oct. 28, 1768, at Danzig, where his father was a wagonmaker. With a stipend from the Town Council of Danzig, he entered the University of Halle in 1791, where he studied the classics and theology, remaining as a private tutor for some time after completing his course. In 1798 he married and settled as a man of letters at Weimar, where he was welcomed by Herder, Goethe and Wieland, and where he gained some reputation as a writer of satirical works. During the Napoleonic wars, after the battle of Jena, 1806, Falk found his true vocation as a philanthropist, first in the field hospitals and then in the care of destitute children. With the court preacher Horn he founded the “Society of Friends in Need,” and shortly thereafter began his Refuge for poor children; receiving them without restrictions as to age, birth, country or creed, and after giving him a godly industrial training sought to find the girls places as domestic servants and to apprentice the boys to trade. He lived to see the Refuge in permanent buildings (which in 1829 were made into a public training school for neglected children, under the name of Falk's Institute) and saw some 300 of his scholars fairly started in life. He died at Weimar, Dec. 14, 1829 (Kraus, pp. 120-125; Allg. Deutsche Biog., vi. 549-551).

His hymns are few in number, but one has attained considerable popularity:—

O du fröhliche. [For the Great Festivals.]
Written in 1816, and included in his Ammersee Werke, Leipzig, 1819, vol. i. p. 357, in 3 st. of 6 lines, entitled "Hymn for all the Festivals."
St. i. is for Christmas; ii. for Easter; iii. for Whitsun.
This form is No. 967 in the Union, L. R., 1851, but being easy of expansion we find in the Sporer G. B., 1859, No. 247, two other stanzas for each season added—in all 9 st.
The only tr. in C. U. is:—

Hail, thou glorious, thou victorious. A free version by Dr. Kennedy of Falk's three st., with original st. for Sunday and for the Second Advent, in his Hymno. Christi, 1863. [J. M.]

Fanch, James, known as the joint author with Daniel Turner of the hymn "Beyond the glittering, starry skies." (q.v.), was b. in 1704, and d. Dec. 12, 1767. He was for many years a Baptist Minister at Romney, and Lockerly, Hants. In addition to Sermons, &c., he pub. a Paraphrase on a Select Number of the Psalms of David, done from the Latin of Buchanan, to which are added some occasional Pieces, 1744. [J. J.]

Fannie. A nom de plume of Mrs. Van Alstyne (q.v.) in Bright Jewels, N. Y., 1869, Royal Diadem, N. Y., 1873, &c.

Far down the ages now. H. Bonar. [The Church Militant.]
Pub. in his Hymns of Faith and Hope, 1st Series, 1857, in 14 st. of 4 lines. The contents in C. U. all begin with st. i., but differ in the choice of stanzas, and range from five in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymn Book, 1871, to eight in the New York Hymn Book, and Songs of Praise, 1874. Although in extensive use in various forms, it is seldom that any two collections have the same arrangement. [J. J.]

Far from my (our) heavenly home. H. F. Lyte. [Ps. cxviii: 1-5.]
This st. v. version of Ps. 137 is the most complete example of the author's method in paraphrasing the Psalms that we have; and furnishes us with a beautiful illustration of his tenderness and melody. It appeared in his Spirit of the Psalms, 1834, in 5 st. of 4 lines. It has been used for any that of any of his Psalm versions, and is extensive both in Great Britain and America. Sometimes it is changed to "Far from our heavenly home;" and in other cases, as in H. A. & M., st. ii., which reads:—

It was a wild, wild song
My harp has silent hung;
How should I sing a cheerful song
That Thou inspire my tongue?

Far from my thoughts, vain world, begone. I. Watts. [Holy Communion.]
This hymn was given in his Hymns and Sacred Songs,

1707: and again in 1709 (Bk. ii., Nos. 15, 16), in two parts, each part consisting of 6 st. of 4 lines, and the second beginning, "Lord, what a heav'n of saving grace." It was, with alterations and the omission of st. iii., given in G. Whitefield's Coll., 1753, No. 2, thereby rendering it a most suitable hymn for the opening of Divine Service. This use of the hymn is still followed, especially in America, as in Dr. Hattfleid's Church Hymns, 1872, &c.

In the American Church Psalter, Boston, 1864, No. 710, st. v, vi, are given as "Blest Jesus! what delicious fare!" It is also somewhat extensively used in Great Britain and America.

Far from my thoughts, vain world, depart. J. Conder. [Holy Communion.]
Appeared in his Country Church Hymn Book, 1836, No. 148, in 6 st. of 4 lines, on the words, "He was known of them in breaking of bread." In this stanza in the same form it was repeated in his work The Choir and the Oratory, 1837, p. 199; and again in his Hymns of Praise, Prager, &c., 1856, p. 85.

A rearrangement of this hymn, given in the Leeds Hymn Book, 1855, No. 727, is more popular than the original. It begins with st. iii., "Lord, in this blest and hallowed hour," and is composed of st. iii., ii., and iv. Another arrangement is st. iii., ii., iv.—vi. This is in the Baptist Psalter and Hymns, 1858.

Far from the world, O Lord, I flee. W. Cowper. [Retirement.]
In 1763, when the poet had recovered his balance of mind and had to leave the charge of Dr. Cotton at St. Albans, under whose care he had been placed by his family, his friends Subscribed amongst themselves an annual allowance, such as made his own diminished means just sufficient to maintain him respectively, but frugally, in retirement, and left him to follow his own course. His resolution to withdraw from the business of the world, and from its society, occasioned those poems which, because of the circumstances that gave rise to them, belong properly to the personal history of an author.

Far from the world, O Lord, I flee.
From strife and tumult far;
From scenes where Satan wages still
His most successful war.

Southey, from whose Life and Works of William Cowper, ed. 1833, vol. i. pp. 105-6, the above is taken, quotes the complete hymn, and then goes on to say:—

"After many unsuccessful attempts to procure lodgings nearer Cambridge, John Cowper wrote to say he had found some at Huntingdon, which he believed might suit him."

On Saturday, June 22, 1765, Cowper was taken to Huntingdon by his brother, and there left alone.

"No sooner," says Cowper, "had he left me, than finding myself surrounded by strangers, and in a strange place, my spirits began to sink, and I felt (such was the backsliding state of my heart) like a traveller in the midst of an insupportable desert, without friend to comfort, or a guide to direct him. I walked forth, towards the close of the day, and in this melancholy frame of mind, and having wandered about a mile from the town, I found my heart, at length, powerfully drawn towards the Lord, that having a retired and secret nook in the corner of a field, I kneel'd down under a bank and pour'd forth my complaints before him. I prayed my Saviour to hear me, so that this oppression was taken off, and I was enabled to trust in him that careth for the stranger, to roll my burden upon him, and to rest assured that where'er I might cast my lot, the host of all consolation would still be with me. But this was not all. He did for me more than either I had asked or thought."
The following day, Sunday, June 23, 1765, Cooper attended church for the first time after his recovery. He was specially impressed by the devotion of one of the worshippers, and with the reading of the Gospel of the day (1st S. after Trinity), which contained the parable of the Prodigal Son. He says:

"I went immediately after church to the place where I had prayed the day before, and found the relief I had there received was but the earnest of a richer blessing. How shall I express what the Lord did for me, except by saying, that he made all his goodness to pass before me. I seemed to speak to him face to face, as a man conversing with his friend, except that my speech was only in tears of joy, and groanings which cannot be uttered, and said, "Jealousy!" (Verse 23.)"

Although Southey does not say that this hymn was written on this special occasion, and although he quotes the hymn three pages before he gives these details, yet, when we read it:

"The calm retreat, the silent shade,
With prayer and praise agree;
And seem, by thy sweet bounty, made
For those who follow Thee."

we feel that these must have been the circumstances and this the birth-place of the hymn. Possibly its date will be June 24, 1765.

The publication of this hymn we have not been able to trace beyond the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 45, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Reformation." We have seen it stated that it appeared in the Gospel Magazine prior to this, but this is an error. Its use is extensive for a hymn of such a personal character. It is a very beautiful, and its associations with the poet's personal history give it a position of historical importance.

Far from these narrow scenes of night, Anne Steele. [Heaven.] This hymn ranks in popularity as one of the first of Miss Steele's hymns. It was first pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i., p. 157, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Promised Land." It was repeated in her Poems, &c., 1769, and in D. Sedgwick's ed. of her Hymns, 1803, p. 96. In modern hymn-books it is found in various forms, ranging from 4 st. in the American Baptist Hymn (and Tunes) Bk. 1771, to 6 st. in the Westminster or Abbey H. Bk., 1883. It was brought into use in an abbreviated form in the Church of England through B. Conybeare's Coll., 1767, and A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1775; and amongst Nonconformists in most American Unitarian collections a selection of stanzas rearranged from c.m. to s.m. is given, sometimes in 7 st., as in Dabney's Sel. of Hys. & Ps., Andover, 1821; and again in the H. [and Tune] Bk. for the Ch., Boston, 1868.

Farewell, poor world, I must be gone. S. Croswell. [Death.] The first stanza is from a letter written in 1767 in answer to a friend's complaint that the poet had not written to the world. "In Some for Sea Poems, Meditations, or Sacred Melodies," appended to the Comprehensive ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1811, and the chorus is from "The Sacred Melodies," appended to the Comprehensive ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1814, in 4 st. of 4 l., and the chorus is anonymous. In 1855 Mr. Bickersteth adopted this form of the hymn for his Plymouth Coll., No 1229. In this the first four lines are from Croswell and Rippon, but altered to "Farewell, dear friends, I must be gone!" The second four lines and the chorus are from Rippon; and st. iii., iv. are anonymous.

Farewell, thou once a sinner. C. Wesley. [Death.] Appeared in his Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii., No. 56, in 7 st. of 8 l., and headed "On the Death of a Friend" (P. Works, 1769-1772, vol. v., p. 295). It is Dr. Martin's Hymns, &c., 1820, No. 402, beginning "Farewell, thou once a sinner," is a cento from this hymn. It was also used in his Hymns of Praise and Prayer, 1873.

Farrand, Frederic William, D.D., s. of the Rev. Charles Penhorn Farrand, sometime missionary in India, and late Rector of Sidbeam, Kent. He was b. at Bombay, Aug. 7th, 1831; and educated at King William's College, Isle of Man, and at King's College, Cambridge. In 1850 he obtained a classical exhibition, and in 1852 a scholarship at the University of London, whence, after taking the degree of B.A., he passed to Trinity College, Cambridge. There, in 1852, he took (with other prizes) the Chancellor's Prize in English verse, and graduated in first-class classical honours in 1854. In the same year he entered Holy Orders, and was subsequently for some time an assistant master at Harrow School. In 1871 he was appointed to the head mastership of Marlborough College, which he held until 1876, when he was nominated a Canon of Westminster Abbey and Rector of St. Margaret's, Westminster. He had previously been chosen Select Preacher before the University of Cambridge in 1858, and again in 1871, 1875, and 1876. He was also appointed in 1879 a Chaplain to the Queen, and in 1883, Archdeacon of Westminster. Archdeacon Farrand has achieved a high reputation both as a writer and a preacher. He is the author of some volumes of fiction for the young which soon attained great popularity, as well as of several important works in the departments of philology and theology. Of the latter, his Life of Christ and Life and Work of St. Paul are the best known. As a preacher, Archdeacon Farrand stands in the first rank as a master of graceful eloquence. His contributions to hymnody include, "Father, before Thy throne of light," "God and Father, great and holy," and a beautiful carol, "In the fields with their flocks abiding."

Father, abide with us! the storm-clouds gather. [The Divine Presence desired.] Given anonymously as No. 60 in the Rev. E. E. Clay's Appendix, issued in Feb., 1869, to his Ps. & Hymns, adapted for the Service of the Ch. of England (1st ed., 1858). In Stewp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, No. 708, it is repeated without alteration.

Father, again in Jesus' Name we meet. Lucy E. G. Whitemore. [Lent Evening.] 1st pub. in her Family Prayers, &c., 1824, in 4 st. of 4 l., as No. 7 of the 14 hymns appended thereto. It is based on St. Luke xvi. 29. In 1833 Bickersteth gave it, with slight alteration, in his Christ.
FATHER, AND CAN IT BE

Psalmody, No. 584. This was repeated by several editors as the original text. In the Rev. F. Potter's Hymns, &c., 1861; the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, and others, st. iv. is omitted. It is a hymn of more than usual merit, and is in extensive use in G. Britain. In America, it is also found in a few collections, including Laudes Domini, 1884. In Widdle it is attributed to "White." Orig. text in H. Comp. No. 14.

[ J. J. ]

FATHER, and can it be? C. Wesley. [Lent.] Appeared in his Hymn. & Soc. Poems, 1769, vol. ii., No. 92, in 7 st. of 8 l. It is No. 5 of 7 hymns written "After a Recovery" (P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. iv. p. 447). The hymn, "O unexhausted Grace," which is given in most of the Methodist hymn-books, is composed of st. iv.-viii., and was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as No. 169. [ J. J. ]

FATHER and the Lord of our whole Life.

J. Keble. [Eastertime.] Written at Llandudno, Aug. 14, 1856, and first pub. in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and again in the Swann Hymnal, 1868, No. 135. The original consists of 4 l., and is found in Keble's Miscellaneous Poems, 1869, pp. 116-118. In the Hymnary, No. 269, beginning "Jesus, the Author of our Life," is a slightly altered form of this hymn. [ J. J. ]

FATHER, and Thy footstool see C. Wesley. [For Unity.] In his Hymn. & Soc. Poems, 1749, vol. ii., this is No. 3 of 55 hymns "For Christian Friends," in 6 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. v. p. 408). When given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 500, st. v., vi. were omitted. This is repeated in the revised ed., 1873, and several collections in G. Britain and America. The hymn in Dr. Martineau's Hymns of 1849, and of 1873, beginning with the same first line, is a cento, a few lines of which are from this hymn, but the rest we have been unable to trace. [ J. J. ]

FATHER, before Thy throne of light.

F. W. Farrar. [St. Michael and All Angeles.] Written for the Anniversary of the Dedication of Marlborough College Chapel, 1855, the author being at that time Assistant Master of the College under Dr. Cotton. In 1856 it was included in the Marlborough College H. Bk.; and again in the revised edition of the same collection in 1869, No. 106. From the latter it passed into the Savoy Chapel Appendix to the Hymnary (Chapel Royal), the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 184, the H. Comp., 1876, and many other collections. It is admirably suited for daily use in public schools.

[ J. J. ]

FATHER, behold with gracious eyes.

C. Wesley. [Public Worship.] In the Hymn. for Young People and those that Have Redemption, &c., 1747 (P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. iv. p. 270), this hymn, in 6 st. of 4 l., is set forth for use "At the Hour of Retirement." A. M. Toplady, on including it in his Ps. & Hymns, 1776, No. 10, omitted st. i., added st. vi, vii. from Wesley's "Father of Jesus Christ, my Lord" (in the same Hymns, &c., 1747), and appointed the same for "Public Worship." From this text, and not the original, No. 790 in the New Corp., 1859-1874, is taken; Toplady's st. iv., v. being omitted, and the rest somewhat altered.

[ J. J. ]

FATHER, GOD, WHO SEEST

Psalmody. No. 584. This was repeated by several editors as the original text. In the Rev. F. Potter's Hymns, &c., 1861; the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, and others, st. ii. is omitted. It is a hymn of more than usual merit, and is in extensive use in G. Britain. In America, it is also found in a few collections, including Laudes Domini, 1884. In Widdle it is attributed to "White." Orig. text in H. Comp. No. 14.

[ J. J. ]

FATHER, by Thy love and power. J. Asticke. [Evening.] Printed by his widow for private circulation in Hymns by the late Joseph Asticke, M.A., &c., 1886, No. 3, in 4 st. of 10 l. In 1841 it was given in The Child's Christian Year, with one change only, that of st. i., i. 8. "Thy children to repose," to "Thy children to repose," which in the H. Comp. is again changed to "Grant Thy children sweet repose," and accompanied by a note (Notes, 31) which shows that Bp. Bickersteth used The Child's Christian Year text as the original, in error. In the numerous hymn-books in which this beautiful hymn is found, not this line, but st. iv., i., iv., have been the source of difficulty. They read in the original:

"Blessed Trinity! be near Through the hours of darkness drear; When the help of man is far, Ye more clearly present are."

The attempts which have been made to overcome the weakness of these lines have been many. The most important of these are:

1. "Blessed Trinity, be near Through the hours of darkness drear; Then when the heart is near The more clearly present art.

2. "Blessed Trinity, be near Through the hours of darkness drear; Then when the heart is near The more clearly present art.

3. "Blessed Trinity, be near Through the hours of darkness drear; When the heart is near The more clearly present art.

S. P. C. K. Appendix to Ps. & Hymns, 1869, their Church
Hymns, 1871, and many others.

Other arrangements of these lines are also given in some of the collections, but these are the most important. In addition there is also a re-arrangement of the text in the Cooke & Denton Church Hymn., enlarged ed., 1855, No. 338, in 4 st. of 8 l.; and in the Rev. F. Potter's Hymns, &c., 1861, No. 23, in 4 st. of 6 l. In its various forms the use of this hymn is extensive. [ J. J. ]

FATHER, are we hence depart.

J. Hart. [Dismissal.] In his Supplement to his Hymn. composed on Various Subjects, 1762, No. 82, in 2 st. of 4 l. In 1767 it was given in R. Conyars's Coll. as "Father, before we hence depart." This was repeated in Toplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1776, No. 159, and is the received text of modern hymn-books in G. Britain and America.

[ J. J. ]

FATHER, God, Who seest in me. C. Wesley. [Pleading the Atonement.] Four hymns beginning with the same stanza are known to hymnody as follows:

1. The original in C. Wesley's Hymns on the Lord's Supper, 1748, No. 119, in 4 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. iii. p. 304); R. Conyars's Coll., 1767, &c.

2. The same with the omission of st. iv. in Hymns for the Church of Harrow School, 1855-1866.

3. "Father, Lord, Who seest in me," in a few of the older collections, and in Widdle.

5. A curious cento, also associated with this hymn, and beginning with st. i., is in Rippon's Sept. Sel., 1787, and later editions. This remarkable patchwork is made up from C. Wesley's four hymns: (1) "Father, God, Who FATHER, HEAR OUR HUMBLE CLAIM.

C. Wesley. [For Unity.] In Longfellow & Johnston's Hymns of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1834, No. 277, and in the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865-1872, No. 823. This cento is taken from two hymns by C. Wesley: (1) "Come and let us sweetly join!" and (2) "Father, Son and Spirit, hear," both of which appeared in Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1740, and each of which has furnished several centos to the hymn-books. This cento is st. 1, from No. 1, and st. 2, from No. 2. (See P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. i. pp. 351, 356, 357.) [J. J.]

FATHER, HEAR THE BLOOD OF JESUS.

C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] In Toplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1746, and of the older collections, this hymn is composed of two hymns by C. Wesley, 1st pub. in his Hymns on the Lord's Supper, 1715: (1) "Father, hear the blood of Jesus," in st. 2, of st. 81, and (2) "Dying Friend of Sinners, hear us," in st. 2, of st. 81. (P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. iii. pp. 225-226). In modern hymn-books the first of these hymns is given alone, as in the Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884. [J. J.]

FATHER, HEAR THE PRAYER WE OFFER.

FATHER, HEAR THY CHILDREN'S PRaises.

H. J. Buckoll. [Commemoration.] Appeared in the Ps. & Hymns, for the Use of the Rugby School Chapel, 1856, No. 54, in st. 5, of st. 41, and appointed "For the Founder's Commemoration, October 20th." From the Rugby book it has passed into that of Harrow, and others of the public schools, and a few general collections. [J. J.]

FATHER, HOW WIDE THY GLORY SHINES.

J. Watts. [Glory of God and Salvation of Men.] 1st pub. in his Hymn Lyrices, 1705, in st. 9, of st. 41, and headed "God glorious and Sinners saved." As early as 1738-1741, in his Ps. & Hymns, and it was subsequently early use in the West. H. Bk. Its use is extensive in G. Britain editions of the Hymn Lyrices, and Watts's Full Original Text in modern editions. [J. J.]

FATHER, I DARE NOT BELEIVE.

C. Wesley. [Holiness desired.] This hymn is composed as follows:

2. from Short Hymns, &c., 1762, vol. i., No. 1178.

This hymn is composed in this form it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 305, and has been retained in subsequent editions of the same, and also passed into other hymn-books. Orig. text, F. Works, 1868-1872, vol. ii., x. [J. J.]

FATHER, IF THOU MY HEART.

C. Wesley. [Prayer for the Witness of the Spirit.] Pub. in Ps. & Sacred Poems, 1740, p. 131, in st. 6, of st. 61, and headed, "Gaining the Spirit of Adoption." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 307). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 365, st. ii.-vi., were given as "I want the Spirit of power within." This form of the hymn has been repeated in several collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

FATHER, I KNOW THAT ALL MY LIFE.

Anna L. Waring. [Resignation.] 1st pub. in her Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1820, No. 1, in st. 8, of st. 61, and headed, "My times are in Thy hands." (Enlarged ed. 1863-1871). One of the first, if not the first, hymn-book to bring it into C. U., was the Leeds H. Bk., 1833, No. 892. Since then it has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America.

Although faulty, and awkward in rhythm, it has attained to a considerable circulation, its deep devotional spirit and intense personality being very attractive to many. Although best adapted for private reading, it is suitable, under special circumstances, for congregational use. In the American Unitarian Hymns, and Tune Bk. for the Church and the Home, been, 1868, No. 224, st. v., vi., vii., viii., are given in an altered form as: "I ask Thee for the daily strength," st. i.-vi., being given as No. 223. [J. J.]

FATHER, I STRETCH MY HANDS TO THEE.

C. Wesley. [Faith desired.] From Psalms & Hymns, 1741, in st. 4, of st. 41, and entitled "A Prayer for Faith." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 13). In 1760 M. Madan included 3 st. in his Coll., and thus introduced it into the Church of England. The altered text in the Wes. H. Bk. was given in the Supp. of that hymnal in 1830. Our authority for ascribing this hymn to C. Wesley with an expression of doubt is the following note by Dr. Osborn in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 8.

"The reader will observe that of the 166 hymns contained in this volume as originally published (Ps. & Hymns, 1741), more than 139 may be traced (by reference given above in brackets) to previous publications by other authors; and were merely selected, arranged, and more or less altered by Wesley. Only three of these which have been so treated have been reprinted here; viz.: 'Resignation,' 'Submission,' and the first Hymn to Christ. The second with that little, together with 'A Thought in Affliction,' 'A Prayer for the Light of Life,' 'A Prayer of Faith' [the above hymn], and 'God's Love and Power,' are also reprinted, because they have not been identified in other collections, and may possibly be Wesley's."

The hymn is in several modern collections both in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

FATHER, WOULD HASTE TO KNOW GOD.

C. Wesley. [Desiring to know God.] This cento is in the Scottish Episcopal Hymnal, 1878, No. 212, in st. 6, of st. 61. (where it is ascribed to M. Toplady in error), is composed of st. vi. of C. Wesley's "Father of Lights, from Whom proceeds"; and st. v. of his "Jesus my Great High Priest above." These two hymns appeared in the Wesley Psalms & Sacred Poems, 1739. (P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. ii. pp. 77, 88.) [J. J.]

FATHER, IF THOU MY FATHER ART.

C. Wesley. [Prayer for the Witness of the Spirit.] In Ps. & Sacred Poems, 1740, p. 131, in st. 6, of st. 61, and headed, "Gaining the Spirit of Adoption." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 307). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 365, st. ii.-vi., were given as "I want the Spirit of power within." This form of the hymn has been repeated in several collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]
Father, in high heaven dwelling.
G. Rawson. [Farrington.] 1st pub. in the Leeds H. Bk., 1835, No. 762, in 4 st. of 6 l., and based on a portion of Our Lord's Prayer (St. Luke xi. 3. 4). It was repeated in the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858-80, and several other collections in Great Britain and America. Mr.
Rawson revised the text for his Hymns, 1876.
In Kennedy, 1863, it is given as, "Father, who is in heaven art dwelling." [J. J.]

Father, in Whom we live. C. Wesley.
[Holy Trinity.] 1st pub. in his Hymns for those that Seek, and those that Have Redemption, &c., 1747, No. 34, in 4 st. of 8 l., and entitled "To the Trinity." In 1776 Toplady included it in his Ps. & Hys., No. 494, and thus brought it into use in the Church of England. It was included unaltered in the Wes. H. Bk. in 1797, and retained in the revised ed. of 1875, No. 258. It is also in several American hymn-books. A portion of the cento "Father of all, to Thee; Let endless," &c. (q. v.) is taken from this hymn. [J. J.]

Father, let me dedicate. L. Tuttihett.
[New Year.] A New Year's Hymn in 4 st. of 8 l., which appeared in his Germs of Thought on the Sunday Special Services, 1864. It proved itself to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., 1869,
The Anglo-Cat H. Bk. 1868, and other collections. It is one of the best known of the author's compositions. Orig. text in H. A. & M., 1875, No. 74. An abbreviated form of this hymn, beginning with st. i. 1, 2, of "This new year to Thee," is found in some collections. In a few American hymn-books it begins, "Father, here we dedicate." This is also in some English collections, as W. G.
Horley's Cong. Hymns, 1884, &c. [J. J.]

Father, Lord of earth and heaven,
Spare or take, &c. C. Wesley. [Resignation.
Written at Bristol during the illness of one of his children, and 1st pub. in his Funeral Hymn, 2nd Series, 1759, in 10 st. of 4 l., and entitled "A Prayer for a dying Child." It was not given in the Wes. H. Bk. until the revised ed., 1875 (P. Works, 1868-

Father of all, from land and sea. C.
Wordsworth, Bp. of Lincoln. [For Unity.
Written by request after the Nottingham Church Congress, 1871, and set to music by H. J. Gauvlett, Mus.D. It was added to the Holy Year, 6th ed., 1872, and to H. A. &
M., 1875. It is also in a few American books.

Father of all, in Whom we live. C.
Wordsworth, Bp. of Lincoln. [Confirmation.
This hymn in three parts appeared in his Holy Year, 1862, pp. 297-310, with directions for their use as follows:—

1. Father of all, in Whom.
   "Referring to the whole Congregation," in 3 st. of 4 l.

2. O God, in whose all-searching eye.
   "Referring to those who are to be confirmed: to be used before the laying on of hands," in 3 st. of 4 l.

3. Our hearts and voices let us raise.
   "After the laying on of the hands of the Bishop; to be sung specially by those who have been confirmed.

From pt. ii. the following hymns have been taken, and are in C. U.:

1. Arm these Thy soldiers, mighty Lord.
2. Come, ever blessed Spirit, come. In Skinner's Daily
FATHER OF ETERNAL GRACE

Vol. ii., seven short hymns were given on the seven clauses of the Lord's Prayer in St. Matthew vi. 9-13, and numbered 60-66. In the P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. x. p. 178, there are given the seven hymns as on one hymn of 7 st. This arrangement was made for the Society's H. Bk. 1839, and is repeated in the revised ed. 1875. The version of the Lord's Prayer as in St. Luke xi. 2-4, begins, "Father of me and all mankind," q. v. [J. J.]

Father of eternal grace [love]. J. Montgomery. [The Holy Trinity. Written in 1807, at the request of Mr. Gardiner, of Leicester, and pub. by him in his Sacred Melodies, 1808, in 8 st. of 4 l. In 1812 it was included in D. Colley's Coll., No. 919; in 1825 in Montgomery's Christian Poem, No. 164; and in 1835 in his Original Hymns, No. 185. It is in C. U. both in G. Britain and America. The hymn, "Father of eternal love," in Dr. Martin's Hymns, &c., 1849, and 1873, is the same with slight alterations and the omission of st. ii. [J. J.]

Father of eternal grace! Thou hast loved, &c. J. Conder. [Mission.] Appeared in his Cong. H. Bk., 1836, No. 241, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again as the last stanza of this hymn, "Thou from Whom all being sprang," which was given as the third of six hymns on "The Lord's Prayer," in 8 st. of 4 l. in his work, The Choir and the Oratory, 1837, p. 31. In its original form of three stanzas it was repeated in the Leeds H. Bk., 1838; the Bap. Ps. & Hymns, 1838 and 1840; the New Cong. 1859 and 1874, and other collections, and in Conder's Hymn of Praise, &c., 1856, p. 48. [J. J.]

Father of heaven above. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Holy Trinity. Written in 1870, and 1st pub in his H. Comp., 1870, the following note being added in the Amended edition:

"This hymn by the Author was written for this hymn in imitation of No. 2, Supplemental Hymns, by the Rev. Henry Moulson. It is in the same measure, and with the Author's kind permission, includes two or three of his lines."

It was also given in his work, The Two Brothers, 1871, p. 232, and has passed into American use. [J. J.]

Father of heaven, whose love profound. E. Cooper. [Holy Trinity.] This hymn, the authorship of which was for a long time uncertain, is now known (on the authority of his son, the Rev. Henry Gisborne Cooper) to be the production of the Rev. Edward Cooper. It was contributed by him to the Uitneter Selection, 1805 (see Staffordshire Hymnbooks, No. 1), whence it passed into the Ashbourne Coll. 1808 (ib. No. ii.), and Cooper's own Selection, Litchfield, 1811 (ib. iv.), Cotterill's Selection, 1810-1829, and subsequently into many hymnals throughout English-speaking countries. It is based on the Litany and consists of 4 st. of 4 l. It has been adopted, in A. & M., being a subsequent addition. In st. 4 l. 4, some hymnals read "all" instead of "us," but the original text follows the Litany in confining the prayer to the suppliant who offers it. The opening line has also been altered as follows:-(1) "Father of all, whose love from heaven," in the Rev. I. Gregory Smith's Hymn Book, &c., 1853; (2) "Father of all, Whose wondrous grace," in the Rev. F. H. Murray's Hymnal, 1852; (3) "Father of all, Whose wondrous love," in the Cooke and Denton Church Hymnal, 1853. It has also been adapted as a hymn of praise by Miss Harriet Auber, in her Spirit of the Piae Consolator, 1829. This is accomplished by rewriting ll. 3, 4 of each stanza. The first stanza reads:

"Father of heaven! Whose love profound
A ransom for our souls hath found,
To Thee, great God! the song we raise:
Thee for Thy pardoning love we praise;

This form of the hymn is No. 74 in Dr. Dale's English H. Bk., 1874. Original text in Hy.

Comp., No. 254. [G. A. C.]

Father of Jesus Christ my Lord, I humbly seek Thy face. C. Wesley. [Before Private Prayer.] This hymn is No. 2 of six hymns given at the end of a tract entitled, A Short View of the Differences between the Moravian Brethren in England and J. and C. Wesley, 1745, in 7 st. of 4 l. It was also included in the Hymns for those who seek, and whose Who Have Redemption, &c., 1747, No. 39 (P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. iv. p. 230). Sometimes after J. Wesley's death in 1791, bfore 1809, it was given unaltered, in the Wes. H. Bk. It has passed into several collections, and is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Father of Jesus Christ my Lord, My Saviour, &c. C. Wesley. [Faith in the Promises and Power of God.] From a hymn of 10 st. in 4 l. in Rom. iv. 16, &c., in Hymns & Sec. Poems, 1742, p. 248, it was also given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as No. 350. The same arrangement is in the revised ed., 1875, and other collections (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 309). A cento from the original beginning (st. ix.), "In hope against all human hope," was given in the American Meth. Episc. Hymns, 1849. [J. J.]

Father of light, and life, and love. J. Montgomery. [Public Worship.] Written on Nov. 24, 1842, for the Molyneux Hospital, Dublin (m. mss.), but omitted from its Coll. of hymns, 1854. In 1853 it was included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, No. 287, in 6 st. of 4 l., and in 1873 in Dr. Martineau's Hymn of Praise & Prayer, No. 757. [J. J.]

Father of lights, from Whom proceeds. C. Wesley. 1st pub. in Hymn & Sec. Poems, 1739, in 8 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "A Prayer under Convictions." The first five stanzas were given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1739, No. 96, and repeated in later editions in other collections. Another arrangement appeared in Tuplady's Ps. & Hymns, 1776, No. 284, and subsequent editions. It is in 8 st. It has six stanzas (st. vi. above), and the remaining two are the first two of the last stanzas of Ps. xcviii. in the Wesley Hymn of Sec. Poems, 1739. This cento is sometimes found in Church of England hymnals. Original text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. 76, 87. [J. J.]

Father of lights, we sing Thy Name. P. Doddridge. [Ps. lxxxiv.] This hymn is No. xlvii. in the d. mss. in 6 st. of 4 l. and entitled “Providential Bounties Surveyed and Improved, St. Matt. v. 43.” A slightly different text was given by John Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge’s Hymns, 1755, No. 176, and the text in J. D. Humphrey’s ed. of the Hymns, &c., 1839, No. 197, differs in a few words from both. The 1755 text is that in C. U. sometimes in an altered form. The hymn is given in most of the American Unitarian collections. [J. J.]

2 l

Father of love and power. G. Rawson. [Evening.] 1st pub. in the Leeds H. Bk. 1833, No. 761, in 3 st. of 7 lines, again in the Bapt. Ps. and Hymns, 1858-1880, No. 917, and others; and in his Hymns, &c., 1876, No. 51. In a ms. note to this hymn (in the editor’s copy) in the last named work, the author, finding that he had unconsciously given three lines from Marrett’s “Thou Whose Almighty Word,” in st. iii., has substituted the following stanza:

“Thou Who art the Power and Light of the world,
Gentle transforming Grace, to our souls imparting light.
In the midst of pain and trial, calm Thou my troubled heart.
Bless us in every hour, guide us with Thy hand and heart.”

This, together with stanzas i. and ii. in his Hymns, &c., constitute the author’s revised text. In Skinner’s Daily Service Hym. 1894, No. 28, the text is considerably altered, a doxology is added, and the whole is attributed to “C. L.” i.e. Christian Living, 1800. [J. J.]

Father of Love, our Guide and Friend. W. J. Irons. [Confirmation.] Written for a confirmation, held at Brompton in 1844, in 3 st. of 8 lines. One of the earliest collections in which it is found is the Hymns for the Christian Seasons, by the Rev. R. T. Lowe, Gaingborough, 1854, No. 183. In 1861 the author included it in his Words of the Hymns, in the App. of the Brompton Matrical Patter, No. 7; in 1866 in his Hymns, for use in Church, No. 20; in 1875 in the Hymns for the Church; and in 1875 in his Ps. and Hymns for the Church. In the last two it is divided into 6 st. of 4 lines, in the Hymns book of 1854. Orton in his collection it has been given to somewhat extensive use in G. Britain and America, and is found in many of the best collections. Originally written for Confirmation, it is also adapted for “The New Year,” or, in “Time of Trial.” Original text in Thring’s Coll., 1882, No. 284. [J. J.]

Father of me and all mankind. C. Wesley. [The Lord’s Prayer.] This paraphrase of The Lord’s Prayer as in St Luke vii. 2–4, was given in his Short Hymns, &c., 1762, vol. ii., in 8 separate hymns numbered 342–349; but in the Works, 1868–72, vol. ii. p. 260, these hymns are numbered as one, No. 1306, in 10 st. of 8 lines. The tune in C. U. appeared in the Wes. H. Bk. 1780, No. 242, in 5 st. of 4 lines, and is compiled from the original hymn, No. 342 and 343. It is found in several collections in G. Britain and America, and sometimes as “Father and God of all mankind,” as in Longfellow and Johnson’s Bk. of Hymns. Boston, 1846–8, &c. Wesley’s version of the Lord’s Prayer as in St. Matthew vi. 9–13, begins “Father of earth and sky,” q.v. [J. J.]

Father of mercies, in Thine house. P. Doddridge. [Ordination.] 1st pub. in J. Orton’s posthumous ed. of Doddridge’s Hymns, &c., 1755, in 7 st. of 4 lines, and headed, “The Institution of a Gospel Ministry from Christ.” Here are given by the Rev. J. D. Humphrey’s ed. of the Hymns, &c., No. 315, as “Father of mercies, in Thine house,” and with several additional differences. It is curious that Orton retained the original first line in the index of the 1st ed. of the Hymns, &c., but altered it in the body of the book. Orton’s text is followed by all compilers. In the Supp. to the Wes. H. Bk., st. ii., iii., v.-vii., were given as “The Saviour, when to heaven He rose.” This stanza is retained in the revised ed., 1875. [J. J.] FATHER OF MERCIES, IN

Father of mercies, in Thy word.

St. 2 and 3, corresponding stanzas from the revised ed. of Tract. and Par., 1751, as above.

St. 4, a new st. by W. Cameron, thus:

"That to perfection's sacred height
We nearer still may rise.
And all we think, we do, be pleasing in thine eyes."

This arrangement and last stanza are assigned to Cameron on the authority of his daughter (see Cameron, W.) This form of the hymn is in somewhat extensive use in all English-speaking countries. It should be designated, "P. Doddridge, "Scottish Tr. and Par., 1751, and W. Cameron." [J. J.]

FATHER OF PEACE AND GOD OF LOVE.

P. Doddridge. [Holiness desired] This hymn, from its historical connection with the Scottish Translators and Paraphr., 1745 and 1754, has more than usual interest. Its history in detail is this:

i. In Doddridge's ms. in the "Rooker ms." No. 3, (see Doddridge), the text in his own handwriting is as follows:

ii. The Christian Perfected by the Grace of God in Christ, from Heb. xii. 25, 28.

Father of Peace, and God of Love,

"Father of Peace, and God of Love,
We own thy pow'r to save,
That pow'r by which our Shepherd rose Victorious o'er the Grave."

"We triumph in that Shepherd's name,
Still watchful for our good;
Who brought th' eternal covenant
And sealed it with his blood.
"So may thy Spirit seal my soul,
And mould it to thy will;
That my found heart be more may stay,
But keep thy covenant still.
"Still may I gain superior strength,
And press with vigour on;
To fill perfection crown our hopes,
And fix us near thy throne."

Another ms. of Doddridge's Hymns in the possession of the writer, dated Mar. 13, 1789, this hymn is No. 2, and reads, st. i.

"Savious for Shepherd; st. iii., 1, 4, that for thy; and st. iv., 1, 7, crowns for crown.

"Through the kind offices of Robert Blair, a copy of the hymn fell into the hands of the Committee appointed to compile the Scottish Translators and Paraphr., and by them it was included therein as No. 334, in 1745, with st. ii., 1. "Savious's name" for "Shepherd's name," and st. iii., "our souls" for "my soul," them to "it to," and "our weak hearts" for "my found heart."

"I. In the revised ed., of the same work, in 1754, it was altered thus: st. i. as above; st. ii.:

"Take my soul and body's powers;
"Take my memory, mind, and will,
"All my goods, and all my hours,
"All I know, and all I feel.
"All I think, or speak, or do,
"Take my heart; but make it new!"

2 B 2
This is the first of three hymns on Phil. ii. 13. "It is God which worketh in you both to will and to do," first pub. in his Hymns and Sacred Poems, vol. ii., in 3rd. ed. of 1817. In addition to this text, which is in C. U. in G. Britain and America, and was included in Toplady's Poems, 1766, No. 21, in 7 st. of 4 l., of which st. 1-4 are from this hymn, and st. vii. are from the last of the three hymns named above. The use of this text is limited. No. 210 in the S. P. C. K. Poems, is from the former somewhat altered. [J. J.]

Father, to Thy sinful child. J. Conder. [Lent.] Appeared in his Cong. H. Bk., 1886, No. 517, in 7 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words, "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." In the following year it was republished in his work The Church and The Oratory, 1887, p. 35, as Ps. v. of "The Lord's Prayer in Six Parts," and again in his Hymns of Praise, Prayer, &c. 1856, p. 138. In the new Cong., 1875, No. 335, st. vi. is omitted, and slight changes are also introduced. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1810 and 1873, a part of this hymn is given as, "Lord, forgive me day by day" (st. iii.) [J. J.]

Father, we humbly pray. H. C. Wordsworth. [Regation Tide.] 1st pub. in his Holy Year, 1st ed. 1802, p. 96, in 20 st. of 4 l. In the latest editions of the Holy Year, the 20 st. are divided into four parts, as (1) Father, we humbly pray: (2) "With genial rains and dew." (3) "Bless, Lord, Thy holy Church." (4) "The widow desolate." In the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 187, No. 149, and Dr. Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, No. 1283, the full text is given with the omission of st. xii. Minor alterations are also introduced. [J. J.]

Father, Who art in heaven. C. Wesley. [The Lord's Prayer.] This version of the Lord's Prayer was printed from the "Wesley manuscript" of Richmond College, in Ps. and Psalms, 1869, vol. i., p. 179, in 20 st. of 4 l., and some of his "Hymns on the Four Gospels." In 1875, a cento beginning, "From trials unexamined," was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 818. It is composed of st. xii., xiv., xvi., xvii. [J. J.]

Father, Who on high. [Holy Trinity.] This cento has a somewhat curious and complicated history, the details of which are:—

It appeared in J. A. Laub's Ps. and Hys., 1841, No. 2, in 2 st. of 6 limes. It is based on an English hymn by L. T. Nyberg beginning, "Holy Trinity," in Ps. and Hys., 1842, No. 119, in 2 st. of 9 l., for the second of which one beginning, "Had we angels' tongues," was substituted in the ed. of 1869—this st. ii. In 1679, being Mr. Laub's st. iv. In the Supplement of 1844 a hymn was included as No. 1023, beginning, "O eternal Word," in 2 st. of 9 l., and in the Moravian Messenger, Sept., 1679, it was given in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1857, in 2 st. of 6 l., and entitled "In Affliction." It is in several collections both in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Father, to Thee my soul I lift. C. Wesley. [God the Giver of every good Gift]
FATHER, Whose Everlasting

The form, beginning "O eternal Word," No. 215 in Dr. Pease's, Coll., 1881, in the W. H. Bk., from the Armenian version, or in the Latin version of the Armenian version of the Greek hymn, was the last to appear in print. It was afterwards reprinted in the "Armenian Magazine," 1874, p. 180. Sometimes after the death of W. J. J. W. J. 1858, this became, in a slightly altered form, the text of a hymn in the "New Hymnals," No. 50, of New England, 1874, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in a few hymnals.

Fauquet, Alcide, son of the Rev. William Fauquet, Rector of Balleen, county of Down, b. at Ballydowd, Jan. 8, 1814, and married to the Rev. Henry Fauquet, incumbent of Edenbridge, county of Tyrone, in 1843. In 1873, his poetical works are (1) "Thoughts on Holy Words," 1867, printed for private circulation; (2) "The Triumph of Faith," 1870; (3) "The Irons of Iron," and other poems, 1873. These were given in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873.

G. A. C.

Fawcett, John, D.D., was b. Jan. 6, 1825, at Lidget Green, near Bradford, Yorks. Converted at the age of 16 under the ministry of G. Whitefield, he at first joined the Methodist, but 3 years later united with the Baptist Church at Bradford. Having been preaching there, in 1763, ordained Bap. minister at Walsall, near Huddersfield, Yorks. In 1772 he was invited to London, to proceed with the celebrated Dr. J. Gill, as pastor of Carver's Lane, the invitation he had formally accepted. The farewell sermon at Walsall had been preached and the wagons loaded with all his goods for removal, when the love and tears of his attached people prevailed, and he decided to remain. In 1772 a new church was built for him at Huddersfield, and about the same time he opened a school at Brixton, his place of residence. In 1783 he was invited to become President of the Baptist Academy at Bristol, but declined. In 1811 he received from America the degree of D.D., and died in 1817, at the age of 78.

Fawcett was the author of numerous works on Practical Religion, several of which attained a large circulation. His poetical publications are:

PUBLIC WORSHIP AND PRIV. DEVOTION, London, G. Wright & Son, 1882. They are 160 in number, and were mostly composed to be sung after sermons by the author.

Whilst not attaining a high degree of excellence as poetry, they are "eminently spiritual and practical," and a number of them are found in all the Baptist and Congregational hymn-books that have appeared during the last 100 years. The best known of these are: "Infinite excellence is Thine," "How precious is the Book divine," "Thus far my God hath led me on," "Religion is the chief concern," "Blest be the tie that binds," "I am my Beloved's," and "Praise to Thee, Thou great Creator." These hymns, together with others by Fawcett, are annotated under their respective first lines.

In addition the following hymns, also by Fawcett, but of less importance, are in C. U.:

1. "Behold the sin-stoning Lamb, Passionate."
2. "My Ebenerez raise, Birthday."
3. "Infinite excellence is Thine, Jesus the Ruler of Nations."
4. "The heavenly Lover, gave Redemption to Christ."
5. "Lord, hast Thou made me know Thy ways? Perseverance."
6. "God, my Helper, ever near. New Year."
7. "O, my soul, what means this sadness? Sorrow turned to Joy."
8. "Sinners, the voice of God regard, Invitation to Repentance."

About 20 of Fawcett's hymns are thus still in C. U. Two hymns which have been ascribed to him from time to time, but concerning which there are some doubts, are fully annotated under their respective first lines. These are: "Humble souls that seek salvation" and "Lord, dispose us with Thy blessing." [J. J.]

FEARLESS, CALM, AND STRONG IN LOVE.

T. Daris. [Ordination.] Lord Sellborne says in his text to the enlarged ed. of his Book of Psalms, 1866, concerning this hymn, "Youn debted for this to the author," and in the body of his book he dates it 1862. It is repeated in W. R. Stevenson's School Hymnal, 1880, but not in the author's Annus Sanctus, 1885. It is suitable for meetings of lay readers and Sunday-school teachers.

Felix in body and in mind. C. Wesley. [In Perplexity.] Mr. Stevenson, in his Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1888, has dated this hymn 1749, but has omitted all authority for the statement. It was pub. in Dr. Leitch's Original Hymns, 1843, No. 212, in 10 st. of 4 l. In the Wesley P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. xiii. p. 256, it was given in 6 st. This is repeated in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, in a slightly altered form.

Felix memori possumus incola. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Abbots and Monks.] Appears in the Cluniac Breviary, 1698, p. 55; his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1698, and again in 1838, p. 250, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the revised Paris Breviary, 1736, it was appointed for "Abbatum Monachorum, et Anon. Heiligen," at 1st Vespers (see also Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiasticæ, 1838 and 1865). The only tr. in U. S. is:

Sing we those who dwell concealed. By T. I. Beal, and first pub. in the Appendix to the Hymnal N., 1862, No. 366, in 6 st. of 4 l.

Other trs. are:

1. Happy are they whom God's protecting love. T. Williams. British Mag., 1839, and Hymns tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839.
2. Sing we those whom in the forest wild. E. Caswell, 1849.
3. We sing the best and pure. J. D. Chambers, 1866, p. 11.

Felix dies mortuus. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Ascension.] In the Cluniac Brev., 1696, p. 497, and his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1698, p. 21, and ed. 1898, p. 104, in 7 st. of 4 l. In 1726 it was given in the revised Paris Brev. as the hymn for the first and second Vespers on the octave of the Ascension. It is also appointed for the same season in the Lyra and other modern French Breviaries. The text is in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiasticæ, 1838 and 1865; and J. Chandler's Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837. Tr. as:

1. O happy day for mortals. By W. J. Blew, first printed in the Style of 1850-1851, and then included in his Cl. Hymns & Text Bk., 1852, in 5 st., of 6 l. In 1870 it was given in Rice's Sel. from that work, No. 63.
2. For eye shall mortals bless the day. By C. S. Calverley, made for and first pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 317.

Trs. not in C. U.:

1. O was a day, both bright and good. J. Chandler, 1837.
2. Bluest day when doom'd to die no more. T. Williams, British Mag., 1839, and Hymns tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839.
3. O day with holy gladness fraught. J. D. Chambers, 1857, p. 199.
4. O happy day to mortals de r. R. F. Littlewood, in Lyra Musicamenta, 1844.
5. A day so dear to man once lost. R. Campbell, from his ms. in Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1870.

Felix dies quam proprium. Abbe Beaulieu. [Circumcision.] Appears in the revised Paris Brev., 1736, as the hymn for the Feast of the Circumcision at Matins. As such it is also repeated in the Lyra and other modern French Breviaries. Text in Card.

fact that most of his books date from Birmingham, and are said to be printed for the author, though sold by G.
Keith, Gracechurch Street, London. Also, in the 2nd
Ed. of his Hyman on Believers' Baptism (1717) is a fixed note of commendation, signed by eight Baptist ministers, who may be personally acquainted with the author; and the first three names among those of the Baptist ministers at Birmingham, Coventry and Bromsgrove. From the records of the Baptist church formerly in Cannon Street, Birmingham, it appears that a John Fellar (or Feller) joined it early in 1727, and membership continued until his death on 20 July, 1755. But one of Feller's earlier pieces is entitled a Bromsgrove Elegy.
Combining these facts we infer that Feller first lived at Bromsgrove, and then, removing to Birmingham, joined the church in Cannon Street.

His hymns on Baptism are 55 in number, among them being the following:

various German Breviaries: and is also given by Thomasius, ii. p. 397; Daniel, i. p. 396; Wackernagel, i. p. 659.

2. Jesus who came to the world to save. Appeared in the Antiphoner & Gradual, 1860, and the Hymner, 1882.

3. Salutis aeternae dator. This is a recast of No. ii. which was made for and appeared in the revised Roman Breviary, 1632, and repeated in later editions. It is also in Daniel, i. p. 396.

4. O Jesus, Source of sanctity. By Bp. R. Mant, in his Ancient Hymn. &c., 1837, p. 76, in st. of 4 1. (ed. 1871, p. 137). This is in several collections, including the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, No. 168, where it begins, "O Jesu, our redeeming Lord," and is appointed for St. Andrew's Day. This recast, to adapt it for St. Andrew's Day, was made by Canon W. Cooke.

6. Festum matris gloriosae. [Visitation of the B. V. M.] This hymn for the Feast of the Visitations H. V. M. is given for that Festival in the Sarum Breviary, Venice, 1495.

7. Fever and fret, and aimless stir. F. W. Faber. [Dependancy.] Pub. in the 1852 ed. of his Jesus and Mary, &c., No. 63, in 13 st. of 4 1., and headed "Low Spirits." It was repeated in his Hymns, 1862. In Martinneau's Hymns, &c., 1873, st. iv., vii., viii., xi., and viii., are given as "Voices are round me: smiles are near. This arrangement forms a beautiful hymn for private use."

8. Few are thy days and full of woe. M. Bruce. [The Resurrection.] From evidence elsewhere produced [see Bruce, M.] we believe the original of this hymn to have been written by M. Bruce about 1764; that the same was handed by Bruce's father to John Logan a short time after Bruce's death (in 1767), and that it was published by J. Logan in his Poems, 1781, p. 95, No. 2, as his own. The nearest approach to the original text now attainable is given in Dr. Mackenzie's ed. of Bruce's Works with Life, 1837, pp. 234-57; and Dr. Cairns's Works of M. Bruce, 1885, pp. 127-130. In the same year that Logan's Poems were published, the new and revised edition of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases was issued, and therein, as No. viii., was given a paraphrase of Job xiv. 1-13, in which six of the fourteen stanzas are almost entirely from this hymn and the remaining eight are but the amplification of the thoughts which are found in the remaining stanzas of the original. This version, which has been in use in the Church of Scotland for more than 100 years, should therefore be designated "Michael Bruce altered by John Logan."

9. Fierce passions discompose the mind. J. Newton. [Contentment.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Book i., No. 131, in 8 st. of 4 1., and based upon Philippians iv. 11. It is given in a limited number of collections, including Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862, No. viii., ix. altered to a.m. in the American Prayer Book Ps. & Hymn, 1826, and later editions, and in Hymns.

10. Fierce raged the tempest o'er the deep. G. Thring. [Stilling the Sea.] Written in 1801, and first pub. in Chop's Hymnal, 1862, No. 187, in 4 st. of 4 1. It was repeated in the author's Hymn Conspicuational and others, 1866, No. 6; in his Hymns & Lyrics, 1874, p. 94, and in his Coll., 1882. It has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America, and ranks as one of the most popular of Prebendary Thring's hymns. It has been specially set to music by Dr. Dykes, in Chop's Hymnal, and by others.

11. Fierce raged was the storm of wind. H. W. Beadon. [Stilling the Sea.] Contributed to the Parish H. Bk. in 1865, No. 24, and continued in the enlarged ed., 1875, No. 24, in 7 st. of 4 1. When included in the Sarum Hymnal, 1862, No. 74, it was attributed to the late W. Beadon Heathcote in error. This was corrected in the Hymnary, 1870-2 (where the hymn is given with slight alterations as, "Fierce raged the storm of wind"), and in the Notes to Church Hymns, ed., 1881. In the latter the original text is given, with the exception of the doxology. The hymn is based on the Gospel for the 3d Sunday after the Epiphany.

12. Fight the good fight; lay hold. J. Montgomery. [The Fight of Faith.] Written Feb. 14, 1834 (M. mss.), and given in Ferguson's Sel. of Hymns. for British Seamen, 1838; and in the same year, with alterations, in Joshua Fawcett's Temple Offerings. It was also included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1835, No. 138, in 3 st. of 6 1., and headed, "Valiant for the Truth." It is in several collections in G. Britain and America, but usually in an abbreviated form.

13. Finita jam sunt praelia. [Easter.] This hymn is of unknown date and authorship. Daniel, ii. p. 363, gives it without note or reference of any kind, and the source from whence he obtained the text is unknown. It has not been traced earlier than the *Hymno-

German hymns (together with notes on a few Greek and Latin hymns, which are the originals of some of the (German) texts); the plan of selection being to annotate hymns found in the best hymn-books that have been in use in the Protestant province of Saxony from the Reformation to the present time. It is the first work in German that has attempted, on any large scale, to give critical and detailed notes on individual hymns, and may be pronounced indispensable to the student of harran Hymnology. Wherever the data given in this Dictionary may be found to differ it is as the result of later investigations.

Dr. Fischer was also the founder (1827), and is the present joint-editor of the Blätter für Hymnologie (now appearing monthly at Altenburg, and frequently reference in these pages), the first German magazine devoted entirely to Hymnology.

In recognition of his services to Hymnology the degree of D. P. was conferred on him by the University of Jena in 1884.

volume the following hymns have been transferred to Dr. Martineau's Hymns, 1840, and his Hymns of Prayer and Praise, 1873:—

"Awake, my soul, awake, mine eyes" (Morning)

"Sweet slumber, come and chase away" (Evening)

The similarity of these hymns to the morning and evening hymns of Bp. Ken suggests the possibility that they may have inspired the latter. Flatman's "Thoughts on Death" also contains the germ of Pope's "Vital Spark," &c., &c.

Fleet, John George, was b. in London on the 8th of July, 1818. At 13 years of age he was removed from school to his father's counting-house, and at 17 he had to undertake, through his father's death, the sole control of the business, and from that time he followed commercial pursuits. At an early age he joined as teacher in a small Sunday School which his sister had begun in Lime Street, London. His interest in Sunday Schools was thus awakened, and in 1838 he was invited to found the Church Sunday School Institute in 1843. Of that Institute he was honorary Secretary for 20 years; and for 15 years he was Editor of the Church Sunday School Quarterly. To the hymn-book pub. by the Institute, The Church Sunday School Hymn Book, 1848, he contributed the following hymns by which he is known to hymnology:—

1. How faint and feeble is the praise. Angels' Worship.

2. Let children to their God draw near. Children's Worship.

6. Words are things of little cost. Sins of the Tongue.

In addition to these hymns, Mr. Fleet contributed several to The Church and Quarterly in 1852-3-8, and 1861, and has pub. a small vol. of poems and hymns entitled Laws in Tenures, 1873.

[F. J.]

Fleming, Abraham, was a classical scholar, translator, and miscellaneous writer of the 16th cent., the dates of whose birth and death are unknown. He was for some time Rector of St. Paneras. He edited many of the classics with notes, and published also some original works. Amongst the latter there are:

[F. J.]

Flemming, Paul, s. of Abraham Flemming or Fleming, then schoolmaster at Hartensteine, near Zwickau, Saxony (afterwards pastor of Wechselburg, near Mittweida), was b. at Hartensteine, Oct. 6, 1809. He entered the St. Thomas School, Leipzig, in 1823, and matriculated at the University of Leipzig at Michaelmas, 1826. At the University he devoted himself to the study of medicine and of philosophy, being interested as a poet in 1831, and graduating M.A. in 1832. In order to find refuge from the troubles of the Thirty Years' War he went to Holstein in 1833. In the same year he joined an embassy which Duke Friedrich of Schleswig-Holstein was about to send to his brother-in-law, the Russian Czar, as gentleman in waiting and "taster." In this expedition he was engaged from Oct. 22, 1833, to April 6, 1835. He then took part in the embassy sent by the Duke to the Shah of Persia, with the object of opening up the way for trade and Christianity into Central Asia. They set sail from Travemünde, near Lübeck, Oct. 27, 1835, and returned to Götting, Aug. 1, 1839. The expedition proved fruitless, and the many dangers and great hardships encountered broke Flemming's health. To qualify himself for medical practice in Hamburg he went to the University of Leyden, where he graduated M.D. in 1840; but shortly after his return to Hamburg he d. there, March 25 (April 2), 1849 (Koch, iii. 73-82; Allg. Deutsche Biog., vii. 115-117).

Flemming was of an energetic temperament, with an ardent patriotism, and a deep love for the Evangelical Cause. He was a gifted poet, of true and deep feeling, who could write charming descriptions of the beauties of nature, and sweet and tender love songs. His secular poems, however, can be understood as having the same influence of the Italian school of Martin Opitz; and it is the same hymns, and especially by his classical "In allen meinen Thäten," that his name lives.

His poems were first collected by the father of his betrothed as D. P. Flemming's Teutsche Poemata, and appeared in 1832 in two editions nearly alike, one at Naumburg and the other at Lübeck. The most complete ed. is that by J. M. Lappenberg, 2 vols., Stuttgart, 1865-66. Of his 41 religious poems (12 hymns, 9 odes, 20 sonnets) three have passed into English.

I. In allen meinen Thäten. Trust in God. This beautiful hymn was written in Nov., 1833, just before he started with the embassy to Moscow (see above); and may often have cheered his own sinking spirit then and in the more trying adventures of the second embassy. It first appeared in his Teutsche Poemata, 1842 (Lübeck ed. p. 287; Lappenberg's ed., i. p. 236), and as No. 4 in Book i. of the Odes, in 15 st. of 6 l. It was included in the Straßburg G. R., 1865, Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and almost all recent collections. Sometimes, as in the Univ. L. S., 1831, No. 646, it is given in full, but more frequently the special stanzas appropriate for travellers (vi., xii., xiv.) are omitted. It is characterised in Koch, viii. 379, as a "pilgrimage song suited for the Christian journey which we must all in faith make through joy and sorrow to our Eternal Home." Laussmann adds that it has often been used appropriately at weddings, was the favourite hymn of Friedrich Wilhelm III. of Prussia, and was sung at the service in the Cathedral of Berlin, July 19, 1870, on the opening of the North German Diet immediately before the Franco-Prussian War.

Flatter, Johann, was b. Nov. 1, 1618, at Suhl, Saxony, where his father was an ironmaster. After studying theology at Wittenberg, Jena, Leipzig, and Rostock, he became in 1638 pre-entor, and in 1646 deacon at Greifswald. On the outbreak of the first Prussian-Swedish war he was forced to flee to Stralsund, but returned to Greifswald in May, 1660. At the death of his senior in 1664, he ought, according to custom, to have been appointed town preacher, but was passed over not only then but also in 1673 and 1676, when the post again became vacant. The outbreak of the second Prussian-Swedish war, immediately after this third disappointment, forced him again to flee to Stralsund, where he d. Jan. 7, 1678 (Koch, ii. 442-443; Molnár's 'Hymnol. Forschungen,' pt. ii., 1832, pp. 5-54). His hymns seem to have been written during his enforced leisure at Stralsund. They appeared, with melodies, entitled Suscitabiles Museorum, as pt. v. of his Himilie's Lust-Gärtlein. Greifswald, 1661 (Hamburg Library).

The only one tr. into English is:—

Ash was sold, and such foolish men.

The most popular of his hymns. Appeared 1661 as above, p. 462, in 7 st. of 6 l., each st. ending "Mein Jesum las auch ich nicht" (see note on Keowna) and with the motto "Omnia in pere-" dam, Jesum servare studo!" Included in the Lyric Forsach, 1673, No. 1089, and recently in the Unz. 1651, No. 357. The only tr. in C. U. is:—

What shall I do? A good tr., omitting st. vi., as No. 110 in Miss Winthrop's C. B. for English, 1863.

Another tr. is: "What to do in my condition," in the Supplement to German Psalms, ed. 1773.

FLOODS OF WATER IN AIR. T. Whytehead. [Monday] Appeared in his Poems, 1842, No. xxv., in 5 st. of 3 l., and entitled "The Firmament." Although not given in the Poems as a tr. of Immense coli Conditor (q. v.), it is evidently based upon that ancient hymn. In its original form it is not in common use. The altered version, "Lo! the firmament doth bear," was given in the Hymnary, 1872, as the hymn for "Monday Evening." Its use is limited.

FLOWERDOW, Alice, was b. in 1759, and married to Mr. Daniel Flowerdow, who for a few years held a Government appointment in Jamaica, and d. in 1801. After his decease, Mrs. Flowerdow kept a Ladies' Boarding-school at Islington. During her residence at Islington she was a member of the General Baptist congregation, in Worship Street (now at Bethnal Green Road). Subsequently she removed to Bury St. Edmunds, and some years later to Ipswich, where she d. Apr. 28, 1830. In 1808 she pub. a small volume of Poems on Moral and Religious Subjects. This work reached a 3rd ed. in 1811, and in that ed.

appeared her well-known harvest hymn, "Fountain of mercy, God of love," q.v. Mrs. Flowerdow's maiden name has not been ascertained.

[W. R. S.]

Folget mir, ruft uns das Leben. J. Rist. [Following Christ.] 1st pub. as No. 1 in the "Vierte Zehn" of his Himilie's Lieder, Lüneburg, 1642, in 16 st. of 8 l., entitled, “A devout hymn to God for the following of Christ in true godliness and all good works.” Included in Freylinghausen’s G. B., 1704, No. 393, omitting st. x, xi, and this form was repeated in most subsequent colls., and is No. 307 in the Unr. L. S., 1851. The only tr. in C. U. is:

Follow me, in me ye live. A good tr. of st. i.–iii., vi., vii., ix., xv., xvi., by Miss Winkworth in the 1st Series of Lyra Gec., 1855, p. 188, entitled “St. Andrew’s Day.” Her st. i., v., vi., are included in Kendrew’s, 1863; and her st. viii., ix., with a st. from her ii., iv., v. beginning, “Saviour, meet it is indeed,” in the Pennsylvania Luth. H. Bk., 1865.

Follen, Eliza Lee, née Cabot, a well-known Unitarian writer, daughter of Samuel Cabot, b. at Boston, August 15, 1787, and married, in 1828, to Professor Charles Follen, who perished on board the “Lexington,” which was burnt on Long Island Sound, Jan. 13, 1840. Mrs. Follen d. at Brookline, Mass., 1860. She was a voluminous writer. Her Poems were first pub. at Boston (Crosby & Co.), 1839, and whilst she was in England she issued another volume for children’s use, entitled The Lark and the Linnet, in 1854. Both volumes also contain some translations from the German, and versions of a few Psalms. Her best known hymns are:

1. How sweet to be allowed to pray. Resignation. Appeared in the Christian Disciple, Sept., 1818, and in her Poems, 1839, p. 116, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled, “Thy will be done.”

3. Lord, deliver. Thou canst save. Prayer for the Slave. Found in Songs of the Free, 1836; but is not given in her Poems, 1839. In Adams and Chapin’s Hymn for Christian Devotion, Boston, U.S., 1846, it is No. 902, in 5 st. of 4 l. In common with No. 2 it has found acceptance outside Unitarian Collections.

4. God, Thou art good, each perfumed flower. This is the original of J. H. Gurney’s hymn, “Yes, God is good,” &c. (q.v.) There is some obscurity about the text. It is found in her Hymns for Children, Boston, 1823, beginning, “God is good; each perfumed flower,” and this obvious misprint (which destroys the metre) was usually copied in later books. It is also given with the same first line as an original piece, never before published, and signed “E. L. C.” (initials of Mrs. Follen’s maiden name), in Emily Taylor’s Sabbath Recreations, Wellington, Salop, 1826, p. 203. This suggests that it was printed in the American book after the ms. was posted to England. Mrs. Follen may have written at first “Yes, God is good,” but this cannot now be determined. It begins, “God, Thou art good,” &c., in her Poems, 1839, p. 119, and in her verses, The Lark and the Linnet, &c., 1854, and in each case is in 6 st. of 4 l., with the title, “God is Good.”

5. Will God, who made the earth and sea. A Child’s Prayer. Given in her Poems, 1839, p. 164, in 7 st. of 4 l. In Dr. Allin’s Children’s Worship, 1878, No. 212, it is abbreviated to 4 st. (i.–iv.), and attributed to “H. Bateman” in error.

For ever we would worship the Lord. I.* Watts. In his Psalms of David, 1719, this version in 3 st. of 4 l. forms the first of three c. m. hymns on Ps. cxiii., and is accompanied with the following note:

“The sense of a great part of this Psalm is found often repeated in the Book of Psalms. I have therefore only taken three small parts of it, and form’d three distinct hymns on very different subjects.”

Although frequently found in the older collections its modern use is limited. [J. J.]

For ever blessed be the Lord. II.* Watts. In his Psalms of David, 1719, this version in 3 st. of 4 l. forms the first of three c. m. hymns on Ps. cxiii., and is accompanied with the following note:

“The sense of a great part of this Psalm is found often repeated in the Book of Psalms. I have therefore only taken three small parts of it, and form’d three distinct hymns on very different subjects.”

Although frequently found in the older collections its modern use is limited. [J. J.]

For ever we would gaze on Thee. A. W. Chatfield. Translations. Written in March, 1874, “whilst journeying to, and attending at the Assize Court at Shrewsbury," and 1st pub. in the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875, No. 461.
FOR EVER WILL I BLESS

For ever will I bless the Lord. J. Conder. [Ps. xxvi.] 1st pub. in his Star in the East with Other Poems, 1824, pp. 31-37, in 8 of 6 1. In 1836 it was repeated in his Convers. Bk., No. 402, with the change at st. i., l. 5, "Oh," to "Then try," &c., and st. vi., l. 3, of "The wicked sin," to "The wicked sink," and in 1856 this corrected form was given in his Hymn of Praise, Prayer, &c., p. ii., as the authorised text. In modern hymnals two or three are given from this hymn: (1) That in the New Comp., 1839, No. 402, composed of st. i., ii., iii., vi. and vii.; and (2) "For ever I will bless the Lord," in Kennedy, 1869, No. 1348, st. i., iii., iv. and vii. [J. J.]

For ever with the Lord. J. Montgomery. [Heaven anticipated.] 1st pub. in The Aeneid, an annual, in 1835, and again in the author's Poet's Portfolio, in the same year, p. 235, in 22 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in his Poetical Works, 1841, p. 267, and in his Original Hymns, 1833, p. 231. In this last the second stanza of pt. ii. is omitted. Numerous versions of this hymn are in C. U., all except four beginning with st. l., but varying in length and arrangement. In America especially these stanzas have attained great popularity. The cento "Beneath the star-lit arch," in Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, is composed of st. vii., xii., xiii. and xiv. slightly altered. In Martinu's Hymn, &c., 1810 and 1873, there are also two centos from this hymn: (1) "In darkness as in light:" and (2) "My Father's house on high," in the Presbyterian Ps. & Hymns for the Worship of God, Richmond, U.S.A., 1867, a third, (3) "My thirty spirit faints." [J. J.]

For mercy's sake I will not cease. C. Wesley. [Missions.] A poem on Ps. xiii., in 21 st. of 4 l., which appeared in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i, Sometimes after J. Wesley's death, probably about 1800, a cento therefrom was given in the West Eng. Bk., No. 149, beginning, "The Lord, the Lord of hosts," and included in many modern collections both in G. Britain and America, is extensive. Orig. text in W. Comp., vol. i., No. 501.

The authorship of this hymn is sometimes attributed to W. Cowper, the poet, but in error. It is not given in any of the collected works of Cowper, nor is his signature in the collection of hymns of "W." is not added to this hymn, in any edition with which we are acquainted, and certainly not in the first of 1778. We attribute it to J. Wesley on the ground that all unattributed hymns in the Olney Hymns are claimed by him. [J. J.]

For Sion's sake I will not cease. C. Wesley. [Missions.] A poem on Ps. xiii., in 21 st. of 4 l., which appeared in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i. Sometimes after J. Wesley's death, probably about 1800, a cento therefrom was given in the West Eng. Bk., No. 149, beginning, "The Lord of hosts," and included in many modern collections both in G. Britain and America, is extensive. Orig. text in W. Comp., vol. i., No. 501, beginning, "The Lord of hosts," and included in many modern collections both in G. Britain and America, is extensive. Orig. text in W. Comp., vol. i., No. 501.

The revised ed. and 1785, this cento was omitted in favour of "Why not now, my God, my God," which was formerly No. 411. [J. J.]

For Thy mercy and Thy grace. H. Dowden. [Old and New Year.] Written in 1811, and 1st pub. in the Church of England Magazine, in 1843, p. 15, in 7 of 4 1., and entitled, "A Hymn for the commencement of the Year." In 1851 it was republished with one alteration, and the omission of st. ii. and iii. in A. Tert's Ps. & Hymns. This was reproduced, with further alterations, in H. C. & M., 1861. Numerous versions exist in modern hymnals, Tert's abridged text, as in the Nicotian Hymnal, being most in favour. In 1873 the author included it in its original form, with two unimportant alterations, in his Hymns and Verses, &c., pp. 7, 8. Orig. text as above, authorised text in Thring's Coll., 1882, and the Westminster Abbey Hymn Bk., 1883. The first stanza sometimes added, as "The Church Hymn," 1871, is not in the original and is seldom adopted. The hymn in its various forms and readings, is the most popular, and most widely used of Mr. Dowden's productions. [J. J.]

Forgive, O Lord, our frailties [wandering] past. [Before Holy Communion.] This hymn is 1st printed as a leaflet, and was then included in the Psalter Collected, 1796 (but without music), in the following form:—

"BEFORE THE SACRAMENT. Dr. Cook.

Solo.

"Forgive, O Lord, our frailties past,
Henceforth we will obey thy call;
Our sins far from us let us cast,
And turn to thee, devoutly all.

Chorus.

Then with archangels we shall sing,
Praises to bea'th' eternal King.

Duet.

"Hear us, O Lord, in mercy hear,
Our guilt with sorrow we deplore;
Pity our anguish, calm our fear,
And give us grace to sin no more.

Chorus.

"Then with archangels we shall sing,
Praises to bea'th' eternal King.

FORGIVE, O LORD, OUR
Forgive them, O my Father. Cecil F. Alexander. [Good Friday.] Contributed to the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875, in 6 st. of 4 l., and based on the words “Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do.” In 1881 it was repeated in Mrs. Brock’s Children’s H. Bk., and is also found in one or two American collections.

Forsyth, Christina, daughter of Thomas Forsyth, and sister of W. Forsyth, q.c., sometime member for Cambridge, was b. in Liverpool in 1825, and d. at Hastings, March 16, 1839. During a long and painful illness she composed several hymns and poems which were issued as leaflets. These were collected after her death, and pub. in 1861, as Hymns by C. F. (Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 239). From this volume the following have passed into a few collections:

1. Himself hath done it all. O how those words. Reformation.
4. O what a happy lot is mine. Union with Christ.

Fortem virile pecore. Card. Silvio Antoniano. [Holy Women.] Included by Pope Clement VIII. in the Roman Breviary, Venic, 1603, f. 37 b., in the Common, as the hymn for 1st and 2nd Vespers, and at Lauds in the OFFICE for the Common of Holy Women. It is also in other Breviaries: Daniel, iv. p. 311, and Card. Newman’s Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838–65. The author, Cardinal Silvio Antoniano, was b. at Rome in 1540. Through the influence and patronage of Pope Pius IV. he became Professor of the Belles Lettres in the Collegio Romano, and subsequently rose to be the head of the college, and a cardinal. He d. in 1603.

Translations in C. U.:—
1. High let us all our voices raise. By E. Caswall. 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 223, in 5 st. of 4 l. It has been included in the Hyns. for the Year, and other Roman Catholic collections for Missions and Schools; and in the People’s H., 1887, and other Anglican hymn-books. In Caswall’s Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 118, another tr. in s.m. is substituted for this. It begins, “Laud we the saints most sweet.”

2. This woman more than woman strong. By J. B. Bestie, in his Church Hymns. 1849, p. 59.

3. O'yer all the Church thy praise be told. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. & Anthems, 1850, in 5 st. of 4 l. In connection with this tr. there are two cantos which must be noted. The first is No. 87 in the Hymnal for the use of St. John the Evangelist, &c., Aberdeen, 1870. This is composed of st. i. this tr., st. li.–iv. from the People’s H. as above. The second is No. 417, in the Hymnary, 1872, beginning, “To share the Lamb’s high marriage rites.” The first stanza of this cento is J. D. Chambers’s tr. of “Ad nuptias Agnus Pater” (Laudes Symon, pt. ii., 1866, p. 47), and the remaining stanzas are this tr. by R. Campbell, slightly altered.

Fortes cadendo Martyros. Jean Baptiste de Saumé. [Many Martyrs.] Appeared in the Oecumenic Breviary, 1688, p. 19, and in his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689 (ed. 1698, p. 245). It was given in the Paris Breviary, 1736, and is also in Card. Newman’s Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

Of the martyrs we sing. By J. Williams in his Hys. tr. from the Panden Breviary, 1839, p. 287, in 8 st. of 4 l. This, abbreviated to 6 st., and altered, is No. 201 in Skinner’s Daily Service Hymnal, 1864. Another tr. is:—
The valiant martyr-host to praise. J. D. Chambers, 1866, p. 16. [J. J.]

Forth from the dark and stormy sky. Bp. H. Heber. [Lent.] Appeared in his Hymns, &c., 1827, in 2 st. of 6 l., and appointed for the 2nd Sun. after Trinity. It was also included in the 1842 ed. of the same. The use of this hymn has been very varied. In the New Liturgy, and Thring’s Coll., it is appointed for “Holy Communion.” (Its claim thereto being evidently the second line of st. i. “Lord, to Thine altar’s shade we flee,” and the concluding line of each stanza, “Turn not, O Lord, Thy guests away”); whilst in Kennedy it is given for “Passion Week,” and in other collections for different seasons. In most cases the text is unaltered, as in Thring’s Coll., 1862, No. 552. Its American use is extensive. [J. J.]

Forth in Thy Name, O Lord, I go. C. Wesley. [Morning.] 1st pub. in Hymns andSac. Poems, 1749, vol. i. p. 246. “For Believers Before Work,” No. 144, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was included in the Wes. H. Bk., in 1780, with the omission of st. iii. It has come into most extensive use both in Great Britain Forth to the Land of and America. In common with many of the older hymns it has undergone alterations at various hands. The line which has given the greatest trouble to the compilers is, "And prove Thy acceptable will." This has undergone many changes, but that given in the Leed's H. Bk., in 1853, "And prove Thy good and perfect will," has been received by common consent as the best and most musical reading. Orig. text, P. Works, 1808-72, vol. v. p. 30. The doxology in H. A. & M. and some other collections is not in the original. In 1767, R. Conyers gave it in his Coll. as "Forth in Thy strength, O Lord, we go," but this alteration has passed out of use. [J. J.]

Forth to the land of promise bound.

H. Alford. [Life a Pilgrimage.] Written at Apton in December, 1828 (Life, 1872, p. 39), and was given in his Pr. & Hymns, 1844, No. 68, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in his Year of Prayer, 1867, No. 181. It is also in several American collections. Its subject is the journey of the Children of Israel spiritualised. [J. J.]

Forti tegente brachio. C. Coffin. [Eastert.] Included in the revised Paris Brev., 1736, in 8 st. of 4 l., as the Vesper hymn in the Sunday and Ferial Offices, beginning with Low Sunday and extending to the Feast of the Ascension. It was also given in the author's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 184, and is repeated from the Paris Brev. in Card. Newman's Hymns Ecclesiatis, 1838-65. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Protected by the Almighty hand. By J. Chandler, in his Hymn of the Primitive Church, &c., 1871, p. 36, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is given in a few collections, including the 1862 Appendix to the H. Noted.

2. Bound by a holy charm. By L. Williams, in the British Magazine, April, 1837 (vol. xi. p. 387, together with the Latin text); and again in his Hymn from the Paris Brev., 1849, p. 132, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Child's Christmas Year, 1841-71, it begins with st. ii., "Let us his praises sing," and in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 279, it is altered to "Beneath a mighty arm."

3. Fenced by a strong right arm. By W. J. Blew. 1st printed on flyleaf for the use of his own congregation, 1845-51, and then pub. in his Church Hymn and Tune Bk., 1852, in 8 st. of 4 l., and 1 st. of 10 l. In this form it was repeated in Rice's Select from that work, 1870.

4. Led by a mighty arm. By J. A. Johnston. In the 1st ed. of his English Hym., 1852, this tr. is given in full, but in the 2nd ed., 1856, it was changed to 6 st., in 4 st. of 6 l. This is continued in later editions.

Text, not in C. U.:

1. Helped by the Almighty's arm at last. J. D. Chambers, 1851, p. 179.

2. By God's strong arm stretched forth to save. R. F. Liddell, in Lyra Memoriastic, 1854.

From this hymn, st. vii., viii., have been taken as a separate hymn, beginning—"Jam Paschae natarem Christus ost." In its Latin form it is not in use as a separate hymn. The following lines are in C. U.:—

1. Now Christ our Passover is slain. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hymn and Tune Bk., 1852-55, and again in Rice's Hymnals from the same. 1870.

2. Christ is become our Paschal Lamb. This tr. in Chope's Hymnal, 1862, and the Parish H. Bk. of 1863-75, is from L. Williams, as above, rewritten from 6 st. to 8 st.

[For.]

Fortunatus, Venantius Honorius Clementianus, was b. at Ceneda, near Treviso, about 590. At an early age he was converted to Christianity at Aquileia. Whilst a student at Ravenna he became almost blind, and recovered his sight, as he believed miraculously, by anointing his eyes with some oil taken from a lamp that burned before the altar of St. Martin of Tours, in a church in that town. His recovery induced him to make a pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Martin, at Tours, in 593, and that pilgrimage resulted in his writing the rest of his life in Gaul. At Poitiers he formed a romantic, though purely platonistic, attachment for Queen Rhanegunda, the daughter of Bertharins, king of the Thuringians, and the wife, though separated from him, of Lothair I., or Clotaire, king of Neustria. The reader is referred for further particulars of this part of the life of Fortunatus to Smith and Page's Diet. of Christian Biography, vol. ii. p. 592. It is sufficient to say here that under the influence of Rhanegunda, who at that time lived at Poitiers, where she had founded the convent of St. Croix, Fortunatus was ordained, and ultimately, after the death of Rhanegunda in 597, became Bishop of Poitiers shortly before his own death in 609.

The writings, chiefly poetical, of Fortunatus, which are still extant, are very numerous and various in kind, including the liveliest Vers de Secoua and the grandest hymns, while much that he is known to have written, including a volume of Hymns for all the Pastoralas of the Christian Year, is lost. Of what remains may be mentioned, The Life of St. Martin of Tours, his Patron Saint, in four books, containing 274 hexameter lines, a complete list of his works will be found in the articlementioned above.

His contributions to hymnology must have been very considerable, as the name of his best volume implies, but what remains to us of that character, as being certainly his work, does not comprise at most more than 8 or 10 compositions, and of some of these even his authorship is more than doubtful. His best known hymn is the famous "Vexilla Regis prodeunt," so familiar to us in our Church Hymnals in some English form or other, especially, perhaps, in Dr. Seale's translation, "The Royal Banners forward go." The next most important composition claimed for him is "Pange lingua," a noble and solemn prayer in certain, but there would seem to be little doubt according to Smidt (Nota et Spont. Studien, Apollin, Lab. III., Ep. 4), that it was more probably written by Claudianus Marcellus. Besides these, which are on the Passion, there are four hymns by Fortunatus for Christmas, one of which is given by Daniel, "An eccl. omne saculum," one for Lent, and one for Easter. Of "Lustra sex quit jam peregit," of which an imitation in English by H. Mant, "See the destined day arise," is well known, the authorship is by some attributed to Fortunatus, and by some to St. Ambrose.

The general character of the poetry of Venantius Fortunatus is that of an old master, being distinguished neither for its classical nor, with very rare exceptions, for its moral correctness. He represents the "last expiring effort of the Latin muse in Gaul," to retain something of the "old classical culture amid the advancing tide of barbarism." Whether we look at his style, or even his grammar and quantities, we find but too much that is open to criticism, whilst he often offends against good taste in the sentiments he expresses. Occasionally, as we see in the "Vexilla Regis," he rises to a rugged grandeur in which he has few rivals, and some of his poems are by no means devoid of simplicity and pathos. But these are the exceptions and not the rule in his writings, and we know not how far he may have owed even these to the womanly instincts and gentler, purer influence of Rhadegunda. Thirry, in his Révélations providentielles, gives a lively sketch of Fortunatus, as in Archbishop Trench's words (Sac. Lat. Poetry, 1874, p. 132), "a clever, frivolous, self-indulgent and vain character," an exaggerated character, probably, because one can hardly identify the author of "Vexilla Regis," in such a mere man of the world, or look at the writer of "Crux benedicta nitet, Dominus quae carmen peependit" q.v., as being wholly devoid of the highest aspirations after things divine. A quarto edition of his Works was pub. in Rome in 1876. [D. S. W.]

Fountain of comfort and of love. P. Doddridge. [Prayer on behalf of Ministers.] 1st pub. in J. Oton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 271, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 296. In both cases the heading is the same, "Ministers comforted that they may comfort others"; but in the latter the opening line reads, "Fountain of comfort, source of love," this being the only difference in the text. (See English Hymnology, Early, § XIV.)

Fountain of grace, rich, full, and free. J. Edington. [All-sufficiency of Christ.] Pub. in his Hys. for the Chamber of Sickmess, n.d. (1844), p. 19, in 4 st. of 4 l. In 1855 it was given anonymously in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., No. 381. From that date it gradually grew in favour until it has taken its place in most of the leading American hymnals. [J. J.]

Fountain of mercy, God of love. Alice Flowerdew. [Harvest.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Moral and Religious Subjects, 3rd ed., 1811, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Harvest Hymn." It has been contended by some that it is taken from John Needham's hymn, No. 1, in his Hymns Devotional and Moral, &c., 1763, which opens:—

"To praise the ever bounteous Lord,
My soul, wake all thy powers:
He calls, and at His voice come forth
The smiling harvest hours."

Needham's hymn, however, is very inferior in design and composition, and has nothing in common with this, by Mrs. Flowerdew, save the subject of Harvest. Mrs. Flowerdew's hymn was brought into congregational use by Cotterill in his Sel., 1819, where it was given in 5 st., the last being by himself or Montgomery. The latter repeated it in his Christian Psalms, 1825. In the Anglican H. Bk., 1888, it is given as "O Fountain of mercy, God of love." Its use in its original and other forms is extensive in most English-speaking countries. Orig. text in Hys. Comp., No. 50.

An altered version of this hymn is very popular. It was given in Murray's Hymnal, 1832, as:—

"Father of mercies, tide of love, Whose gifts all creatures share:"

and later in numerous collections in Great Britain and America, including H. A. & M., 1861 (where a doxology is substituted for the last st.), and others. Another form of this hymn was given anonymously in Longfellow and Johnson's American Unitarian Book of Hymns, FOUQUÉ, F. H. C. DE LA M.

1846; their Hymns of the Spirit, 1844; and in Mrs. E. Courtauld's Pr., Hymns & Anthems, London, 1860. It begins: "Fountain of life, and God of love."

[F.J.]

FOUQUÉ, Friedrich Heinrich Carl de la Motte, was b. Feb. 12, 1777, at Brandenburg on the Havel, where his father, of an ancient and noble Hugenot family, was a retired officer of dragons. Educated under the training of the French Reformed Church, it was intended that he should enter the University of Halle as a student of law. By his own preference however he entered the army, and in 1794 was appointed cornet in the Duke of Weimar's regiment of cuirassiers. In 1803 he married and retired to Neunhausen near Rathsow, Brandenburg. When, in March, 1813, the King of Prussia invited his people to arm against France, Fouqué offered himself as a volunteer and served as a lieutenant of cavalry till he was disabled at the battle of Lützen, May 2, 1813, and with the rank of major retired once more to Neunhausen. After the death of his wife, in 1831, he resided for some time at Halle, where he gave lectures in the University on the history of poetry; and finally settled in Berlin, where, two days after a stroke of apoplexy, he d. Jan. 21, 1843 (Koel. vii. 6-20; Ally's Deutsche Biog. 1851, p. 212, 213).

Fouqué is best known as one of the leaders of the "romantic" school of German literature, and by his wonderfully successful efforts making the best features of the knight and minstrelsy of the 12th century live again in the pages of his romances as an example and model to his own time. His fame rests not on his poems, but on his romances, especially that of Undine (1st ed. Berlin, 1811, 17th ed. 1859—frequently tr. into English). His Hymns, while affording a true and thoughtful echo of his religious and sentimental feelings, cannot be said to have great depth of Christian experience or genuine church use, and hardly any have come into church use in Germany. He never had only published 18 Mission hymns at Leipzig, 1822, as Gesangbuch des harten Landes. From his papers his second wife issued two collections: Gesangbuch für die Gesellschaft der Pfarrer in Berlin, 1848, and Gesangbuch für den Oekumenischen Kirchenrat in Berlin, 1862, but they contain few compositions that can be called hymns, and of these hardly any are suitable for church use.

Of his hymns those tr. into English arc:

1. Was du vor tausend Jahren, Christ our Light. Founded on St. Mark x. 46-52, and included 1844, p. 11, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled, "The Faithfulness of the Saviour." Previously in Bunyan's Vencat. 1833, No. 761. Pr. as:

A thousand years haveiaet, a good and full tr. by Miss Cox in her Sacred Hymns, from the Ger., 1841, p. 105, repeated, omitting at. ii.-iv., as No. 567 in Hodge and Huntington's Hymns for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, U.S., 1853.

Other trs. as:

(1) "Thy mercy, Lord, is still the same," by Lady E. Borrowbridge, 1843. (2) "My Saviour, what Thou didst of old," by Miss Windrowe, 1855, p. 38.

His hymns not in English C. U. are:

11. Wie schenken so felieher zu unserm Füssen Mission. For missionaries about to set out on their voyage. 1823, p. 11, in 6 st., entitled, "At the sea," by Miss Windrowe, 1858, p. 112. (2) "Dark, mighty Ocean, rolling to our feet," by Miss Northfield, 1844, p. 26, repeated in L. H. T. Ch. at, 1848, p. 5.

FOX, Jane. [Grew, Jane.]

FOX, William Johnson, the son of a small farmer in Suffolke, was b. in 1786, a boy he worked as a weaver, but subsequently spent six years in a bank. He was educated for the ministry under Dr. Pye Smith, Homerton. His first settlement was with an Orthodox Independent congregation; but he very soon became a Unitarian. In 1817 he settled in London as minister of the Parliament Court Chapel. In 1824 he removed to a new chapel at South Place, Finsbury, where he remained until 1832. He was a prominent member of the Anti Corn-Law League, joined in founding the Westminster Review, and from 1831 to 1836 was owner of the Monthly Repository. From 1847 to 1863 he sat in Parliament as member for Oldham. He d. in 1864.

In 1841 he pub. Hymns and Anthems, London, Charles Fox. This collection contained 150 selections from various authors, including Mrs. Sarah Adams, who was a member of the congregation. He included 18 of his own hymns. A new and enlarged ed. of his Hymns, &c., was pub. in 1873. A memorial edition of his Works was pub. in 12 vols. in 1865.

His hymns which have come into C. U. outside his collection include:

1. A little child in busies ark. Men.?
2. Call them from the dead. The Three Crosses.
5. Jesus we're wrought to cruel madness. Good Friday.
6. The sage his cup of hemlock quaff'd. Resignation.

Frances, Grace J., a nom de plume of Mrs. F. C. Van Alstyne.

Franc, James. [Palter, English.]

FRANCIS, Benjamin, M.A., was b. in Wales in 1784. He was baptized at the age of 15, and began to preach at 19. He studied at the Bristol Baptist College, and commenced his ministry at Sodbury. In 1757 he removed to Horley (afterwards called Shortwood), in Gloucestershire. There he remained, through a happy and very successful ministry of 42 years, until his death in 1799. He was the author of many poetical compositions:

(1) Confutation, a Poem in Four Parts (1770); (2) Regrets on the Death of the Rev. George Whitefield, (Lamb's Emulous Day, and Joshua Thomas, The Association, a Poem (1730); (4) a Poetical Address to the Stockbridge Indians; (5) two satirical pieces on the Bapistical controversy; (6) Caliphas in Egypt, and (7) The Oracle, the former passing through several editions and being reprinted in America.

Francis was the author of 5 hymns in Rippon's Sel. 1787, all of which are still in C. U.:—

1. Before Thy throne, eternal King. Meetings of Ministers or Church Conferences.

In Society's Songs of G. & G., 1782.

3. In sweet [loud] rattled strains. Opening of a Place of Worship. This was given in Rippon, No. 328, in 8 st. of 6 l., with the note: "Hung on opening the Meeting House at Horley (Gloucestershire, this Chapel.) Sep._

with the soul as in his "Jesu, meine Freude." He stands in close relationship with Gerhardt, sometimes more scolding and occasionally more passionate, but not on the whole so natural nor so suited for popular comprehension or Church use.

His hymns appeared mostly in the works of his friends Weigelmann, Crüger and Peter. They were collected in his Geistliches Sion. Guben, 1774, to the number of 110; and of these the 57 hymns (the other 53 being psalm versions of no great merit) were reprinted with a biographical preface by Dr. J. L. Pasig as Johann Franck's Geistliche Lieder, Grimm, 1846. Two of those tr. into English are from the Latin of J. Campanus (q. v.). Four other hymns are annotated under their own first lines:—

- "Brannquell aller Gütter"; "Drei- nigkeit der Gottheit wahrer Spiegel"; "Jesu, meine Freude"; "Schmücke dich, o liebe Seele." The rest are:

1. Hymnus in English C. U.
2. Herr Gott, du toben wir, Regier. Thanksgiving for Peace. Evidently written as a thanksgiving for the conclusion of the Thirty Years' War, by the Peace of Westphalia, Oct. 24, 1648. 1st pub. in the Crüger-Rangen G. B., Berlin, 1653, No. 306, in 9 st. of 8 l., as the first of the "Hymns of Thanksgiving for Peace attained"; and repeated 1674, p. 182, and 1846, p. 77, as above. Included in Crüger's Praxis pietatis, in Bollhagen's G. B., 1736, &c. The only tr. in C. U. is:

Unfold your gates and open a tr. of st. 1, 3, 6, by A. T. Russell, as No. 30 in his Ps. & Hym., 1851; repeated as No 30 in Kennedy, 1863, and as No. 102 in Holy Song, 1869.

3. Herr Gott, wir loben dir, Regier. Thanksgiving for Peace. Evidently written as a thanksgiving for the conclusion of the Thirty Years' War, by the Peace of Westphalia, Oct. 24, 1648. 1st pub. in the Crüger-Rangen G. B., Berlin, 1653, No. 306, in 9 st. of 8 l., as the first of the "Hymns of Thanksgiving for Peace attained"; and repeated 1674, p. 182, and 1846, p. 77, as above. Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1856, and many later collections, and as No. 591, in the Univ. L. S., 1851. The only tr. in C. U. is:

Lord God, we worship Thee, a very good version of st. 2, 3, 6, 8, by Miss Winkworth in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 183. Repeated in full in the S. P. C. K. C. Hymns, 1871; the Hymnary, 1872; the Psalter, 1878; and in America in the Pennsylvania Luth. C. B., 1886. In the American Prospectus, 1871, and the Hymnary, 1874, and the Ohio Luth. Hymn., 1880, the tr. of st. 8 is omitted.

4. Herr ich habe misgeschindet. Lent. Of this fine hymn of penitence st. 1 appeared as No. 19 in Crüger's Geistliche Kirchenmelodien, Leipzig, 1849. The full form in 8 st. of 6 l. is No. 41 in the Crüger-Rangen G. B., Berlin, 1653, entitled "For the forgiveness of sins," repeated 1674, p. 39, and 1846, p. 37, as above. Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1856, and others, and in the Univ. L. S., 1851. The only tr. in C. U. is:

Lord, to Thee I make confession, a very good tr., omitting st. 4, 5, 6, by Miss Winkworth in her C. B. for England, 1868, No. 44. Repeated in the Appendix to the Hymn for St. John's, Aberdeen, 1865-1870; and in the Pennsylvania Luth. C. B., 1868; Evangelical Hymn., No. 8, 1880; Ohio Luth. Hymn., 1880. Another tr. is: "Lord, how oft I have offended," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 177.

FRANCK, MICHAEL.

L. S., 1851, No. 803. It is a powerful picture of the vanity and nothingness of this world and all its treasures. The only tr. in C. U. is:

0 how cheating. 0 how defiling. It, &c. In full by Sir J. Bowring in his Hymns, 1825, No. 335. The tr. of st. i., ii., iv., viii. were included in Curtiss's Union Uell., 1827, and of st. i., ii., viii. in the Plymouth Coll., 1855.

Another tr. is: "Ah, how fleeting, ah, how cheating..." by N. L. Proctoringham, 1876, p. 153.

FRANCK, Salomo. s. of Jakob Franck, financial secretary at Weimar, was b. at Weimar, March 6, 1659. Little is known of his early history. He probably studied at Jena, and seems thereafter to have held some appointment at Zwicau. In 1689 he became secretary of the Schwarzburg ducal administration at Arnstadt; and in 1697 of the Saxony administration and of the consistory at Jena. He was then, in 1702, appointed secretary of the consistory, librarian, and curator of the ducei collection of coins and medals at Weimar. He d. at Weimar July 11, 1725 (Koch, v. 420-426; Allg. Deutsche Biog., vi. 213-214: Schauer's introduction, &c.).

He was a member of the Fruitsharing Society, and the author of a considerable number of secular poems, which are almost all "occasional" pieces and not forgotten. A diligent worker and a man of true piety, he had many family affections to bear, and an undying current of meditation on death is present in many of his hymns. As a hymn-writer he is distinguished for ease and correctness of style; for adaptation to popular understanding and congregational singing; for his love and skill in restraints to his hymns; and for his skill in word-painting and in setting forth contrasts.

Of his hymns (about 330 in all) which still continue to use in use in Germany, the most important appeared in his (1) Geistliche Poesie, Weimar, 1855, and in his (2) Geistl. und Weltl. Poesie, vol. i., Jena, 1711, vol. ii., Jena, 1716. A selection of 46 of his Geistliche Lieder with a biographical and critical introduction by Dr. J. K. Schauer appeared at Halle, 1855. Eight of his hymns have passed into English, as follows:

1. Hymn in English C. U.
2. Ach Gott verlass mich nicht. Supplication. A beautiful hymn of supplication for God's help founded on Ps. xxiii. 22. It is No. 1 in the Appendix to the Andere Thaid des Naumburger Gebet Buches, Naumburg, 1714, p. 106, in 5 st. of 8 l., marked "Salomon Francke." (ed. 1717, p. 487, marked "Gettgelassen Unverlassen, Salomon Francke.") The editor of this collection, J. M. Schaulius, who was one of the best hymnologists of the time, evidently thought that it was by Francke, but it has not yet been found in any work pub. by Francke himself. It begins and ends with "Ach Gott verlass mich nicht." It is included in Schauer's introduction, and in many recent hymnals, as in the Berlin G. B., 1829, the Wittenberg G. B., 1842, Hannover G. B., 1834, &c. The tr. in C. U. are:

2. O God, forsake me not! Thine hand, by M. W. Stryker, in his Hymns and Verses, 1883, p. 32, and repeated in his Christian Chorals, 1885.

3. I.ch weiss es wird mein Ende kommen. For... the Dying. 1711, as above, p. 91, in 7 st. of 6 l., entitled "The author's daily dying thoughts." Included by Schauer, 1855, p. 79; in Barg's G. R., Breslau, 1746, &c. The trs. in C. U. are:

1. I know my end must surely come. A tr. of st. 1., vii., in 2 st. of 6-8's, by Miss Winkworth, in the 2nd series of her Lyra Ger., 1858, p. 293.

2. The 1 know the doom that must befall me. This is the above tr., rewritten by Miss Winkworth to the original metre, and given in her C. B., for England, 1863, No. 135. To this tr. of st. 11, iv., vi., were added, and the others altered and beginning. "I know full well death must befall me," included in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1850.

3. So ruhest du, o mein Ruh. Easter Hym. 1853, as above, p. 29, in 7 st. of 4 l., entitled "On the burial of Jesus." It is a beautiful hymn of the entombment of Christ, founded on the text of "O Traurigkeit," (g. v.), included in Schauer, 1855, p. 44, and in many German collections, as the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 118.

Frequently it appears in altered forms. Thus J. A. Schlegel, 1766, p. 86, altered it to "So schlimmster du in stiller Ruh," and the Berlin G. R., 1790, No. 192, further altered it to "Zur Grabesruh entschlafest du." The trs. in C. U., all from the original, are:

1. Thou who hast blest my soul with rest, a good tr., omitting st. ii., v., by A. T. Russell, as No. 103 in his Ps. & Hym., 1851.

2. Thou restest in the tomb beneath, a good tr., omitting st. ii., v., as No. 83 in J. H. Thrap's Ps. & Hym., 1853.

4. So rest, my Rest! A very good tr., omitting st. ii., by R. Maiss, as No. 93 in the ed., 1857, of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 184). This has been included in Chopé's Hym., 1882; Kennedy, 1893; the Hymnary, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1880-82; &c.; and in America in the Evang. Hym., N. Y., 1889, and Lowes Domini, 1884. The form in Allen's Sung Hym., No. 324, is a recast partly taken from Miss Winkworth's tr. of "Nun gingst auch du" (see Strauss, V. F.).

Other trs. are: (1) "Now to the tomb Thyself art come," from Schlegel, by Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 316). (2) "So dost Thou rest," in the British Herald, Dec. 1846, p. 376, repeated as No. 421 in Reid's Praxis Skr., 1872. (3) "So thou art resting, O my Rest," in the British Herald, April, 1849, p. 52.

ii. Hymns not in English C. U.

iv. Jesu warst doch uneracht. For the Dying, 1711, as above, p. 64, in 8 st., and Schauer, as No. 31, each st. ending "Mensch, bedenke doch, das Ende." Tr. as "Oh, what is human life below," by Miss Cox in Lyra Jacobae, 1864, p. 47, repeated in her st. from German, 1864, p. 135, in the original metre, beginning "What is human life below." Also tr. by Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 52; and by F. M. Wool, 1855, p. 5.

v. Gott, du Liebst das ewig Bleiben. Morning, 1716, as above, p. 106, in 6 st., entitled "Morning Devotions," and in Schauer, p. 4. Tr. by H. J. Buckholl, 1842, p. 12; and by Miss Manning, 1863, p. 120.

vii. Ich weiss, es kann mir nichts geschahen. God's Guidance. 1711, as above, p. 211, in 5 st. (1. 5, 6 of each st. being a refrain), entitled "On the words of Ps. 114. 23, 24." In Schauer, p. 20. Tr. by Miss Manning, 1863, p. 22.

viii. Mein Gott, wie bist du so verbergen. Providence. 1711, as above, p. 76, in 6 st. (1. 5, 6 of each st. being a refrain), entitled "The wonderfully bloomed flowerings of God." In Schauer, p. 16. Tr. by Miss Manning, 1863, p. 7.}

Francke, August Hermann, a. of Johann Francke, a lawyer in Lubeck, was b. at Lubeck, March 22, 1683. He studied at the Universities of Erfurt, Kiel, and Leipzig, graduated M.A. at Leipzig, 1685, and thereafter lectured on Biblical subjects at Leipzig for some time. About Michaelmas, 1687, he went to Lüneburg to work under the pious superintendent C. H. Sandhagen; and thence composing his first sermon (on St. John xx. 31) he underwent that change which made him call Lüneburg his spiritual birthplace. After spending the greater part of 1688 at Hamburg, he stayed two months with P. J. Spener, at Dresden, and then returned about Lent, 1689, to Leipzig, where he resumed his Biblical lectures until the old orthodox party procured an edict forbidding them in the beginning of 1690. On March 10, 1690, he received the call to become diaconus of the Augustine Church at Erfurt, and there, by his stirring exhortations to renewal of heart, living faith, and holy life, he drew many, even Roman Catholics, around him, but by a combination of the old orthodox Lutherans with the Romanists he was expelled from Erfurt, Sept. 27, 1691. After a lengthened visit to P. J. Spener, then Prost of St. Nicholas's Church, Berlin, he was appointed by the Elector of Brandenburg, Dec. 22, 1691, as professor of Greek and the Oriental languages, and in 1698 ordinary professor of Theology in the University of Halle; being also appointed in 1691 preacher at St. George's Church in Glaucia (suburb of Halle), a post which he exchanged in 1715 for the pastorate of St. Ulrich's, Halle. After his left side was paralyzed in Nov. 1726, he painedly endured much suffering till his death on June 8, 1727, at Halle (Koch, iv. 305-322; Allg. Deutschr. Biogr., vii. 219-231).

Francke was the spiritual son of P. J. Spener, and became one of the leaders in the "Pietistic" movement which so powerfully influenced Germany, 1690-1730, and led to the tone of the community after the suppression of the Thirty Years' War, revived the educational system, began systematic provision for the poor, and refined and purified domestic life. Francke was the spiritual leader and teacher, and under him and the band of professors that gathered to Halle, Halle became the headquarters of Pietism. During his time Halle sent out some 8000 graduates in theology, men imbued with his spirit, good exponents, and devoted pastors, who spread their doctrines all over Germany, and in the early decades of the 18th cent. occupied a majority of the pulpits.

The extensive buildings at Halle, which now bear the title of the "Francke Institutions," are a monument of his simple faith and philanthropic zeal. He began at Easter, 1690, by opening a room in his house for instructing the poor children of Glauca, with a capital of about thirteen shillings. About Whitenside, 1686, he opened the beginnings of the Latin School, 1686 of the book-selling and apothecary businesses, 1708 of the mission to the East Indies, 1718 of the Bible Society. On Sunday, formerly occupied by beer and dancing gardens, the foundation stone of the great orphanage was laid July 13, 1699, in a spirit of humble faith in God and fervent prayer, trusting to him for the means to pay for the work as it progressed; and week by week as they were needed the supplies came in from far and near. This work, in regard to his sermons and lectures, Francke gave great opposition to meet, but the Commission of Enquiry which his enemies procured resulted in a cabinet order of 1752, which is the Charter of his institutions. In 1727 there were 134 orphans in the orphanage; and besides these 2367 scholars in the various Training schools, of whom some 369, as well as 225 pastor students, received daily rations; while in 1563 the value of the building was about £4,000, and nearly 350 scholars received instruction.

Distinguished as a professor, a philanthropist, a pastor, and as a preacher of gospel simplicity, and soul-stirring earnestness, Francke was not prolific as a hymn-writer. Only three hymns are known by him, of which are:

1. Fasten ein Schritt zur Ewigkeit. New Year. 1st pub. in his Schriften, Anno 1635, and God knew it; but not all, Halle, 1695, p. 535, in 1st. of Nov., as a "Morning and Evening hymn, entitled "The Voice of the Bridegroom.""

2. "Gottlob ein Schritt zur Ewigkeit ist aben mal vorbei." Francke adds that in his lifetime Francke found cases where the soul had been saved, that two days before his death he caused the hymn to be read to him, and said, "My faithful Jesus, I have given myself to Thee, soul and body that is sure of it, and that on the day on which he died, June 1727, this hymn was one of those sung at the closing meeting at Hertford.

The three in C. U. are:

1. Thank God! that towards eternity, a full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd series, 1857.

2. Oh wouldst Thou in Thy glory come, a tr. of st. iv., v., viii., that towards eternity, and beginning, "Bless God, that towards eternity," were included as No. 74 in the Amer. Eph. Hymn. for Ch. and Home.

3. Was nun auser und von ihnen. Cross and Consolation. A fine hymn of Trust in God, founded on Ps. ixii. 5-8. Written in memory of Eleonore, wife of J. C. Michaelis, professor at Halle, and appended to the funeral sermon preached by Francke on Ps. xii. 2, in his George's Church, Glauchau, Nov. 1, 1711. Included as No. 500 in Freylinghausen's Neues Gesammeltes, B. 1714, in 9 st. of 8 l, and 1837 (1853, No. 2250 in Knapp's Eng. L. 8, 1857).

Launay, in Koch, viii. 505-682, speaks of this lady as one who suffered from severe afflictions, "but what from that quiet sitting on the help of the Lord, of Whom he felt the words, 'I have dealt with thee in the time of thine affliction, and in the abundance of thine adversity have I sustained thee.'" "This hymn also a lamentation, and with life and conversion, he found in his conversations with Francke, Francke's own thought and conversation, in the sentences of which the Lord had enabled him to receive, exactly at the time when he needed it, profounder help," in answer to his prayers during the building and conducting of the great Orphanage at Halle.

Of this hymn (which should be read with the history of his great work at Halle) the only tr. in C. U. is:

What within me and without, a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth in the 1st ed. of her Lyra Ger., 1855, p. 126 (st. lii. being added in the 2nd ed., 1856), and there as No. 139 in her C. B. for England, 1863. With the altered first line, "Lord, Thou art my Rock and Strength," three centes are in American C. U.:

Franklin, Jonathan (b. 1760, d. 1833), was originally minister of a Baptist church at Croydon, but in 1808 removed to Redcross Street Chapel, London, where he remained until death. His Hymns & Spiritual Songs were pub. in 1801, and reprinted in 1810 and 1812. As a hymn-writer he is known by three hymns only, of very moderate quality, which appears, as the closing hymn of Pt. i. of later editions of W. Gadsby's Sel. Ch., 1st ed. 1814.

Free, yet in chains, the mountains stand. J. Montgomery, [Christian Union.] Written for the Sheffield Sunday School Union, Whitsuntide gathering, 1837, and printed on a flyleaf for that occasion. It was included in his Original Hymns, 1835, No. 154, in 6 st. of 4 l, and headed, "Christian Union. Symbolized by Natural Objects." In the Scottish Eth. Union Hymn, 1878, it begins, "Free, though in chains, the mountains stand." This reading is found in some copies of the Original Hymns, but is not the original text.

Freeman, Enoch W., was for some time Baptist Minister at Lowell, Maine, U.S. He edited a Sel. of Hymns, 1829-31, to which he contributed 7 of his own. Of these, "Hither we come, our dearest Lord," is still in C. U.

Freeman, James, d.d., born at Charleston, Mass., April 22, 1759, and graduated at Harvard, 1777. He was "the first avowed preacher of Unitarianism in the United States." In 1782 he was "Reader" in King's Chapel, and assisted or guided that historic parish in its change from Episcopacy to the then new ways in teaching and discipline. In 1787 he was "ordained," and retained the pastorate of the King's Chapel till 1826. He altered its Liturgy, and prepared for its use the King's Chapel Ed. of Ps. & Hymns, 1799. Died Nov. 14, 1835. His hymn, "Lord of the words below," is based on Thomas's "Hymn on the Seasons." It appeared in the Ps. & Hymns, 1799, and is found in various collections. Orig. text in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, 1875.

French Hymnody. The great development of French hymns, alike in the Church and the Reformed Church in France, began with the present century. It has not been practicable to obtain detailed information about the Roman Catholic hymns; the few details that are given are due to the kindness of Rev. Louis Mijola, Priest of the Church of Notre Dame des Victoires, London. The history of the hymns of the Reformed Church has been investigated by M. Agier in Histoire et Rôle des Cantiques dans les églises réformées. The hymns of the 18th and earlier centuries have been treated in a series of articles in the Semeur, May-August, 1857, kindly presented by the author, M. Henri Lutteroth, editor of the ChantsChrétien. Much has been derived from these sources in the following pages.

1. Latin Hymns.

Translations of the Latin hymns have been less general in France than in England. The vernacular editions of The Hours of the Virgin Mary often have only prose renderings. So also have the modern "paraisons," and the splendid L'Annee Liturgique by Dom Guéranger. A tr. of Hymnes Communs de l'Année, by Nicolas Mauroy, appeared in 1527. Guy le Fevre de la Boderic pub., among other pieces designed to supplant Marot's psalms, several trs. (Hymnes Écossais, 1578, 2nd ed. 1582), by the command of Henry III. Lemaistre de Sacy pub. Hymnes de l'Eglise pour l'année at the end of his Heures de Port-royal (1560). Rival translations were made by the Jesuits in consequence of the success of this book (30 eds.). Racine tr. hymns from the Breviary, which were pub. in an edition of The Breviary by Nicolas Le Tourneux, afterwards condemned by the Archbishop of Paris (1688). Corneille also tr. all the Breviary hymns in L'Office de la Sainte Vierge (1670), and Louis Charpentier in his Les Hymnes des Prêtres de l'Office Divin, Lyons, 1665. Recently a number of the Latin hymns have been tr. in Recueil de Poésies Lyriques, 1854, by M. J. M. Hainglais.

ii. Roman Catholic Hymns.

1. Several of the carols still in use are said to be of great antiquity, and these are probably only survivals of more general vernacular hymns. They are found in several patris, as well as in the general language. The earliest hymns that we are able to specify in this sketch are the Cantiques Spirituels, by Guy le Fevre de la Boderic, 1578, consisting of trs. from Prudentius, Vidal et Phrastus, and some paraphrases of Scripture songs, along with the Latin trs. (1-1). Les Hymnes Staphliques, by a Capuchin, Jean l'Evangeliste (1632), dedicated to Louise de Lorraine, niece of Henry III's queen, and set to secular tunes, is a Jansenist book, with a mystic tone.

2. The great poet Jean Racine has left four very fine paraphrases of Holy Scripture, two of which, "Dicte du langage des anges" (1 Cor. xiii), and "Mon Dieu, quelle guerre cruelle" (Rom. vii. 20 seq.), are still in use. They were composed for the ladies of St. Cyr (1680), and were favourites with Louis XIV, and Mme. de Maintenon.

3. The poet Pierre Corneille versified the Imitation de Christ, by Thomas à Kempis (1653). Wherever the thought takes the form of an address to God, the matter, frequently expanded by Corneille, has been often used as hymn material, from its devotional purity and simple grace. "Parle, parle, Seigneur, ton serviteur est avec" (Lib. 3, c. 2): "O Dieu de vérité" (Lib. 1, c. 23), and "Source de tous les biens" (Lib. 4, c. 16), are in most collections. Three or four others are widely known. The third of these has been tr. by Miss Anna Warner in Hymns of the Church Militant, New York, 1858, "Source of all good to which I aspire."

4. Fénelon composed some hymns in the hope of replacing the licentious ballads of the Court. One on the Passion is commended by M. Lutteroth, editor of the ChantsChrétien. Fénelon repeated one of his own hymns on his deathbed. They are the hymns of sober Quickeism.

5. In connection with Fénelon stand the Cantiques Spirituels of Mme. Guyon, pub. in her Poésies (1648-1717); which have a special interest through Cowper's trs. They are of considerable bulk, and comprise nearly 900 pieces, written for the most part to popular ballad tunes. A large portion of them were composed during her imprisonment in the Château of Vincennes, often under circumstances of extreme suffering and privation. That a spirit of real, though highly strained, devotion animates them will be universally allowed; but the limited range of spiritual emotions which they repeat has so little in common with the active side of universal Christian life (being in some measure even peculiar to herself among the Quietist writers), and the literary expression is so poor, that they have gained no entrance into the circle of accepted French hymns.

6. The Abbe Pellegrin pub. several volumes under the titles of Cantiques Spirituels; Noëls; Cantiques (1706-15), under the patronage of Mme. de Maintenon. They consist of carols, Scripture narratives and hymns, on the Mysteries of the Faith and religious and moral subjects, and are set to tunes of operas and vaudevilles. Some are still in use.

7. In modern times the use of hymns in the Roman Church has greatly increased. They are used at missions, pilgrimages, and in the churches. A collection was compiled as early as 1765 for the Seminary of St. Sulpice by Père de la Tour. A piece of Voltaire, "Entendons-nous toujours vanter," still remained in the ed. of 1833. Among the most esteemed hymns and recueil of the present day are the productions of Ven. Grignion de Montfort, R. P. Hermann, and Marie Eustelle; and the hymnals of St. Sulpice, R. P. Garin, R. P. Lambillotte, and R. P. Hermann. (See also Dictionnaire de Noëls et de Cantiques, Paris, 1867, p. 740.)

iii. Huguenot Hymns.

1. In the 1st vol. of Les Marqueurdes de la Marguerite des Princesse, by Marguerite de Valois, afterwards Queen of Navarre (pub. 1517), there is a collection of The Cantiques Spirituels, full of real and tender devotion—a strange contrast to the licentiousness of her Huguenot. Appended to her Miror d'une dame pêcheuse (1538) there is L'Instruction et joy d'un Christien by Clémence Marot, containing the Pater Noster, Ave Maria, Creed, Benediction de Vangel, Graces pour un enfant, and Discours d'un Christien malade a son oien. Also at the request of the National Synod of Montauban, tr. the add to it hymns, reproducing the words of the Gospel, after the precedent of the Lutheran Church. He was commissioned to make the attempt, and, in 1705, pub. anonymously les Cinquante Quatre Cantiques Saeculaires pour les Principales Solennités (title-page of 1705 ed.). Of these, 12, which are either paraphrases or close deductions from Holy Scripture, were authorized for public worship; and these, or slightly increased numbers, became an appendix to the Psalter throughout the Reformed Church.

The hymns of Pictet are of three classes: Scripture narratives, Scripture paraphrases, and real hymns. The narratives, on the Nativity, Passion, Resurrection, and Day of Pentecost, written at great length, but broken into passages for singing, have never had general circulation. But among the paraphrases, "Bientôt ... (Benedictus), "Mon cœur rempli des biens que Dieu m'envoie" (Magnificat), "Solemnité ..." (Dominicat), "Celui qui nous a sauvé" (Rev. 1, 6, 17, 11), and "Dieu, nous te louons" (Te Deum), are still current. And several of the hymns are classic pieces. "Valse éclatante ..." (Christmas hymn); "Valse retentissante dans l'air," and "Estonnons dans ce jour un Cantique nouveau," for Easter; "Vénaux Créateurs," a dramatic hymn for the Ascension; and "Celebrons ..." par nos louanges," for Pentecost, are the finest pieces of sustained praise among French Hymns. "Esprit ..." (Te Deum) has a remarkable cantus firmus; "Seigneur mon Dieu, ma consolation," a prayer for repentance; "De tous les biens source ;" for Pentecost; "Peuple chrétien ..." (Revel. 22, 4), and "Tes biens ..." (Château), for the Lord's Supper, are widely used for their pure devotion.

2. Not till the last quarter of the 18th cent. was any further addition of hymns authorized. Jean Dumas pub. at Leipzig (1774) a collection of 307 hymns, which M. Bovet and M. L. Agger command to the attention of compilers. The Reformed Church at Frankfurt, on its emancipation from conformity to the Lutheran ritual, pub. in 1787 Nouveaux Recueil de Psaumes et Cantiques, which was revised 30 years afterwards by the Pastors Jean Renaud and Manuel, and only in 1849 gave place to the good collection (269 pieces), drawn from modern sources, now in use. A collection was authorized at Berlin (1783), and replaced by a new one in 1829. The Walloon Collection (pub. 1863) contains 133 hymns (20 of Pictet, a few of Ternard, 40 of Frankfurt, 1787, others from St. Gall, 1771, Berlin, &c.) appended to its complete Psalter. (These details are due to M. Bovet's kindness.)

v. The Réveil.

1. The greatest name in the history of French hymns is that of César Malan (q.v.) of Geneva. The general store of hymns has grown up almost entirely from a number of small contributions; Malan alone stimulates the wealth of production exhibited by Watts and Wesley. Like Watts, he gave the first great impulse towards the general recognition of hymns in public worship; like Charles Wesley, he was the poet and interpreter of a great religious movement craving devotional expression. The first idea of composing hymns seems to have been suggested to him by a friend in 1821.

His first volume, intended only for family use, Contes chrétiens pour les dévotions domestiques, containing 33 hymns, was pub. in 1725. Another ed., containing 166 hymns, appeared in 1752, and a harmonized edition of these hymns arranged by W. Hauert, a music master of Geneva (the melodies being by Malan himself), the original title is altered to one which Malan had given originally to a version of 50 psalms (1824), Chants de Sion; and this title became the permanent one in the subsequent editions (1829, 200 hymns; 1832, 234 hymns; 1836, 300 hymns). In 1837 he published a volume of hymns and religious pieces for children, Saisons Chants et Chansons pieuses, 56 being hymns and 25 songs and stories of religious tendency. The 4th ed. of these (1853), entitled Premiere Chants, is enlarged to the number of 126, of which 99 are "Hymnes et Cantiques," 37 "Chansons pieuses," and 30 "Récits pieux." The melodies in all these books are Malan's. Several other hymns of his exist in use. His biographer estimates his total of compositions at 2,000. The hymns of Malan are no longer the power that they were in the days of the Revival. But a large number of them are still in use, and the entire hymnody of the Reformed Church has been composed to the Revival and its interpreter. Malan's hymns have been translated into English, first, Hymns by the Rev. Oscar Malan . . . Translated into English Verse, 1825, by Ingram Cobbett; and the second, Lyra Evangelica, by Miss Arnold, 1844.

2. Next to Malan may be mentioned the lesser poets of the religious movement at Geneva at that time. Among the members of the Bible Class of Robert Haldane, which was the cradle of the movement in 1817, A. Bost, H. Empayatz, Guers, Galland, and Merle d'Aubigné have contributed to the treasury of hymns. Henri Empayatz compiled a hymn-book for the Church of Bourg de Four (1824). It was revised in 1836 by Guers, Hochuet, and Olivier for the use of the Église Évangélique de Geneva, and is still in use in the Églises Évangéliques de Geneva and Lyons. A rendering of the Te Deum by Empayatz, "Grand Dieu nous te bénissions," is very widely used. The work of Bost was more that of a musician than a writer of hymns. His complete works were only pub. in 1866, under the title of Chants et Cantiques Chrétiens. M. Ager says that his hymns mark the extent of the Revival that gave birth to the movement of that time are equally discernible in the hymns of Galland in Chants Chrétiens (Nos. 56, 72, 83). Two hymns by Merle d'Aubigné, the great historian, are in the Chants Chrétiens (63, 115). The first of them, "J. Eternel est ma part," is in many collections. To this period also belong the hymns of the devoted pastor in the High Alps, who died young, Felix Neff (1798-1829). Among them is "C'est Goldothe, c'est le salut," and "Ne te décroche point, Sion," are in common use.

3. The next marked epoch after the work of Malan at Geneva was the publication at Paris of the Chants Chrétiens by M. Henri Lutteroth in 1834. It called out the choice pieces of the past (Racine, Corneille, Pietet, Teron, &c.); it added a number of hymns, which have since passed into wide circulation; and the music to which the hymns were set was greatly admired. The book has undergone modifications in its many editions; but in its definitive shape, attained in 1855, it contains 200 pieces, among which are hymns by Clotot, Chavannes, Vinet, Adolphe Monod, Schérer, &c. Forty-four are by M. Lutteroth himself, of which the 165th, "Alleluia! Gloire et louanges!" 20th, "C'est moi, c'est moi, qui vous console," 14th, "C'est un rempart que notre Dieu!" and 23rd, "Il vient, il vient, c'est notre Rédemption," are very widely used. The didactic character of others has probably rendered them less popular, though full of real piety. One of the 3 hymns by Mme. Lutteroth, 23rd, "Je veux t'aimer toi, mon Dieu," is of great sweetness, and found in most hymnals. The new Chants Chrétiens is still the most popular hymn-book of the Reformed Church, and subsequent books have added comparatively little to its selection.

4. The most striking pieces in the Chants Chrétiens are those of Alexander Vinet, the great Swiss theologian. They had appeared for the most part in the Semeur (to which he frequently contributed), a periodical edited by M. Lutteroth. As refined and sensitive expressions of devotional feeling, Vinet's hymns are of a very high order. But it was in church, the personal, reflective mood, and the delicate poetical images, adapt them more to private than public use. Mr. Henry Downton has tr. 7 of Vinet's pieces among his graceful renderings of French hymns in Hymns and Verses, 1873.

Several of Vinet's hymns are in every collection. "Sous ton voile d'ignominie," "O Seigneur, O bénédiction," "Toi qui dans la nuit de la vie," "Oh! pourquoi l'amitié pénible?" "Pouvez-vous reprendre O Père tendre" (written after his daughter's death), "Dans l'aube des misères," and "Roi des anges, nos louanges," are well-known examples.

5. Among the large group of remaining writers, only a few names can be mentioned:

Guillaume Clotot, of Nanchétel (1600-50) has left a few hymns, of which "Oui, pour son peuple Jésus prit" is well known. Frédéric Chavannes, a disciple and friend of Vinet, pub. his Poésies Chrétiennes et Cantiques, in 1836. A full collection of his pieces is found in the Horace des églises nationales de Flandres, Neuchâtel et Genève, and also in that of the Églises de Flandres. The most popular are: "Seigneur, mon Dieu, mes ames attenues," "Encore cette journée, pleine d'or et d'or," "Dans la nuit, oh! je prends de ma route." The hymns of Chavannes are highly esteemed for fervor and unaffected simplicity.

Julliérat, a pastor of Paris, pub. his Devant le Christ, in 1866, a volume of hymns and sacred poetry. His evening hymn, "À la fin de cette journée," is in general use. "Levons-nous, fervent" is highly praised by M. Chatelain and M. Ager. Pozner Henri Boanch has contributed several hymns of a tender, meditative, and prayerful cast to the Strasbourg édit. (1767). "O dieux, unissez-vous aux transports de la terre" has been adopted by M. Bernier and the Methodist Collection. Others are good, such as "Je veux te suivre kios;" "Grand Dieu, mon Seigneur, mon Père;" and "Éternel, tendre Père." Adolphe Monod (1813-40) has left a beautiful hymn, "La rosa" and "Oh! mon Dieu, Dieu de ma délivrance?" A hymn by M. E. Schérer, editor of Le Temps, "Je suis à Toi," one of the best French hymns. G. Canon has both tr. in Mr. Henry Downton's Hymns and Verses, 1873.

vi. Lutheran Church.

1. The line taken by the Lutheran French Church in regard to the translation and treatment of the Psalter and the use of hymns has been from the first distinct from that of the Reformed Church; the Psalter has been used partially, and treated in its typical and Evangelical relation, and tr. of the great German hymns have been used conjointly with it. Psaumes, Hymnes et Cantiques . . . mis en rime françoise selon la rime et melodies allemandes, Francfort, 1812, contains 63 hymns or paraphrases. It appears from the preface that this is the 3rd edition. M. Freund mentions also Les Psaumes de David. Avec les hymnes de D. M. Luther et autres docteurs de l'Église mis en rime francaise selon la rime et composition allemande, Montbeliard, 1618. The chaplain of the Swedish Legation at Paris, Balthazar Ritter, pub. at Frankfurt, his native town to which he owed his education for the ministry, in 1673, a book, generally known as Hymna
The Contiques Spirituelles, a collection of hymns and prayers, was published in 1747 by Olier. This was the first of many such collections published by Olier, who was a leading figure in the French religious community.

The collection contains many of the most popular hymns of the time, and was widely distributed throughout France. It was particularly popular among the French nobility, who used it in their private devotions.

Olier's hymn-book was part of a larger movement in French religious life, which included the publication of numerous other hymn-books and prayer books. These works were intended to provide a set of devotional texts for use in the private and public worship of the French people.

The Contiques Spirituelles was a significant contribution to this movement, and it helped to spread the French religious culture throughout the country. It was widely used in French churches and was also popular among the European nobility, who used it in their private devotions.

The Contiques Spirituelles was also influential in the development of French musical culture. The hymns were set to melodies that were popular at the time, and they helped to establish the French style of music as a distinctive and recognizable form.

In summary, the Contiques Spirituelles was a significant contribution to French religious life in the 18th century. It helped to spread the French religious culture throughout the country and played an important role in the development of French musical culture.
The earliest French hymn-book in connection with Methodism deserves loving remembrance by both France and England. It was drawn up under the auspices of the Wesleyan Missionary Society for the use of the thousands of French prisoners in the Medway, at Plymouth, and Portsmouth. The earliest mention of the book is found July 10th, 1813. (See Methodist Magazine of that year.) Interesting details of the mission are given in the vols. for 1811.) It may have been compiled by Rev. W. Touse, who was in charge of the mission. The 1815 edition, Choix de Cantiques à l'usage des Prisonniers Français, contains 123 pieces; some of them from Piet, some of them from Watts, Cowper, and other English pieces; some from the metrical Psalms; some from the Moravian, and others from sources not identified. The pieces are not of much value, and scarcely any of the pieces are found in subsequent Methodist collections.

The next series of books are those of John de Quevillon (commenced ministry at Guernsey, 1796, died 1843). Rev. M. Gallic, a Methodist minister in Alderney, says that Quevillon’s earliest collections were from the Port-Royal hymns, from Piet, Marot and Boze. Afterwards he translated several of Wesley’s hymns. The date of his earliest edition was about 1791-1792. The book reached its definite shape (app.) in 1818. The ed. of 1828, entitled Recueil de Cantiques à l’usage de la Société appelée Methodiste, is arranged on the plan of the Wes. H. Bk. It was pub. at the request of the Conference, and contains no less than 762 hymns. It was frequently reprinted for use in the Channel Islands, but the poverty of the verse led eventually to the compilation of a new collection.

The new ed., Recueil de Cantiques à l’usage des Églises Methodistes en France, was pub. in 1818. It was the work of a Committee appointed by the Channel Islands District under the presidency of the Rev. M. Gallic, and contains 454 pieces. The arrangement of De Queville’s book is exchanged for one more independent of the English Wes. H. Bk. About 115 of De Queville’s pieces are retained. The new pieces are drawn from the sources of which all the Protestant hymnals avail themselves. The hymns that are special to the book are a few by Revs. M. Gallic and W. J. Hancock (the Secretaries of the Conference). The hymns were sanctioned by the Conference.

xi. French Methodist Hymn Book.

The collection of De Queville was too poor in a literary point of view to be really satisfactory in France. In 1831, if not earlier, appeared Cantiques Chrétiens à l’usage des Assemblées religieuses, Paris. It was compiled by M. Cook, then a minister at Companies in the Department of Gard. The last ed. (14th) was published in 1881.

The ed. of 1833 contains 226 pieces. They are drawn from Piet, Termond, and other sources of the 14th century, from the Moravian, and other early books of this century. The 14th ed., Cantiques Chrétiens, Paris, 1861, edited by an eminently French Methodist pastor, M. J. P. Cook, son of the original compiler, contains 134 pieces from the 1833 edition. It has altogether 361 pieces, the pieces being drawn from the Cantiques Chrétiens, the Moravian, the R. C. Collection of St. Sulpice, and the Psalter of the Reformed Churches, and from the various authors among Methodists and Protestants already mentioned.

This ed. is one of the best, as it is one of the most recent, collections; and furnished with careful indices of the subjects and texts, the names of authors and composers.

xii. Collection of Hymns.

French hymnals are very numerous. Besides those already mentioned, the principal are as follows:

1. The Reformed Church. (1) Psaumes et Cantiques pour le culte de l’Église Reformée, published by the Consistory of Lyons. 1st ed. 1641; last 1789. (2) Recueil de Psaumes et Cantiques à l’usage des Églises Reformées. Paris and Strasbourg. Dr. G. de Saint-Maur, 1781. (3) Recueil de Cantiques à l’usage de la Société appelée Methodiste, arranged on the plan of the Wes. H. Bk. Paris, 1818. (4) Recueil des Églises Nationales de France, Neuchâtel, and Geneva, 1848. 51 Pts. 67 hymns drawn up by a committee of the National Church in the 3 cantons. A Supplement was published in 1789 by several of the members of the Committee. A choice selection from French, Moravian, and other German sources. (5) Nouveau Livre de Cantiques. Paris, 1814. 217 pieces. A new compilation from the common sources of hymns, with not more than 26 new pieces. The editor is M. Berthelot, who has contributed a valuable preface (§ xii.). The text of the hymns has been revised in the interests of theological exactness. This system of revision of the text, and the difference in the music to which the hymns are set (a point of greater importance than in England—every hymn-book having its music as an integral part of it), often consti...
French Psalms

The Free Churches were the first to adopt the French Psalter, which was translated into English by John and William Robinson. This translation was completed in 1640 and was officially adopted by the Free Church of Scotland in 1649.

English Collection. (1) Psalms and Canticles for the English Church, 1746. (2) Psalms and Canticles for the Use of the English Church, 1746. (3) Psalms and Canticles for the Use of the English Church, 1746. (4) Psalms and Canticles for the Use of the English Church, 1746.

The English Collection was translated by John and William Robinson and published in 1640. It was adopted by the English Church and remained in use until the 18th century.

English Psalms. (1) Psalms and Canticles for the English Church, 1746. (2) Psalms and Canticles for the Use of the English Church, 1746. (3) Psalms and Canticles for the Use of the English Church, 1746. (4) Psalms and Canticles for the Use of the English Church, 1746.

The English Psalms were translated by John and William Robinson and published in 1640. They were adopted by the English Church and remained in use until the 18th century.

English Psalter. (1) Psalms and Canticles for the English Church, 1746. (2) Psalms and Canticles for the Use of the English Church, 1746. (3) Psalms and Canticles for the Use of the English Church, 1746. (4) Psalms and Canticles for the Use of the English Church, 1746.

The English Psalter was translated by John and William Robinson and published in 1640. It was adopted by the English Church and remained in use until the 18th century.

Freylinghausen, Johann Andreas, a. of Dicester Freylinghausen, merchant and burgomaster at Giandersheim, Brunswick, in Hanseatic League, in 1670. He entered the University of Jena, 1663. Attracted by the preaching of A. H. Franke of Jena, and J. J. Breithaupt, and the University of Jena, 1669. Attracted by the preaching of A. H. Franke of Jena, and J. J. Breithaupt, he removed to Erfurt in 1691, and at Jena, 1692, followed them to Hamelin. About the end of 1693 he returned to Giandersheim, and employed himself as a private tutor. In 1695 he went to Glachel as assistant to Franke, and when Franke became pastor of St. Ulrich's, he took his place. In 1713, Freylinghausen became head of his college, and in the same year married his only daughter. In 1723 he became also sub-director of the Paukenstuhl, and the Orphanage; and after Francke's death in 1727, succeeded him as pastor of St. Ulrich's and director of the Francke Institutions. Under his fostering care these Institutions attained their highest development. From a stroke of paralysis in 1728, and a second in 1730, he recovered in great measure, but a third in 1733 crippled him right side, while the last, in Nov., 1738, left him almost helpless. He d. on Feb. 12, 1739, and was buried beside Francke (Koch, vi. 322-334; Allg. Deutsche Biog., vi. 370-71; Hodge, pp. 69-70; Groote's Introduction, &c.)

Almost all Freylinghausen's hymns appeared in his own hymn-book, which was the standard collection of the Hallen-school, uniting the best productions of Pietism with a good representation of the older "classical" hymns. This work, which greatly influenced later collections, was the source from which many editors drew not only the hymns of Pietism, but also the current forms of the earlier hymns (as well as the new "Halle" manner, number of which are ascribed to Freylinghausen himself) appeared in two parts, viz.:—

i. Geistreiche Gesang-Buch, den Kern alter und neuer Lieder... in sich haltend, &c., Halle. (Hedrick) and see Leibnitz in the Walser-Hausen, with 643 hymns and 173 melodies. To the 2nd ed., 1765 [Halle (University)], another Appendix was added with Hymns 664-756, and 51 melodies. Editions 3-18 are practically the same as far as the hymns are concerned, save that in ed. 11, 1719 [Brunswick], and later issues, four hymns, written by J. J. Rambach at Freylinghausen's request, replaced four of those in ed. 1-10.

ii. Neues Geistreiche Gesang-Buch, &c., Halle... 1714 [Berlin], with 516 hymns and 134 melodies. In the 2nd ed., 1777 [Halle (University), Hymns 616-818, with one melody, were added.

In 1741 these two parts were combined by G. A. Freylinghausen, seven hymns being added, all but one taken from the 1st ed., 1714, of the so-called Auctoria, which was compiled for congregational use mainly from the original two parts: and this reached a second, and last, ed. in 1751. So far as the melodies are concerned, the ed. of 1711 is the most complete, containing some 600 to 800 hymns. (Further details of these editions in the Blatter für Musikers, 18-33, pp. 44-46, 106-108, 1893, pp. 13-14.) A little volume of notes on the hymns and hymn-writers of the 1711 edition, compiled by J. D. Griesbach and completed by J. O. Kirchhoff, and occasionally referred to in these pages, appeared as Kurfürstliche Nachricht von alter und neueren Liedern in Halle, 1771.

As a hymn-writer Freylinghausen ranks not only as the best of the Pietistic school, but as the first among his contemporaries. His finest productions are distinguished by a sound and robust piety, warmth of feeling, depth of Christian experience, scripturalness, clearness and variety of style, which gained for them wide acceptance, and have kept them in popular use. A complete ed. of his 41 hymns, with a biographical introduction by Ludwig Groote, appeared as his Geistlehre Lieder, at Halle, 1835. A number of them, including No. 2, are said to have been written during severe attacks of toothache. Two, "Auff, auf, weld der Tag erschienen"; and "Der Tag ist hin", are noted from their original lines.

i. Hymns in English C. U.

1. Monarche all Sing, God's Majesty. 1714, as above, No. 139, in 11 st. of 6 l., repeated in 1753, p. 88, and as No. 38 in the Berlin (i.e. ed. 1863). A fine hymn of Praise, on the monarchy and Majesty of God. Tr. as:—

Monarch of all, with lowly fear, by J. Wesley, in Hymns & Sacred Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. i. p. 104), in 8 st. of 4 l., from st. 11, v.-vii., ix., xi. Repeated in full in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i. No. 456 (1856, No. 176); and in J. A. Latrobe's Coll., 1841. The following forms of this tr. are also in C. U.:—

To Thee, O Lord, with humble fear, being Freylinghausen, Johann A.

Wesley's st. i., iii., vii., viii., altered as No. 136 in Dr. Martin's Hymns, for Christian Church & Home, 1848, and repeated in Miss Courtenay's Ps., 1834, and in America in the Cheshire Association Unitarian Coll., 1844.

(2) Thou, Lord, of the parent art, Wesley's, st. i., iii., vii. altered in the College Hym. N. Y., 1874.

(3) Thou, Lord, art Light; Thy native ray. Wesley's st. iv., v., vii., in Hymns of the Spirit.

9. Der uraine Wesen, latoque Quelle, Penetren, founded on Ps. 11. 12, 1714, as above, No. 321, in 7 st. of 8 l., repeated in Grothe, 1855, p. 41, and in Busen's Versuch, 1833, No. 777 (ed. 1881, No. 4135). The only tr. in C. U. is:—

Pure Essence! Pointers Fount of Light. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth in the 1st series of her Lyra Ger., 1855, p. 43, and in her C. E. for England, 1863, No. 113.

iii. Wer ist wohl wie du. Names and offices of Christ. One of his noblest and most beautiful hymns, a mirror of his inner life, and one of the finest of the German "Jesus Hymns." 1704, as above, No. 86, in 14 st. of 6 l., repeated in Grothe, 1855, p. 33, and as No. 96 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. O Jesu, source of calm repose, by J. Wesley, being a free tr. of st. i., iii., vii., viii., xiii. Ist pub. in his Ps. & Hymns, Charleston, 1737 (P. Works, 1868-1872, vol. i. p. 161). Repeated in full as No. 482 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the 1896 and later ed. (1886, No. 233) it begins, "Jesus, Thou source," The original form was included as No. 49 in the Wesley Hymns & Spiritual Songs, 1753, and as No. 343, in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 (1875, No. 353). Varying cantos under the original first line are found in Mercier's C. P. & H. Rd., 1855-1864; Kennedy, 1863; Irish Ch. Hym., 1869-1873; J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, &c. It has also furnished the following cantos:—

(1) Messiah! Lord! rejoicing still, being Wesley's st. iv.-vii. altered in Dr. Martin's Coll., 1844.

(2) Lord over all, sent to fulfill, Wesley's st. iv., v., vi., in the Amer. Meth. Ps. H. Bk., 1849.

2. Who is like Thee, Who! a tr. of st. i., ii., vi., vii., x., xii., as No. 687, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. Trs. of st. x., xi., xiv. were added in 1789, and the first line altered in 1856 (1866, No. 234), to "Jesus who with Thee." The trs. of st. i., ii., vi., xiv., from the 1801, altered and beginning, "Jesus, who can," are included in America in the Dutch Ref. Hymn. of the Church, 1869; H. & Sons of Praise, N. Y., 1874; and Richards's Coll., N. Y., 1881.

3. Who is there like Thee, a good tr. of st. i., ii., vi., xii., xiv., by J. S. Stallybrass, as No. 234 in Curwen's Sabbath H. Bk., 1859, repeated in the Irish Ch. Hym., 1873, and in W. F. Stevenson's H. for Ch. & Home, 1873.

5. Who, as Thou, makes blest, a good tr. omitting st. vi., ix., x., contributed by Dr. F. W. Goethe to the Baptist Magazine, 1854. Repeated in the 1880 Suppl. to the Baptist Ps. & Hymns, 1858.

The trs. not in C. U. are:—

(1) "Whither shall we flee," by Miss Dunn, 1847, p. 55. (2) "Who has worth like Thee," in the U. P. Juvenile Miss. Mag., 1857, p. 217. (3) "Thou art First and Best," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 287.

ii. Hymns tr. into English, but not in C. U.

Friend of sinners, Lord of glory: C. N. Hall. [Jesus, the Friend.] "Composed for the author's father, the writer of the well-known tract The Sinners Friend," Bolton Abbey, Sept., 1857, in 5 st. of 8 l., and 1st pub. in his Hymns composed at Bolton Abbey, 1858. It is usually given in an abbreviated form, as in the author's Christ Ch. Hym., 1876, or that in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866. It is also in C. V. in America. [J. J.]

Friends of the poor, the young, the weak. J. Montgomery. [Poor Children's Plea.] This hymn is intended to be sung by children in Orphan Homes and Institutions of a like kind, at their yearly and other gatherings. It is a plea for sympathy and material help. It appeared in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 424, and in his Original Hymn, 1833, No. 312, in 6 st. of 4 l. [J. J.]

Frisch, Ahasuerus. [Stebner Immanuel.]

Fröhlich soll mein Herz springen. P. Gerhardt. [Christmas.] Included as No. 104 in the Frankfurt ed. 1696, of Crüger's Praxis pietatis melica in 15 st. of 8 l., reprinted in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 5, and Bach's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 11, and included as No. 25 in the Unr. L. S., 1851. Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 26, thus analyses it:

First a trumpet blast: Christ is born, God's Champion has appeared as a Bridegroom from his chamber (1-2). In the following 4 st. the poet seeks to set forth the mighty value of the incarnation: Is it not love when God gives us the Son of His Love (III.), the Kingdom of Joy (IV.), and His Fellowship (V.)? Yes, it is indeed the Lamb of God who bears the sin of the world (VI.). Now he places himself as herald by the cradle of the Divine Child (VII.). He bids, as in Matt. xi, 28, all men come to Him, all they that labour (ix.), all the heavy (x.), and all the poor (xi.), to draw near. Then in conclusion he approaches in supplication as the shepherds and the Wise Men (xii.-xv.). He addresses the Child as his Son and Teacher. It is a glorious series of Christmas thoughts, laid as a garland on the manger at Bethlehem.

He adds that at the second day of the Christmas celebration, 1715, at Glauchau, near Halle, C. H. v. Bogatzky (q.v.), by the singing of st. xiii., xiv., was first clearly led to understand justification by faith in Jesus Christ.

Crüger gave an original melody in 1656 (No. 151 in L. Erk's Choralbuch, 1663, No. 861), but the melody generally used (in Church Hymns called Beim) is that by J. G. Ebeling in the Geistliche Andachten, 1668, to "Warum soll mein Herz springen." The hymn is a very beautiful one, but somewhat long, and thus generally abridged.

Translations in C. V.:

1. Let the voice of glad thanksgiving. A good tr. of st. i.-iii., vi., vii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 15 in the Dalton Hospital H. Bk., 1848, and repeated, omitting the tr. of st. vi., as No. 50 in his own Ps. & Hymns, 1851.
2. All my heart with joy is springing. A good but free tr. by Dr. Kennedy, as No. 100 in his Hymno. Christ., 1863, omitting st. iii.-v., xii., xiv. His tr. of st. i., iv., vii. were repeated in the American H. Bk., 1871.

4. Light up, light up my beam, springing. In full, by Dr. Loy, in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

FROM ALL THAT DWELL

FROM EGYPT LATELY COME

The hymn-book here referred to is:

A Pocket Hymn-book designed as a constant companion for the piano, collected from Various Authors. York, R. Spence (c. 1786), 9th ed., 1786.

From this hymn-book J. Wesley reprinted in his Pocket Hymn-book, 1786, Watts's "From all that dwell below the skies," with these additional lines in one stanza:

"Your lofty Themes, ye mortals, bring,
In Songs of praise divinely sing.
The great salvation loud proclaim,
And shout for joy the Saviour's name.
In every land begin the song;
To every land the strains belong.
In cheerful sounds all voices raise,
And fill the world with loud rejoicing."

The original, together with these lines from the York book, passed into several collections as a hymn in 4 st. of 4 l. The cento in this form is in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

3. A third form of the text is also in C. U. It appeared in the 1830 Supplement to the Wes. H. Bk., No. 693. It is composed of Watts's original, four lines from the York Pocket Book text, and Jp. Ken's doxology, Praise God from whom all blessings flow. This was omitted in the 1875 revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., in favour of Watts's original text.

From all that dwell below the skies.

W. L. Alexander. Written in 1847 for the Annual Meeting of the Congregational Union of Scotland, and is usually printed on the programme of the Anniversary from year to year. It was pub. in Dr. Alexander's Augustine H. Bk., 1849, in 7 st. of 4 l., and from thence has passed into various hymnals, in some cases reading "From distant parts of our land."
FROM EVERY STORMY

into general use, and is a popular form of the hymn. Other altered texts are in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833; Hall's Miene, 1836; the P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, &c. These begin with the same first line as in Cotterell, but differ somewhat in the body of the text. The same differences are repeated in the American collections, but most of these are in error as to date. In a few hymn-books the hymn opens with st. vii, "To Camara's sacred bound," as in the Marylebone Ps. & Hymns, 1851.

FROM EVERY STORMY WIND THAT BLOWS.

H. Stonehewer. [The mercer-son.] Appeared in The Winter's Tho, a Collection of original Contributions in prose and verse (London, New York, and Liverpool), 1828 (Preface dated 1827), p. 259, in 6 st. of 4 l. This collection was an illustrated annual, begun in 1828 and continued to 1832 inclusive. In 1831 this hymn was rewritten and included in the 1st ed. of the author's Ps. & Hymns, No. 216. This revised text is that which has been adopted by all editors of modern collections. It is given in full in the revised ed. of the same ed. of Hymns. 1877, p. 168, with a return to the original of "cold and still," instead of "soft and still," in st. vi. as in the revised text of 1831. The hymn, often in 5 st., is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries. [J. J.]

FROM FISHER'S NET, FROM FIG-TREE'S SHADE.

J. S. H. Mensall. [St. Matthew.] Appeared in his Spiritual Songs, 1827, in 12 st. of 4 l. on St. Matthew, the Apostle, and entitled, "The man of Business." It is sometimes given in an abridged form, beginning with st. a, "Out of the busiest haunts of life," as in Porter's Churchman's Hymn, 1876.

[J. J.]

FROM FOG THAT WOULD THE LAND DEVOUR.

Bp. R. Heber. [National Hymn.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, for the 23rd Sun. after Trinity, in 2 st. of 8 l. Although not usually used as such, it is well adapted as a national hymn. Dr. Kennedy gives it in his Hymns, 1853, No. 735, in an unaltered form, as one of a group of national hymns, under "Eastern." Although but little used in G. Britain, it is given in several American hymnals.

[J. J.]

FROM GLORY UNTO GLORY.

Frances R. Havergal. [Personal Consecration — New Year.] Written at Winterlyne, Dec. 24, 1873, first printed as a New Year's leaflet, Jan. 1st, 1874, and then pub. in her book, Under the Sun, March, 1874, in 2 st. of 6 l. Concerning this hymn the author says that it was the reflection of "that flash of electric light, when I first saw clearly the blessedness of true consecration," Dec. 2, 1873. I could not have written the hymn before. It is a wonderful word from 'glory unto glory,' and I cannot write upon this theme as I am drawn in it. The sequel to this (1876, 1st printed in Our Own Fireside; and then in Under His Shadow, Nov. 1879) [M. M.]

From Greenland's icy mountains.
From highest heaven the Eternal
Son. Sir W. W. Baker. [Praise for Redemption.] 1st pub. in H. A. & M., 1861, and repeated, with the alteration in st. ii., l. 1, of “Sing out,” to “Rejoice,” in the ed. of 1875.

From Jesus’ eyes, beside the grave.
Bp. C. Wordsworth, of Lincoln. [Consolation of Buried Ground.] 1st pub. in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 223, in 13 st. of 4 l. In the latest editions of the Holy Year it is divided into two parts, Pt. ii., beginning, “I heard a voice from heaven, The dead,” &c. A portion of this hymn, beginning with st. iii., “Faith, looking out on this hallow’d ground,” is No. 281 in Skinner’s Daily Service Hymnal, 1864. [J. J.]

Out from the cloud of amber light.
Cecil F. Alexander. [St. Mark.] Contributed to the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875.

From pole to pole let others roam.
J. Newton. [Security in Christ.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 69, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is in a number of collections in G. Britain and America. In the American Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1863, st. ii.-v. are given as, “Jesus, Who on His glorious throne.” [J. J.]

From the courier (guiding) star that led.
Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Love.] Written in 1875, and 1st printed in a small volume for private circulation, Songs in the House of Pilgrimage [1875], in 5 st. of 10 l. and based on St. John xxi. 13, 17, “Lovest thou Me?” &c. In 1876 it was given in the H. Comp., No. 298, as “From the guiding star,” &c., this being the only change in the text.

From the Cross uplifted high.
T. Havard. [Pari passu.] 1st pub. in his Carmina Christi, &c., 1792, in 4 st. of 6 l. and based on St. John vii. 37. Its use in G. Britain is very limited, but in America it is given in many collections. In the Dutch Reformed Hymns of the Church, N. Y., 1869, it is attributed to “Harvey,” in error, and the text is slightly altered. Orig. text in Hymns and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874. [J. J.]

From the depth of Thee, O Lord.
W. Bartholomew. [Lent.] Contributed from his miss. by his widow to Hall and Larar’s Evangelical Hymnal, N. Y., 1880, No. 292, in 8 st. of 5 l. The tune Nineveh, which accompanies it, is by Mrs. Bartholomew.

From the heaven of heavens descending.

From whence these direful omens round.
J. Montgomery. [S. S. Anniversary.] This hymn was evidently written for one of the great gatherings of Sunday School children at Whitemude, at Sheffield. It is No. 545 in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, in 6 st. of 4 l. It did not appear in the first ed. of his Original Hymns, 1833, but took the place of a cancelled hymn (“Our hearts are glad to hear,” No. 338) in later copies of the same issue, but was omitted from the Index. It is popular with modern compilers. [J. J.]

Frothingham, Nathaniel Langdon, M.D., b. at Boston July 23rd, 1758, and graduated at Harvard 1811, where he was also sometimes Tutor. From 1815 to 1850 he was Pastor of the First Church (Unitarian), Boston, and subsequently attended as a worshipper the church where he had been 35 years pastor till his sight and strength failed him. D. Apr. 4th, 1870. His Metrical Pieces, 2 vols., were pub. in 1855 and 1870.

1. O God, Whose presence glows in all. Ordination. This was written in 1835 for the ordination of W. B. Lunt. New York.

2. We meditate the day. Installation. Written in 1835 for Mr. Lunt’s installation at Quincy, Mass., as Co-pastor with Peter Whitney.

3. O Lord of life and truth and grace. Ordination. Also a special hymn. It was composed for the ordination of H. W. Bellowes, New York, 1839. It is found in common with Nos. 1 and 2 in Frothingham’s Metrical Pieces, 1855. These Metrical Pieces are unknown to the English Collections. [J. M. B.]

Frothingham, Octavius Brooks, M.A., son of Dr. N. L. Frothingham, was b. at Boston, Nov. 26, 1822, and graduated at Harvard, graduating in Arts, 1843, and in Theology, 1846. In 1847 he became Pastor at Salem, from whence he passed to Jersey City, 1855; and again to the 3rd Unitarian Society, New York, 1860. His works are numerous and well known. Mr. Frothingham is known as a leader of the Free Religious movement. His hymn, “Thou Lord of Hosts, Whose guiding hand” (Soldiers of the Cross,) was written for the Graduating Exercise of the class of 1846 (see also "God of the earnest heart"), and pub., in the same year in Longfellow and Johnson's 'Book of Hymns,' No. 425. It has been adopted by Dr. Martinow in his 'Hymn of Praise & Prayer,' 1873.
FRIHLINGSLUFT, UMBLAUE

FRIHGMORNEN da die Sonne aufgeht.
J. Hermann. [Easter.] 1st pub. in his Devoi meliora coriis, Breslau, 1849, p. 66, in 18 st. of 4 l., with alleluia, and entitled, "Easter Hymn. How that Christ has risen, and what we therefor derive for instruction and consolation." Included in Mattes, 1858, No. 31; in Wackernagel's ed. of his Gebet. Lieder, No. 19; and in the L. C. B., 1851, No. 136.

The tr. in C. U. are:

1. Let this morning's dawning ray. A good tr. of st. 1., 8th, ix., x., by A. T. Russell, as No. 114 in his Ps. & Hym., 1831.

2. Erst yet the dawn hath filled the skies. A good tr. of st. 1., 10th, xix., x., by Miss Winkworth in the "Revised." Repeated as No. 57 in her C. B., for England, 1853, and as No. 82 in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880. In the Bear Hym., 1871, the trs. of st. xix., x. are omitted.

Other trs. are: (1) "God Jesus live! why an I wait," of st. xiv. No. 53:13 in pt. 1. of the Moravian H. Re., 1874. (2) "In the day that all flesh has vanished," by Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 44. [J. M.]

FRY, Caroline. [Wilson, G.]

FUGER, CASPAR. Two Lutheran clergymen of this name, apparently father and son, seem to have lived in Dresden in the 16th cent. The elder seems to have been for some time at Torgau, and then court preacher at Dresden to Duke Heinrich and his widow, and to have d. at Dresden, 1592. Various works appeared under his name between 1564 and 1592. The younger was apparently b. at Dresden, where he became third master and then co-rector in the Kreuzschule. He was subsequently ordained deaconus, and d. at Dresden, July 24, 1617 (Koch, ii. 215-216; Wetzlar, i. 593; Wackernagel, as below, and L. pp. 458, 518, 560). The hymn,

Wir Christenhut haben Jesu Freund [Christus, is quoted by Wackernagel, iv. p. 10, from drey schwere Noten Geistliche Gesange, 1592, and from the Dresden G. B., 1593, in 5 st. of 6 l. Bode, p. 417, cites it as in Georg Ponds's Eine Christus ist in my copy, dated 1549, in the Royal Library at Berlin. It is probably by the elder Fuger, though Wetzel and others ascribe the hymn to the younger. Included in many later L., and 1851. The only tr. in C. U. is:

FURNEI NE DATE

Ludimínia Elizabeth (q.v.), or to Friedrich Fabrius (b. April 20, 1642, at Stettin, and d. there Nov. 11, 1703, as Pastor of St. Nicholas's Church).
The only tr. in C. U. is:—

Other trs. are: (1) "Draw us to Thee, Lord Jesus," by Miss J. S. B. 1837, p. 192. (2) "Draw us to Thee, Lord Jesus," by N. E. Frothingham, 1870, p. 279.

The hymn beginning, "Draw us to Thee, in mind and heart," by A. T. Russell, in st. 4, as No. 209 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851, while not a tr. of, is based on this German hymn. Repeated in Dr. Pagant's Coll., 1864, and in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876. [J. M.]

Furner ne date plantumet. [Burial,]
A Sequence at a Child's Funeral, in Graduel de Paris, 1754, and in the Paris Missal, 1764. Its authorship is unknown. Tr. as:—

1. Let not tears today be shed. A terse and pathetic tr. by R. F. Littledale. This appeared first in the Church Times, Nov. 10, 1865, again in the Ps. & Hys. of Circle, 1869, and in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. "For the Burial of a Child." In the Preface to the latter collection it is attributed to W. C. Dix in error. This is corrected in the Notes of the folio edition.

2. Weep not at our pomp funeral. By T. I. Ball, in the 1877 ed. of the 1862 Appendix to the Hymnal N. No. 369.

3. Wail ye not, but requiem sing. By Jane E. Leeson, in her Hys and Scenes of Childhood, 1844, p. 19, p. 205, and the S. Margaret's Hymnal [East Grinstead], 1875. [J. J.]

Funk, Gottfried Benedict, was b. Nov. 29, 1734, at Hartenstein, Saxony, and educated at the Gymnasium of Freiberg and the University of Leipzig. In 1756 he became tutor in the family of J. A. Cramer, then court preacher at Copenhagen. He returned to Germany in 1769 as subrector of the Cathedral School at Magdeburg, becoming rector in 1772; and being also appointed a member of the consistory in 1775 and Doctor of Theology in 1784. He d. at Magdeburg, June 18, 1814.

One of the best teachers of his time, he was also one of the most successful hymn-writers. His hymns, 26 in all, appeared (1) in the G. R. for S. Petri, Copenhagen, 1780. (2) Zellshoff's Nouez G. R., Leipzig, 1766. (3) the Magdeburg G. B., 1808. (4) in his Schriften, Berlin, 1820-21.

Four of his hymns have passed into English, viz.:—

1. Der unerharte Schmerz an sich nahm. Second Advent. 1760, No. 713, in 7 st. 1820, in v. 1. p. 60. Tr. by Dr. H. Mills, 1859, p. 37.

Für allen Freuden auf Erden. M. Luther. [Praise of Music.] First pub. in Lob und preis der Erlebnen Kunst Musica, Wittenberg, 1538; and then in the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1543, entitled "Preface to all good hymn-books." In Wackernagel, iii. p. 29, in 40 lines.

The trs. are: (1) "Search us as one kind through the world—search one kind around," by J. H. Hunt, 1853, p. 718. (2) "Of all the joys that earth possesses," by J. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Magazine, 1857, and in his Hymns, 1876. (3) "Of all the joys that are on earth," by Miss Winkworth, 1840, p. 1, repeated in Dr. Bacon, 1844. [J. M.]

Furness, William Henry, n.n., b. in Boston, 1802, and graduated at Harvard in Arts and Theology, 1820. From 1825 he has been an Unitarian Pastor in Philadelphia. He is an accomplished scholar, and has been an active worker in the reform of various kinds. His publications are numerous and include a Manual of Domestic Worship, 1830, and a tr. of Schiller's Song of the Bell. His hymns are somewhat numerous, and several of them have great merit. The best and most widely used are:—

1. Father in heaven, to Thee my heart. Resignation. Appeared in The Christian Disciple, 1823. It was repeated in this form in some of the older collections, and a few modern hymnals, including the Boston Unitarian Hymn & Tune Bk., 1868. It was given in Longfellow and Johnson's Bk. of Hys. as "Father in heaven, to Whom our hearts," again in their Hymn of the Spirit, 1864, and in D. Martineau's Hymn of Praise & Prayer, 1873. This hymn is sometimes ascribed to "G. H. Ware," but in error.

2. Feeble, helpless, how shall I Jesus our Leader. First pub. in the Cheshire Unitarian Christian Hymns, 1844, No. 272, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is in several modern collections, including Lyra Sacra Americana, 1868; Thriving's Coll., 1882.

3. Have mercy, 0 Father. Divine direction desired. Contributed to D. Martineau's Hymn of Praise & Prayer, 1873, in 2 st. of 6 l.

5. Here is the broken bread. Holy Communion. Appeared in the Appendix to the Philadelphia Unitarian Coll., 1828. It is in a few modern collections, including the Boston Unitarian Hymn [and Tune] Bk., 1868.

7. I feel within a want. Likeness to Christ desired. Appeared in the Cheshire (U. S.) Unitarian Christian Hymns, 1844, No. 687, in 4 st. of 11. It is in a few collections both old and new.

10. Richly, 0 richly have I been. The Prodigal Son. In his Manual of Devotion, 1840, in Longfellow and Johnson's Book of Hymns, 1845, and their Hymn of the Spirit, 1864, it is given as "O richly, Father, have I been"; whilst in
The music of The Welburn Appendix was edited by Dr. S. S. Wesley, he contributing thereto 22 tunes, 10 of which are from his European Psalmist. Mr. Gabb also contributed 44 tunes. This Appendix, although limited in use, is worthy of attention, with regard both to hymns and tunes, by hymnal compilers and their musical editors. Many of Mr. Gabb’s hymns have been rewritten by him from time to time. The Welburn Appendix contains the authorised text. [J. J.]

Gadsby, William, was b. in 1773 at Attleborough, in Warwickshire. In 1793 he joined the Baptist church at Coventry, and in 1798 began to preach. In 1800 a chapel was built for him at Desford, in Leicestershire, and two years later another in the town of Hinckley. In 1805 he removed to Manchester, becoming minister of a chapel in Rochdale Road, where he continued until his death, in January, 1844. Gadsby was for many years exceedingly popular as a preacher of the High Calvinist faith, and visited in that capacity most parts of England.

He pub. The Nazarene’s Songs, being a composition of Original Hymns, Manchester, 1814; and Hymns on the Death of the Princess Charlotte, Manchester, 1817. In 1814 also pub. A Selection of Hymns for Public Worship, appending thereto a large number of his own compositions [Baptist Hymnody, § 4, 2].

The edition of 1822 pub. by his son J. Gadsby contains 138 hymns, of which 137 are by William Gadsby, and form Pt. ii. of the Sel. From his point of view they are sound in doctrine, but have little poetic fervour, and the rhyme is faulty in a large number of instances. Four of these hymns are in Duthie’s Sel. and one in the Sel. of J. Stevens. [W. R. S.]

Gall, James, one of the Superintendents of the Carrubber’s Close Mission, Edinburgh, was b. in 1800, and has been associated with that mission since its commencement in 1858. He had taken great interest in Sunday Schools and Church Music. About 1836, he invented a system of printing music without small musical type, a mode of printing which has been greatly improved by others. He pub. Anthems and Sacred Songs in 1843, including two of his hymns:—

He was also associated with The Sacred Song Book, 1843, which afterwards was named Sacred Melodies for Children, and 200 Sacred Melodies for Sunday Schools and Families (see Bateson, O. E.). In this collection appeared:—

3. Go sound the trumpet on India’s Shore. Mission.

Another popular hymn is:—

This was written for the Scholars of the Free New North Mission Sabbath School, in May, 1877.

Mr. Gall has pub. several prose works, including Instant Salvation; The World for Christ; Interpreting Concordance of the New Testament; and others.

Gallaudet, Thomas Hopkins, LL.D., b. in Philadelphia, Dec. 10, 1787, and graduated
These hymns are unknown to the English collections.

Garve, Carl Bernhard, was b. Jan. 24, 1763, at Jeinsen, near Hannover, where his father was a farmer. He was educated at the Moravian schools in Zeist, and Neuweid, at their Pedagogium at Niesky, and their Seminary at Barby. In 1784 he was appointed one of the tutors at Niesky, and in 1789 at Barby; but as his philosophical lectures were thought rather unsettling in their tendency, he was sent, in 1797, to arrange the độcs of the Moravian archives at Zeist. After his ordination as diaconus of the Moravian church, he was appointed, in 1799, preacher at Amsterdam; in 1781 at Ebersdorf (where he was also inspector of the training school); in 1809 at Berlin; and in 1816 at Neusalza in Silesia. Feeling the burden of years and infirmities, he resigned the active duties of the ministry in 1836, and retired to Hombroich, where he died June 21, 1841. (Koch, viii. 334–342; Allg. Deutsche Biog., vii. 392–394, &c.)

Garve ranks as the most important of recent Moravian hymn-writers. Altogether, being perhaps his superior in poetical gifts, but certainly not in adaptability and church use. His better productions are almost entirely free from the set of Moravian features; and in them Holy Scripture is used in a sound and beautiful spirit. They are distinguished by force and at the same time elegance of style, and are full of deep love and devotion to the Saviour. Many of them have been translated into the German and other languages. They appeared mostly in the two following collections, both of which are to be found in the Town Library, Hamburg: (1) Christliche Gesänge, Göttingen, 1825, with 503 hymns, a few being recasts from other authors. (2) Brauergesänge, Gneisenau, 1837, with 150 hymns intended principally for use in the Moravian Communion.

Garve’s hymns in English C. U. are:

1. Dein Wort, 0 Herr, ist immerh Thau. Holy Scripture. Perhaps his finest hymn. 1825, as above, p. 51, in 7 st. of 8 l. Included, as No. 1, 410, in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, and in the German hymn-books for Hannover, 1863, for the kingdom of Saxony, 1883, for the province of Saxony, 1882, &c.

2. Thy Word. Holy Scripture. A good tr. of st. i–iii., by Miss Winkworth, in the 1st Ser., 1855, of her Lyra Ger. p. 36. In the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, it is No. 314 in full, but rewritten to D. C. M. In 1864 it was included, altered, and with ll. 5–8 of each st. omitted, as No. 691 in Hymns of the Spirit, Boston, U. S., and this has been repeated in Dr. Martineau’s Hymns of Praise & Prayer, 1873, and Dr. Allom’s Children’s Worship, 1878.

ii. Hallelujah! Christus lebt. Easter, 1825, as above, p. 105, in 8 st. of 6 l. Included in Knapp’s Ec. L. S., 1850, No. 565. Tr. as:

Gascoigne, George, s. and h.r. of Sir

John Gascoigne. The date and place of his birth are unknown, but it is probable that he was b. about 1526, and from a statement in the Address to Queen Elizabeth prefixed to one of his works, it seems to have spent a part of his early life in Westmoreland. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, from whence he entered the Middle Temple before 1548; and a student at Lincoln's Inn for a time before 1546; but retaining his studies as a lawyer, he led a life of reckless extravagance and dissipation, on account of which he was disinherited by his father.

In

1555 he migrated to Gray's Inn, but seems to have left it also. In 1557-58 he represented

Bedford in Parliament. In 1565 he returned to Gray's Inn, and there, in the following year, the plays by him were represented, The Supposes, translated from the Italian of Arista, translated from the Italian of Arista, and adapted to Euripides. The latter Gascoigne contributed three acts. In 1572 he was returned to Parliament as member for the borough of Midhurst; but objections being made to his character he appears not to have taken his seat, and not long afterwards went to the Low

Countries and took service with William of Orange, from whom he received a captain's commission. His brilliant conduct in the field obtained the favourable notice of that Prince, but after some time he was taken prisoner

by the Spaniards and sent back to England.

During Gascoigne's absence he first book,

A Hundredth sundrie Flowers bound up in one small Poesie, the ss of which he had left in the hands of a friend, was printed in 1571 without his permission, and after his return from Holland, he published in 1575 a corrected and enlarged edition of his Poësies. Hence forward he seems to have led a literary life, and is said to have been in some way attached to the court. On the occasion of Elizabeth's crledated visit to Kenilworth in the summer of 1575, Gascoigne was commissioned by Leicester to devise the masques, &c., performed for the Queen's entertainment. He d. at Stamford,

Lincolnshire, Oct. 7, 1571, and was probably buried by his friend George Whetstone in the family vault of the Whetstones at Barnack,

Northamptonshire, but this is uncertain.

At some time between 1558 and 1568 Gascoigne married

Elizabeth Breton, mother, by her first husband, of the poet Nicholas Breton, and by her had a son. His widow survived him until 1568.

Gascoigne is noticeable as being one of the earliest English dramatists, and the first English critic in poetry. In 1589 his poems were collected and edited for the Roxburghe Library by W. C. Hazlitt, and in 1668 his Notes of Instruction in English

Verse; The Steele Glass; and The Compendium of Philomene were included in English reprints edited by Edward Arber, together with Whetstone's metrical life of Gascoigne.

To modern hymnody he is known by "We that have passed in slumber's sweet," an altered version of his morning hymn, "Ye that have spent the silent night," and other religious poems.

Gaskell, William, M.A., M. of Mr. William Gaskell, was b. at Latchford (a suburb of Warrington, on the Cheshire side of the Mersey), 24 July, 1805. He was educated at Manchester New College and at the University of Glasgow, where he graduated M.A.

in 1825. In 1828 he became co-pastor with Rev. J. G. Robberds at Cross Street Unitarian Chapel, Manchester, position he held until his death. Mr. Gaskell was a man of cultivated mind and considerable literary ability. His publications include Lectures on the Lancashire Dialect, 1833, a small volume of Temperance Rhymes, 1839, and various theological works. In 1832 he married Elizabeth

Cleghorn Stevenson, who afterwards attained celebrity as the authoress of Mary Barton, and of other popular tales. He d. June 11, 1864, and is buried at Knutsford. To the 2nd ed.

of his 1856, of the 1st Series of Lyra Germanica

Mr. Gaskell contributed "A sure proof strong of our God is He;" a tr. of Luther's "Ein festes

Beweyst (p. 10), replacing a version by Miss

Winkworth in the lat. ed. He also contributed 79 hymns to Beard's Unit. Coll. of Hymns of 15. O God, to Thee our hearts would say. Old War.

15. O God, who knowest how frail we are. Seeking Strength.
17. Our Father, through the coming year. The original begins, "Father, throughout the coming year."
18. Press on, press on, ye sons of light. Continuance in well doing.
20. Thanks, thanks unto God: Who in mercy hath created. Gratitude for the Gospel
21. Through all this life's eventful road. Walking with God.
22. To Thee, the Lord Almighty. Doxology.
24. We join to [crave] pray with wishes kind. H.
Marriage.
25. We would leave, O God, to Thee. Original: "We would cast, O God, on Thee." Rest in God.
26. When arise the thoughts of sin. Looking to Jesus.

These hymns all appeared in Beard's Coll., 1837.
In addition there are:
27. Calmly, calmly lay him down.
28. O Father, (gently) humbly we repose.
29. O bush, great God, the sounds of war. For Peace.

The dates of these hymns have not been able to determine. No. 27 is in Hoppes' Hymn., for Pub. Worship, 1856; and Nos. 28 and 29 are in Hedge & Huntington's Hymn. for the Church of Christ, 1853.

Gauode, Mater Ecclesia. [St. Edward the Confessor.] This hymn was reprinted in Dr. Neale's Hymni Ecclesiastici, 1851, p. 233, in the 4th ed. of 4 l., from the Sacris Brev. (Breviarium Sylvestreum, 1521), of where it was given. "In Festo S. Ludovici Regis." In 1867 a tr. by Dr. R. F. Littledale was included in the People's H., No. 287, beginning, "O Mother
Church, to-day thy voice," and signed "A.
L. P." It was appointed for the Festival of St.
Edward the Confessor, Oct. 13. [J. J.]

Gedieke, Lampertius, s. of Christian
Gedieke, superintendent of Gardelegen in the Altmark, was b. at Gardelegen Jan. 6, 1883.
After the completion of his theological studies at Halle under Francke, he was for some time tutor in the orphanage at Halle, and then in a family at Berlin. Becoming an army chaplain he was successively appointed chaplain to the Guard, (1798), accompanying them on several expeditions; chaplain to the Wartenaabeben regiment and garrison preacher at Berlin (1793); and Proost and inspector of all the garrison and regimental chaplains (1793).
He d. at Berlin, Feb. 21, 1793 (Koch, iv. 414, 415; Bowle, p. 72, &c.). He contributed two hymns to the Neumariichtes geistreiches G. B.
Berlin, 1791. One of these is:

_Wis Gott mich führt, so will ich gehn._ [Trust in God.] 1711, as above, No. 99, in 6 st. of 7 l., repeated in Fregelinhusen, 1714, and as No.
918 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863.
Often used at weddings. The only tr. in C. U. is:

_Just as God leads me I would go,_ a good tr.,
emitting st. ii., as No. 258, in H. L. Hastings's _Hymn., 1890.

Other trs. are:
(1) "As God shall lead I'll take my way," by Dr. R. Melia, 1856 (1856, p. 176).
(2) "As God leads me, will I go," by Miss Warner, 1856 (1856, p.
30).
(3) "As God doth lead me will I go," by Miss Huntington, in the British Herald, June, 1856, p. 276, repeated as No. 47 in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. [J. M.]

Gellert, Christian F.

Gellert, Christian Fürchtegott, s. of Christian Gellert, pastor at Hainich in the Saxon Harz. near Freiberg, was b. at Haini-chen, July 4, 1715. In 1734 he entered the University of Leipzig as a student of theology, and after completing his course acted for some time as assistant to his father. But then, as now, sermons preached from manuscript were not tolerated in the Lutheran Church, and as his memory was treacherous, he found himself compelled to try some other profession. In 1739 he became personal tutor to the sons of Herr von Lütichan, near Dresden, and in 1741 returned to Leipzig to superintend the studies of a nephew at the University. He also resumed his own studies.
He graduated m.a. 1744; became in 1747 private professor or lecturer in the philosophical faculty; and was in 1751 appointed extraordinary professor of philosophy, lecturing on poetry and rhetoric, and then on moral philosophy. An ordinary professorship offered to him in 1761 he refused, as he did not feel strong enough to fulfill its duties, hav ing been Another tr. is: — "For all Thy kindness lead I Thee," by J. Buckland, 1842, p. 96.
Tr. as:

God is my song. His praises I'll repeat. A free tr. of st. iv, as No. 94 in Sir John Bowring's Hymns, 1825. Repeated, omitting st. ii., as No. 114 in Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1875, p. 243.

Other tr. are: (1) "Of God I sing," by Dr. H. Mills, 1846, p. 11. (2) "I'm God's song. With sovereign," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 192.

v. Wenn ich, o Schöpfer, deine Macht. Praise. This fine hymn of Praise for Creation and Providence was 1st pub. 1757, p. 32, in st. 6 of 7 st. 1. In the Berlin G. B. in, No. 25, and Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 72.

Thou Great First Cause! when of Thy skill. In full in Dr. H. Mills's Horse Ger., 1845 (1856, p. 5). St. iii., v., vi, altered and beginning, "The earth, where'er I turn mine eye," are in the American Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll, 1852.

vi. Wer Gottes Wort nicht bekämt und spricht. Faith in Works. This didactic hymn on Faith proved by Works, was first pub. 1821, in st. 5 of 6. 1. In Zollkofler's G. B., 1766, and the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 722.

Who keepeth not God's Word, yet art ash. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 161. A greatly altered version of st. ii-vi, beginning, "True faith in holy life will shine," was included as No. 418 in Kennedy, 1863, and repeated in the Prox Hyl., 1871, J. L. Porter's Coll., 1875, and others.

II. Hymns not in English C. U.

xi. Er ist der Tag, und soll uns den Tag. Easter. 1751, p. 27, in st. Tr. as: "Awake, my soul, and half the day," by Dr. J. D. Lang's Aurora Australis, Sydney, 1846, p. 43.

xii. Er ist der Tag, und soll uns den Tag. Easter. 1751, p. 27, in st. Tr. as: "Awake, my soul, and half the day," by Dr. J. D. Lang's Aurora Australis, Sydney, 1846, p. 43.

German hymn has been found in a manuscript of the 14th century, written in the district of Celle, and now in the Royal library in the district of Celle. In the "Blätter für Hymnologie," 1883, p. 47, it is quoted as occurring thus:

"Hinc opertet ut canamus cum angella septem gloria in excelsis:
Loset siue lte crist,
di du buhne giehren bist van eyner magde. Dat is war.
Des vae siue alme hemmelische schar. Kyrt."

The introductory words, it will be noted, are a corrupted form of pt. ii. of the sequence, and the four lines following can hardly be said to invoke any connection with the sequence. This German stanza came into extensive use and is almost the only instance of popular vernacular song used in the Church services before the Reformation. Thus in the "Ordinarium iuicet ecclesiae Serenissimi," Rostock, 1519, there is a rubric in the service for Christmas, "Populus vero Cantera vultige: Veram istu Jesu Christ, tribus vicentis sub junget," (Hoffmann von Fallersleben, ed. 1861, p. 194). This single pre-Reformation stanza Martin Luther added six original sts. (which contain slight reminiscences of Fortunatus's "Quem terra, pontus, aestera"), and published the 7 st. (each stanza ending with Kyrieleis) on a broadsheet at Wittenberg, and then in Eyn Licenrund, Erfurt, 1524. Thones in Wickeleig, 1539, p. 9, in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Gesell., Leipzig, 1854, p. 9; in the Ver. L. 8, 1851, No. 36; and in almost all German hymn-books from the Reformation to the present time. Sehmelius described it as "The blessings of the birth of Christ celebrated in paradoxes." It is tr. as:

1. Jesus! all praise is due to thee. A good tr. by C. Kienchen, omitting st. vi., as No. 52, in the "Moravian H. Bk., 1742. When repeated in the ed. 1754, pt. i., No. 213, Kienchen's tr. of st. i., ii., iii., vii. were retained, and st. iv.-vi. were given in a cento partly from Jacobi (see below). The 1754 text was repeated, with alterations, in subsequent eds., of the Moravian H. Bk., (1866), No. 34, and is found, as No. 209, in Lady Huntingdon's Sel., 1780. Two centos may also be noted:

(1) "He, who the earth's foundations laid" (st. ii.), Goethe's Sel., 1819, No. 216. (2) "The Son of God, who framed the skies" (st. ii. 1, 2), in the Bible H. Bk., 1848, No. 221.

3. All praise is due to thee, eternal Lord. A free tr. in 5 st. of 4 l. as No. 263 in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and repeated unaltered in Schaff's "Christ in Song," 1869, p. 53 (1879), p. 42. It is included in full and generally unaltered in various American collections, as the Hop. H. Bk., 1871, Preek. Hym., 1874, Landes Domini, 1884, &c.; and in England in Soden's "Universal H. Bk., 1885."
